MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE UNION BANK.

A Special General Meeting of proprietors took place at the Bank on Wednesday morning the 5th December, at noon, "for the purpose of considering certain propositions for adapting the amount value of shares to the recent change in the currency, and also, of determining generally, as to the disposal of the remaining shares."

Mr. JAMES W. ALEXANDER was called to the chair.

The following paper of propositions, by Mr. W. Carr, was then read to the Meeting:—

"As doubts have arisen as to the terms upon which new subscriptions to the Bank should be received, and no provision has been made originally, for adding to the price of shares a premium proportioned to the dividend paid by the Bank; with reference also to the change in the currency of India rendering necessary some arrangement for determining the future value of Shares—it is suggested:

"That the sum of Sa. Rs. 33-5-4 per share, be reserved from present dividends, to be added to the capital of the Bank, making the value of each share Sa. Rs. 2,533-5-4 or Company's Rupees 2,700; and that it be open to future General Meetings, to reserve further sums in a similar manner out of dividends, for eventual increase of the value of shares, if found expedient.

"Further—that in order to provide against an accumulation of capital stock disproportioned to the probability of immediate business, the Bank be open to subscription during the current year 1836, and until the meeting of January, 1837, to the extent of one hundred shares only, and that the option of subscribing be reserved for the present proprietors only, until the half yearly meeting in July, 1836."

In reference to an amendment of the above suggestions, it was moved by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore and duly seconded:—

"That each share of the Bank be increased to 3,000 Company's rupees; the proprietors paying the difference between 2,500 Sa. Rs. and 3,000 Company's rupees, which will increase the capital stock by two lakhs of Company's rupees.

"That the four hundred unsubscribed shares be withdrawn, and no further subscription be received. If the proprietors hereafter, from the nature of the Bank business, consider it expedient to increase its capital, let them have an increase on their own shares.

The following amendments were then proposed by Mr. H. M. Parker:—

"That the value of Union Bank shares be fixed at Company's rupees 2,700—and that the sum requisite for making up this value be reserved out of the next dividend."

By Mr. Fullarton:—

"That the sum of Sa. Rs. 33-5-4 per share be reserved from the forthcoming dividend to be added to the capital of the Bank, making the value of each share Sa. Rs. 2,533-5-4 or Company's rupees 2,700; and that it be further in the option of each proprietor, by an additional subscription of Company's rupees 300 to increase the value of each share held by him, to Sa. Rs. 3,000, provided such subscription be tendered on or before the 15th July, 1836."

By Mr. Dick:—

"I beg to propose an additional amendment, which is, that we reduce the shares to Company's rupees 2,500 each, paying the difference to such shareholders as like to receive the same, and allowing those who so prefer, to pay the difference, and any surplus required to a fresh share."

After considerable discussion of these amendments and the original propositions, it was moved by Mr. Cockrell and carried by a large majority:—

"That the proposals now laid before the Meeting, be circulated among the Proprietors, with a request that they give their vote for one or other of them at the General half yearly Meeting to be held on or about the 15th January next."

It was subsequently proposed by Mr. Dickens and carried nem. con:—

"That the capital of the Bank be extended by the creation of a new share to each of the present shareholders of 3120 Sa. Rs. and such new shares be consolidated with the present shares, so as to make the total amount of each share, Company Rupees 3,000, and further that this proposition be circulated along with the others."

It was then further proposed by Mr. Parker:—

"That the four hundred shares which have not been taken by the public be cancelled; and that the stock of the Union Bank shall consist of the six hundred shares already subscribed, and that if the proprietors hereafter consider it expedient to increase the capital of the Bank, the increase be effected by further payments upon each of the said six hundred shares at above, at such rates as may be determined upon."

These propositions were ordered by the Meeting, to be circulated, with the others, to the Proprietors.

Mr. COCKRELL, following up the above proposition of Mr. Parker, moved:—

"That the sale of the remaining shares be stopped until all the questions now pending, be decided."

This motion was carried nem. con.

The thanks of the Meeting were then voted to the Chairman, and the Proprietors adjourned.—Bengal Hurkaru.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA

At a General Meeting of this Society, held in the Town Hall this day, Wednesday, 9th December, 1835.

Colonel DUNLOP, V. P., in the chair.

Thirteen Members present, among whom was His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

The following gentlemen proposed last month, were elected by ballot:—

J. C. Wilson, Esq., D. B. Syers, Esq., and Captain W. Speirs.

John Allan, Esq., and Baboo Mutty Loll Seal, were re-elected.

NEW MEMBERS PROPOSED.

Captain A. Bogle, (Assam,) proposed by Mr. John Bell, seconded by Colonel Dunlop.

James Pontent, Esq., proposed by Mr. John Bell, seconded by Mr. Stornin.

The name of a native Member was ordered to be withdrawn for non-conformity to the rules of the Society.

The officiating Secretary had received from the press the greater number of copies of the Society's report upon experiments at Akra, which he had distributed to resident Members, and was only waiting a reply from Government, to enable him to forward others to Members in the Mofussil.

The proceedings of the last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The following communications were read:—

1.—From His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to the Officiating Secretary, acknowledging election.

2.—Two letters from Ross D. Mangles, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, bearing date the 10th and 24th November, on the subject of the Society's bill for monthly allowance.

3.—From W. H. Oakes, Esq. Civil Auditor, on the same.

4.—From C. K. Robison, Esq., dated 16th November, enclosing two letters to his address from W. C. Crawford, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, dated Sydney, 11th August, advising the shipment of a small box of garden seeds for the Society, and directing the cost to be imputed to his arrears of subscription, and recommending J. Warren, of Market-street, East Sydney, as seedsmen.

5.—From Messrs. Willis and Earle to the Officiating Secretary, dated 17th November, intimating their ineffectual endeavours to procure for the Society a supply of cotton seed from North America direct, and returning the sum which had been placed in their hands by the Society in 1833.

6.—From Grant Thorburn, of Hallet's Cove, Long Island, New York, to the address of Dr. N. Wallich, dated 1st June, 1835, acknowledging receipt of Doctor Wallich's letter of the 26th December, 1834, with a bill of exchange for £60 12 9, and a box of seed from the Calcutta Botanic Garden intimating that every care would be taken to execute the order for vegetable and cotton seed, to meet the cost of which the bill was sent, but nothing is said as to when the seeds may be expected.

7.—From Mr. J. W. Masters, presenting in the name of Dr. Wallich the 3d Annual Report of the Royal Horticultural Society of Cornwall.

8.—From Captain A. Bogle to the Officiating Secretary, dated Assam, 7th November, 1835, requesting to be admitted a Member of the Society, and to be furnished with all possible information on the culture of country products, especially in regard to sugar, cotton, oil seeds, the nurture and management of the silk-worm, &c.

The Officiating Secretary had, on receipt of Captain Bogle's letter, sent the several numbers of the Society's transactions already printed, including their Report on Akra, and a copy of his own pamphlet on the growth and manufacture of sugar, &c. in the West Indies.

9.—Extract of a note from F. C. Marshman, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 28th November.

"In reading the proof I find that is very confidently stated that the expense of cleaning the cotton by the churkee far exceeds that of the expense incurred by the use of the sawgin. When at Mirzapore I saw a very elaborate paper by Mr. Tivcott, in which by the most minute calculation, it is clearly demonstrated that the churkee is the cheaper of the two. I will write to him immediately and endeavour to obtain a copy of it, and lay it before the Society. His paper is replete with the most important information and would throw a flood of light on the subject of cotton."

10.—From W. C. Hurry, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, asking the loan of the sawgin in the Society's room for Mr. Crane.

The Officiating Secretary, satisfied that the Society would have no objection, delivered the sawgin to Mr. Hurry's order, having previously read to Mr. Crane the extract above quoted, who has promised to lay the result of his personal observation before the Society.

11.—From W. C. Crane, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 30th November, presenting the seed of the ground ratan, which was gathered in July last. The Malays entertain very extravagant notions regarding the interval of its seeding, some not hesitating to declare that it only yields once in a thousand years. It is exceedingly graceful in appearance, and worthy the notice of the curious.

12.—The Officiating Secretary presented a yam of unusual dimensions, which he obtained from an Arab in the Bazar, the produce of Malacca, also the stems and heads of large species of grain produced in his garden from New Hol and seed received through C. K. Robison, Esq. in June last.

13.—From Colonel Dunlop, dated 1st December, presenting some seeds from Calcutta, received through Captain Wade, Political Agent in Louisiana. Sir H. Fane expressed a wish to send part to England, but on examination pronounced the different kinds of grain to be very inferior. The Honorable Mr. Melville proposed notwithstanding to forward some.

14.—From John Palmer, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 26th November, politely promising to procure for the Society, through the medium of an American friend, a supply of cotton seed, and submitting some interesting remarks on experiments made in cotton from seeds sent by him to parties at Bellasore and Cuttack.

15.—From Mr. J. W. Masters, dated 20th November, with a copy of a letter from Sir Robert Colquhoun, to the address of Dr. Wallich, on the subject of the Society's petition to Government touching the equalization on W. and E. India sugars.

Sir Robert had been peculiarly unfortunate in his mission. Mr. W. Asutane was out of town, and not a member of the present Parliament; but Sir Robert forwarding the letters of Sir E. Ryan and Dr. Wallich to his address had solicited from that gentleman the benefit of his influence in behalf of the petition.

Earl Fitzwilliam was also absent, but Sir Robert Colquhoun had forwarded Dr. Wallich's letter and the petition.

In this dilemma, Sir Robert being on the eve of proceeding to Scotland, consulted Mr. W. Crawford, Member for the City of London, "who had most kindly and zealously undertaken to present our petition, and as he enters most feelingly into the justice of the claim, I have no doubt of his giving it full support."

16.—From Mr. J. Duhan of Dinapore, dated 13th October, enclosing a memorandum of three cases of seed ordered by the Officiating Secretary on account of the Horticultural Society of Madras.

17.—From C. K. Robison, Esq., dated 7th December, sending a plan of his continuous still. Mr. Robison's former explanatory letter on this subject was read, and the Secretary was directed to lay Mr. Robison's plan and paper on the table for the perusal of any Member who might wish to study it.

18.—A further supply of Indian corn was presented by the Officiating Secretary in the name of Mr. J. J. well for distribution.

The thanks of the meeting were offered for the various contributions.

JOHN BELL, Officiating Secretary.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, December 5, 1835.

Donald Stewart, Esq., M. D., Assistant-Surgeon on the Bombay Establishment, Dr. Hughes, Surgeon on the Madras Establishment, Dr. Cantor, of Calcutta, and William Brydon, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon on this Establishment, proposed at last Meeting, were elected Members of the Society.

Dr. Macgregory and Mr. Assistant-Surgeon Bart, of H. M.'s 9th Regiment, by Dr. Damsie and Mr. Hutchinson, and J. Bowron, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon on this Establishment, and Dr. Baird, practitioner in Calcutta, by Mr. Hutchinson and Dr. Cameron.

Read a letter from Mr. Bell of Almorah descriptive of two cases of tumor successfully extirpated by him. The subject of Mr. Bell's first case was a zemindar, who was admitted into hospital with a fungoid tumor on the back part of his neck, about an inch in height and three in circumference, of soft and spongy texture, intimately connected with the pericranium; the surface was a mass of ulceration of a livid color, which bled on the slightest irritation; discharge thin and fetid, pain severe; it had annoyed him for many years, and had resisted the efforts of many native practitioners to destroy it by escharotics. Mr. Bell removed the diseased mass at once. It bled profusely. In the subsequent dressings of the wound, it was touched with the polyasse caustic, and in a short time the sore was completely healed. Mr. Bell upon this remarks on the value of using escharotics, in destroying the surface of wounds made by the removal of tumors or adjoined carcinoma. The second case was a female who had a large sarcomatous tumor on the great trochanter and front part of the right thigh, the swelling was firm and hard throughout, and from its strong attachment not in the least pendulous. It commenced five years ago, and having attained the size of an orange remained stationary without pain till within the last six or seven months when it rapidly increased, causing great uneasiness by its weight, and the dragging of the surrounding parts. Ulceration had taken place on the top, with a trifling and very offensive discharge accompanied by great constitutional irritability. With the assistance of Mr. Darby, Mr. Bell removed the tumor, little blood was lost during the operation and but one artery required to be tied; in a short time the wound healed, and the woman returned home. On examining the mass, it was found to consist of a gristly substance strongly resembling cartilage in some parts, at the centre there was a small cavity containing serum: whence Mr. Bell thinks the term neo-cartilage might be more properly applied to these swellings than sarcoma.

Read a letter from Dr. Benza, Surgeon to the Hon'ble the Governor, of Madras, descriptive of a post mortem examination of a tiger.

The subject of the case was a full-grown male, which died in the Government Park at Madras. The animal for some days before his death refused his food and appeared very ill, his breathing was deep and quick, he was hot and feverish, and his belly tense and painful. In this state he remained for several days, never attempting to change his position, passing no feces, and scarcely any urine. The body was examined twelve hours after death. The abdomen contained about five pints of very offensive thin yellow fluid. The abdominal and visceral peritoneum were highly inflamed. The ilium for about three inches of its lower third was swollen, and converted into a hard tumor, having six perforations through its coats; the widest (more than three lines in diameter) was closed by a portion of bone, and sharp pointed spiculae were seen projecting through the other foramina: the colon and ilium were much contracted. Within the swollen part of intestine were many loose pieces of bone, and a round ball formed of several angular bits of bone agglutinated and bound together by a kind of net-work of hair and wool. This ball adhered slightly to the intestine by means of an adventitious tissue which was highly injected. Dr. Benza remarks on the singular anomaly of finding undigested bone so low down in the intestine of an animal possessed of such digestive power as the tiger, and accounts for it by supposing, that these pieces of bone became entangled in the stomach with the wool and hair of the sheep, which formed the ordinary food of the animal; these latter substances being more indigestible than the bones, covering them with a sort of felt coat protected them from the action of the gastric juice, and thus the whole ball passed down unchanged into the intestines. At length the ball being deprived of the greater portion of its woolly covering, the spiculae became exposed and protruded against the intestine, greatly irritating it, thereby causing a thickening and constriction, by which these pieces of bone were held in one position, until they produced ulceration. Dr. Benza's account was accompanied by a preparation of the perforated intestine.

PRESENTED FOR THE LIBRARY.

A small work in Sanskrit and Nagree, entitled Chikitsa Shanaya, or the River of Medicine, by the Rajah Kalikrishna, a corresponding Member of the Society.

The following original communication was presented at the Meeting: "Observations on the uses of Iodine and its compounds in Bengal." By D. Stewart, Esq., M. D.

The following papers were then read and discussed, viz.

A topographical and statistical account of St. Helena, by Dr. McKelvie, Medical Staff of that island.

• Case of dislocation of the humerus, in which reduction was effected after an interval of one month and four days, drawn up by Mr. Reid, of the Calcutta Dispensary—and presented by Principal Bramley.

Notes on irregularities of menstruation, by J. Stewart, Esq., M. D.

Dr. McKelvie states the island of St. Helena to be situated in 6° 55' South latitude and 50° 43' West longitude, length 11, breadth 7, circumference 28 miles, surface in acres 30,300, the exterior in almost all places nearly perpendicular, containing a great number of lofty eminences, the highest of which, Napoleon's Peak, is 2,697 feet, many others are nearly as high, considerably exceeding 2,000 feet. With regard to its geology, the author writes on the authority of Mr. Dickson that the cliffs which surround the island consist principally of rugged and steep banks of lava, many of them regularly stratified by successive layers of volcanic matter, amongst which in some places veins of a red sandy appearance are visible. The valleys and ridges in the interior are composed of basaltic lava in its most compact state, together with cellular and many other varieties in every stage of decomposition. All the valleys and intermediate ridges appear to converge into one large basin on the South side of the island, which is evidently part of a volconic crater from whence this island has been formed. The ridge called Diana's Peak forms one edge of this crater inclining gradually towards the sea, whence it is concluded that the remaining ridge necessary to complete the crater is buried beneath the ocean. The volcanic matter and lava appear to have flowed from this immense crater in every direction, and to have formed the ravines and valleys and intersecting ridges of the island. The edge of the crater from Diana's Peak round to the opposite side is well defined. There is no appearance of any other crater in the island. In cutting away the lava at Saddle Hill, many feet below the surface, small bones have been found incrustated with stalactite. The author accounts for the existence of these bones by supposing that the animals may have crept into crevices in the rock, and there died; for if a bed of lava in the liquid state had flowed over them they would probably have been consumed, and could not have been incrustated with stalactite. The volcanic fire, Mr. Bloxam says, must have ceased at some very remote period, and there is little probability of its ever breaking out again, as the island is small, and the combustible matter appears to be entirely consumed.

The minerals of the island belong to the family in which siliceous predominates, to the calcareous and to the argillaceous families, to the mineral ore containing iron, and lastly to lava. Siliceous in the shape of quartz is rarely found, chalcodony and jasper and opal in small quantities. Pitchstone more frequently and obsidian or pumice stone very sparingly and very light. Of the calcareous earths gypsum is found in several varieties; calcareous spar and stalactites of carbonate of lime are not unfrequent. The argillaceous minerals are hornblende in the form of crystals embedded in lava. The clays of the island exist in the form of different volcanic masses in a state of decomposition, vary in color according to the quantities of iron contained; pieces of iron ore are found very rich in the metal. The igneous lava met with are principally close or basaltic, and honey comb or porous. The highly divided state of the siliceous matter of the soil renders the island almost impermeable to rain and moisture, and in this way entirely prevents vegetation in many places.

The climate is extremely variable between the valley of James' Town which is 600 feet above the sea and Plantation House which is 1664, there is difference of from 40° to 100° of the thermometer. Fires are necessary in the country during the months of July, August and September, but in James' Town they would be very disagreeable at any period of the year. The hardy trees of Europe and of the higher latitudes of Africa cannot be reared in the valleys, but flourish on the hills in singular association with many tropical plants. The island is frequently overshadowed by a fog, which protects it from the rays of the sun for days together; this unlike other fogs is perfectly dry. The cumulus and cirro-cumulus are the most frequent forms of clouds. Thunder is very rarely heard at St. Helena, but lightning is common in dry weather.

There are more than 160 excellent springs on the island, the hourly discharge of water from 4 of the principal ones, (situated from 589 to 660 feet above the sea), in January, July and December was 3600 gallons; the temperature of the water 60° and during a most severe draught in 1821 and 1825 the number of springs which totally failed did not exceed 4 or 5. The maximum temperature at Plantation House is 79° minimum 59°; at Longwood minimum 57° maximum 74°; James' Town maximum 82° minimum 71°. The variations of the Barometer are extremely small. The quantity of rain which fell in 1826 at Plantation House was 40 inches, at Longwood, 39 inches, at James' Town 8 inches. Few opportunities occur at St. Helena of observing the fall of dew very accurately; owing to the light showers and mist with which the island is constantly overshadowed.

The prevailing winds are from the South and S. E., from the West less frequently, and from the North very seldom. The population of St. Helena in December 1834 was 4977, being 2113 whites, and 2864 colored people. The average number of deaths annually appear to be about 80. The total number of admissions into Hospital of the troops on the island, during the last 4 years, were 1930, the strength of the Garrison being about 800. The total number of sick of all classes admitted into the General Hospital during the same period including the troops was 2669, of whom 2609 recovered and 60 died.—The fatal cases were principally pulmonary, hepatic and bowel affections. The prevailing mortality assimilates closely to that of Great Britain, especially in the frequency of pulmonary affections. These diseases are most fatal to the former classes. The diet of those people consists chiefly of rice and fish and a good deal of salted meat, and they are much given to the use of spirits and tobacco. Scrophula is a disease well known in St. Helena, Mr. MacRitchie states that blood letting is highly necessary in the inflammatory and mixed fevers of the island, but that people of color do not bear up so well against the effects of that remedy as Europeans; rheumatism, and nephritic affections, erysipelas, urticaria, and varicella, are frequent, but confluent small pox is unknown. Measles were very mortal in 1807, since which it has disappeared from the island. Tetanus and trismus are almost always fatal, mental ailments are not uncommon, elephantiasis and lepra frequently attack the people of color, puerperal convulsions were very fatal in 1821 as well as croup, and that dangerous modification to sore throat described by Dr. J. Hamilton, Junr., in the 2d edition of his work on female complaints.

The subject of Mr. Reid's case was a Hindoo, 30 years of age, who came to the Collingah Dispensary on the 26th of May, with a dislocation of the right shoulder joint; the head of the os humeri was distinctly felt in the axilla. The man stated the accident to have occurred a month and four days before; but Mr. Reid doubts whether it was not of longer standing, as the limb had already acquired some degree of mobility in its new position, and the arm could be nearly approximated to the side. An attempt was at first made by Mr. Bramley by placing the heel in the axilla, and extending by manual force, but in vain. The patient was then placed in a chair and the shoulder having been fixed by a proper bandage, extension was made by four strong men by means of a folded towel with no better result; the pulleys were therefore applied and two grs. of tartar emetic in solution administered; the extension was kept up for eight minutes, when the tape gave way. Mr. Reid however unwilling to abandon the object in view, gave two more grs. of tartar emetic, and again commenced gradual extension; at the expiration of 22 minutes he was agreeably surprised to find that the head of the bone had slipped in its natural socket, and in a few days the man was perfectly well.

EXAMINATION AT THE PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

The thirteenth Annual Examination of the Pupils at this Institution was held on Thursday the 10th December. The room though spacious was crowded to excess on this interesting occasion by visitors, many of whom were unable to find seats. The business of the day commenced at 10 o'clock precisely with the examination of the Junior class. The following statement exhibits the studies in which the boys were principally questioned, the limited time allotted for this work not permitting a wider range of subjects to be embraced.

The first class was examined in mathematics, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, political economy, history of India and book keeping.

The second in Latin, natural philosophy, mathematics, Scripture history, history of England and history of India.

The third in Latin, natural philosophy, mathematics, histories of Greece, Rome and England, and Scripture history.

The fourth and remaining classes in Scripture history, histories of Rome and Greece, grammar, geography, reading, spelling, &c.

Essays were submitted on the following subjects: "Lord Clive's character," "Political Economy," and "Scholastic Emulation."

Among the many friends of this Institution who were invited, the following gentlemen were present and participated in the examination. The Venerable Archdeacon Deatry, Most Rev. Dr. St. Leger, Rev. Messrs. Boyes, Piffard, Garstin, Heberline, Boaz, Eteson, and Samuels, Messrs. Forestry, Crow, Kirkpatrick, Dr. Corbyn and others whose names I cannot now remember. These gentlemen one and all declared that they were highly gratified with the visible progress of the pupils.

Some judicious arrangements of the Secretary require to be noticed, as they admitted of a better view of the proceedings of the day to every individual present, than was the case on former similar occasions. On two elevated forms raised around benches were placed, on these alternately two classes were seated, and simultaneously examined, their standing in the class very properly having been previously adjusted by Mr. Kellner, one of the managers, according to the order of the names in the printed programme. The disorder and confusion necessarily caused by several boys replying to the same question at once and formerly complained against, were on this occasion greatly checked and put down by the vigilant Secretary, though evidently to the mortification of the lads who all seemed to be perfectly ready to return suitable answers.

Under the able tuition of Mr. Hamilton, the classical teacher, the great improvement observed to have been made by the classes who were examined in Latin, called forth the warmest approbation of the gentlemen present.

It was highly gratifying to witness the facility with which the boys of the several classes returned appropriate answers to every question proposed to them, with a solitary exception or two amongst those forming the junior class. One question I well remember posed not a little one of the youngsters. It was this: "How old was Enoch when he died?"

In the examination of the first class in mathematics, one of the youths appeared somewhat puzzled in working a difficult algebraic cubic equation. Another, however, quickly solved it, when the first had proceeded half way through. Save and except this, the lads of this class acquitted themselves admirably well. Nor is it to be wondered at, since Mr. Lorimer, the head-master, has endeavoured with unwearied perseverance and zeal to form their minds and train them to habits of reflection. One peculiar feature in the system of instruction pursued at this Institution is, that the boys are not merely made to get off their tasks by rote, but the difficult parts of their lessons are explained to them, and they are made to understand the subject thoroughly before they are allowed to advance. Thus grounded in sound knowledge, shape the questions as you will within the range of their studies, they make instant and apt replies. Let parents and guardians but reflect what an incalculable amount of good such a system of tuition must have a tendency to produce; and surely if they have the welfare of their children and wards at heart, they will not hesitate for a moment to support an Institution where the laudable endeavours of the managers and teachers are to form our offspring to be fit members of society, and to prove eventually a blessing and an ornament to the community to which they belong, since their religious and moral education is carefully attended to without interfering with the faith of particular sects or denominations of individuals.

The boys appeared to be well acquainted with Scripture truths:—the Scriptures form a study of each class; and the questions put to the second class by the Rev. Mr. Boyes and Mr. Heberline it occurred to me, were very satisfactorily answered. In the history of India, too, a study so essential for the youth of this country, the boys, of the first and second classes acquitted themselves very creditably. The first class was examined up to the administration of Lord Alinto, and the second class up to the Government of Lord Clive.

The examination was close and searching, and was not limited to the teachers only,—but was conducted by others who were specially requested to undertake this business, and visitors also freely participated in it. This is as it should be, and is the best test by which to ascertain the real attainments of the pupils.

The business of the day closed with the distribution of prizes to the successful candidates. And here probably it will not be out of place to mention that three gentlemen, Mr. Mathew Johnston, Mr. James Wood and Mr. George Wood, with praiseworthy liberality presented to the School, as extraordinary prizes to be given to the youths, the first named individual a gold medal for the best essay, and the two latter, valuable books for general proficiency.—Bengal Hurkaru.

DINNER TO SIR RALPH PALMER.*

On Wednesday evening, the 9th December, the Literary Society gave a dinner to their President, Sir Ralph Palmer, which was numerously attended and went off with much spirit. The garrison band was in attendance.

The cloth having been removed a grace pronounced by the Venerable the Archdeacon.

The Chairman, the Honorable W. Oliver, Esq. gave, "The King."

The toast was drank with three times three.

The band played the National Anthem.

The Chairman then gave "The Queen and the rest of the Royal family."

Drank with three times three.

"Rule Britannia."

The Chairman then rose and proposed the health of "the President, Sir Ralph Palmer," in a speech which highly eulogized the mildness, affability and social virtues of that distinguished individual.

The Band played "Farewell and whenever you think of the hour."

Sir Ralph Palmer returned thanks. He expressed his regret at parting with a Society from which he had received so much kindness, but could not deny that this regret was counterbalanced by the hope and pleasure of returning to the land of his birth where he might superintend in retirement the education of his children. He had always looked to the bright side of life's picture and his experience had borne him out in so doing. He had for many years enjoyed happiness here, and was now returning with every prospect of happiness to his own family, in whose circle death had not made a single vacancy since his departure from England. Sir Ralph mentioned the choice of his successor as the most prudent that could have been made. He reproached the scandal vented by certain Periodicals against the Literary Society, and concluded by praising the Secretary, Mr. Morris, for his zeal, talents, and diligence.

The Chairman then gave "the Patron of the Society, Sir F. Adam."

The band played "Blue Bonnets."

Captain Boileau expressed regret at the absence of Sir Frederick Adam who would have derived much gratification from attending for the purpose of expressing his esteem and regard for the President, and who would have been able to express that regard, and his thanks for the honor that had been done him by the present meeting in more appropriate language than he (Captain Bellamy) could do for him. He felt his inability to do justice to the subject, and was only induced to rise because he was sure that Sir Frederick would rather have his feelings and thanks expressed inappropriately than not at all.

The Venerable the Archdeacon proposed the health of, "Sir Robert Comyn the President Elect of the Society." In an eloquent and animated speech the Archdeacon gloried in the choice that had made Sir Robert Comyn President of the Society, on account of his erudition, his knowledge of ancient and modern literature, of poetry, of history and of all our early English authors. The urbanity of manners, kindness of heart and social qualities of his learned friend were also warmly eulogized by the venerable speaker.

Sir Robert Comyn with equal animation replied, attributing the praise bestowed upon him by his venerable friend more to the partiality of his friendship than to any merit on his own part.

The Band played "Calligoram."

Sir Robert Comyn then gave the health of "Lady Palmer," a lady whose mildness, universal courtesy, and condescension of manners had gained her the esteem, as her firmness of character and her strength of mind had gained her the admiration of Society.

Sir Ralph Palmer was much affected, but found words to declare with much warmth, that though others might have excellent wives, he was sure his own was surpassed by none as a wife, a mother, a counsellor, or friend.

Mr. Norton then gave the health of "the Venerable the Archdeacon, President of the Asiatic Department." And in a very appropriate speech eulogized the powers of mind of the Archdeacon, and spoke with the highest commendation of the excellence of his knowledge of Oriental Literature, and of the Persian language in particular, his knowledge of which had been so wisely employed in furthering the spiritual welfare of mankind by the translation of the Holy Scriptures.

The Archdeacon, whose feelings quite overcame him, declared that he had done little in comparison with what he might have done, and that when he reflected upon the opportunities that he had, and the little that he had done, he was overwhelmed with humiliation; the praise so worthily bestowed upon him had humbled him to the dust.

The Band played "Auld lang Syne."

Mr. A. D. Campbell gave thanks and prosperity to the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and praised the end and object of that Institution and all its labours, which had contributed so much to the welfare of mankind, especially the subjects of this empire.

Sir Ralph Palmer proposed the health of the excellent Chairman, praising him for his moral and intellectual qualities and for his universal benevolence.

The Chairman returned thanks.

Sir Robert Comyn gave the health of the Secretary, Mr. Morris, thanking him for his past exertions and urging him to the continuance of them.

The Secretary returned thanks, assuring the meeting of the pleasure he should give in continuing at his post, animated as he had been by the flattering speech of the President elect and aided in the discharge of his duties, as he should be by the President's powerful assistance.

THE LAUNCH OF THE NEW CLIPPER.

The beautiful new clipper to supply the place of the "Sylph" was launched from Mr. Currie's dock-yard at Howrah, on the 5th December. At about a quarter before three o'clock the signal being given, the dog shores were knocked away, and the gallant vessel, greeted by the cheers of a vast concourse of spectators, including nearly all the beauty, rank and fashion of Calcutta, glided rapidly off the ways and rushed into the element for which she was destined, with an impetus which gave token of the speed with which she is to traverse the ocean. The river god acknowledged the honour with a foamy wave; the beautiful craft received the greeting, and gracefully winding to the tide, continuing her rapid retrograde motion, already —walked the waters like a thing of life, until the impetus no longer felt, the anchor was let go, and she rode with swan-like majesty secure upon the stream. Lady Grant with the usual ceremony named her the "Cowasjee Family." She is built from an original design of Mr. Seppings, the Honorable Company's surveyor, and reflects the highest credit on his professional skill, as one of the finest specimens of naval science which has ever been produced in India. Mr. Seppings endeavoured to design a model which should offer the least possible resistance in proportion to the size of the vessel, and the requisite capacity and stability; and we think, his success has been very complete. The Cowasjee Family has a very rising floor with great area at the line of flotation, with perfectly regular and nicely graduating lines throughout; while a fine entry with good bearings above, and a beautiful run, insure her velocity. She is about four hundred tons, and it is estimated that she will carry 1,500 chests of opium. She was launched with all her masts in their places, save that the royal and top-sail-poles were substituted for the top-gallant masts, and with only about forty tons weight in her: still, although numbers were on her decks, she did not heel or give any indication of crankness, but went steadily on, a sure indication of her stability.

After having attentively inspected the vessel on the ways, we went on board of her and examined her internally. She is built of teak and fastened to the wales throughout with copper. If the design does credit to Mr. Seppings, as is universally admitted, we must say that the execution reflects no less on the builders; for the new clipper is put together in a style which we have never seen surpassed in India. The stern which is particularly handsome, is admirably put on, and the execution of the decorations, indicates a considerable advancement in the merely ornamental arts of naval architecture. The carving and gilding are really exceedingly well done. In the centre of the stern, is a sun splendens micante auro in a cardinal blue field, with cornucopias on the right and left, and a wheat sheaf below, over which the God of Day sheds his genial influence. At either side of the stern frame is a shell richly gilt, emblematic of the productions and wealth of Neptune's empire—the whole chaste designed and tastefully executed: the pretty little false galleries are very neatly fitted. The head is a bust of a male—paterfamilias of the Cowasjees, we presume, very well carved and richly gilt.

Altogether the Cowasjee Family is an honour to the naval architecture of India, and will soon we feel convinced, under the bold and skilful navigator, Captain Wallace, to whose charge she will be confided, establish her fame as a first-rate clipper.

Previous to the launch, a splendid tiffin was given at the elegant mansion of the builder, at which a large party, including the Chief Justice and Lady Ryan, the senior puisne Judge and Lady Grant, and a great many more of the finis of the society of Calcutta, sat down.

In the evening there was a grand ball at the hospitable abode of Rustomjee Cowasjee, the principal owner, at which there was a large assemblage of the beauty, rank and fashion of Calcutta. Dancing was kept up with great spirit till midnight. In a room adjoining the ball room, a cold collation consisting of all the delicacies of the season invited the guests to refreshment, and the viands and wines were all exquisite.

We subjoin the particulars of the measurement of the Cowasjee Family:—

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

TANCREDI.

The withdrawal of "Eduardo e Cristina" and the substitution of "Tancredi," were, we believe, resolved on in deference to what was understood to be the opinion of the Opera-going public. For some reason or other, which we cannot undertake to explain, the former Opera which last year was considered one of the most successful efforts of the Company, and, the anacronous enormities in the article of costume always excepted, met with a full share of public favor, has during the present season, when produced, apparently with no diminished pretensions to popularity, taken but a moderate hold on the ears and sympathies of those who frequent the Opera. As it is not however the vocation of the Company to reason their patrons out of their likings or dislikings, their business being simply to use their best endeavours to please those whose support they solicit—the propriety of changing a performance, not generally considered attractive, even at some sacrifice to themselves, cannot be doubted. The selection of "Tancredi," time not admitting of the preparation of a new Opera—was certainly judicious, for the music is very popular—the piece has been a great favorite in all places and at all times, and the performance of it here has generally been thought to bring out the talents of the Company to peculiar advantage. Indeed, the fact of its having previously been got up five times, and always, if our recollection serves us, to full and well pleased houses, was sufficient to point "Tancredi" out as the Opera most likely to be acceptable to the public in lieu of "Eduardo e Cristina."

We have so often had occasion to notice the performance of this piece, that it cannot be necessary to enter into any details. Suffice it to say, the Opera went off in the most satisfactory manner, affording an excellent practical proof of the good resulting from frequent repetitions. The Orchestra were, generally speaking, in a very creditable state of efficiency and we should be doing injustice were we not to attribute a fair share of the success of the performance to that department. The Chorus, too, which of late have betrayed some symptoms of lax discipline, acquitted themselves well and did justice to the truly beautiful music of which they are the organs.

The only novelty of the present representation was the introduction into the part of "Argano" of an air by Pacini in lieu of one sung on former occasions which was not thought attractive. In this air, which is exceedingly spirited and pleasing, Pizzoni made a decided hit, and gave a sample of really good singing. What can be the reason that Pizzoni persists in doing what he can to clog the movements of the Opera, and to detract from the merit of his own singing and acting by the slovenly way in which he gets up his recitative? If he fancies that this branch of his craft is quite unimportant, and that it is beneath his dignity to make the trouble of learning his part, and of studying to protect the ears of his audience from having their sensibilities outraged by an intonation "wide as the poles asunder" from Mr. Linton's monetary chord, vexing at once the prompter, the conductor, and the patient public—we can assure him he mistakes. The audience do attach considerable importance to smoothness in the progress of the dialogue, and they have been accustomed to be gratified in this particular at the Italian Opera. Pizzoni owes them some respect, and in short he must amend if he desires to preserve the favour of his audiences.

We were grieved to learn that Signora Schiaroni had been seriously indisposed for two days, and that the prudence of her undertaking the arduous part of "Tancredi" in the state of her health had been questioned. She however persisted, and probably few who witnessed her spirited and energetic performance, and who listened to her even more than usually delightful singing, would have surmised the disadvantages which she labored under.—Bengal Hurkaru.

IL BARBIERE DI SEVIGLIA.

The Chowringhee Theatre was thronged on Friday evening, the 8th December, with the most numerous audience which we ever observed there on the occasion of an Italian performance, anxious to assist at an Opera always provocative of mirth and replete with interest, but on this occasion especially interesting. The great attraction of the evening was of course the new "Almaviva" personated by an Amateur who kindly undertook the character with the intention of letting Signora Schiaroni have the advantage of his most valuable support on the night of her Benefit. This generous intention has been frustrated by circumstances to which we do not desire to advert more particularly, and we will only say that our regret at Signora Schiaroni's loss of an advantage so great, is tempered by a firm persuasion that the same talents which drew a crowded house on Friday and left the audience in a state of the highest gratification, will remain without diminution their power of drawing and of gratifying, and that they will not be withheld from Signora Schiaroni when her Benefit shall take place. Probably in the annals of Chowringhee no more adventurous exploit is recorded than what was achieved on Friday evening. Even persons who have made the stage their profession and music the study of their lives, have seldom been found to undertake a principal part in an Opera to be recited and sung in a foreign language. The mere physical exertion, the burthen imposed on the memory, the restraint of the "parts of speech," the necessity for severe study and incessant vigilance in order to acquire and preserve a deportment and intonation in keeping not only with the character personated and with the incidents of the plot, but also with the language employed—these alone we say, setting aside the difficulties of a most arduous musical role, might daunt many a bold and well disciplined professional. It is superfluous to say that such difficulties must be much more trying to an Amateur, and that a triumph over them must imply the possession of ability of no ordinary kind;—even a moderate degree of success under such circumstances would be a great achievement. These remarks are not intended to pave the way for an extenuation of deficiencies by an aggravation of impediments, for we can conscientiously affirm, that the success of the performance was most complete, and that much as expectation was wound up, we believe it was more than fulfilled. To say that in all its parts it was as perfect as if it had been done by a professional Italian, would be to assert what we consider to be an impossibility—for we maintain that no English organ, unless they have been modelled from early youth upwards in Italy, can ever attain the more delicate shades of expression or master the indescribable niceties which render the Italian language, from the mouth of a native, even in ordinary parlance, music, and which invest the music of that country with a charm which is sought in vain in the music of other countries and which perishes by translation. The representative of Almaviva possesses a fine rich voice sufficiently powerful withal to fill the house—and which under the guidance of excellent judgment and skillful management, held with exceedingly good effect both in the solos and in the concerted pieces. We should be at a loss to select the most striking parts of a performance all of which was good, but if we were compelled to point out what appeared to us best we would say the Duett "All'idea" in the first Act and the Trio at the close of the second Act. The first we look upon as a piece both the singing and acting of which were nearly faultless, and we may say the same of the Trio, the concluding movement of which especially the well known "Zitti zitti" was admirable. We name these pieces not that we think they were intrinsically better than "Almaviva's" sweet Cavatina at the beginning, or than the fine passages, in the unparalleled Finale of the first act, but because after all the true test of a singer's powers is a Duett or a Trio. Even one of Rossini's most elaborate and florid airs may be well executed by a young lady of moderate accomplishment endowed with reasonable perseverance, and able to disburse a sufficient number of guineas in the best instruction;—but to come well out of a Duett, especially if sung with some other person than the master, is a very different thing. Again in the bustle and imbriglio of such a piece as the Sexto at the end of the first Act, especially with the friendly aid of a good noisy Orchestra, what omissions may not be hazarded? What blunders may not be slurred over? All the mischiefs of divided responsibility are here to be found in full vigor! The singer in a Duett or in a Trio however has no shelter—even the uproar of an Orchestra cannot conceal his lapses—if he causes he is missed, if he goes wrong he is sure to be found out. He is therefore reduced to the disagreeable predicament of being obliged to do exactly what he ought to do—that is to say, the music being good, to sing it properly. From all this it follows incontrovertibly that a Duett or a Trio is the best test inasmuch as it insures correct singing and you have only to choose good Duets and good Trios, and then you have good music correctly sung. Q. E. D. We will only say further that the acting of Almaviva, was as good as his singing and that he played with an animation in his various characters which prevented the interest of the piece from flagging for a moment. Again we say the performance was completely successful and the Opera may well be proud of such an addition to its attractions. Mrs. Atkinson played the part of Berta, a character which affords no great scope for talents, but she was so obliging as to take it in order to render the Opera complete, and Mrs. Atkinson's powers are so well understood, that their occasional exercise in inferior part can do her no prejudice with the public. Schieroni, Pizzoni, and Bettoli had their old parts which they filled with the ability which has so often called down public applause, and they kept the house in continued good humour to the very end of the piece. The performance was somewhat dashed by the absence of the Amateur to whom the public have been accustomed to look for the representative of Basilio, and to whose talents the Opera owes so much. We are the more grieved at his absence as we understand it was occasioned by illness, but we trust he will be able to resume his character when the piece is again performed. The Opera cannot spare him. That most valuable multiple Garate undertook the part of Basilio at a very short warning, besides filling his usual five or six characters, and he really acquitted himself very well, especially in the Quintett. The fine air "La Calunnia" was however omitted. The chorus were, generally speaking, good; but whenever Garate leaves them to themselves, there is fear of mischief, and on one occasion when that respected leader was otherwise employed there was a slight hitch. We must not conclude without saying that the Orchestra was in fine order, and that there was scarcely any thing to find fault with in their department.—Evening Herald.

OTHELLO.

Let jealousy
Diet her bane to taint their growing doves!
Light up resentment! fan the dangerous fire
With dark surmises, hints, invented tales
Till it burst all the tender bonds asunder
Tost knit their souls—Virginia.
This jealousy is for a preclous creature.—Winter's Tale.

Chowringhee Theatre, Dec. 14.

The amateur who so lately performed the part of Shylock, appeared on this occasion in the character of Othello. It was in the former that Kean made his first appearance on the London Stage, and it was in the latter that he feebly fretted his last hour as an actor, coincident with the close of the real tragedy of his life. In both of these parts he had often electrified the audience with his bursts of passion; but though his Shylock was in many respects a wonderful performance, his jealous Moor was superior, not only to his malignant Jew but to all his other personations. It was by far the greatest triumph of his skill, and singularly well adapted for the full display of his peculiar powers. To have seen Kean in this character is an event in a man's life that can never be forgotten. It is even something to be proud of, if men may pride themselves upon having witnessed those wonders of air or nature of which the vivid remembrance implies no other personal merit in themselves than a disposition to admire, and, perhaps, a capacity to appreciate them.

We saw Kean's Othello on an occasion when he was supported by the Ing of Young and the Cassio of Charles Kemble. Perhaps many of the audience on Monday night had been equally fortunate. To satisfy entirely minds so pre-occupied must have been as much beyond the hopes of our amateurs as it was beyond their power. But though we cannot speak in terms of unmeasured praise of the performance of this noble tragedy by our Calcutta Amateurs, many serious difficulties were compassed with more success than we had anticipated, and occasionally there was exhibited a degree of excellence that must have triumphed over the prejudices of the most fastidious.

The gentleman who undertook the very arduous part of the Moor was far more successful than in his Shylock. It was better suited to him. When he first came on, however, we despaired of his success; for we had been so accustomed to his more energetic style that his remarkably subdued tone and manner gave us the impression that he was affected either by illness or alarm. We suspect that his having been so often accused of exaggeration made him resolve to escape the charge in the present instance, but this change of style did not sit quite naturally upon him, so that from his anxiety to avoid his old fault he fell into an opposite one, and became rather cold and spiritless. His conception, however, of the character was correct; and he was perfectly right, we think, in his endeavour to reserve himself for the explosions of passion in the after progress of the play. The calm happiness of the confiding husband, and the noble serenity with which he meets the threats and insults of Brabantio and his followers, were thus made to heighten by contrast the effect of his tumultuous passion when the poison of jealousy began to work. Upon the whole, therefore, as the play proceeded, we did not so much regret the want of energy in the commencement, and it was at all events a much safer and less obnoxious error than that extreme violence which must have ended in an anti-climax. The celebrated speech to the senator was very carefully delivered, and though somewhat deficient in force, it told extremely well. When the Duke exclaims the applause which followed testified that the audience thought the compliment to Othello's eloquence was no more than his due.

In our notice of the late representation of the Merchant of Venice we spoke of the want of previous study which all the amateurs betrayed in their errors of emphasis and apprehension. We are happy to confess that we observed a considerable improvement in this respect in the performance of Monday. This was especially the case with the personator of the Moor; but the whole company deserve to share the praise. Not only was Shakespeare's language much less mutilated by change; of words and wrong inflexions, but all the characters of the tragedy were more carefully studied and more accurately rendered.

There has been a discussion in the daily newspapers, which began in the Hurlock, on the subject of the jealousy of Othello. Coleridge gave it out as a discovery, that the Moor was not jealous. This is either an idle truism or an outrageous paradox. If he meant that the Moor was not naturally suspicious, he merely echoed the general judgment; but if he really thought that the cunning insinuations of Iago instilled no jealousy into Othello's mind and that it was not Shakespeare's intention to exhibit the progress and effects of that passion, his opinion is equally new and strange.

It is true that the jealousy of the Moor is not of that despicable character which always anticipates evil, and is ever on the watch. He is not one of those sly and greedy listeners who, according to the vulgar proverb, never hear any good of themselves. He is not a Paul Pry. His is the jealousy of a fiery and impassioned nature, that cannot brook a taint of dishonour either in love or war.

• "A savage jealousy that sometimes savours nobly."

Twelfth-Night.

If his jealousy had been of that cast which characterizes mean and suspicious minds, instead of sympathizing with him in his afflictions, we should have regarded him with mingled hatred and contempt. His pains would have seemed a fitting punishment. Even if his jealousy had spontaneously arisen in his own heart, instead of its being forced upon him, as it was, by the circumvention of a fiend in human form, it would have greatly lessened our sympathy and respect. It is almost unnecessary to observe that it was not Shakespeare's desire to render him repulsive or contemptible, but on the contrary to compel us to love and honor him even while he is writhing with a passion which would have rendered a meaner nature intolerably hateful. Though he becomes the murderer of his spotless wife, he only deepens our pity. The more pure and precious was that angelic being, the heavier was his misfortune. We forget his guilt in his agony. Who does not sympathize with that terrible straining of the heart-strings when the sense of his wife's death comes suddenly home to his apprehension, while Amelia is knocking at the chamber-door?

"If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife;
My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife.
O, insupportable! O, heavy hour!"

We never cease to remember, that it was the intensity of his love and the boundless confidence of his friendship that exposed him to the subtle treachery of Iago. We could not despise him for his credulity without insulting virtue. It is not the credulity of weakness, like that of Roderigo, who by the dark lantern of his own mean imagination sometimes catches a slight glimpse of the dreadful interior of Iago's mind, and then all is veiled again. A noble spirit like that of Othello could form no conception of those hideous images that haunt the obscure cells of a villain's brain. But the Moor and Roderigo were not the only dupes of the plotting and malignant "ancient." He must have deceived even the more keen and worldly-minded of his associates, for he had obtained such a character for truth and frankness that they must have been nearly as tired of hearing of the honesty of Iago as the Romans of the justice of Aristides. That Othello should have resisted as he did the first suggestions of Iago, insinuated with such consummate address, and with such apparent reluctance, shows that he was not "easily jealous," though "being wrought, perplexed in the extreme." No man could have altogether resisted the shrewd hints and the circumstantial evidence adduced by Iago, backed as they were by his reputation for sincerity.

* Dr. Lowth observes, "that the passion of jealousy, its causes, circumstances, progress, and effects, are more accurately, more copiously, more satisfactorily described in this one drama of Shakespeare, than in all the disquisitions of philosophy."

The character of Iago has been compared with that of Zanga in Young's tragedy of The Revenge. But we might as well compare a Saracen's head on a sign-post with one of Rembrandt's portraits. Hazlitt justly styles it a vulgar caricature. Dr. Gregory in one of his letters informs us that when he was a very young man he used to think Zanga a better drawn character than Iago, but that more knowledge of the world convinced him of his error. In an edition of The Revenge, now before us, the editor remarks that "though similar in some degree, to the story Shakespeare's Othello, the motives for resentment in Zanga are of a more noble and consistent nature, and the credulous object of his deadly hatred more excusable and more pitted in yielding to his fate." It is not worth our while to contradict this nonsense. We suspect, the critic must have studied Rymer's "Reflections on Shakespeare" in his "Short View of Tragedy." That critic, with an exquisite refinement of thought and phraseology styles "the tragic part of Othello a bloody farce, without salt or savour;" and being of opinion, we suppose, that "great events" ought not to spring from "trivial causes," maintains that "the handkerchief is so remote a trifle that no booby on this side of Mauritania could make any consequence from it."

The different conceptions which are formed of the characters in Shakespeare's plays may seem to some critics to be an argument against their truth and nature. It is exactly the reverse. It is a glorious proof of that dramatic power which enabled him so entirely to forget himself—to enter into the heart of others—and to portray men exactly as they are, in every change of position and with all their inconsistencies, both real and apparent. To understand them thoroughly requires the same studious observation and knowledge of human nature, as are employed in an intelligent intercourse with the living world. His characters are not described;—they act. They are not allegorical personifications of vice or virtue. Neither are they automata or lay figures. They "live and move and have their being"—Othello is not merely a synonyme for jealousy, but an individual acted upon by that passion. The characters in the plays of those poets who do not possess the dramatic faculty, however capable may be the writers of portraying with truth and vigour their own feelings, are by no means so difficult of comprehension. Not being persons but descriptions, he who runs may read them. They remind us of caricatures with labels in their mouths, or paintings accompanied with written explanations. In the tragedies of vulgar writers there is always a kind of flourish of trumpets and enter a showman, while the "live lions stuffed with straw" display at once all their fair proportions. How natural! is the instant exclamation of the same crowd, who are struck with the incomprehensible inconsistencies of Shakespeare's characters! It is always thus with superficial observers. They see not that the human character is of "a mingled yarn," and discover only the broader traits unqualified by those nice gradations and varieties of shade, those virtues that border upon vice, and those vices that lean to virtue's side, which are often so mysteriously blended in the same human being. This ignorance of our nature is the cause of the instability of friendships. The people of whom we speak know but of two characters in the world—a good man and a wicked man. When they discovered a single vice or failing in one whom they had placed in the former class, they instantly transfer him to the latter, and cut the connection. They generally add to this injustice by attributing the mistake to the culprit's hypocrisy instead of to their own want of discernment.

* An English writer would be looked upon as a madman who in the present day should speak in the style of Rymer of Shakespeare's production, but even that critic, published his insults on our great Bard in 1749; they seem to have excited neither astonishment nor indignation. He says that "there is nothing in the noble Desdemona that is not below any country kitchen maid," and that "no woman bred out of a pig sty could talk so weakly." He is especially angry that Shakespeare should have given rank and reputation to "a Negro." With us he says "a black-moor might rise to be a trumpeter; but Shakespeare would not have blacks than a Lieutenant General." It is apparently ignorant of the fact that in Morocco the Negroes were in such high repute for their qualities that they constituted the most considerable part of the Emperor's army and were generally appointed to the government of provinces and towns. He thinks if an insult to the possession of arms that Iago is a soldier—so if a red coat must chase away all impurities, or cover like charity, a multitude of sins. In other words that in certain human flocks that are blessed with Rymer's approbation, there can be no black sheep. The noble character of Cassio, or that of Othello himself, is now to be considered as a set off against the villainy of Iago. Rymer has fallen into well merited oblivion, and yet Dryden lives! the best critic of his time characterizes one of the critiques in the volume containing these literary blasphemies, as "excellent." Johnson in his life of Dryden draws a parallel between him and Rymer. "Dryden's criticism," says he "has the majesty of a queen; Rymer's has the ferocity of a tyrant." Johnson makes no allusion to Rymer's attacks on Shakespeare. —Ed. Cal Lit. Gaz.

In pursuing these more general reflections we had almost forgotten the performance of Monday evening. We have not yet concluded our remarks upon the personator of Othello, but we must be more brief in this part of our notice than we originally intended. A contemporary insists that this gentleman is an imitator not of Kean but of Kemble. If our Amateur really takes the latter for his model he imitates him "most abominably," and falls by an odd fatality into the directly opposite style of a greater though less perfect actor. We keep however, to our first opinion. But whether Kean or Kemble be the object of his imitation, this is certain that he bears a much closer resemblance to the former than to the classical and judicious Kemble, the Virgil of actors, of whom Kean (certainly not in simplicity, but perhaps in power,) was the Homer. We do not maintain that he copies Kean in the way in which we have seen the great actor's son imitate his father—by a mimicry of all his characteristic movements, crowded into a single passage. The long pause—the frequent start—the sarcastic smile—the wild convulsive laugh—the sudden change of voice from the full roar of passion to the light easy tones of familiar dialogue—the low hurried mutterings of suppressed agitation—the hasty strides—the rude tugs at his unoffending garments—the play of the fingers on the folded arms—the slow patting of the breast,—and the vice-like grasp of the forehead,—all these mannerisms, sometimes electrically effective, and sometimes absolutely offensive, were turned by the younger Kean into a ludicrous caricature. It is not, indeed, in this style that our Amateur imitates a man of genius, who, though the most powerful of modern actors, is also the most dangerous model that an histrionic aspirant could select for study. Many of Kean's peculiarities of manner are traceable in this gentleman's performance of impassioned parts, but they are not glaring or offensive, and he does not seem to have confounded that actor's idiosyncrasies with his excellencies.

It would take up too much space to criticise minutely the delivery of the many celebrated passages in the part of Othello which pleased us or disappointed us. Amongst those which most gratified us, was the Moor's beautiful farewell to "the plumed troop and the big wars that make ambition virtue," and that most natural burst of rage with which after this lament over his forlorn and comfortless condition he turns on his tormentor like a baited lion, and, seizing him by the throat, insists upon his relieving him from the rack of doubt. The simple exclamation—Ha! in an earlier scene when the poison of jealousy first penetrates his heart, was absolutely thrilling. That brief but most expressive iteration too, with which he answers Iago's covert sneer—I see this hath a little dashed your spirits.

Not a jot, not a jot—

was also admirably given. But by far the finest and most successful of his efforts was that exclamation which follows his gentle wife's passionate question as to how he can deem her false.

O Desdemona!—away! away! away!

What a world of love and agony and tender retrospection are condensed into that single line!

The Othello, was admirably supported by the Iago of the gentleman who sometime ago personated Rashleigh Osbaldistone. He more than fulfilled our most favorable anticipations. His excellence in comedy and farce is well known, but we somewhat doubted his powers in the tragic line; and we never dreamed that he could so ably sustain the difficult part of Iago. We were far from expecting an entire failure, but little did we expect such great success. It was K's very best performance on the Charing-cross Boards. And yet, with all this praise, we must caution him against attempting a different department of the tragic drama. Let him not try Othello—he would fail, we think, in the development of overmastering emotion. His conception of the part of Iago was strong and true, and his execution as firm and spirited as could be desired. He appeared to have no misgivings on the stage, but to have thoroughly conquered all doubts in the closet. This is just as it should be. As, like Iago himself, we are "nothing if not critical," and always fancy that our praise is the more acceptable for not being indiscriminate, we may observe, that, excellent as was the general outline of our amateur's representation, there were two or three slight details which we thought capable of improvement. His manner was at times a little too undisguisedly villainous. He had an air of Nett gate about him. He looked like a jail-bird. The appellation of Honest Iago sounded oddly when applied to a man sneaking into the room with a slow, cautious gait and a sinister expression of blended fear and malice. It interfered with our respect for Othello, who began to look too much like a gull. This was Young's mistake in the same part. He wore too black a brow—the blackness should have appeared in his deeds and not his looks, when he was in the presence of those against whose peace he was plotting and before whom he had a certain character to support. There is an anecdote in some theatrical publication of the performance of Cooke in this character. It is said that a man in the gallery exclaimed what a villain! and called for his expulsion. It is perhaps difficult to say whether this was a compliment or a condemnation. The actor should never lose sight of the fact that Shakspeare makes Iago a general deceiver, and that it would consequently be wrong to put a Cain-mark upon his forehead. It must have been an ever-present consciousness of this truth that caused Kean to err on the other side, by making him too gay; at least this objection to his Iago is made by Hazlitt; for we do not speak of Kean's performance in that part from our own personal knowledge. On the other hand, however, we think that it is too generally forgotten in criticisms upon the Drama, that in all representations on the stage the audience are in one sense of the phrase behind the scenes. They are mere lookers-on, and see all the secret springs and movements. They have a key to each character. As Iago proceeds in his demoniacal work, his villainy is so palpable to the audience that they are apt to be betrayed into a very unreasonable surmise that it is not equally evident to the whole of the Dramatis Personæ. But making every allowance on this account, we still think that our Amateur's Iago was occasionally, not always, a little too grave and fiend-like in his manner.

We have already praised the very great improvement which all the Amateurs exhibited on Monday evening in respect to accuracy of emphasis, and fidelity to the text. If the task, however, were less disagreeable, we might still make out a list of errors, but they were so much fewer and comparatively so unimportant, that it would be ungrateful in us to dwell upon them. We shall adduce only a single instance, but that a rather serious one, of Iago's erroneous emphasis. It was in the following passage:—

Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon
When it hath blown his ranks into the air;
And like the devil, from his very arm
Puffed his own brother.—And can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet him;
There's matter in it, indeed, if he be angry.

The emphasis was placed on the word angry,—of course it is the personal pronoun he that should have been made emphatic. There was another error of which the same gentleman was guilty, and which demands particular notice, because it is too common amongst amateur actors. When he described Cassio's dream he accompanied the words "and then did kiss me hard, as if he plucked up kisses by the root, that grew upon my lips," with an explanatory plucking motion of his hand to and from his lips. In the first place Cassio was not supposed to pluck kisses with his hand, but with his lips, and in the second, even if the manual explanation had been more correct, it would still have been unnecessary and injudicious. Such corporeal illustrations do better in farce than tragedy. The gentleman who represented Othello was guilty of several similar errors and is too much inclined to accompany a mere feeling or sentiment with an attempt at descriptive action.

To return to our pleasant office of praise,—it is difficult to say which were the points in the part of Iago that were most effective. There were so many admirable hits that we are puzzled which to fix upon for particular commendation. It is a well deserved praise, however, to say that the best parts of the dialogue always told the best. He never disappointed us in the favourite passages; and in some very difficult speeches he gave the text with such perfect truth and propriety that he would have balked the most captious critic.

It has been thought that the character of Iago is in some degree unnatural, inasmuch as there is not a sufficient motive for his atrocious conduct. Perhaps this objection is not entirely unfounded. Hazlitt pronounces it more nice than wise. That writer was a profound and subtle critic, when he could bring himself to be quite impartial. He was at other times either a fierce hater or an equally fierce admirer. With respect to his Shaksperian creed he was a thorough bigot, and seemed to think the poet as infallible as the Pope. But the sun of that mighty genius, glorious and magnificent as it is, has far more spots upon its disk than many luminaries of lesser magnitude and brightness. Few great poets could so little justify an unqualified admiration. We are far from maintaining that the character of Iago is actually or altogether unnatural, but we think that even Shakspeare himself had some misgivings on this score and had anticipated the very objection which Hazlitt combats. It was on this account perhaps that he has made Iago express a suspicion that both the Moor and Cassio had dishonored him as a husband. The thing seems improbable in itself, and is so awkwardly introduced and has so little effect that it looks very like an after-thought or interpolation. It is forgotten as soon as mentioned. The desire of obtaining Cassio's place and of revenging himself on the Moor for his selection of that officer in preference to himself, does not seem a sufficient motive for his fiendish machiavellism. Besides it seems unlikely that such a cautious and clear-minded observer of human nature as Iago should not have reflected that to succeed in proving Desdemona faithless would be to make Othello fancy himself

"A fixed figure for the time of Scorn To point his slow unmoving finger at."

And to deprive him of that precious charm in which he had "garnered up his heart,"

Where either he must live, or bear no life."

He must have known that he could not have long continued an agreeable object to Othello's eye. "The first bringer of unwelcome news hath but a losing office." We must, however, somewhat qualify these objections by remembering that Iago did not himself see his own way with perfect clearness and precision. His plans were at first confused and undefined, and the course of events became more fearful than he had expected. Crime after crime entailed the necessity of still deeper horrors, and he became himself involved in a hideous labyrinth of his own creating. The total destruction of his victims was at first as little contemplated as his own. Had a pause in his career been consistent with his own safety there is no reason to suppose that he would have desired so dreadful a consummation of his revenge.

Our "Proteus," as he is called, made an excellent Cassio, though he was still affected by the illness for which the play had been postponed. His humorous drunkenness—the shock received from the sudden appearance of this general, which, though it at first increased the stupefaction of his mind, at last restored him to his sober senses and to bitter shame—and his pathetic lament over the loss of his reputation, were all done ample justice to by this favorite and accomplished Amateur. We were not so well pleased with his cries in the scene in which he is wounded by Iago. They were unworthy of a brave soldier. The text, however, is partly in fault in this instance.

The amateur who represented the angry father of exhibited considerable spirit. His ungracious speech on giving up his daughter to Othello, in the presence of the Senate, was particularly good. We only regretted, in some of the other passages in his part, a certain harshness of intonation, and an abruptness of action and delivery; that we think might be easily corrected.

The debutant who took the part of Roderigo promises pretty well. At present he has not got over the feeling of a novice that to act is task-work. As soon as the last words of his speeches dropped from his tongue, his eyes and his hands dropped also, as if they had no more to do. Increased confidence and a greater attention to his by-play may much improve him. Some of his points were deservedly applauded.

Mrs. Leach as Desdemona was not seen to so much advantage as usual. Her grief wants dignity. It is not womanly, but child-like. Her tender admiration and confiding love in the early scenes were delicately and beautifully true. Mrs. Francis must not be passed over. There was genuine feeling in her delivery of the noble and indignant out-breaks against the Moor and her husband in the concluding scene.

Upon the whole we were much gratified with the style in which the Tragedy of Othello was got up on this occasion; and we hope it will not be long before we see another of Shakspeare's Plays, represented on the Chowringhee Boards.—ED. CAL. LIT. GAZ.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS' PETITION.

THE HON'BLE SIR C. T. METCALFE, BT.

Governor-General of India in Council.

The humble Memorial of the undersigned Uncovenanted Assistants in the several offices of Government at the Presidency.

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH.—That your Memorialists have always been paid in sicca rupees agreeably to the rates at which their salaries were fixed in that currency until the bills and abstracts came under audit for the month of September last.

That when the bills and abstracts for September were presented for audit, they were passed not in sicca rupees as usual, but in Company's rupees at the rate of one hundred and four and eight annas of such intended currency, although the XVIIth Act of the Governor-General of India in Legislative Council, expressly declares that the Company's rupees shall be only of the sicca rupee, and consequently that one hundred sicca rupees shall be held to be equivalent to one hundred and six rupees ten annas and eight pie of the new coinage about to be issued.

Your Memorialists did not contemplate with reference to the recent change in the mode of drawing up the abstracts for the pay of the uncovenanted servants in sonat rupees instead of siccas, that they, who at the time the measure was carried into effect, and since have received the full amount of their salaries in sicca rupees, would ever be subjected to deduction on account of a nominal difference in the value of the rupee. Their salaries were certainly rated in the bills at 104-8 per centum in sonat rupees; but they have invariably received one hundred sicca rupees for the 104-8 sonat rupees, and any alterations under the new system of filling up all vacancies by allowing so many sonat rupees instead of siccas, have hitherto invariably affected only new situations or parties bettered by increased allowances.

Your Memorialists were disposed to conclude that the recent arrangements by which their allowances have without reference to length of service been reduced, by ing at variance with the act of the Legislative Council had been the consequence of oversight or miscalculation; for they are aware that the holders of Public Securities receive their interest at Madras and Bombay in the currency of those Presidencies (the rupees of which currency are declared by IV section of the XVII act to be equivalent to the sonat) at 6-8 per cent in addition in exchange for sicca rupees, (the difference of 2 annas 8 pie per cent, appearing to have been struck off for convenience of account) and they observed that by circular to the several revenue authorities in the interior issued from the department of account, all persons paying money into the several Treasuries will be required to give the full sum of one hundred and six Company's rupees ten annas and eight pie of the new coinage, in cases in which one hundred sicca rupees are now demandable, and that all transactions with individuals will be conducted upon the same principle.

But it is obvious from the orders of the Government of India in the Financial Department dated 7th Oct. 1835, that you Memorialists have been excluded from these terms, that there has been no misunderstanding nor miscalculation in the department of account, and that the Government have really contemplated a reduction of 2 rupees 2 annas and 8 pie per centum on issue of the new coinage, from the salaries of those of their servants who have hitherto been paid in sicca rupees. In other words, that whilst your Honor the Governor-General of India in Council in the Financial Department, values the sicca rupee at 104-8 per centum in such new coinage to them, they will be required by the Act XVII of the Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Legislative Council, to pay to all parties to whom they are under engagement in sicca rupees (the last currency of the country established by law) at the rate of 106-10-8 of the same coinage.

Nevertheless, your Memorialists observe, will their loss be confined to those instances in which they are called upon to fulfil engagements of a date anterior to the XVII Act contracted in sicca rupees:—whilst the mercantile community and others independent of the Government are privileged to claim in fulfilment of engagements of the estate, the full legal value of the old coinage; and whilst Government requires such full value themselves in all cases in which they are receivers not payers—the Company's rupee cannot, at any time, acquire such a relative value, as may recompense your Memorialists for the actual loss which they have suffered in receiving the old rupees since the recent orders have come into operation and will eventually have to bear, when the new coinage may become the circulating medium.

Your Memorialists respectfully solicit the attention of your Honor to the fact, that reductions, however small the fixed ratio with reference to salaries, do unquestionably bear the more heavily upon individuals receiving very limited allowances, and consequently, that the present measure (by which your Memorialists will suffer a permanent loss of salary) bears the more grievously upon them, as being generally with reference to their station the poorest class of the servants of Government.

Your Memorialists therefore earnestly solicit, that your Honor in Council will take the order of the 7th October into your gracious re-consideration, especially as regards a want of conformity between that order and the XVII Act of the Legislative Council of India, and that your Honor in Council will also deign to reflect upon its injurious consequences to your Memorialists, who from being generally on the receipt of small allowances will suffer considerable inconvenience from the measure; indeed, it is principally on this ground that they have ventured to submit this appeal to the special notice of Government.

Your Petitioners trust that they have by their uniform diligence and exertion established a claim to the protection of Government, and they look to your Honor's decision upon the present appeal with the anxious hope that by restoring to them the portion of their salaries which has been retrenched, your Honor in Council will maintain the principle which have hitherto guided the Government of India, and by which existing engagements with incumbents have invariably been respected.

Your Memorialists further take this opportunity of soliciting the benevolent attention of your Honor in Council to the fact, that no provision is made by the Government (except in special cases under very peculiar circumstances requiring the previous sanction of the Court of Directors) for the widows and children of uncovenanted servants; and owing to the limited scale upon which the allowances of your Memorialists are generally fixed, few are able to subscribe to any Society, or to lay by the means of support for their families: widows and children are consequently often left destitute or wholly dependent. In order to provide a remedy for such distress, and at the same time to support those who after lengthened service, or who in an infirm state of health, may desire to retire, but who are not reduced to the utter incapability of further duty, as contemplated by the pension rules, a Committee has been selected from the body of your Memorialists, who are engaged upon the preparation of a scheme for providing personal retiring pensions, and pensions for the families of uncovenanted servants; and they respectfully submit that the deduction of 2 rupees 2 annas and 8 pie per centum from the salaries of so large a portion of the number will so cripple their present slender means as to render many incapable of supporting the endeavours of the Committee for the accomplishment of their object.

Adverting to all the foregoing considerations, your Memorialists venture to express the hope, that your Honour will see fit on the issue of the new coinage to admit them to equal terms with the merchant and others who are not dependant, as your Memorialists are upon the state for support, and they trust to the generous and just feelings of your Honour as the Supreme Governor of India, that this their humble appeal will receive your support.

And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

[REPLY TO THE ABOVE.]

TO MR. R. LESLIE AND OTHERS,

Uncovenanted Servants of Government.

The Memorial addressed by the Uncovenanted Assistants in the employ of the Bengal Government to the Governor General of India in Council, and forwarded to me for presentation by Mr. Leslie on the 23d ultimo, has been this day laid before his Honor in Council, and I am directed to make the following communication in reply.

2d.—The Governor General in Council regrets exceedingly the temporary loss to which the Memorialists are subject, in common with all the servants of the State stationed in Bengal, by the recent change in the currency in which they are paid, but cannot devise any method by which they can be relieved, consistently with the uniformity which it is necessary to maintain in adjusting the pay of the public servants in the new currency throughout India.

3d.—The loss of which the Memorialists complain by the continuance of a rate of conversion, in the payment of public servants, different from the exchange according to intrinsic value between the Calcutta sicca, and the Company's rupees, is an unavoidable consequence of the prior miscalculation of the relative value of the sonat rupee in which the pay of the servants of the state, a comparatively small portion excepted, had become fixed previously to the recent change in the currency. Whatever may have been the cause, a question which it would be useless to enter into, the fact was that while the sonat rupee was calculated as 104 8 to 100 of the Calcutta sicca, the coin representing the sonat rupee was in intrinsic value as 106 10 8 to 100. But all conversion from one coin to the other being at the rate of 104 8 to 100, it followed that when pay fixed in sonat rupees was disbursed in Calcutta siccas, the parties paid received in intrinsic value an advantage of something more than 2 per cent, and when what was fixed in Calcutta sicca rupees was paid in sonats, the parties paid experienced a corresponding loss. Those effects of the erroneous exchange between the Calcutta sicca and the sonat rupees continued up to the present time without complaint. Those who derived from it intrinsic profit had no reason to complain and those who suffered the intrinsic loss found their wants equally well if not better provided for by a larger numerical amount of money than by a small intrinsic superiority of value in an inferior quantity of coin of the same denomination.

4th.—When it became necessary in consequence of the introduction of a uniform currency for all India to convert Calcutta sicca rupees, the peculiar currency of Bengal, into sonat or Company's rupees, it was found to be impossible without great confusion to adopt any other rate of conversion for the payment of public servants than that which had been long established, and it thence followed, that while the public servants in the Madras, Bombay, and Agra presidencies were unaffected by the change and continued to receive precisely the same numerical amount and precisely the same intrinsic value, that they before received, those stationed in Bengal, where the Calcutta sicca had been current, unavoidably sustained a loss of something more than 2 per cent. in intrinsic value, while they received a numerical increase at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The intrinsic loss fell alike on those whose pay was fixed in sonat and on those whose pay was in Calcutta sicca rupees, that is on all who had been paid in the currency of Bengal; and it could not be avoided without increasing the pay of all persons paid in Bengal above that of the same classes in the other presidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Agra, even above what the same persons would receive when liable in the course of duty to be paid in the Presidency of Agra or either of the other Presidencies.

5th.—The occurrence of this apparent loss to all who had previously been paid in Bengal was duly considered and found unavoidable. It formed an objection to the proposed change in the currency, but could not be regarded as a sufficient reason for preventing a measure so desirable on other grounds and of such extensive operation. As the loss fell equally on all, whether their pay had been fixed in Calcutta sicca or in sonat rupees, it was felt to be impossible to make any distinction in favor of any particular class.

6th.—It would be a great mistake to suppose that the Government contemplates gain by this change, or proceeds on the unjust principle of paying at one rate and receiving at another.—Whatever may be the incidental effects, either way, there has been no other object than uniformity in the currency, and an equable consideration for all classes of public servants. The Government will have to sustain loss in many instances. The large amount of debt which is borrowed at the old established rate of conversion of 104 8 it will have to pay at the higher intrinsic rate of 106 10 8. With the servants of the state in the Bengal and Agra Presidencies, with regard to their allowances, it continues to pay and receive at the rate of conversion always hitherto established in such transaction in those Presidencies, and could not do otherwise, without great confusion and inequality, or a total new modelling of the pay of all the servants of the state throughout India. In all other transactions the Government pays and receives at the rate of the intrinsic difference.

7th.—For the reasons above explained the Governor-General in Council is compelled, with great regret, to avow, that he sees no feasible means of complying with the petition of the Memorialists, but he confidently trusts that the loss of which they complain is only apparent or temporary, for there is little doubt, that when the momentary anxiety produced by the change in the currency has subsided, and prices and wages become adjusted according to the new currency, the Memorialists will find that the increased numerical amount of their receipts will in the aggregate go practically as far in their expenditure, as the greater intrinsic value of the smaller quantity hitherto received now does, and that on the whole they will not ultimately suffer any perceptible loss.

By order of the Governor-General of India in Council, (Signed) H. T. PRINSEP,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.
Council Chamber, the 16th Dec., 1835.

SUPREME COURT.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2.

CROWN SIDE.

In the matter of William Holloway.

The Advocate General.—This is a rule obtained by my friend, Mr. Turton, to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not be directed to Colonel Piper, to bring up William Holloway, alleged to be detained at Chinsurah. Permit me first to notice that this application rests entirely on the testimony of Holloway himself, with the exception indeed of the affidavit of Axcell who represents himself to be a shoe-maker at Calcutta. The nature of this imprisonment appears to be the only object of his affidavit, and to a part of it I will now direct your lordships' attention. He says that Holloway received a letter from Lieutenant Green, and having opened it, delivered it to this deponent, saying that it was his intention to proceed to Chinsurah, in obedience to the letter, but that he would do so under a protest that he was a discharged soldier, and that he should have recourse to the civil power for redress. Holloway himself says something on the same subject, in pretty nearly the same words, that in consequence of the letter he is about to surrender himself to Colonel Piper, and that he has stated such to be his intention to Lieutenant Green, under a protest that he is a discharged soldier. Now your lordships see precisely the nature of this imprisonment; here is a letter sent down in consequence of which he repairs twenty miles and surrenders himself, as he says, under a protest. I am not aware that this is the sort of imprisonment to be guarded against by a writ of habeas corpus; it is a high prerogative writ, and I should not have thought that it was intended to interfere with the mere service of a soldier. It is quite clear that the imprisonment complained of is nothing more than the mere service of a soldier at Chinsurah; how he went there is stated in the affidavit, but how he has been treated is not before the court, and how far a writ of habeas corpus is to interfere with that service will be for your lordships to decide. I merely direct your lordships' attention to this point, not mainly relying on it, for there are reasons besides abundantly sufficient to authorize your lordships to discharge this application.

I will, therefore, proceed to another point. Holloway states that in August 1834, he was ordered to proceed from Berhampore to Calcutta, and there to place himself under the orders of Major Hutchinson. Now it is very easy to tell a truth in such a manner as to convey an insinuation which is unfounded. It would appear here that he knew nothing of an application from himself in October 1834, to be so employed,—that he has entirely kept out of sight all his own applications to be employed in the foundry in 1830, 1831, and down to the period just mentioned. He goes on to say that Major Hutchinson recommended him to purchase his discharge and enter into the service of the Company in which he would be promoted to the rank of sergeant. Holloway replied it was his wish to purchase his discharge, but that he would not again enlist as a soldier, and subsequently, it is set forth, he deposited the money required for his discharge. This will appear to be the plan on which this man then stipulated to go into the foundry in question, and no other plan was proposed to him on that occasion:—that he should be made a sergeant on Rs 30 per month. He goes on to say, that he lodged the money for his discharge in the hands of Major Hutchinson, and that gentleman, instead of lodging the amount in the Presidency Pay Office, in the name of Captain Vernon, had placed it there in his (Major Hutchinson's) own name, to all of which charge I will give a satisfactory explanation presently. He then sets forth that Major Hutchinson, in his name, wrote to Colonel Piper an application for a discharge, "without any authority whatever from this deponent, and signed this deponent's name," pledging him to remain at the foundry for three years,—that he was entirely ignorant of the purport of this letter until the following day, when he requested the native writer to show him the draft, and found to his surprise "that the said Major Hutchinson had signed it." Now here is a charge of as aggravated a nature, brought against a gentleman of high rank in an honorable profession, as can be imagined. It is a direct charge of forgery; and I do say distinctly that either Major Hutchinson has forged this man's signature, or that this man has committed perjury and ought to sustain the punishment. Which is guilty we shall see in a very short time. I hold in my hand exhibits C. and D. The former dated 11th of August signed "William Holloway," and stating that he has no intention of "volunteering into any other regiment, but on receiving my discharge I shall remain as head founder in the Company's foundry for a period of three years, agreeable to the sanction of the Governor General in Council; and D. is the letter from Lieut. Green directing Holloway to appear before a regimental board for the purpose of being finally settled with. I should remind the court that it had been previously intended to transfer Holloway to the Company's service, but it was not thought right to do so, and it was intended to get him actually discharged before he should join. Now, my lords, that this may not be considered in the light of a mistake by the man,—that it could not have been any thing but fraud, your lordships will judge from what I hold in my hand [C.] If it is his writing, I say he must have meant to fraud; if the hand differ so much from the writing of Holloway then it must be a forgery. This was written on the 11th of August. How happens it that he was ignorant till the next day of the purport of the letter? He then receives the draft from the native writer; and finds that Major Hutchinson had imposed terms which he (Holloway) never intended to realize. Still no step was taken; no remonstrance; no explanation sought for; no complaint made. He feels the necessity of an explanation; this, indeed, is admitted, but he fears that had he required one, he might be "subject to persecution." How long he remained silent, he does not pretend to tell, but the next passage is strong enough. "This deponent further saith, on the 20th September last he received"—he had kept silent from the 12th of August to that date however—"exhibit D. from Lieut. Green directing him to attend before a regimental board," and so on. This is certainly a very singular proceeding: this man states that he knows of the transaction of the letter; he knew the terms on which his discharge was to be obtained; he knew of the misrepresentation, but notwithstanding he took advantage of it. Is not this a very extraordinary circumstance? He comes and tells your lordships "I have availed myself of this letter as if it was my own production; I have never for a moment remonstrated; I have been before the officers of my regiment who all believe I am to remain three years in the foundry and that the signature to the paper is mine. And now, having taken every advantage of the letter that I can, I come to the Supreme Court, and say that letter is a forgery; let me now not bear my part of the contract; let me be discharged." I cannot but consider that the gentleman who furnished my friend with the grounds for this application must have been one of very easy faith, he having stated in the same breath that his client has committed a fraud and practised a deception. I would ask, my lords, if this man Holloway, or such a man, were a witness in a court of justice in order to prove an instrument to be a forgery; if such a man admitted that he knew of it the day after it was executed, yet he had availed himself of it as if it was genuine, not disputing it in a single instance until he had gained all he could, would it be set aside on the testimony of such a witness who had treated it as genuine and availed himself of it? I say no jury would believe him and that this man is not worthy of credit. He says he wrote to Major Hutchinson, but the latter refused to give him his discharge unless he signed the agreement. I grant that if the letter was forged, the man was not bound to sign the agreement. But I would be content to let the matter rest entirely on the total want of credit due to this man. He says Major Hutchinson sent for him "and read over the bond or agreement," and on his refusal to sign the bond, ordered him to his quarters. Subsequently he went to Colonel Piper who declined to receive him, and he afterwards returned to Calcutta. "Denying that he ever stipulated to serve the Honorable Company for three years at Rs 60 per month." Can any mortal man believe this? What was there so fascinating in the appearance of Holloway that interested every person in his favor? What reason could have been alleged to the Commander-in-Chief but that Holloway might be employed by the Company. The answer to this is by Major Hutchinson himself, and is contained in the affidavit now in my hand. He says that in October 1830, he received a letter from Holloway, applying to be received into the foundry,—there is not a word of this in Holloway's affidavit,—and stating that he wished to remain in India during the rest of his days. Upon which Major Hutchinson informed him that there was then no vacancy, but that he might probably be employed when the new foundry was finished. In 1834 another application from Holloway induced Major Hutchinson to apply to the Military Board to get him transferred. This application succeeded so far that Government sanctioned his temporary employment on a salary of Rs 20 per month. In March 1835 Holloway again applied to Major Hutchinson to get him permanently employed at the foundry, stating that he wished to be transferred as a sergeant, and that he was willing to receive the military pay of thirty rupees per month. Major Hutchinson did apply, as has been mentioned, in answer to which he was informed that the transfer from the King's forces to that of the Company could not be permitted, but that the man must first obtain his discharge before he could be permanently appointed. Hutchinson communicated this to Holloway, and asked him what he wished now done, to which the latter replied,—but I will read the words of the affidavit. "Holloway replied that if this deponent would only get him his discharge he would be bound to serve in the foundry as long as this deponent liked, and on any terms this deponent pleased; when this deponent intimated that Holloway should receive 60 Rs per mensem, and serve the Company for three years, Holloway expressed his satisfaction and appeared well pleased." Accordingly Major Hutchinson applied for the discharge through Colonel Torrens, and an answer was received from the Military Board sanctioning Holloway's employment as head founder on a salary of Rs 60 per month. Now your lordships will find this is dated the 17th June, 1835, and the date becomes material, for this man swears that he had no idea, nor never heard that he was to serve three years or any other given time in the foundry until the 12th of Aug., and yet your lordships are called on to believe, that Major Hutchinson had written to Government stating these would be the terms,—that the government had sanctioned Holloway's employment long before it was afterwards to him by Major Hutchinson. I say the thing is incredible. I would ask if it is consistent with the ordinary practice of mankind, that Major Hutchinson should have applied for the man's discharge without intimating the terms on which it might be granted? Major Hutchinson swears that he did apprise Holloway of the contents of the letter sanctioning his employment as head founder in the presence of Mr. Calder, who was also employed in the foundry, when, for the first time, Holloway remarked something about losing his own and his wife's military pay. Calder told Major Hutchinson that Holloway was not content as to the terms, when the Major expressed some surprise, and added that the application having been made at the man's own request, he could do no more but give him half an hour to consider of it. Now this occurred a considerable time after the letter was written, and after he had expressed his willingness to stay on the terms agreed on. But let us see what Calder swears. He swears Holloway appeared well satisfied to hear of the appointment to serve three years, and that he (Calder) was present when Major Hutchinson informed Holloway that the official communication had been received, sanctioning the appointment to serve three years, on a salary of Rs. 60 per mensem. Calder alone would be enough, and more than enough, to contradict the testimony of Holloway, that he never heard of the three years and 60 Rs. before the letter of the 11th August was written. But I will now come, without detailing all the particular, to that letter, of which, remember my lords, Major Hutchinson is charged with forging the signature.

Mr. TURTON.—No. I deny it in toto.

The Advocate General.—Very well. We shall see. It appears that Major Hutchinson went from the smelting house in the foundry to his office, where he wrote the letter and sent it by the hurkaru, according to Holloway, he sent by the sergeant.—Now let us see how far this is corroborated by other persons. Annundchunder Sein, the person who examined that letter, swears the signature is Holloway's, and that he saw him write it. Mr. Harding, an Englishman, my lords,—who was in an adjoining apartment, remembers the letter, and saw Holloway standing by when it was written. Prussia swears he is acquainted with the signature of Holloway, and that at the feet of the letter appears to be in his hand writing; and Lieut. Green the adjutant of the regiment, also swears that it is Holloway's signature. So much for the charge of forgery: I will now state the explanation Major Hutchinson has thought proper to give regarding the money. It was deposited before the arrangement was complete. Subsequently he was about to give directions that it should be placed in the name of Capt. Vernon, when he found Holloway refused to complete his part of the contract, and then wrote to forbid the transfer. Now it was not till Holloway had taken advantage of the letter, till he had been before the Regimental Board when he thought himself quite secure, that he refused—

Chief Justice.—You had better come to the main question. Suppose Holloway wrote the letter, what is there to prevent us making the rule absolute?

Mr. TURTON.—I am anxious to state that my client does not charge Major Hutchinson with forgery; he merely charges him with misrepresentation.

The Advocate General.—I use the word forgery decidedly.—He is charged with simulating the hand writing of Holloway. If your lordships will look at the affidavit, you will find it so set forth.

Chief Justice.—That is not the question we are now to try.

Mr. JUSTICE MALKIN.—There are two points which it may be as well to distinguish from each other, namely, whether the man obtained his discharge by fraud, or whether after the discharge was forwarded to him he changed the intention he had previously expressed.

The Advocate General.—I maintain there was fraud in every stage of the transaction.

Chief Justice.—The point is if this is a fraud does it avoid the discharge?

The Advocate General.—I will now pass to the law of the case. I think I may lay it down as a general rule that nothing obtained by fraud can be binding and good;—that fraud vitiates every agreement. The learned counsel who obtained this rule has argued, that though the King may cancel a discharge, a Commander-in-Chief cannot. But will it be supposed that if the King delegates to the Commander-in-Chief the power of granting a discharge, it is not accompanied with a power of cancelling it, if obtained by fraud? Was it ever heard of in a court of law, where a third party was not interested, that an action succeeded on an agreement fraudulently obtained? As to the completion of the discharge, I deny that it ever took place, and I maintain it might be stopt in transitu, like a bale of goods fraudulently obtained, by a friend to the party defrauded.

Mr. JUSTICE GRANT.—I should apprehend that the person who placed the letter in the Post Office might stop it, but I cannot see how it can be done by a third party.

The Advocate General.—Any friend of the party might do so, and if the defrauder become bankrupt, no action of trover would lie. But suppose this man had received the discharge, there are still other grounds, for the discharge of a soldier is a part of the King's prerogative, exercised by his responsible advisers, but still referable ultimately to him. The learned counsel here cited the 75 and 74 Articles of War, which are as follows:—

“No Soldier shall be discharged, unless by order of our Commander-in-Chief, certified by the Adjutant General's Department at Head Quarters;—or by authority direct from us.”

“Soldiers, having been duly enlisted and sworn, shall not be dismissed our Service without a discharge or certificate, granted according to the General Order on that head, which shall be in force at the time of granting the discharge.”

The learned counsel then cited General Orders of the 1st January, 1830, and argued, first, that the Commander-in-Chief in India, if he has the power to grant a discharge has the power to cancel it; secondly, he may stop it in transitu; and lastly, the discharge is not complete nor can be, until it has been sent to England, where the King may either sanction or confirm it.

Mr. COCHRANE followed the Advocate General on the same side, and strongly urged, that Holloway had directly imputed forgery to Major Hutchinson, while, from the affidavits of Calder, Harding, and Lieut. Green, the signature was indisputably in his own hand writing. The perjury was too evident to admit of a doubt, and the only objection to placing him in the dock, was that mechanics were in great request in the convict colonies, and he might meet there encouragement instead of punishment. It was clear that the transaction on the part of Holloway was bottomed in fraud, and equally so, that in equity and law, fraud vitiates the contract. From Harding's affidavits it appeared that Holloway had an offer of Rs. 500 to go home with a gentleman. This accounted for his change of intention, but the learned counsel did not allude to that circumstance with a view to question the right of a man to carry his services to the best market, he rather intended that the court should perceive the duplicity with which the man had acted. The Commander-in-Chief had no right to discharge the King's soldier, nor is it to be inferred that the legislature would invest a power in one individual, which, carried to a dangerous extent, might weaken the resources of the country. From the 75th Article of War it was clear that such power did not vest in the Provincial Commander-in-Chief of the army, but in the Commander-in-Chief at the head of it, and though the Provincial Commander-in-Chief may sanction the discharge, it must be sent home before it is completed.

Mr. TURTON, in reply, would have been very well content to have rested this case on a single point of law, but a desire to do justice to the character of his client obliged him to refer to the affidavits and to show how the charges of misrepresentation recoiled on those who had made it. He admitted that there was sufficient before the Court to show that if this application rested on the hand writing alone it could not be supported, but there were other facts before the Court and in adverting to them, he thought he should be able to shew that the hand-writing though not a forgery was not a genuine signature. As to imputing forgery to Major Hutchinson, he distinctly denied that his client had ever done so, indeed, the imputation was denied on the face of these proceedings, as it was sworn by Holloway that he authorized Major Hutchinson to write an answer, though not imposing the conditions which had been done, Holloway, not having been in the habit of signing his name, as it would appear from the discharge received from his agreement being signed with s+-. But, it is said, that Holloway stood by while Annuchunder Sein wrote the application. Possibly so, but that letter might not contain the conditions complained of, and it is to be inferred it did not, as the letter was sent to Madras, to an officer of very great experience, then commanding the army, who replied, not alluding to such conditions, but merely prohibiting the applicant from enlisting in any other corps. The Advocate General has argued that Holloway's intention to remain at the foundry appears from first to last; this was admitted, but he was not willing to remain either for a specific time or for a specific sum, but for an adequate salary. There was not a tittle of evidence that Rs. 60 per mensem was an adequate salary, for his employment as a foundry, putting aside the sacrifice of claims for ten year's service in India. He did not accuse Major Hutchinson of forgery or fraud, but he did accuse him of gross impropriety; for it was the duty of an officer to advise a soldier about to apply for a discharge, and to tell him if the advantages to accrue were not sufficient for the sacrifice he was about to make. The learned counsel here cited a General Order, dated Horse Guards, January 30th :-

"It will also be the duty of the Commanding Officer to assist the man with the best information and advice in his power on so important a point, and it is presumed that every Commanding Officer will discharge this duty with the utmost alacrity, and in the most conscientious manner."

Mr. Turton then went over the whole of the affidavits, defending his client from the charge of fraud, and arguing that if Holloway signed the letter of the 12th of August, which he believed he did not, that letter was not such an agreement as would be binding in a court of law: it was a mere statement of an intention from which he might change without being guilty of legal fraud. And further, that the discharge was complete, notwithstanding the interception and being complete, it was in the power of the King only to cancel. With regard to the General Order of 1825, as follows:—

"The Commander-in-Chief finds it again necessary to refer the General Officers commanding on Foreign stations to the regulations touching the discharge of soldiers, and to repeat his Royal Highness's desire that no soldier may, upon any account whatever, be discharged at any foreign station, except by his Royal Highness's authority to be previously applied for and obtained for that purpose."

This was merely an order emanating from the Horse Guards, and had been superseded by the King's warrant of November 1829, permitting the discharge of soldiers at foreign stations as an indulgence and incitement to good conduct. This warrant had not been annulled by any subsequent to that date, and could not be annulled by the General Order of 1830, which merely superseded to it certain directions from Lord Hill. With regard to the 75th Article of War, it was evidently in favor of the application, the Commander-in-Chief having the authority from the crown therein mentioned. That such authority, was invested in the Commander-in-Chief could not be doubted, and so his Excellency must have thought, as well as Sir Robert O'Callaghan, and General Watson, or each of them surely would not have sanctioned that discharge which was the subject of this application.

The Court said they would give their decision on Monday.—Englishman.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1835.

The sittings having been adjourned till twelve o'clock this day, the three Judges took their seats, a short time after that hour.

IN THE MATTER OF HOLLOWAY.

The Chief Justice delivered the decision of the Court as to the writ of the habeas corpus in this matter.

There were four points of consideration upon which the Court had to decide.

That the delivery of the certificate is the formal order for the discharge of a soldier, previous to which it was open to recall; that the discharge was in law delivered to the party when it was once transmitted to the Adjutant-General; that it could not subsequently be withdrawn or stopped; and that the only ground upon which it could be impeached was that of fraud in the representatives or object for which it was applied for. The Court determined that there was not sufficient before it, upon which to decide the case without directing the writ to issue and obtaining the return thereto. The order of the Court therefore was that the writ do issue returnable next term.

Mr. Turton begged permission to state that the regiment to which Holloway belonged was under orders to sail for England in the course of a few days, and a return in the next term would be necessarily ineffectual.

The Court directed the practice to be ascertained as to the return of writs of habeas corpus, and whether when the order for the writ is moved for a Term, the return could be made, before a single Judge in vacation, and an application to be made to the Court conformably thereto.—Bengal Hurkaru.

THE MILITARY BANK v. AGA KURBOLLIE MAHOMMUD.

In this case the Bill was brought for a specific performance of an agreement to purchase a house, entered into by the defendant with the Military Bank and the late firm of Cruttenden, McKillop as joint proprietors. To this Bill a general demurrer was put in by the defendant, grounded on a want of proper parties to the suit, and the long delay of the plaintiffs in commencing legal proceedings. The Bill had been once amended to add the names of Cowland and Stevens, members and partners of the Military Bank, and to state that they sued "on behalf of themselves and all others the members and partners of the said Bank," and that from the great number of the partners in the Bank, it was impossible to make them all parties to the Bill.

After hearing the argument of counsel on the demurrer, which occupied several days, the Court decided on the 30th November last, that all the general causes of demurrer stated, were not substantial, but that the demurrer must be allowed as to the objection that the persons who were partners of the Military Bank at the date of the first mortgage to them of the property in dispute, ought to be parties to this suit; and also, because Mr. McKillop, one of the partners of the late firm of Cruttenden, McKillop and Co. is a necessary party, and not at present before the Court. On the other ground of demurrer; viz., the delay in filing the Bill, the Court thought it was not a valid objection to the suit, as it was stated in the Bill, and not denied that the defendant had taken possession of the property under the agreement, and had refused to deliver up the title deeds to the plaintiff to enable them to commence legal proceedings, and that there had been no waiver of the contract on the part of the plaintiff although there was considerable delay. Under these circumstances the Court thought the Bill ought not to be dismissed. At the request of Mr. Prinsep, counsel for the plaintiffs, leave was given to amend the Bill in those parts in which it was held defective, and further time allowed for that purpose.—Englishman.

FOURTH CRIMINAL SESSIONS.—Dec. 2, 1886.

At 12 o'clock precisely the Chief Justice, Sir John Peter Grant and Sir Benjamin Malkin took their seats, and after the Grand Jury had chosen their Foreman and been sworn, Sir John Grant who presides at this Sessions gave them a most eloquent and learned charge, which in substance was to the following effect. Having adverted to the lightness of the Calendar in comparison with Calendars generally at this season of the year, his Lordship expressed his regret that, though the Calendar was light yet there were some offences of a very serious nature, some of which he then adverted to, and commented upon, at length. A rape case was the first in order,—a rape and to have been committed on the person of a girl under the age of 7 years. Here his Lordship explained the Law of the case in great length, showing what constitutes the commission of the act according to Act 2 Geo. the 4th. The next case was of murder and manslaughter which were explained in full, showing what constitutes murder and what manslaughter. As the Grand Jury were to have before them merely the evidence for the prosecution, the evidence both for the prosecution and the defence being always given before the Petit Jury, his Lordship was particular in explaining what constituted murder and what manslaughter—malice, premeditation or using any instrument such as a bar, &c., or striking upon the belly, was proof of murder. If a man was ever so provoked, he was not justifiable in killing another, and a schoolmaster or parent in correcting a child ought to inflict punishment with great care, so as not to cause any injury. In a case of the greatest provocation where there has been sufficient time for the passion to subside and reason to interpose, and where death is occasioned by unlawful means, it is murder.

After the above explanations his Lordship concluded the charge by adverting to the common robbery and theft cases which are familiar to the Grand Jury, observing to them that, if on examination an indictment for murder were to be thrown out by them, they were to direct one for manslaughter.—Calcutta Courier.

DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

We regret to learn that the discontinuance of Lord and Lady W. Bentinck's subscription has seriously impaired the funds of this institution, and that unless a successful appeal is made to the public, one of the best managed and most useful societies in Calcutta will have greatly to reduce the extent of its charities. At home, during the cold weather appeals are made to the benevolent on behalf of the poor. We earnestly intreat our readers to imagine themselves at home and, as far as it is in their power, to continue the good old English custom. We subjoin a report of the proceedings of the society with which we have been kindly favoured—

A Special Meeting of the Central Committee District Charitable Society, was held on the 7th December, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Sub-committee on the subject of the Leprosy Asylum, and also to take into consideration the present low state of the Funds. The business of the Meeting was opened by the President announcing that the present depressed state of the Funds rendered it absolutely necessary that some measures should be adopted to meet the demand on the Institution. It appeared that a balance of nearly 400 Rs. would be all the Society could call its own on the expiration of the present year. This is aided by expectations, it was evident would all meet the monthly disbursements from January. The present deficit was in a great measure to be attributed to the withdrawal of Lord and Lady W. Bentinck's handsome monthly subscription and other contributions, also to the increase of paupers on the District lists. As a preliminary measure and with a view of ascertaining the actual amount which increased economy might enable the society to appropriate (from its present resources) for the support of the Leprosy Asylum, it was proposed, by the Honorable the President and unanimously agreed, that a sub-committee of six persons shall be appointed (by nomination of one member from each of the District Committees and three from the Central Committee) to confer together in order to ascertain by personal examination into the cases of pensioners, and communications with the several Districts, whether any saving of the funds distributed by the society could be effected. With the above view the following have associated themselves, viz

The Hon. Mr. ROBERTSON,
Mr. McILARLAN, } For the Central Committee.
Mr. DOBBS,
Mr. R. J. R. CAMPBELL, St. James's
" C. J. D. MURRAY, Old Church.
" J. PHIPPS, Cathedral.

The President and Secretary of the Central Committee and the Presidents and Secretaries of the District Committees being considered ex-officio members of the contemplated meetings, which it was proposed should take place on three consecutive Saturdays. The first of these meetings accordingly took place on the 12th December, and we are led to believe that the ejection of such portion of the pensioners as have friends to support them, or who when compelled from necessity to earn a livelihood will resort to laudable industry, may be the means of a considerable saving, and ultimately establishing the society on a more firm and certain basis than heretofore.—Oriental Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

THE JOHN WILLIAM DARE.—A letter has been received from Moulsmein, dated the 20th Nov., in which it is mentioned, that the John William Dare, which had been given up as a missing ship, had been spoken by the Venus, and received from her a supply of water and provisions. Accounts have since been received of the arrival of that vessel at her destination.

THE GLOUCESTER MILLS.—The Gloucester mills were sold on the 1st Dec., to Mr. Allan, the Attorney, for two lakhs and fifty thousand rupees. The original cost of the various property conveyed by this sale exceeded ten lakhs of rupees.

EPISCOPALITY IN CALCUTTA.—The Lord Bishop of Madras has been installed in the Cathedral of St. George. He has brought out the new Bibles. The BISHOP OF CALCUTTA is the Metropolitan, with the same authority over the other Bishops as an Archbishop in England. New South Wales is withdrawn from the See of Calcutta, and is to constitute a separate See. Ceylon is joined to Madras. The arrangements for the new Bishopric of Bombay were not completed when the Edinburgh left England. The Archdeacon there is still subject to the Bishop of Calcutta. The nomination of the Archdeacon of Calcutta rests with the Bishop of Calcutta, as before.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta had been very much indisposed at Cochin on the 24th Nov., in consequence of eight hours' exposure to the sun in boats and palanquins, when going to visit the Syrian churches in the vicinity of the Cochin Rajah's residence. His Lordship had again perfectly recovered on the 25th. About 50 persons were confirmed on the 24th. The Hatnass sailed on the 24th for Choughaut, for which place the Bishop's party were about to embark on the 25th.

BANK OF BENGAL.—A special meeting of the subscribers was held on the 1st Dec. at the Bank, for the purpose of considering certain propositions for modifying the division of the shares so as to have them represented in even thousands of Company's rupees. The chair was taken by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, who proposed that the capital stock of the Bank of Bengal, in the proposed new Charter, be expressed in Company's rupees, and that the conversion be made in even shares of 4,000 rupees each. The Chairman adverted to the case of shares already divided, and observed that they would require a special provision, which had been suggested by Government, but which would only have application in one case, there being but one divided share on the register. Mr. Cowie stated that he represented one of the parties in the case alluded to and was in communication with the rest, and the proposed conversion would enable his constituents to have an exact quarter separated, when the new shares should be created, to which extent he had an interest, whereas the rules of the existing Bank Charter rendered it impossible to separate more than a fifth. It was then proposed by Mr. Cockerell, and carried nem. con., that the following mode of votes be adopted, viz.—a holder of one share to have one vote, of five shares two votes, of ten shares three votes, of twenty shares four votes, of thirty shares six votes, and of forty shares or upwards seven votes. It was also resolved to represent to Government the inconvenience felt by the public in the copper currency, the same piece being made by regulation to represent equal divisions of the old and new rupees, at the same time that the Act declared the value of these towards each other as sixteen and fifteen.

THE CALCUTTA HUNT.—A meeting of the subscribers to the Hunt took place at the Race Stand on the 1st Dec. Messrs. C. Barwell and W. Hickey were re-elected members of the Committee, and Lieutenant Dackwood, of the Artillery, was appointed to act for the Honorable J. E. Elliott in the absence of the latter. Mr. Carpent was appointed Secretary to the Hunt and his duty accordingly. It was resolved that the Lord Sturford does not arrive sufficiently early in the season to provide a supply of fresh hounds, and Captain Beal of the Cornwall has in consequence been charged with the future annual importation.

REVIEW.—The 6th and 10th of four companies each, and the 41st, 42nd and 73d regiments complete, comprising altogether about two thousand men, were reviewed by the Commander-in-Chief on the 30th Nov., at Barrackpore. The troops went through their manoeuvres well, and His Excellency expressed himself highly pleased with their performance.

Grand Brigade Review took place on the plain before Fort Williams, on the morning of the 1st December.

A vast concourse of spectators was collected to witness the display, and all the manoeuvres were executed in a manner that gave great satisfaction to the Commander-in-Chief and to the Military critics present.

COSSONER'S INQUEST.—An inquest was held on the 8th Dec. on the body of Capt. Masson of the Lady Clifford, who died suddenly in the store of Messrs. Thompson, Broad and Co. on the 7th Dec. From a post mortem examination it appeared that the deceased had expired of hæmorrhage consequent on the bursting of a blood vessel in his liver. A verdict of "died by the visitation of God" was returned.

An inquest, which had been held for several days previous on the body of a Chinaman named Achew, who had been murdered in one of those ebullitions of party feud for which the Chinese here have become notorious, was terminated on the 14th Dec. Thirteen men were charged as participants in the murder, against four of whom a verdict of "wilful murder" was returned, two were made over to the police for further examination, and the remainder acquitted.

THE SHERIFFALTY.—R. H. Cockerell, Esq., has succeeded William Hickey, Esq., as Sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year.

THE VESTRY AFFAIR.—The lay members of the Vestry are about to file a bill in Equity with a view of being put in possession of the funds hitherto confided to the management of the Vestry.

COPPER COIN.—An Act has been projected by the Council, and passed into law, declaring that from the 20th of December no other copper coin shall be issued from any Mint within the presidency of Bengal, but a pice weighing 100 grains troy, a double pice weighing 200 grains, and a pie weighing 33½ grains, "with such devices as shall be fixed for the same by the Governor-General in Council;" and that "the said pice shall be legal tender for ¼ of the Company's rupee, and the double pice and pie for corresponding proportions thereof.

MINT-MASTERSHIP.—The Mint-mastership has been given to Captain Forbes on its being vacated by Mr. Robert Saunders, who is about to proceed to England.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The Englishman of the 9th December, intimates that some impediments exist to the immediate conclusion of the arrangement with Government regarding the Public Library, which the Curators are endeavouring to overcome. The Government require the Curators to enter into an engagement of a particular nature as a condition to the transfer of the College books, which the Curators do not feel at liberty to agree to. The Curators have adopted measures for procuring from England duplicate and triplicate copies of all the popular periodicals; and Perechund, an intelligent Hindu youth, educated at the Hindu College, has been appointed assistant Librarian.

ERECTION OF A JETTY.—It is said that an order has passed Council for the immediate erection of a jetty opposite the Custom House, to extend several feet beyond the cranes now used in landing heavy merchandise, and to extend to a draft of water sufficient to admit of ships of 500 tons laying alongside it to discharge cargo. Captain Fitzgerald has been entrusted with the construction of the jetty at an estimated cost of five lakhs of rupees.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—Lord Auckland has, beyond a doubt, been appointed Governor-General of India and was to have sailed for Calcutta on the 1st of September last.

PRESENTS TO THE KING.—It is stated that Mr. Chunnery, a clerk in the police office, is to proceed to England in charge of presents from the Nawab of Moorshedabad to the King of England.

UNIVERSAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—A most favorable report was exhibited at the Meeting of the Policy-holders &c. of this Society on the 14th December. Up to the end of November, 225 policies have been issued by the Indian branch of the Society covering Rs. 27,86,740, at home there have been issued 137 policies covering £130,661 16 9, making the total annual transactions Rs. 40,42,358 6, and not a single lapse has occurred since the formation of the Society.

THE NEW RUPEE.—It is stated in the Englishman that Government have adopted measures to remove any dissatisfaction that might have existed among the native troops from the apprehension that their pay would be diminished by the coinage of the new rupee, by determining to make up the difference between such and the Company's rupees in their payments in the latter coin. The Courier contradicts this statement, and asserts that it is wholly unfounded. The effects of the change in the currency on the finances of all in the Upper Provinces, is a subject of general complaint.

SILK REAPTURES.—It is asserted that Government have accepted the offer of Mr. John Watson for the re-impounding of silk filatures belonging to the Honorable Company, in the Riddaghat district, which remained unsold at the sale on the 2d November.

DR. SKIPTON.—Information has been received in town, of the demise of Dr. Skipton, third member of the Medical Board, on the 3d October, at the Cape of Good Hope.

SHIP.—It is stated in the Courier of the 18th December, that the Willim Gray, a vessel of about three hundred tons built in, was to be despatched from Boston for this port in the end of August with a cargo of ice, and she may therefore be daily expected.

	Quantity sold Maunds.	Average per 100 maunds	Rs.

GANGES INSURANCE COMPANY.—There was a meeting of the Ganges Insurance Company on the 21st Dec., for the purpose of considering the means to meet the recent call on the Society, on the policies effected on the Lady Mary. It was resolved after some discussion, to call on the shareholders who on a recent occasion advanced Rs. 1,900 to make an additional advance of Rs. 500, and those who at the same time advanced Rs.

Rs. 500 to advance Rs. 1,000, and those who did not advance at all to pay Rs. 1,500. It was also resolved to request Messrs. Low and Allan, to take the management of the Society's affairs in order finally to wind up the Insurance office.

MURDER.—A man, apparently a Hindu, and a native of the Upper Provinces, was murdered on the night of the 18th December, between the Bishop's College and the Botanical Garden. A chowkidar belonging to the Garden heard a cry of bāpā repeatedly on the banks of the river between the Garden and the College, and on proceeding toward the spot whence the cry came, he observed a man running along the banks of the river, who shortly after fell. The chowkidar went up to him and saw that he had several wounds, one of which under the chin was bleeding profusely. He asked the man who he was, whence he came, and who it was that had stabbed him, but he was only able to utter the word "phansy" twice. In about half an hour afterwards he expired. The case is being investigated in the Alipore Court.

APOTHECARY GENERALSHIP.—Dr. Grant, Apothecary-General, proceeds to the Cape, for the benefit of his health. Dr. A. R. Jackson, officiates during his absence.

BENGAL, &c.

DEATH.—Dewan Kishen Lal of Barutch and Jeypore notoriety, has been imprisoned on suspicion of being concerned in a conspiracy to murder Mr. Simpson Fraser.

Lieut.-Col. Alves and Capt. Thorpe have proceeded to Deogarh for the purpose of instituting a vous enu investigation in which Jotaram is to be personally confronted. Some of the questions to be put to him are of such a nature, that if answered at all, they must shortly terminate the Jeypore affair.

A Bazaar is about to be established at Delhi on an extensive scale.

Mr. Metcalfe has proceeded on a tour throughout his district, during which he will visit some of the protected Shuk states.

THE BAZAAR.—Her Highness, the Baza Bai, was to have left Futtehgarh on the 18th Dec., for the southward, where she expects to obtain a high rank in some of the Gwalior possessions, at Oo,em or Malwar.

THE BAZAAR SUMMOO.—Her Highness, the Baza Bai, has given a lakh of rupees to the erection of places of worship, she has also forwarded 2,000 rupees as a donation to the Meerut School Fund.

RAJNAGHUR ROBBERY.—A robbery was recently committed in the village of Rajnaghur in the house of one Bisbonath Chutkibutty, and a man wounded by the robbers. The rascals have hitherto escaped punishment, but the parties in whose house the robbery was committed, together with all whose evidence tended to establish the fact, were taken up by the police, carried to the magistrate, back again to the thana, there confined a day or two, and notwithstanding the reluctance of the Hindus to take an oath, were all sworn. The injured parties are made to suffer punishment for being robbed.

BUOWANGLOH.—The mortality at this place is said to have reached an unprecedented degree, and a single habitation having escaped the baneful effects of the malignant epidemic which is raging.

MANAL.—In consequence of the unhealthiness of Manal, it is to be abolished as a station for troops of the line. The 21st N. I. will be sent to Kurnaul.

NAVAL.—The court-martial for the trial of Captain [illegible] commenced its sittings on the 21st November. The prosecutor, Capt. Low, it is said, is suffering severely from illness, and will proceed to the Cape immediately after the conclusion of the proceedings.

SEASIDE.—A quantity of fine trees have been received for the Horticultural Garden at this station, which is now being rapidly enclosed.

MILITARY MOVES.—The 9th regiment N. I. marched from [illegible] and the 70th N. I. arrived at Benares on the 27th Nov. The European Regiment marched from Benares, in progress to Agra on the 25th Nov. Three companies of the 61st N. I. have arrived at Hana, one Company has subsequently marched to Hissar. The 31st N. I. left Hana for Kurnaul on the 8th Dec. The 38th N. I. marched from Benares to Delhi, on the 1st Jan. The 9th N. I., bound for the Presidency, arrived at Benares on the 24th Nov. The 8th N. I. passed through on their way to Meerut on the 20th Dec.

It is said that a new corps of Local Cavalry is about to be raised at Ajmere, and that Capt. Downing of the 3rd N. I. is to have the command of it. The expenses of the corps will be defrayed by Maun Sing of Joudpore, in lieu of the contingent which he has hitherto furnished according to treaty.

Mr. Rogers, Assistant-Surgeon of the 3rd Cavalry, who was recently sent to Joudpore to attend Lieut. Trevelyan, died there on the 22nd Nov. of fever.

ZODIACHAH.—The son of the late Vizer of Kabul, has arrived at this place, and complains of the injustice of Runjeet Sing, who obtained the fort of Attock on the promise of great reward, but which dwindled into 360 rupees monthly, and on the death of the Vizer his son only obtained a stipend reduced to 120 rupees.

WARRINGTON.—An officer of the 46th N. I. was recently seized in this district by a petty zemindar, and forced at the point of a spear to enter a house, where he was treated with every manner of indignity by a ruffianly mob which collected around. The manner of his deliverance from them is not mentioned.

Grain of all kinds is still exorbitantly dear in the district, and the mahajans enjoy a lucrative monopoly.

NEPAUL EMBASSY.—The Nepaul Ambassador, General Muktabar Sing, and suite, on their way down to Calcutta, have arrived at Tirhoot. The mission is expected to reach Calcutta about the 15th January, from whence General Muktabar Sing it is said, will proceed to England.

CUTTACK.—An extract from a letter, published in the Englishman, mentions that the 19th N. I. arrived at Cuttack on the 3rd, and the 33rd left that place on the 5th Dec. The people of the town are said to be very much distressed. The Ek-Rajah of Coofg has arrived at Cuttack.

HARRATH.—Writs have been issued from the Sudder Nazimut Adawlut, for the apprehension, in default of payment, of the parties who forfeited the penalties entered by them not to persecute their Suruged townsmen, such are being served. The amount of defalcation is about 17,000 Rs.

RAJAHMUNDRAM.—A meeting of the assistants in the Public Works Department took place on the 19th December, to decide upon the expediency of purchasing Government lands with a view to the order of the extent to which they are assemble to their superiors. The meeting separated without determining any thing.

NATIVE STATES.

MUMBAI.—The native paper states, that fever has been so prevalent at this place, that there is not one house in the whole town, which death has not visited.

DEOULPORE.—The Rana of this small state died on the 12th Nov. His son, Bugwant Sing, a lad of thirteen succeeds him, and is likely to remain long his successor, according to the prediction of the astrologers and diviners, whom he consulted on his coronation, and who promise him an unusually long reign. His death is to proceed from the bite of "the black serpent," a prediction useful as it will lead to the destruction of these reptiles. In a palace now erecting to be coeval with himself, he has directed lime produced from cowries, the most durable of all, to be used, indifferent to the effect this will produce on the currency of his territory.

LOHAROO.—The Jants of this district have given a most ungracious reception to Aumrenuden Khān, brother of Shumshooden, who was recently restored to the possession of that pergunnah. The inhabitants of the Budhera village, immediately on the withdrawal of the British thannah, attacked a mud fort which had been built to keep the village in awe, and levelled it with the ground.

JEYPORE.—The latest intelligence from Jeypore intimates that Jotharam has been formally imprisoned in the fort, under the strict surveillance of two sentries, provided from the Ressallah of Hawkes' Local Horse and Bhyree Saul's adherents. A guard of one Subadar and thirty sepoy had been added from the 17th Regt. N. I. to the Local Horse. Jotharam, it is said, has been reduced to a mere anatomy through fretting.

The Jeypore Ranees have called upon all the Jageers to attend with their troops at the city of Jeypore. Thakoor Bhopaul Sing had accordingly attended, and was directed to encamp outside the city walls. Naringhun Lall, Vakeel of the Nawab of Tanuk, had also accepted of the Jeypore Ranees' invitation and stated his readiness to join her with his troops as soon as commanded. Ubah Sing has already joined the Ranees with his troops.

Lieut.-Col. Alves, accompanied by the Vakeels of Tejarra and Joudpore, had arrived at the fort of Deosa to elicit information relative to the murder of Mr. Blake.

LAHORE.—Maharajah Runjeet Sing has directed Gynadah Sing to throw a bridge across the Attock with all expedition. He has also written to the Ameers of Scinde, directing them to offer presents to Now Nehal Singh at Mooltan—that failing to do so their country would be plundered.

Runjeet Singh's camp was at Hugglyuk, twenty miles to the eastward of Lahore, and great sickness was raging among the soldiers. The districts between Lahore and Umritsar were particularly unhealthy. Thakoor Sing had been ordered by Runjeet to proceed to Multan with his troops.

KABUL.—Dost Mohamed Khan is said to be greatly enraged with his chiefs, many of whom have withdrawn from his Court, while the rest, in great fear, attend the durbar armed cap-a-pie. The money borrowed for the Peshawar expedition has been repaid and Dost Mohamed's son dispatched with a large army to Jullahabad.

The districts of Kashi have experienced such severe frost, that Dost Mahomed has been compelled to send a large number of his horses from that place to Julialabad.

LADAKH.—The Shells, under Zoorawar Singh, have at last obtained a footing in the country and taken possession of and repented the fort. The Prince of Ladakh, with his son and Minister, have fled to Puttun near Rampore.

ULWAR AND BHURTPORE.—Native reports say that the Rajahs of Ulwar and Bhurtpore are undecided with respect to espousing the cause of the British or Jeypooreans.

SCINDE.—Ranjit Sing having written to the Hakim of Scinde directing him to forward the usual presents without delay, the latter wrote in reply that he was a soldier and would not send them till forced to do so and immediately after this reply, sent a body of ten or twelve thousand Scindians to cover the passages and fords of the river. In the mean time, two sons of a Chief called Akheemdad Khan, lately deceased, quarrelling about the division of his estate, the youngest fled to the camp of the Shikhs under Kunwur Now Nishal Sing, and offered to conduct him by a secret road to Shekarpore. The result of this proposition has not transpired.

The Scinde Chiefs are it is reported, in treaty with Imoor Shah, the son of Sooja, whom they propose to create their King.

NAUBAH.—The son of the Rajah of Naubah was recently married to the sister of the Rajah of Bulumghurh. Upwards of six lakhs of rupees were distributed to the populace on the occasion in four and eight anna pieces, and twelve men were killed in the scramble that ensued for them.

LUDWA.—Rajah Jet Sing the Chief of this province, has sent his son Knah Dehol Sing to Loodianah in order to receive an English education.

GOOMSUR.—Col Hodgson returned from his pursuit of the Rajah on the 18th to the neighbourhood of Goomsur. He was much annoyed on his march by the fire of the rebels, and had five men wounded. On passing the town of the Boladah, he left a detachment to occupy it under Lieut Layton of the 8th, who destroyed the defences under an incessant fire from the enemy, without a single casualty. Several of the rebels, however, were put hors de combat in this affair and during the day the place after the destruction of the fortifications, was evacuated for the inhabitants to return.

LUCKNOW.—The Barber Rumpin is still in disgrace and likely to remain so, as he has been recently detected in appropriating a portion of the game he ran down to himself, which privilege His Majesty allows to no one.

OWATION.—The Rajah has been reduced to a state of such debility that his recovery is looked on as very distant or doubtful. The Mamajee, however, carries on the Government vigorously.

TOMK.—The son of Amee Khan is endeavouring to effect a moral revolution in his army by banishing the alms which attach themselves to his soldiers into the Company's and Mahratta dominions.

AWAYWADAH.—The Agra Ukbar of the 12th Dec. has the following regarding Aurangabad:—

"A correspondent, in the hope of attracting attention to his subject, describes this district as fast going to ruin, by the oppression and mismanagement of the Nizam. Near Golla Khata, the Governor appointed by the Nizam. No means of violence or deceit are left unassorted to, to acquire possession of money, whether it belongs to the rich or poor. the consequences are, that the whole social machine is broken up, a moral pestilence has fallen upon this place, and robbery and riot, the immediate results of the people's misery and despair, are of daily occurrence. The merchant refuses to expose for sale to such a rabble the necessaries he commands, and famine is added to the rest, so that, says the correspondent alluded to above, unless some arrangement be made to remove or check the Nizam, the people will be driven to insurrection, and then butchered by the troops disciplined for such purposes by English knowledge. The abuse of power this Nizam is capable of exercising, may be guessed from his having imprisoned one of the Europeans, whose personal liberty even the Nizam himself respects, under his orders, with all the severity which usually characterizes native incarceration."

PESHAWUR.—A second attempt is about to be made by the Affghans to regain Peshawur, arising out of exasperation at the murder of one of the principal Mogul leaders and his suit by Now Nishal Sing, while he was paying his respects to that Chief.

CATHMULRY.—Mr Vigne, the latest accounts intimate, had penetrated beyond the Happy Valley and entered a country called Sakundree, to the northward, where he was received with every attention by the Chief.

MADRAS.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CAPTAIN BYNG.—The court-martial held on Captain Byng has most fully acquitted him and the sentence has been approved of by the Commander-in-Chief.

STRIKE IN ST. ANDREW'S SCHOOL.—There was a strike recently in St. Andrew's school among the scholars, in consequence of the managers refusing to expel a Pariah boy from the seminary. Of the hundred and forty scholars, one-half left on finding their clamour for the Pariah's expulsion unattended to. The following day one of them returned and endeavoured, but in vain, to seduce away the remainder—he has been expelled, two or three of the ringleaders will be re-admitted on apologizing for their conduct, the rest will be allowed to return if they chuse.

ACCIDENT.—A horse belonging to a gentleman on the 16th Nov. started at something while standing near the Court of Commissioners in a palankeen carriage, and took the vehicle down the barrier into the surf, when breaking from the carriage he darted back and bursting through the railing which surrounds the Petty Court forced his way through the Court-House, thronged as it was with people, to the enclosed space occupied by the Registrar and his Clerk, into which he bounded over the heads of two or three individuals, without doing any one the least injury, and after daily kicking the chains and tables to pieces, was captured by Mr. Elliot.

THE GOVERNOR.—It is rumoured that the Governor having submitted to Calcutta the necessity of his proceeding to the Hills on account of his health, he has been informed that it will perhaps be required of him to concede a moiety of his allowances during his absence, and this, notwithstanding his intention of continuing the duties of his office while absent on sick leave. The Governor, however, departed for the Neilgherry Hills on the 24th November.

ARRIVAL OF CALCUTTA.—His Lordship arrived at Calcutta on the 15th Nov. in the Northey.

ARCHDEACON ROBINSON.—The society of Madras have determined to present the Venerable Archdeacon Robinson with a piece of plate with a suitable inscription, on his quitting Madras in the beginning of next year to return to his native land. Upwards of 1,500 rupees have already been subscribed for this purpose.

SHIP NEWS.—The barque Woodlark, Captain Tozer, while laying at anchor at Port Louis in the Mauritius, sprang a leak and sunk with all her cargo, a day previous to that on which she was to have sailed for England. No lives were lost, and a day or two afterwards she was floated again, by the help of two hills laying in the harbour.

SEA POSTAGE.—Intimation is given in the Fort St. George Gazette, that "from and after the 1st December next, the same sea postage will be levied on letters leaving as on those arriving at Madras."

THE POONAMALLEE DEPOT.—The Depot at Poonamallee is to be discontinued from the 31st Dec. as a Government Command.

MAJOR-GENERAL HAWKER, it is said, has been relieved from the Command of the Mysore Division of the army at his own request.

TOBACCO DUTY.—The duty on tobacco imported by sea and intended for re-exportation, has been reduced to eight per cent.

CONSCIENTIOUS RESTITUTION.—Bank notes to the amount of four thousand five hundred rupees, have been sent to the Accountant-General by "one who is thankful for the means of making restitution," to be placed to the credit of the Government, which has accordingly been done.

BOMBAY.

ARMED ARABS.—A body of about two hundred Arabs, armed with matchlocks and other weapons, passed by Boreghaut on the 14th and 15th Nov. on their way, as they said, to Hyderabad.

SOCOTRA.—H. C. S. Coote, arrived at Bombay, on the 20th Nov. from Socotra. Two days before the Coote left, the detachment on the island embarked for Bombay, the attempt made to purchase the place having failed. The number of sick was very great, but no deaths had occurred.

PROVINCIAL NEWS.—The Coolies are disaffected to the Northward and again busily plying at the trade of their ancestors, and it seems very probable that a strong force will be soon required to put them down. The troops in Guzerat have suffered so severely from sickness this year that at present no addition could be easily made to the force which marched from Baroda last September. A party of the Auxiliary Horse, under the command of Lieutenant Skinner, 9th Regt., has been ordered up by forced marches to assist in quelling the disturbance there, arising from the clamorous demands made by a large body of Pottans enlisted in the Jgd-pore country, by the emissaries of the Raja, for arrears of pay: these vagabonds have been permitted to enter the town by the Raja's people and another detachment of several hundred are now on their march down. Native reports are circulated of a bloody battle having been fought near Panora in the hills, by the mercenaries employed by the Panora and Gorawa Thakors; about fifty of the Panora men's Mukranes were left dead in the valley, and the rest fled.

RAJAH OF SATTARA.—It is stated that the Rajah of Sattara has directed a sum of 50,000 rupees to be appropriated to the making of good roads through his territory.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER.—A native recently had his throat cut by, it is supposed, a Brahmin and a Purdasee who were living in the same house with him and have absconded. The man was found by a police peon one morning, sitting at the door of his house with his throat lacerated in a most shocking manner. He was questioned as to the manner of his being reduced to the plight he was found in, but could not speak, he however rose and went to the room in which the Purdasee and Brahmin had lodged and held up two of his fingers. The man has been removed to the hospital, but is not expected to live.

THE INDUS.—The H. C. cutter Nerbudda, arrived on the 11th Dec. from the Indus. During her absence she touched at Kutch, but was not allowed to remain there, though her officers were hospitably received by the local authorities. The steamer Indus had arrived safely in Scinde with Dr. Keddie some time before the Nerbudda, and the first boat with merchandise from Bombay, had also arrived. The steamer was constrained to unload all her coal before she could proceed to Tatta, in consequence of the shallowness of the stream.

TRIAL OF MAHOMED BIN SUGGUR.—Mahomed Bin Suggur, was tried on the 6th Nov. for having, on the 25th March last, committed a piracy on the bugalow Deriah Dowlut near the island of Heman. This individual, it is suspected, has actively participated in the numerous acts of piracy in the Persian Gulf, and also to have been the leader of the fleet of corsairs who recently attacked the Company's cruiser Elphinstone. He was found guilty, and on the 19th Nov. was placed at the bar and sentence of death passed on him, but he was respited until the pleasure of His Majesty is known.

CEYLON.

SHIPWRECK.—The ship Edward, of 350 tons, Captain Nunn, bound from Penang to Bombay with a cargo of arca-nuts, rattans and tin, was totally dismasted in a white squall on the 11th October in lat. 4° N. long. 44° E. She bore up for Cochin, but in towing into the river, she struck the northern bank and became a total wreck.

SINGAPORE.

DEATH OF THE SULTAN.—On the morning of the 2d September, his Highness Hussain Sah, or better known as Tuanko Long, Sultan of Singapore, died at Malacca on the 2d November. He was interred the following day with military honors, minute guns being fired corresponding with the number of years he had attained, and his remains were followed by all the authorities of the place, civil and military, with all the solemnities the occasion required.

SHIP NEWS.—The ships Edward and Rosendale have put into Singapore in consequence of damages sustained during a typhoon experienced by them in the month of August. The Commander of the Rosendale, Capt. Wade, was taken ill shortly after the hurricane and died, and two of the crew have since expired, and the rest are in such a debilitated state, that the vessel must be re-manned, and commanded before she can proceed on her voyage.

The American ship Emerald, of Salem, Capt. Eagleston, came into Singapore on the 9th November. She had met with a violent typhoon on the 12th October in lat. 12° long. 111° E. which had thrown her twice on her beam ends, and carried away her boats and several spars; and the Captain had in consequence been obliged to shape his course to Singapore. On the 9th of November, while off Cape Romania, the ship was struck with lightning which shivered the mainmast from the royal-mast head to within a few feet of the deck, and killed one of the crew, besides severely injuring two others.

STEAMER FOR SINGAPORE.—A Steamer is building in Calcutta by Mr. Thomas, on account of Mr. T. Watkins, for the purpose of being employed in the Straights in the conveyance of light freight, packets and passengers.

FIRE.—On the 20th November, a fire happened in the Kampong of Pangulu Kissang, by which seventy-seven native houses, valued at about four thousand four hundred and thirty-eight Spanish dollars, were destroyed.

PENANG.

RECORDER'S TOUR.—The Honorable the Recorder and court establishment have proceeded on circuit to Singapore and Malacca, on the barque Fanny. The Fanny is engaged to convey them throughout the circuit, for three months, at 10,000 sicca rupes per month.

DUTIES.—It is said that duties are to be levied on the import and export trade of Penang; some intelligence to this effect has reached the local authorities, but is at present confined to the object of ascertaining to what extent and upon what articles of commerce the same may be most expediently imposed, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a flotilla for the prevention of piracy in the Straights.

ARABIA.

A letter from Bagdad, dated 12th October, mentions that a serious disturbance had taken place in that city, in consequence of a fanatic named Jacob Samuel having entered the bazaar followed by two animals laden with religious tracts and books reflecting on Mahomed and Mahomedanism, which he began distributing to the people, and thus soon collected a mob crying out vengeance upon all Christians. The tumult was however quelled without bloodshed by the cool and determined behaviour of the Government troops, whose conduct on the occasion was highly praiseworthy. The unfortunate fanatic was in the mean time put into a boat and sent to Bussora; but his indiscretion was the cause of serious inconvenience to the unoffending Armenians and Catholics of the place, who dared not for several days after, venture out of their dwellings in consequence of the fury of the populace.

Three thousand regular troops had arrived at Bagdad from Constantinople, and the Arabs were tolerably quiet. Colonel Chesney is supposed still to be at Bir, and the expedition progresses very slowly, as Mahomed Ali is underhandedly doing all he can to prevent it.

SIAM.

Advices have been received from Bangkok to the 25th Nov. The disputes with Cochin China were still pending and the Siamese were accordingly busy, making preparations for war. A small brig-of-war of about 200 tons burthen, built by a young Siamese Nobleman at Chentaboon, and which reflects great credit on the builder in point of model and workmanship, had arrived and was to be employed in the war. His Siamese Majesty considers himself more than a match for the Cochin Chinese on land, but conceives that he will be unable to contend with them by sea; he is therefore very anxious to obtain the co-operation of a British flotilla, with the assistance of which he makes no doubt of soon subjugating the whole country; and as a reward for their services he promises to make over to the English all the sea ports along the East coast of Cochin China.

CHINA.

PROVINCIAL CITY, OCTOBER 19.—A runner of the Custom House this day captured a boat with 27 balls of smuggled opium. A fight ensued between the runner and the smuggler in which both were wounded, but the runner eventually overcame his antagonist.

OCTOBER 23.—This day a Buddhist priest, who had made his temple outside the east gate of the city a receptacle for robbers, was executed. He was detected by the police having pursued some thieves who robbed a money-changer's shop into the temple, where they had taken refuge.

Two blind singing girls were also kidnapped this day; and all the efforts of their friends to recover them have proved vain.

RUNNING DOWN A VESSEL.—The Golconda, which arrived at Macao in a sinking state on the 23d October, had ran down and sunk the Danish vessel Matador, Captain Schildknecht. It appears that the Matador was seen from the Golconda hull down astern at sunset, and the vessels came in contact shortly before daylight the following morning, and four hours elapsed before they got clear of each other. The Matador did not go down immediately after the accident; two men and a portion of the cargo were taken from the wreck the next day by the Duke of Sussex. The rest of the crew were rescued by the Golconda, which vessel lost some of her spars and cutwater, and on arriving at Macao had nine feet water in her hold.

OPIMUM.—Opium in the market still ruled high, Patna last year's 800—new 740, Benares 730 old—new 715 to 720 Spanish dollars.

BRITISH CONSUL.—Intelligence has been received of the appointment of a talented gentleman long resident at Canton, to be British Consul or agent to Cantou, and that he was early expected.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MANILA.—Advices from Manila state, that the new Governor, Don Pedro Antonio Salagan, appears disposed to allow the export of rice, and he has granted permission to the ship Constitution to take in a cargo, and will grant it to all who may require to make shipments of it in foreign vessels. He is said to be a liberal man, and desirous to advance the interest of his country by opening a trade with neighbouring states.

SOCIETY FOR THE DIFFUSION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.—A Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge in China, has been established. The first meeting of the members was held on the 19th October.

OPIMUM.—On the 13th Nov., Patna opium was at 8p. dls. 725, Benares at 695, and Malwa at 610 to 640 per chest, but the prices would of course fall, on the opium of the Water Witch, which had arrived, coming into the market.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kuhn's Monthly Price Current, December 31, 1835.)

Our market, which for the last two months was in an uncommonly languishing state, has since our last evinced renewed activity. The season of general business in articles of produce may now be considered fairly open. The transactions, which have been in general on an extensive scale, would have been still larger, if tonnage had been more available. Freight continues high and scarce, owing to the great demand for shipment of Linseed, Rice and Sugar to England. Freight for about 300 tons of Government Silk has been engaged at rates ranging as high as £ 7 7.

INDIGO.—We have had five auction sales during this month, at Messrs. Hickey, Thomas and Co.'s new Indigo Mart.

1st Sale, 2d December, of about 170 chests of Tirhoot, Purneah and Ghazepore Indigo.—It opened rather dull, but as it proceeded the biddings (which were general, excepting on French account) became more animated. The prices obtained may be said to be on a par with those of last year.—Two invoices, Purneah and Ghazepore, were bought in, above last year's rates, there were, however, genuine bids for both parcels, at two rupees eight annas per maund under the prices at which they were taken in.

2d Sale, 9th December, of about 330 chests of Ghazepore, Purneah, Tirhoot and ordinary mixed Native Indigo; and went off with great spirit at fully last sale's prices. The Arabs, who appear to have extensive orders, were the principal purchasers. The sale was very numerously attended.

3d Sale, 16th December, of about 278 chests, the attendance was good, but the biddings were irregular and the Indigo went off with less spirit than at the former two sales.

4th Sale, 23d December, of about 280 chests, principally of shewy Ghazepore and Oude Indigo, and went off with considerable spirit at rates fully equal to those of any preceding sale. The attendance was good and the biddings very general, but the Arabs were the principal purchasers.

5th Sale, 31st December, of about 165 chests were put up for sale this day, of which 127 chests were disposed of, and 38 bought in. The attendance was good, but buyers kept back in consequence of which the biddings for the first few lots were languid and dull, as the sale went on, it became more animated and the prices realised were generally considered the full value of the Indigo; the greater portion of which was pale, specky, weak, and very ordinary to low copper.

The highest price paid has been Sa. Rs. 163 8 by private contracts, but as yet no regular scale can be quoted, probably in our next market may enable us to fill in the prices as customary.

OPIMUM.—The last sale of the Hon'ble Company's Opium of 6500 chests, of which 4500 Patna and 2000 Benares, is advertised for the 4th January; nothing worthy of notice is remaining in the market and not a single sale has come to our notice. The prospects of the new crop, as to quantity, appear to range from 15,000 to 16,000 chests, besides about 25,000 chests of the Malwa Drug.

RAW SILK AND SILK PIECE GOODS.—We have only a few transactions to notice, owing to the scarcity of good qualities in the market. The November band (very small) is shortly expected to arrive, so that our next Number may be more interesting in regard to this article. This band is always better than the June band. The imports by the Honorable Company since 1st May last amount to factory maunds 2 1/2 which are expected to be shipped in a few weeks. At the Honorable Company's sale on the 15th December, there was a good attendance of buyers, and prices were considered to rule 10 a 15 per cent. higher than the same goods would have brought by private sale. Rejected Shikah Silk, including some of good quality, obtained SR 10 6, per factory set, Radanagore and Hurripal Rs. 9-10, Commercially Rs. 8-11. Ordinary Choppahs, 7 by 1, realized Rs. 7-8 a 7 12 per piece, inferior ditto rapees 6 12 a 7-4, Cossimbar Corahs, light and of mixed qualities Rs. 7-4 per piece, inferior ditto Rs. 6-8. The demand for Corahs for England and for Choppahs for the United States is steady. Prices are well sustained.

COTTON.—Shipments are chiefly confined to the supply of English markets, and have been rather extensive since our last. The new crop is now arriving, its quality and cleaning are much improved. A sale of 500 bales of Cutchora is advertised.

SALTPETRE.—Considerable activity prevailed during the whole month in regard to this article, the sales reported amount to about 30,000 maunds. Almost all the available tonnage of dead weight has been engaged to carry this article to England. Of the above transactions a great part is destined for the American markets. Prices continue firm, although the demand is less animated. The production having greatly diminished, prices are not expected to suffer any considerable decline, should even the demand become restricted by the scarcity of available Tonnage.

SUGAR.—Prices of the finer descriptions have considerably advanced since our last. The demand for the Gulphs continues steady and shipments are in active progress. The scarcity of tonnage restrains at present the buyers for the home markets.

LAC DYE and SHELL LAC.—Transactions have been active during the whole month for both descriptions and prices have improved. The demand continues for England and America.

RICE.—The new crop is now arriving, and prices of all descriptions are on the decline.

WHEAT.—Has been in active demand for the Mauritius. Prices continue firm.

HIDES.—Are in moderate enquiry for America; less is doing for England at present, owing to the scarcity of available tonnage, and also the discouraging accounts from home.

LINSEED.—Shipments for England are restrained owing to the high rates of Freight. Our stock continues heavy, but prices are firm.

GINGER.—Has been in steady demand during the whole month, and prices have improved since our last. Shipments for America have been extensive during the last two months.

METALS.—The Stock of Copper in native hands is very reduced. Importers are holding firmly and prices are likely to be supported. Iron bars are dull in consequence of excessive supply, but Hoop and Sheet Iron is much wanted and prices are firm. Spelter, late extensive importations have temporarily depressed the price. Steel, in limited demand, stock heavy. Lead, prices firm, transactions limited. Tin plates in good demand.

TWIST.—Our stock of white Mule continues to be unusually reduced, prices well supported. Large Exports of Orange Twist have been made since our last number.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.—Prices of Shirtings and Long Cloths are improving. In Cambrics, Jaconets and other white Cotton Piece Goods transactions are moderate, owing to the season. More activity prevails for Chintz.

UNION BANK MEETING, — JANUARY 14, 1836.

H. M. PARKER, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The expiration of another half year calls for the usual periodical Report on the operations of the Bank during the last six months of 1835. It will be brief; because there is little to tell, besides the gratifying announcement that your affairs remain in the same undisturbed and prosperous train which marked the first half of the year now elapsed.

The same favorable condition of the Money Market for Banking operations has continued to prevail, and your profits have consequently remained at a very high rate; nor have any losses whatever occurred to disturb this favorable state of your concerns.

The nett gain during the last six months has been sicca rupees 99,527-8-2 which is at the rate of 13-5 per cent. per annum on the Bank Capital. This shews a small increase on the profits of the first half year, which you will remember to have been Sa. Rs. 94,784-2-3 or 12-0-2 per cent.

On this, as on the last occasion, it is to be remarked that the high rate of gain has had little connexion with profit on Bank note circulation. The increase in that respect has been small. The highest point of issue reached (in December) being 5,71,845 and the lowest (in November) 3,35,441. The corresponding points of last half year's issues, you will recollect, were 5,62,000 the highest, and 3,20,000 the lowest.

As the present General Meeting has been made special for the purposes of determining what shall be the future amount of each Bank share under the new currency system, and how many such shares shall form the subscribed capital of the Bank henceforward, it may be well to assist your deliberations on those two very important questions, by partially recapitulating those explanations regarding the item in our accounts called "Dependencies" which were offered to you in the last half yearly report. This will at once place the actual condition of your affairs, succinctly but fully before you.

It was stated to you, on that occasion, that the above item which represents the total of bad and doubtful debts from the commencement of the Bank, amounted to

But against this we shall have to place all recoveries from our unrealized dependencies (standing in our books at 1,65,501-10-10). Among these, one item at least promises to yield very much more than this small unrecovered sum. I allude to the Estate of Gopey Mohan Doss, whose brothers are now of age and must divide the joint property.

Such is the present state of the Bank accounts—you have a devisable surplus as now reported, of nearly a lac of sicca rupees, with a balance in doubt (but considered perfectly good) of about 7,000 Rs., not one-fourteenth part of your half year's profits. It will now remain with you to decide what portion of the above reported nett gain, sicca rupees 99,527-8-2, shall be divided, and what kept in hand, either as a reserved fund, or to be applied to augmentation of shares.

J. YOUNG, Secretary.

Union Bank, December 31, 1835.

RESOLUTIONS.

1st Resolution,—Moved by Dwarkanauth Tagore seconded by Mr. G. S. Dick.

"That the report just read be approved and published."

2d Resolution,—Moved by Mr. Oxborough, seconded by Mr. Smith.

"That the accounts now submitted are approved and passed by the meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly."

3d Resolution,—Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Rondo.

"That a half yearly dividend at the rate of ten sicca rupees (sicca rupees 10 per cent. per annum, or one hundred and twenty-five sicca rupees per share (Sa. Rs. 125) be now declared, and that the sum of Sa. Rs. 3-4 as. or Co.'s Rs. 33 5 4, be added to the present shares of Sa. Rs. 2,500 or Co.'s 2,666 10 8, making the new shares Company's rupees 2,700 each."

4th Resolution,—Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Captain Steel.

"That in order to provide against an accumulation of capital stock disproportionate to the probability of immediate business, the Bank be open to subscriptions until the—to the extent of two hundred shares only, and that the option of subscribing be reserved for present Proprietors alone until that period, each Proprietor being allowed one-third share on each share he now holds,—and that the remaining two hundred shares be now cancelled."

5th Resolution,—Moved by Dwarkanauth Tagore, seconded by Mr. W. C. Hurry.

"That the blank in the foregoing Resolution No. 4 be filled up as follows "30th April 1836" reserving sufficient shares for the Proprietors now in Europe until the 1st January, 1837, when if not taken they will be sold to the other Proprietors at a price not below par."

6th Resolution,—Moved by Prussonoo Coomarr Tagore, seconded by B'shonauth Muttillol.

"That the Shares (reserved for sale in this country) which may not be taken by the 30th April 1836, shall be offered to the Proprietors on the spot, and sold to the highest bidder at a price not under par, at the Union Bank."

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman and the Meeting broke up. —Hurkaru.

ESTATE OF CRUTTENDEN, MACKILLOP AND CO.

Pursuant to advertisement, a meeting of Creditors was held at the Exchange on Saturday morning the 30th January, at 10 o'clock, to take into consideration the amount of remuneration to be allowed to Mr. Donald Macintyre, whose ill-health has obliged him to retire—and to suggest to the Insolvent Court the nature and amount of the remuneration to be allowed to Mr. T. Holroyd the Assignee appointed in the room of Mr. Macintyre.

Captain Vint was called to the Chair.

Mr. Macintyre being too ill to attend the Meeting, Mr. Wilson, his Solicitor, attended on his behalf, and read the following report of the management of the estate since the insolvency.

Gentlemen,—To enable you to consider the matters for which the present meeting has been called, I will, with your permission, lay before you a very brief statement explanatory of the general management of the estate since the insolvency took place, and also of the present posture of affairs, and the prospects which such posture now holds out.

You must all be aware that from the circumstance of the late firm of Cruttenden, Mackillop & Co. being the last of the large houses of agency which was compelled to have recourse to the Insolvent Court, and from the great glut in the market, of property belonging to the other estates of a similar description to that which belonged to this estate, that it was necessarily placed in a more unfavorable position than they were, as regarded a speedy realization of the assets.

This remark applies not only to the disposal of the indigo factories, but also to the recoveries from debtors to the estates, for in many instances the same persons being debtors of the other estates, had been compelled to make arrangements with the assignees of them, and were either under stoppages to these assignees to the full amount of what they could possibly give, or to those who had enabled them to effect compromises by paying a certain sum down. The consequence has been that the recoveries from debtors in this estate has been extremely small, although the strongest threats have been used from the beginning to intimidate them into some kind of arrangement. Latterly a great number of writs have been used, and it may reasonably be expected, as well from that circumstance, as also from the gradual completion of their other payments, that the realizations from this quarter will now be considerably increased.

In regard to the sale of the indigo factories, it must be admitted that the realizations from that source have been less than the creditors could at the time of the insolvency have contemplated; at the same time I am perfectly satisfied that they will find that the slightest blame is not attachable on the late assignee on this point. I can speak from personal knowledge that the utmost anxiety has all along been felt by him to get them disposed of, provided he got any thing like a fair price, but for very few of them has he ever received any offer at all, and he has certainly never refused one offer without being assured from those capable of advising him, that it was an inadequate one. It is said by some that he ought to have accepted an offer made last year for the Belnaberry concern, and as matters have turned out, it is perhaps unfortunate that he did not do so, but at the same time you will find from the facts that no blame is attachable to him in the circumstance. They were simply losses. He was on the 17th of January last applied to, to name the lowest price for the concern, which he stated in reply to be four lacs, an offer was thereupon made of Rs. 80,000 which he declined; on the 20th of the same month the same party advanced his offer to 3,20,000 which was also declined, but Mr. Macintyre in order to meet the difference between them, offered to take 3,50,000. Some communications then took place between the parties and the assignee was fully apprized that the sum he asked would be given; that he had good reason to believe so, or at any rate that he would not then have been justified in lowering the price he had fixed, will fully appear to you from the following letter dated the 5th of February, being fifteen days after the date of the previous offer.

"We are in receipt of yours yesterday with last year's statement of the Belnaberry concern, which we herewith return, as we are not yet prepared to state our final determination; we would by all means recommend that the operations of this important season should proceed the same as if we were not at all in treaty."

After this, the party changed his mind and made no further offer, but you will readily perceive that Mr. Macintyre did nothing that each of you would not have done in his own case, and that he is entirely without blame in respect of the treaty having closed as it did.

It has also been stated as a ground of complaint against Mr. Macintyre that he had purchased in factories at the public sales at prices for which he ought to have allowed them to go; but the short answer to that accusation is, that at all the public sales referred to, he was the only bidder, there having been no bona fide offer by any person.

Gentlemen, I shall not trouble you with further explanations as regards past proceedings, but shall now direct your attention very briefly to the present situation of the estate and to the circumstances which have rendered the present meeting necessary.

On the first point I shall scarcely do more than refer you to the several accounts and documents which are now on the table—these were prepared for the information of the Insolvent Court, and they show upon the most moderate valuation that could be put upon the assets, that there is about forty-two lacs of rupees to meet the claims against the estate which amount to about 1,11,00,000.

According to these statements there appears, at the date they were made out, to be cash in hand the sum of sicca rupees..... 2,30,935

The gross value of the indigo of the present season is valued at..... } 10,41,685
Deduct already received..... } 303,215

Leaving for realization..... 7,35,470 making together with the cash balance rupees 9,66,405 which would be now available for dividend 1, if no preferable claims existed. The assignee, however, in order to redeem various valuable premises, and also to render available certain postponed securities which the late firm held over indigo factories, has been obliged to pledge the assets of the estate to the amount of Rs. 5,72,000 which ought to be paid before any dividend, and which would therefore only leave a sum available for a dividend to the amount of Rs. 3,94,405.

I believe calculations have been made to a later period than when these statements which I produce were made out, and that they show that a larger dividend can be made at present without detriment to the interests of the estate; to these I therefore beg to refer you without further remark. The only object I had in view was to show that up to this date, it has been impossible to declare a dividend. Now you are aware that when Mr. Macintyre was appointed assignee of this estate, the mode of remuneration fixed upon was a commission of four per cent. upon the declared dividend, including allowance to Messrs. Brown and Cullen of sicca rupees 600 per month and all other charges with the exception of law charges.

No dividend having yet been declared, Mr. Macintyre has not had an opportunity of deriving any remuneration whatsoever for his services, nor even of defraying the charges for the office establishment. These charges amount to Rs. 75,629-3-5 and have from time to time, as they were paid, been debited to the estate and carried to a separate account for future adjustment between the estate and the assignee, out of the commission on dividends.

I need scarcely state that in fixing the allowance at 4 per cent. upon the amount of dividends, and in the assignee having accepted of it as sufficient remuneration, it was supposed and taken for granted by all parties, that he would be able to manage the estate until it was finally wound up, and in such case he might finally have been remunerated for his services, as the expenses of the establishment were gradually capable of being diminished, until they amount to a mere trifle, but in the change which Mr. Macintyre's state of health renders so indispensably necessary, a state which I am fully convinced has been greatly caused by the laborious and harassing duties to which he has been obliged to submit in this estate, I am sure that you will readily and liberally take the hardship of his case into consideration.

It is impossible to deny that the charges are large, but I beg of you to consider that at least 1,200 rupees a month were fixed upon him by the court as salaries to the Insolvents; and further that the whole of them were incurred, while not a doubt could exist in Mr. Macintyre's mind that they were all to go out of his own pocket. Judging therefore from the ordinary rules by which man is governed, it may with propriety be taken for granted that the expenses have been no greater than what was actually required for the efficient carrying on of the business of the estate.

Gentlemen, the questions now referred to you, by the court, as regard the late assignee, are that of considering, 1st, whether the charges of the establishment shall continue at the debit of the estate as they now stand charged to it; and 2ndly, what amount of remuneration ought to be allowed to the assignee in lieu of commission.

Upon the first point I do not anticipate any difference of opinion amongst you.

Upon the second there may probably be a difference as to the amount. Upon that question it would be against Mr. Macintyre's wishes if I were to say a word: he leaves it entirely to yourselves and will be perfectly satisfied with your determination, whatever it may be.

The consideration of what allowance ought to be made to Mr. Holroyd will also be matter for your consideration, but I submit that that gentleman ought to succeed to the management of the Estate entirely unconnected, unincumbered with the situation of his predecessor. I would therefore humbly submit that you should before proceeding to his case, first determine the questions as regards Mr. Macintyre, and I beg to submit the following resolution to your consideration, leaving it to any of the Creditors either to suggest alterations or any other which may appear to him more fitting in the circumstances of the case.

The resolution I would suggest as follows:—

"The creditors having considered the state of affairs submitted to them, and the precarious state of Mr. Macintyre's health, which has rendered his retirement from the assigneeship absolutely necessary, do humbly suggest and recommend to the Court that the charges of establishment incurred since his appointment be allowed to remain at the debit of the estate, and that he be allowed the monthly sum of Sa. Rs. — as a remuneration for his services during the period he has acted as Assignee, in lieu of the commission on declared dividends formerly fixed as the mode of his remuneration."

Mr. Cockerell considered the charges for establishment much too great, and objected to a salary being allowed to Mr. Macintyre.

Mr. Bagshaw also demurred, and suggested that the documents on the table from which Mr. Wilson stated he had compiled his report, should be circulated amongst the Creditors.

It was finally proposed by Mr. Cockerell and carried unanimously, that "The Assignee's accounts be submitted to the following gentlemen—Messrs. Mackillop, John Allen, Geo. Vint, J. Dow and R. H. Cockerell—to report to a meeting to be called for Thursday next, as to the general state of the affairs of the Insolvent Estate, and also upon the question of remuneration to the late and present assignee."

After which the Meeting broke up.

We subjoin the following documents which were laid on the table for general information:—

SECOND MEETING OF CRUTTENDEN, MACKILLOP AND CO.'S CREDITORS.

A meeting of the creditors of the late firm of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. took place at the Exchange, on Thursday the 4th February. Captain Vint in the chair.

The business of the meeting commenced by reading the following Report of the Committee appointed at the last meeting.

"The Committee beg to report that for the short time that has been afforded them to look into the affairs of the late firm of Messrs. Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. they have come to the conclusion, that the statement of the present value of the assets exhibited at the last meeting, estimating the amount at 42 lacks of rupees, is a fair and reasonable expectation of the probable outturn of the estate.

"With reference to the meeting of creditors on the 10th January, 1834, at which it was stated that the estimated amount of assets was 128 lacks (although the books exhibited a much larger amount) exclusive of 26 lacks of asset mortgage claims and sets-off that could not be disputed, the Committee have endeavored to ascertain the cause of the extraordinary difference between the amount of assets stated as being good at that period and the present estimated value.

"The statement upon which the former estimate was made up, not being forthcoming, the Committee's examination into this matter cannot be rendered with that accuracy they could wish, but it appears to them that the deficiencies principally arise under the following heads, viz.

Loss on working indigo factories, although the previous 2 years shewed a gain of about 12 lacks,.....	2½ lacks
Over-estimated value of ditto,.....	28 ditto
Ditto of landed property,.....	6 ditto
Ditto recoveries from book debts,.....	23 ditto
Ditto of recoveries from indigo planters, on account, independent of the value of their factories, but which shew a loss of about 2½ lacks,.....	16 ditto
Apparent loss on commercial accounts,.....	35,000
Expended by Mr. Macintyre for establishment, &c.,.....	75,000 1 ditto
Interest paid on sums borrowed,.....	1 ditto
Arrears of salary, brokerage on indigo and contingent charges,.....	30,000
Law charges,.....	20,000 ½ ditto
	78 lacks

which being deducted from 128 lacks, leaves the present value of the assets at 50 lacks, of which details were given at the last meeting.

"The Committee recommended that Mr. Macintyre's expenses be borne by the estate on condition of his giving up all claim to his commission of 4 per cent. originally allowed him.

"They recommend that Mr. Holroyd be allowed a commission of 1 per cent. upon the forthcoming dividend, and 2½ per cent. on future dividends, to include all expenses, excepting law charges, and that the balance of the commission originally allowed, be carried to the credit of the charges already incurred."

After the report of the Committee was read, Mr. Dickens rose and said, he had a resolution to propose, but before he put it, he had a question to ask which he had a right to ask, and which, without doubt, there was some friend or authorized agent of Mr. D. Macintyre here to answer. The question he wished to ask was, whether D. Macintyre was a certificated bankrupt at the time of his appointment to the Assigneeship of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co.'s estate, of whom Palmer, Mackillop and Co, the London correspondents of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co., or some one of the partners, were Assignees?

Mr. James Mackillop rose and replied to this question; that he was one of the Assignees, but that the firm of Palmer, Mackillop and Co. were not, and therefore that what Mr. Dickens had stated, was not a fact; and said further, that Mr. Macintyre's former firm had paid 20 shillings in the pound.

Mr. Dickens continued, and said, that if a partner of Palmer, Mackillop and Co. was an Assignee of Mr. Macintyre, it was in substance the fact that Messrs. Palmer, Mackillop and Co., of London, were the Assignees of Mr. Macintyre; and that as to any private explanations arising out of matters, not matters of business, they had better be pursued elsewhere—to which Mr. Mackillop assented. Mr. Dickens continued, and asked this question of Mr. Mackillop: Was the dividend of 20s. in the pound before the appointment of Mr. Macintyre? Answer, No. Mr. Dickens continued. The fact of Mr. Macintyre's being a bankrupt, and that a partner of Messrs. Palmer, Mackillop and Co. was his Assignee, did not disqualify him nor was he disqualified though he had not paid 20 shillings in the pound until after his appointment, for being Assignee of any other firm; but he was peculiarly disqualified for being the Assignee of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. It must be obvious to every man of sense among the merchants and creditors of the Calcutta firm, that it gave Mr. Macintyre an opportunity and an interest in prolonging the mercantile character of his Assigneeship: that if, as there were two or more rates of commission on sale of consignments to London, he would and must send to London consignments to Palmer, Mackillop and Co. and at probably the highest rate; but, whether in fact he did so or not, was quite immaterial; for as an honest man, he was bound to state to the creditors on the 11th January, 1834, when they appointed him, that he laboured under this disqualification; and the partners were also bound to state it. If he had stated it, and every creditor had consented, the Court would not have appointed him—could not have appointed him. Mr. Dickens proceeded. He now came to the Report of the Committee, and in lieu of adopting it, he moved the following Resolution:—

"That in the opinion of the creditors assembled there is no ground whatever for departing from the terms of the order of the 11th January, 1834, by which Donald Macintyre was appointed Assignee, with liberty to pay himself a commission of 4 per cent. on all declared dividends, including the allowance to James Cullen and Robert Browne, and in lieu of all charges but law charges."

Mr. Dickens stated his reason for moving this Resolution to be these;—it was a contract voluntarily made by Mr. Macintyre with full knowledge of what he was about; himself a merchant, connected with this firm, dependant to some degree upon it, mixed up with its trusts, he knew what he was about; next he entered into expenses which no sane merchant or assignee would have submitted to, it would be supposed, (unless he were dependant) for his expenses, 75,000, for two years were not all, and these were some charges, for principal sums not brought to account, and no interest whatever allowed: now as he had with full knowledge accepted a commission of 4 per cent. in lieu of all charges except law charges, the result was this, viz. that if (HAVING TWENTY-THREE LACKS OF MORTGAGES, besides law charges to pay, and only 1,10,00,000, of nominal assets to receive) he had calculated on receiving in five years 50 lacks to make a dividend of, (to do which he must have received 65 lacks out of the hundred and ten lacks,) he had gone on knowingly on a scale of expense by which he could not have received sixpence at the end of five years even if he had realized and paid in dividends 50 lacks! He had paid 600 rupees to Mr. Browne monthly up to the month he embarked for England, and if Mr. Dickens mistook not, Mr. Browne's own balance was secured by mortgages on the creditors' property. (Here Mr. Dickens was interrupted by Mr. Cockerell, who said on the authority of Mr. Leighton, that it was not so.) Mr. Dickens said, he was thankful for the interruption, and should at once admit it to be so for the purposes of his argument; it however came to this, that Mr. Browne was a gentleman with a very handsome income, in right of his wife, if not of his own, and having from £1,500 to 2,000 a-year in England. Mr. Cullen, another gentleman borne on the Assignee's books, at 600 rupees a month from the month of January, 1834, was a gentleman in this situation, viz. that a little after that time he had been appointed to the Secretaryship of the Laudable Societies; for the purposes of his appointment, and as an electioneering manoeuvre, the commission formerly received by Secretaries had been reduced to one half by Messrs. Cockerell, Ousely, Forbes, Greenlaw, Harding, Turton and others, whose names were not recollected; after the point was carried, the former commission was restored! consequently, Mr. Cullen was a gentleman, who had been receiving from January, 1834, as near as could be estimated by Mr. Dickens, about 1800 rupees a month. Baboo Russomoy Dutt had received up to June, 1834, 800 a month, from thence 500 a month, his son 200 a month. The result was that out of these three salaries, all paid to opulent men, about 40,000 rupees of the 75,000 had been expended. When the creditors agreed to Mr. Macintyre's paying this, it was to be presumed, that they had no objection to his performing an act of liberality; it came to a different question when Mr. Macintyre asked the creditors, some creditors for themselves, some creditors for others much poorer than any of those who asked, directly or indirectly, for this boon.

He had shewn that no sane man could calculate on having more than 50 lacs to distribute; he had shewn also that having spent more than 75,000, without interest, Mr. Macintyre had in effect spent at the rate of every sixpence he could spend: supposing he had received his rateable proportion of 200,000, which was the utmost he could receive.—On what ground did he come—not only to ask for liberty to charge this sum of 75,000 on the estate, but for an additional reward!—the force of effrontery could go no farther. (Here Messrs. Cockerell and Wilson intimated that the resolution Mr. Wilson suggested, was not pressed.) Be it so, Mr. Dickens said; I understood it stood over; then Mr. Macintyre only claims 75,000 of his expenses to be charged to the creditors because he has paid 600 rupees to Mr. Browne who did not want it till he went away; because he has paid 600 rupees to Mr. Cullen to this hour, who did not want it—and had 1,800 rupees at least a month. Let me stop (said Mr. Dickens) before we come to the question of refunding, there may be one obstacle; Mr. Holroyd the Assignee of the private estate of Mr. Cullen is here. I ask you, Sir, have you received the 600 rupees a month paid by the general creditors, or rather which Mr. Macintyre now asks the general creditors to pay, for the benefit of the private creditors of Mr. Cullen? Mr. Holroyd said, No—he had not. Mr. Dickens continued: it would really have been pleasing to have thought or believed this, even though it could not be reconciled with strict justice; but it seemed it was not so. To resume. If Mr. Macintyre was a poor man, if he wished to be reimbursed, he had a plain course; let him go to Mr. Browne, to Mr. Cullen, to Russomoy Dutt, all opulent men, and say to them, out of the 75,000 I have paid and charged to the estate in breach of my original contract, full 40,000 and more has been paid to you, who can repay, then repay me for I cannot in decency, I cannot in honesty, ask the creditors to do so. Mr. Mackillop, who was present, disclaimed all previous knowledge of the appointment with which he had nothing to do or say: although he thought Mr. Macintyre was unfortunate in some of his transactions, he considered that he had exerted himself to his utmost for the estate; that he deserved at least that his actual expenses should be paid by the estate, even if they refused him any personal allowance which was not insisted on. He added, that the expenses (75,000) though large, were not greater than those of other estates, as he had ascertained on examination of the accounts of Mr. Elliot Macnaghten.

Mr. Cockerell explained, that the recommendation of the Committee did not saddle the estate of Cruttenden and Co. with any addition to the 4 per cent. on dividends originally assigned for the management of the Assignee—which commission was sufficient to cover the expenses already incurred and the 1 per cent. proposed to be allowed to Mr. Holroyd on the forthcoming dividend. Mr. Macintyre, he thought, was entitled to his expenses.

Mr. Dickens replied—that turn it which way they could it came to this, that the new Assignee was to be saddled with the expenses of the misconduct of the former Assignee. If every creditor here, which he was far from anticipating, voted against him, he would take the Judgment of the Court, who could not, who had not the power even of sanctioning proceedings so utterly contrary to all reason, to all honesty, to all justice.

Mr. Holroyd felt it incumbent on him to remove an erroneous supposition which appeared to exist that he was willing to accept the rate of commission offered to him, which he declared he was not, and that he should object to the same at the first meeting of the Insolvent Court at which it was proposed.

After some conversation relative to the claim of Major Cape, which subject was deemed irrelevant, Mr. Dickens's motion was put to the meeting and lost by a majority of 10 to 7.

It was then proposed by Mr. Cockerell and seconded by Mr. R. Davidson, that the recommendation of the Committee be adopted.

Upon which Mr. Dickens moved as an amendment.—

"That the Report now read be rejected, and that in the opinion of his meeting no interest on the sum of 75,000 charged by the said Donald Macintyre to the estate in account, in breach of the terms, ought to be insisted on, provided the principal be repaid in three months, but that otherwise interest at the rate of 5 per cent. be insisted on," and shortly supported the resolution. Messrs. Cockerell and Mackillop answered, and Mr. Dickens replied, as far as we could gather, in the following terms:—If Mr. Macintyre had shewn any sane or rational cause, for spending what he has done, I could understand why he comes to us; if Mr. Browne were a poor man I could understand why Mr. Macintyre comes to us; if Mr. Cullen were a poor man I could understand why Mr. Macintyre comes to us, so too if Russomoy Dutt were a poor man; but these are rich men, and yet the Assignee comes to us, in the attitude of a mendicant, holding out his hand, asking that the little dole to be dealt out, should be made less—the meagre portion by his own misconduct made more meagre should be made more meagre still; he comes a beggar at a beggar's door, and what is this but a petition that you should pay the partners, Messrs. Cullen and Browne and their adherents, a portion of the pittance which folly and miscalculation and rapacity has still left. As long as out of the 4 per cent. commission Mr. Macintyre was at liberty to exercise his liberality to the partners, I can conceive that no one would interfere, for what was it to me, being here, as I am for infants as a trustee, to whom Mr. Macintyre paid the result of his gains as long as he did not mismanage; if he paid it to those who wanted it, or to the partners, in such case it would have been pleasing to think of and applaud such liberality; but when he presents himself to us, foiled in calculations by which he thought to pay those who needed it not, and to receive himself, and asks us to pay him (not merely to indemnify him but to reward him for misconduct) out of the little he has made less, what can I say of him but that he is now greedy of other men's goods; has been profuse of his own; of him and his coadjutors, but that I regard their proceedings with disgust, and will oppose them to the uttermost of my power!

The amendment was then put and lost by a majority of 7 to 5.

The recommendation of the Committee was accordingly adopted.—Harkara.

THE CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND MEETING.

The Civil Service Annuity Fund Meeting attracted an attendance of thirty-one Members at the Town Hall on the 1st January, a great portion of which was occupied with their proceedings. The Chair was taken by Mr. H. T. Prinsep.

The business was opened by passing the accounts of the year and re-electing the Managers. The Circular of their Secretary communicating the Court's modifications of the Fund to the Service, was then read from the Chair; and it appearing that of 263 answers, 28 were assents, including 9 of a more or less conditional nature, and only 5 dissents, namely, those of Messrs. Hughes, Deane, Lushington, W. Young, and Houston, it was moved by the Honorable Mr. Melville, seconded by Mr. Dick, and (with the single dissent of Mr. Houston)—

Resolved,—That the Propositions submitted to the Service in the despatch of the Hon'ble Court dated May 1835, having been accepted by the Service—their acceptance be recorded accordingly.

Mr. Melville, seconded by Mr. Torrens, then moved the following:

Resolved,—That it be an instruction to the Committee, in preparing the Rules to give effect to the Propositions of the Honorable Court, to look to the permanence of the Institution, and to guard the Funds from any appropriations likely to interfere therewith.

Mr. Prinsep explained, that the directions of the Court could not be literally carried into effect, because, if the words of their despatch were taken literally, the third of the unappropriated pensions, instead of being reserved, as clearly intended by the Court, would have to be thrown back into the Fund and counted in the division for an appropriation over again from year to year till reduced to a single one; and further, it was the Court's object in their scheme of modification to apply the surplus funds only; but how was the surplus to be ascertained? not by the original calculations, for these contemplated a yearly receipt of a lakh of rupees from fines after the fund should have run on for 25 years, and a capital of 26 lakhs: but now this resource of the fines was entirely taken away by the new limitation of the contributions, and it would happen consequently that when Sir Charles Metcalfe and Mr. Ross should retire, and also in some other cases, the fund would have to pay back large sums to those Members for the excess of their contributions. Besides, it was impossible to foresee how many applicants for pension would step forward during the three years of experiment allowed by the Court. There were now 51 unappropriated annuities, and 14 applications were already before the Managers. The calculations for the stability of the Fund were also affected by the donations and modified pensions to persons retiring on sick certificate. For these reasons he considered it necessary that a Committee should examine the whole subject. They ought to proceed upon the principle of establishing at once the permanent stability of the fund. Thus they had now abundant means of doing, and he would therefore suggest that, of the 60 lakhs now at credit of the Fund, they should set apart 35 lakhs to provide for the loss of the one lakh per annum of fines, as well as to make up a sufficient capital in reserve as originally contemplated. They would still have 25 lakhs available for the annuities in excess of the regular annual number.

Mr. Parker asked "Are we not already secured by the Court?" That being the case, he did not see the necessity of moving the question of stability at all.

Mr. Pattle was of the same opinion, thinking it better to let the new plan take its course for three years, and moved the following amendment, which Mr. Plowden seconded—

Resolved,—That whether the funds can at present or hereafter afford the permanent continuance of the boon the Court have experimentally tendered for three years to us, and the investigation of the accounts of this fund this question may require, be left to the Court of Directors.

Mr. Dick looked forward with much apprehension for the stability of the fund. We could not tell how far reductions might go—already 20 or 30 lakhs had been lopped off from the civil allowances (Mr. Tulloh said this was a mistake for the 4 per Cent., had produced 315,000 Rs. during the past year, which was within 16,000 of the year preceding.)

Mr. Dorin reminded the Meeting, that the Court were under no obligation to continue their subscription.

Mr. Colvin considered it unnecessary for them to take means to secure the permanency of the fund, having the Court's guarantee to their original bargain for the nine pensions of £1,000; he was under no apprehension as to them. He accordingly proposed, and Mr. Dorin seconded, the following amendment in lieu of that moved by Mr. Pattle.

Resolved,—That the Proposition already carried on the motion of the Honorable W. Melville, is a sufficient instruction to the Committee of Managers.

Mr. Prinsep remarked, that it was a possible case that the fund should fail to give that certain provision to the juniors which they now reckoned upon—if for instance, the Court should continue to make but five or six appointments in the year as they had done of late—they had once sent out fifty. In that case, at the end of the 25 years they might even require a subscription of 10 per cent. from the Service instead of 4 per cent. It was absolutely necessary to draw the line and ascertain what the surplus was.

By permission of Mr. Pattle, who said he would move his amendment if Mr. Colvin's were negatived, the latter was put first and carried by a Majority of 19 to 12, and the former withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Mr. Elliott then drew attention to the last paragraph of the letter of the Managers to the Court which had led to these modifications in the fund, and pointed out that the Court had omitted to notice the suggestion it contained, that Members of the Service retiring immediately after the date of the letter, should have all the benefit of any modifications that should be allowed by the Court. He thought it only just that the Managers, in answering the Court's letter, should re-urge this point, for two or three gentlemen had retired on the faith of being so admitted, who would probably otherwise have awaited the issue. He therefore moved, and Mr. Robert Saunders seconded the following proposition, which was carried unanimously:

Resolved,—That the case of the Servants who have retired subsequent to the transmission of the Memorial of the Service dated , in which their claim to benefit by any prospective modification was submitted to the Honorable the Court of Directors, not having been noticed in the despatch now before the Meeting, it be again recommended to the consideration of the Hon'ble Court, those Servants having retired in the confident belief that the Service had pledged themselves to support their claim to participate in the benefits now about to be enjoyed by those immediately about to retire.

Mr. Mangles observed upon the hardship of the second clause in the Court's letter, requiring that persons retiring on medical certificate should be re-examined by the Court's physician in England: which rule might cause men to be sent back to India, whose constitutions might not be able to stand the climate in spite of apparent restoration to health while in Europe. Upon his motion, seconded by Mr. Parker, it was unanimously—

Resolved,—That it be an instruction to the Managers to solicit the Hon'ble Court to reconsider the clause in the Rules relating to confirmation of certificate of the Court's Examining Physician, after a residence in England on the part of the absentees of at least twelve months, with reference to the hardships which such rule may probably be the means of inflicting.

A letter just received from Mr. Richardson was read, offering to pay arrears and desiring to be considered a subscriber to the Fund. On reference to former proceedings on this case, it was moved by Mr. W. Young, seconded by Mr. Parker, and unanimously—

“Resolved,—That the former decision of the Managers be approved.”

The thanks of the Meeting were then voted to the Chair.—Calcutta Courier.

CIVIL FUND MEETING.

A Quarterly General Meeting of the Subscribers to the Civil Fund was held on the 25th January at the Town Hall,—the Hon'ble W. L. Melville in the chair.

The business of the day was opened by reading the following report from the Managers :

REPORT.—“With reference to the Resolutions passed at a Special Meeting of the Subscribers to the Civil Fund, held on the 14th November, 1835, the Managers of the Civil Fund beg to report to the Quarterly General Meeting, that 117 Subscribers have recorded their votes in favour of the Hon'ble Mr. Melville's original motion, “that the Resolutions of the 27th April, 1835, admitting Mr. Sutherland be rescinded,” and only 67 have voted in favor of Mr. D. C. Smyth's amendment, “that the proceedings of 27th April, 1835, admitting Mr. Sutherland be upheld.”

“In like manner the Managers have to report, that 135 have voted against the admission of Mr. Elliott, and only 43 have voted in favor of the admission of that gentleman.

“The Managers have also to report, that the following gentlemen have been elected for the undermentioned Divisions :—

Allahabad, Mr. J. R. Colvin—Calcutta, Mr. H. T. Prinsep and Mr. D. C. Smyth—Chittagong, Mr. J. P. Grant—Dacca, Mr. J. H. D'Oylly—Delhi, Mr. C. E. Trevelyan—Cooruckpore, Mr. J. A. Dorn—Jessore, Mr. R. Houston—Meerut, the Hon'ble Wm. Melville—Moorshedabad, Mr. J. F. M. Reid.

“Letters will be written to the commissioners of the remaining Divisions; requesting them to proceed forthwith to fresh elections consequent upon Mr. Tulloh's having proceeded to Europe, and the other gentlemen whose names have been forwarded to the Managers as Committee-men, having made their election for other divisions.”

By Order of the Managers,

(Signed) R. B. FITZGERALD, Secy.

The following Resolutions were then moved, and adopted without opposition :

Resolved.—“That the Managers be requested to make the necessary communications to Messrs. Sutherland and Elliott.”

Resolved.—“That the Managers be requested to make the necessary communications to the gentlemen already elected to act as Committee-men or to any others who may be hereafter elected.”

The proceedings of the Managers in regard to the admission of the Hon'ble Mrs. Lindsay to the benefits of the Fund, were confirmed; and the same in the case of Mrs. T. Manwaring and family, which case, through inadvertence, was not submitted to the last General Meeting.

A Resolution was also passed, approving the advance, made by the Managers to the widow of the late Mr. T. Richardson; and another sanctioning a vote of a majority of the Managers on the Secretary's application, for a temporary establishment to the extent of 50 rupees per mensem, on account of his increased correspondence.

It was then moved by Mr. J. P. Grant, and seconded by Mr. J. R. Colvin :

Resolved.—“That the decision come to at the last Quarterly Meeting admitting Mrs. Clark and family to the benefits of the Fund be reversed, and that the question of their admission be referred to the service at large.”

Upon which an amendment was moved by Mr. D. C. Smyth, and seconded by Mr. William Braddon :

“That the Resolutions of the Quarterly General Meeting of the 26th October 1835, admitting Mrs. W. F. Clark and her family to the benefits of the Civil Fund, be confirmed.”

Which amendment was carried by a majority of 9 to 6.

Moved by Mr. D. C. Smyth, and carried without a division :

“That the Resolutions and Proceedings of the last Quarterly General Meeting of the 26th day of October, 1835 be, under rule XXX of the Civil Fund, be confirmed.”

Moved by Mr. D. C. Smyth, seconded by Mr. Colvin and carried nom. con. :

“That the Resolutions and proceedings of this Meeting be published in the Calcutta Gazette, for the general information of the subscribers at large.”

The thanks of this Meeting to the Chairman were then moved by Mr. Colvin, seconded by Mr. J. P. Grant, and the Meeting broke up.—Calcutta Courier.

MEETING OF THE MILITARY FUND.

The annual Meeting was held on the 26th January at the office of the Secretary to the Military Fund, for the election of Directors. The following are the Directors chosen for the ensuing year, the twelve first being re-elected and the thirteen a new Director.

Captain Gavin Young, President—Colonel Balfour—Captain Henderson—Capt. Fitzgerald—Dr. Corbyn—Capt. W. Cubitt—Capt. Ouseley—Capt. Hawkins—Dr. A. B. Jackson—Capt. R. J. H. Birch—Lieut. G. R. McGregor—Capt. Stoddart—Revd. Mr. Wimberley.

In answer to a question from Mr. Wimberley, why no statement was published beforehand in order to give members an opportunity of knowing something about the accounts they were called upon to pass at these meetings, Captain Young explained that there would be no advantage in doing so, since, by the constitution of the Fund, in case any one should wish to make a proposition, it could not be entertained at a meeting, but must be circulated throughout the Army. The accounts of the year, after being passed, were printed and circulated to every station, and opportunity was thus given to every one interested to study them at leisure.

When this Fund was re-constituted in 1824, the balance in hand, we are informed, was little more than eight lakhs of rupees. Its capital has since swollen to nearly twenty-eight lakhs; but the Fund is supposed to be still far from having reached its maximum of capital and incumbrances. It is satisfactory to find, however, not only that the disbursements are a good deal within the income at present; but also that the widows' pensions, estimated by the Northampton tables, (from which estimate considerable deduction must be made for the chances of remarriage, and for the greater risk of life to those pensioners who continue to reside in India) are in value more than seventy thousand rupees within the amount of the capital. So that there is at present no cause of anxiety whatever for the stability of the Fund upon the present rates of subscription, pension and other allowances.

We understand that Mr. Curnin was invited to make a report upon the condition of this Fund, but declined to do it for the fee (500 rupees) which was offered him on the ground that it would require a laborious investigation to do it effectually.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

The First Quarterly General Meeting of 1836 was held on Monday the 11th January. On Mr. Corbyn being called to the Chair, the report of the Managers was read, wherein it was stated, that they had received but one communication which they deemed necessary to be brought to the notice of the Meeting. It was from the Treasurer at Fort William, dated the 15th of October 1835, requesting the orders of the Management, as to the rate of exchange at which he was to receive the Company's rupee tendered in payment of subscriptions—which was directed to be made at 106-10-8, for 100 sicca rupees.

The Committee were in anxious expectation for the decision of the Honourable the Court of Directors to their application, for permission to grant from the Fund the payment of the three additional annuities solicited in their letter of the 20th of January, or for the incorporation of the Medical Service with the Military Retiring Fund, proposed by Mr. Curnin, requested in a letter, under date the 15th of June last.

During the quarter two statements of payment to the Fund had been received from the Accountant-General of recoveries effected in the Military Pay Department, one from February to April inclusive, the other from May to July, 1835, inclusive, amounting to sicca rupees 12,928-9-11. The disbursements for the quarter on account of office establishment, stationary, &c. was sa. 76.

By the regulations of the Fund, three elections to the Management for the present year were to be voted for by subscribers, one in the room of Mr. Surgeon J. Grant, one in that of Mr. Surgeon A. Garden, the senior and junior Members, who went out in rotation, (but were eligible to be re-elected) and one in succession to the late Dr. Spens.

The present number of subscribers to the Fund, were two Members of the Medical Board, seven Superintending-Surgeons, 58 Surgeons, and 113 Assistant-Surgeons—total 180.

On the motion of Mr. Corbyn, seconded by Mr. Pearson, it was resolved unanimously.

“ That the report now read be adopted.”

The Secretary's accounts for the quarter were next submitted and received, and the thanks of the Meeting being tendered to the Chairman, it then broke up.

H. S. MERCER, Secretary.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY OF CALCUTTA.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, January 2d, 1836

MR. LANGSTAFF IN THE CHAIR

Dr. Maccreay and Mr. Assistant-Surgeon Bart, of H. M.'s 9th Regiment, Dr. J. Bowron, Assistant-Surgeon of the Bengal Establishment, and Dr. Bain, of Calcutta, proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the Society.

The Society then proceeded to elect a Vice-President and Office Bearers for the ensuing year. Previously to the ballot being taken, Mr. Hutchinson intimated to the Society that he wished not to be re-elected as their Secretary, expressing his regret at being obliged to withdraw from the office. The state of his health, however, rendered it necessary that he should relieve himself as much as possible from exertion, in addition to which the nature of his other pursuits occupied his time so completely as to render him incapable of paying that attention to the Society's affairs which their importance demanded. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed in favour of Mr. Hutchinson in acknowledgment of his services. The ballot box was then circulated, and the following gentlemen were found duly elected.

Vice President	N. Wallich, Esq., M. D. F. R. S., &c.
Secretary and Treasurer	H. H. Goodeve, Esq., M. D.
Assistant Sec. Sec.	H. S. Mercer, Esq.
Foreign Secretary	W. B. O'Shaughnessy, Esq., M. D.
Members of the Committee of Management	W. D. Stewart, Esq., M. D.
	C. C. Egerton, Esq.
	J. Hutchinson, Esq.
Members of the Committee of Papers	A. Garden, Esq.
	M. J. Bramley, Esq.
	W. Cameron, Esq.

A case of Weiss's Lithotomy Instruments were presented for the inspection of the Society, by J. Hutchinson, Esq.

The following Work was presented for the Library.

The Diavva Guna (or the quality of foods,) in Sanscrit, with a Bengali version, by Rajah Kali Krishna, presented by the author.

Read a letter from O. Ray, Esq., Surgeon, European Regiment, expressing that gentleman's wish to have his name withdrawn from the Society.

The following communications were then presented. A memorandum of 2 cases of hydrocele, treated by iodine injection, by D. Stewart, Esq., M. D.

An account of several cases of sloughing ulcer which prevailed amongst the jail prisoners at Purnah, by T. Chapman, Esq.

A case of incipient leprosy, by C. Macdonald, Esq., presented by the Medical Board.

Cases of fever of a malignant type occurring in sepoy's at Agra, presented by the Medical Board.

MEMBERS PROPOSED.

M. R. O'Shaughnessy, Surgeon of Calcutta; proposed by Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy and seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

The following propositions were then made to the Society.

Proposed by Dr. Stewart, and seconded by Dr. Innes,—That all subscriptions to the Society shall be payable in Company's rupees in lieu of sicca.

Proposed by C. C. Egerton, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Dempster,—That the monthly abstract of periodicals, accompanied by an abstract of the proceedings of the Society be resumed.

Proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, and seconded by Dr. Goodeve,—That the Committee of Management be directed to enquire into and report on the expediency of publishing a journal under the auspices of the Society.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy briefly called the attention of the Society to an article by Messrs. Brett and Bird, quoted in the Journal of Medical Science for January, 1836, as a confutation of his views regarding a new principle described by Dr. O'S. as existing in the human blood. Dr. O'S. stated that the gentlemen alluded to had not followed the proper process for obtaining the new substance; that indeed they could not have succeeded by the plan they adopted. He noticed further a remarkable error, committed by the same writers, in some remarks published by them, regarding the presence of urea in the blood, a fact they denied, because the substance found had the smell of the urinary secretion. This palpable non sequitur Dr. O'S. deemed a sufficient reason for distrusting the judgment of these writers on subjects of this notice.—Hurkaru.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting of this Society was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 13th January, 1836.

THE HON'BLE SIR E. RYAN, IN THE CHAIR.

Eighteen Members present.

The following Gentlemen proposed last month, were duly elected Members, by ballot.

Captain A. Bogle and James Pontet, Esq.

New Members proposed.

Captain C. G. Dixon, Superintendent in Mhair-warah, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Colonel Dunlop.

The Society then proceeded to elect Office-Bearers for the present year, viz.

President.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, Kt.

Vice-Presidents.

Lieut-Col. Dunlop,
Nubab Tuhower Gung.

Dr. Wallich, M. D., and Daboo Radhacant Deb.

Committee of Papers.

The Hon. W. H. L. Melville, | John Bell, Esq.
Jas. Kyd, Esq., and General Committee.

Dr. Strong,
Wm. Storm, Esq.
Jas. Willis, Esq.

D. Hare, Esq.
Baboo Radamadub Bonnerjee and H. M. Low, Esq.

Officiating Secretary and Collector.

John Bell, Esq.

The President next called attention to a report which lay before him, upon the operations of the Society for the past year, which was then read from the Chair, and after a few alterations, suggested by His Excellency Sir H. Fane, Sir E. Ryan proposed and was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Marshman, "That the thanks of the Society be offered to Mr. Bell for drawing up this report, and that it be published with the transactions."

Resolved unanimously—"That this be adopted as the Report of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India—and that it be forthwith published, as an Appendix to vol. 2 of the Society's Transactions."

The President further stated that this was the first Annual Report which had been prepared, and hoped that it would be followed up regularly by a similar record, on the occasion of every succeeding January meeting.

The results given are highly satisfactory and encouraging. Since the 1st January, 1835, there has been an accession of forty four Members, whilst the number of voluntary withdrawals amount only to eight, of whom four were on the eve of proceeding to England.

Compared with former years, the increase will be found great:

In 1831 the number of elections was 21.
" 1832 " " 19.
" 1833 " " 11.
" 1834 " " 13.
" 1835 " " 44

Amongst the many objects which engaged the Society's attention during the past year may be mentioned

- 1.—The discovery of the Tea Plant in Assam.
- 2.—The expediency of petitioning both Houses of Parliament, on the justice of equalizing the home duties of East and West India produce.
- 3.—The importance of securing immediate and regular supplies of Cotton Seed from America.
- 4.—The necessity of providing against a recurrence of disappointment on the receipt of vegetable seed, at an improper season.
- 5.—The great relief that would be given to the operations of the Society by a repeal of the transit and sea duties now levied on seeds imported for the special purposes of improving our stocks.
- 6.—To the publication of the Society's report upon experiments at Akra, and to the renewed printing of their transactions.
- 7.—To the best method of preventing frauds, at the annual exhibition of vegetables.
- 8.—To a revision of the Society's rules.
- 9.—Lastly to the urgent necessity of bringing all matters connected with the Society into regular and systematic train of management.

A Report from the Collector was also submitted, exhibiting a very favourable view of the Society's Funds: Since the 18th of May, 1835, to the 31st Dec. the sum of..... Rs. Rs- 8,613 8 3 had been brought to credit.

The Disbursements, during the same period, amounted to..... 2,711 7 3

Resolved—That the Report be published.

The importance of taking advantage of every possible opportunity to supply the constant demands pouring in from all quarters for cotton seed, suggested to the Meeting the propriety of soliciting the services of Mr. Patrick, now on the eve of departure for England. Mr. Patrick, who was present, immediately proffered his aid to promote the Society's views, and it was

Resolved—That the Secretary do furnish Mr. Patrick with written instructions and authority to draw upon the Society to the extent of one thousand rupees, for the provision of cotton seed, in addition to the sum of fifteen hundred rupees already voted for the same purpose through other channels.

The following communications were read:—

1.—From H. T. Prinsep, Esq., Secretary to Government, dated the 9th Dec., in reply to a letter from the Society, soliciting a repeal of the Transit and Customs Duties, on seeds, expressly imported by the Society for the promotion of Agriculture and Horticulture, and for the grant of free dispatch of the Society's transactions to non-resident members.

On the first point, Government have evinced every disposition to meet the Society's wishes, consistent with the interest of the State, and the question has been referred to the Board of Customs.

The last point has been already liberally conceded.

2.—From Mr. J. Duhan, dated Dinapore 24th Nov. (received on the 16th December)—intimating the dispatch of three cases of seeds ordered by the Officiating Secretary on the 14th September last, on account of the Horticultural Society of Madras.

Mr. Duhan's note states that the whole of the seeds, ordered by Mr. Bell, were included in this dispatch, but the supply required for the Calcutta Society, in a letter dated the 3d September, has been entirely overlooked by Mr. Duhan.

3.—Mr. James Prinsep submitted to the Society an extract of a letter from Mr. Henry Wood, (late Accountant-General here,) to the address of Mr. H. T. Prinsep, dated 1st July, on the subject of the rearing of Silk worms in Italy.

Resolved—That the said extract be submitted to the Committee of papers.

The President here withdrew, and the Chair was taken by Colonel Dunlop.

4.—From Dr. Strong, enclosing a letter to his address from Mr. James Irvine of Liverpool, dated 13th July, 1835, on the subject of samples of Coffee, grown by Dr. Strong, which Mr. Irvine values at 48, 49 and 50 shillings per cwt.

5. The Officiating Secretary brought to the recollection of the Meeting, a proposition of Dr. Strong, which had been duly seconded by Sir Robert Colquhoun, and passed into a Resolution on the 12th November, 1831, but had never been carried into effect.

The purport of the Resolution was, that Commanders of ships sailing to and from this port be solicited to procure for the Society any rare and useful plants and seeds.

Resolved—That Dr. Strong's original proposal be immediately adopted with the amendment submitted by Mr. Bell.

6.—Resolved—That the first annual exhibition of vegetables shall take place in the Town Hall, on Wednesday morning next, the 20th January, at nine o'clock.

7.—The Officiating Secretary stated that he had received back from Mr. Fiddington, sundry volumes which had been lent to that gentleman to assist him in framing a Gardener's Calendar, applicable to this part of India; but which he had been unable to accomplish, for want of materials and proper information.

8.—A letter from Mr. J. W. Masters, to the Officiating Secretary, dated Botanical Garden, 13th January, 1836, with a paper on the propagation of esogenous plants, &c. to be submitted to the Committee of papers.

The usual vote of thanks was passed for all the foregoing contributions.

JOHN BELL, Offg. Secy.

Town Hall, January 13, 1836.—HURKARU.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF BOMBAY.

Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Western India, held at the Rooms of the Native Education Society, on Tuesday, the 5th January, 1836.

The President having taken the chair, the Secretary proceeded to read to the meeting the substance of the various communications received by the Society, since last meeting in May.—He commenced by noticing 1. A letter from Mr. Mutti, of Kootoor Bagh, near Poona, detailing the result of his experiments in the culture of the mulberry tree as a standard; which Mr. Mutti states to succeed so well in this country, that in 2 years the mulberry becomes so large, that trees planted at 16 feet from each other would touch with their branches and that each young tree will yield from 8 to 10 pukka seers of leaves (a pukka seer is about two pounds avoirdupois); and that they do not require to be watered more than once a month. It may therefore be anticipated that when full grown in four years, they will not require any water. Mr. Mutti then adverts to the endeavors he has made, and proposes making, to induce the natives themselves to adopt a more improved method of growing mulberries, rearing silk worms, winding silk, and manufacturing silk piece goods. It is a point of very great importance that Mr. Mutti should be enabled to persevere effectually in his efforts till the time is fairly past when he anticipates the full benefit of his standard tree system will be proved; the prize, if he succeed, is far greater than the loss risked, and it would be cruel that the profits and great credit which may result from his perseverance should be reaped by others. Two natives, whom Mr. Mutti got to make silk for a manufacturer in Poona, obtained Rs. 13½ the pukka seer for the silk which was pronounced of excellent quality.—Mr. M. also got a native to make silk hankkerchiefs, and intends establishing at Kootoor a regular manufactory of similar kinds of cloth. A present to the Society of some seeds and bulbs received by Capt. Sir Charles Malcolm, R. N. from the Baron Von Ludwig at the Cape of Good Hope, was next noticed, with a request, that should any rare plants be found by the Society, some specimens be sent to the Baron. A packet of some seeds as were on hand was made up and sent accordingly. A paper from Dr. Lush, superintendent of the Dapoorree Garden, containing observations upon the qualities of garden and vegetable seeds usually imported from England and the Cape, distinguishing those that are useful and necessary from those that are useless, and recommending only the former descriptions to be ordered in future and in larger quantities. Dr. L. further inquires whether the Society would be disposed to admit a class of distant subscribers, who, after giving a small donation to the Society, would be entitled to receive the whole annual amount of their subscriptions in good seed. On the first point, the thanks of the Society are eminently due to Dr. Lush, for communicating the result of his own experience respecting those seeds which answer best for this country, but in cases where the experience of gardeners in any other parts of the country may be in favor of English or Cape seed, which Dr. L.'s experience condemns, it would be well to obtain such from both sources. With regard to the second point, it does not appear from the smallness of subscription and the low price at which seeds are obtained, that the Society's present rules require alteration, subscribers being supplied with seeds at a reduction of 25 per cent. on the actual cost to the Society in their favour; on which it was moved by Dr. Lush, and seconded by Mr. Farish, that "the terms on which seeds are supplied to the members, be advertised in the report of this meeting for general information;" it is as follows:

Rule 9.—That seeds and plants shall generally be sold to subscribers requiring them for their own use, at the cost prices; but the Committee shall be at liberty to fix higher prices, or to invite offers and accept the best when they may see reason in particular instances. A preference not exceeding 25 per cent. being in such cases given to subscribers over non-subscribers.

A letter dated Madras, 27th July, 1835, from C. H. Baynes, Esq., Secretary to the Madras Horticultural Society, announcing the formation of a sister institution at that presidency, annexing copy of their proceedings, and requesting informations. Lithographed copies of our proceedings of the formation of our Society, with a suitable reply were sent. A letter from the Native President, forwarding a ripe fruit of the annona muricata, or soap of the West Indies, grown in his garden at Mezzagon. From seeds sent from Malacca by his friend Mr. Lewis, Franjee Cawajee, Esq., raised 13 plants of which the major part are on his estate at Powy, in Salsette. It is a valuable addition to our fruits, and merits further experiment and extension. Budding or grafting, with its indigenous congeners the squamos and reticulata may improve the fruit. A letter from Government regarding the improvement of the wool of this country. It appears that the coarse wool of the Deccan is exported to England. That in 1834, 335 bales, and in 1835 up to September, upwards of 1,500 bales were exported; 5d. to 6d. per lb. were expected to be realised in the London markets. This interesting circumstance renders it an object of considerable importance to improve the character of the wool. A reply, containing all the information which could be collected, was drawn up and sent in. In acknowledgment, the thanks of the Right Honorable the Governor in Council are requested to be conveyed to the Society for the very valuable information and judicious suggestions contained in that communication. The Honorable the Court of Directors have already been requested to send out a supply of Saxon and Merino sheep. A letter from J. S. Law, Esq., dated Surat, 24th September, 1835, acknowledging seeds, the seedlings from which he was about to distribute amongst the native gardeners who raise vegetables for the market; and noticing a tree he had met, with a specimen of the pterocarpus marsupium, from which gum kino may be obtained by incisions in the bark, but more expeditiously from a strong decoction of the bark and evaporating it in the sun. The European market, adds Mr. Law, is chiefly supplied from the west coast of Africa with this drug, and it is there obtained from the pterocarpus erinaceus. Mr. Law further notices a species of diospyrus perhaps D. Sylvatica or D. Cordifolia, common in the woods, which has a very palatable fruit, with a taste like that of a medlar; and like that fruit is not fit to eat till it begins to rot. "I think," continues he, "it would be worth while to introduce a few trees of it into the Society's garden to try if it is capable of improvement by cultivation." The tacca pinnatifida (a kind of lily) is also noticed as another indigenous plant deserving of mention. A nutritious locula is prepared from the root. Specimens have been obtained from the neighbourhood of Blewandy, so that it may probably be found near Bombay also. At the last meeting of the Society it was proposed that a Sub-Committee be appointed to select an appropriate spot for an experimental garden for the Society. A distinct subscription, named the Garden Fund, was entered upon, which realised the sum of Rs. 3,17½. A choice spot of ground of considerable extent adjoining Parel Flag-staff hill (called Golungese Doongur by the natives) to the east, has been purchased, and Government have in the most liberal manner granted to the Society the adjacent ground or hillock to the east, rent free. The Society's garden therefore is now progressing to efficiency. It has been partly surrounded by a loose stone wall to mark the boundary. Roads are making through it. Two wells of excellent water have been completed and built up with pukka chunam and stone walls; and a bungalow for the accommodation of a European gardener erected. A gardener, brought up to the business in Europe, has been entertained at a salary of Rs. 40 per month, and the grounds are being put into a state of preparation to receive plants. Donations of rare plants, fruit trees, and ornamental flowers would prove acceptable. Many have been already received, which the Society records with grateful acknowledgments; but many more will be necessary to complete the garden. The whole has been accomplished at an outlay of about Rs 7,500, inclusive of the purchase of the ground, and arrangements for the proper expenditure of the garden are entered into by the meeting. A letter from the Superintendent of the Ashtagram division of Mysore, mentioning that after several unsuccessful attempts, owing to the destructive effects of white ants, the Mauritius sugar-cane cuttings supplied through a member of our Society, had at length found a safe position in a garden of the country care, where they were thriving well, and promised to be eminently successful. The superior height and darker foliage of these canes readily distinguish them from the country cane; but the chief difference lies in the greater size of the cane and the number of shoots from one root, a fact which has not been sufficiently attended to here. The same gentleman also notices a palm tree from which a considerable quantity of meal, resembling sago, has been obtained. This palm is the mhar of the natives, or the canjota urens, regarding which the late Dr. Roxburgh has the following observations. Flor. Ind. Vol. III. pp. 625-626: "It is a native of the various mountainous parts of India, where it grows to be one of the greatest and most charming of this beautiful tribe of natural order. It is highly valuable to the natives of the countries where it grows in plenty. The pith or farinaceous part of the trunk of old trees is said to be equal to the best sago. It forms a part of the diet of the natives, and during a famine they suffered little while those trees lasted. I have reason to believe this substance to be highly nutritious, and think it as fully palatable as the sago we get from the Malay countries."—The tree is not uncommon in the ghats of the Concan. There are several in different parts of this island and Colabah. It might perhaps be desirable to try by the process described, to obtain sago from one if procurable; and if found to answer, it might be more extensively grown, being a sure resource in times of famine. Another letter from Mr. Mutti, detailing the success which has hitherto attended his silk undertaking. The mulberry preferred by Mr. M. is the St. Helena species given to him by Dr. Lush, which he rears as standards. Mr. M. has trees of 27 months growth, 4 of which yielded respectively 231, 19, 16, and 15 pucca seeds of leaves, the branches of which are strong enough to bear 6 men climbing among them at the same time. Of silk worms, Mr. Mutti says—"I have tried the small Chinese worm of 4 stages, which makes a superb cocoon generally in 30 days; answers remarkably well and continues to breed all the year round without interruption." It requires about 12 pucca seeds of leaves (more or less) of the St. Helena mulberry to nourish 100 worms. Generally from 9,45 to 16,000 cocoons are required to make one pucca seed of silk, but as the native, become more expert in winding silk, waste of cocoons will not be so great.—Mr. M. submits a prospectus, shewing the expenses incurred, and the benefits derivable from one acre of land planted with 400 mulberry trees, at the expiration of the 4th year of the plantation, and concludes by observing that "should any person feel disposed to embark in a similar undertaking, and previous to so doing should wish to have personal observation, he will at all times be most happy to give every information and assistance in his power and has two bungalows to allot, one as place of residence. The Society is indebted to Mr. Mutti for his very interesting letter, and the valuable information it contains. It is perhaps to be regretted that such a fine opportunity of establishing a silk manufactory in all its branches, should be unheeded, and languish for want of means and sufficient encouragement.—A letter from the Secretary to the Branch Society at Rajkote, stating the potatoes grown there this year to be the finest in India or any where else. They boil well, are mealy, and of exceeding good flavor. The weight of one was 18 oz. 7 drams, 4 1/2 inches diameter, and 5 1/2 inches long.—Dr. Lush then rose and gave a very interesting statement of what had been done in the Decree under his general superintendence in the manufacture of silk, produced specimens of various degrees of raw silk made by a Parsee, and also at Ahmednugger, where he stated the demand to be constant. As Dr. Lush's valuable report on silk and mulberries is about to be printed, more need not be said on the subject at present.—Bombay Courier.

ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.

On Wednesday evening the 6th January, the usual monthly meeting of the Society was held at the Society's rooms, when Sir Charles D'Oyly, Mr. Blundel, and Dr. Falconer, superintendent of the Botanical Gardens at Seharunpore, were duly balloted for and elected members.

The Society then proceeded to elect the following gentlemen to constitute the Committee for the ensuing year:

PRESIDENT.

The Hon. Sir E. Ryan.

VICE PRESIDENTS.

Sir J. P. Grant.	W. H. Macnaghten, Esq.
Sir Ben. Malkin.	The Rev. Dr. Mill.

COMMITTEE OF PAPERS.

H. T. Prinsep, Esq.	Capt. W. N. Forbes,
Capt. Pemberton.	C. H. Cameron, Esq.
J. T. Pearson, Esq.	David Hare, Esq.
C. R. Trevelyan, Esq.	Ramcomul Sen.
T. R. Colvin, Esq.

The meeting then proceeded to general business and broke up about ten o'clock.—Englishman.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BOMBAY.

The monthly meeting of the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society was held in the Society's room on Wednesday, the 30th December, at the usual hour.

The current business having been transacted, Dr. Bird presented and read to the meeting a paper "On the Historical Geography of Hindoستان, and the origin of the social state among the Hindoos."

In this paper, the author contends that Hinduism had advanced by degrees to its present form; that in the time of Herodotus the Brahmins of India, the people of Persia, and those at the sources of the rivers Hydaspes, Sindh, and Oxus, followed nearly the same faith, and were not dissimilar in manners; that that faith was the Sabian; and that Hinduism was a religion of proselytism till little more than nine centuries ago. He supposes that Sabeism was followed by the modifications of its original tenets, now known as the faiths of Budha and Brahma; that the people who believed the last, occupied the banks of the Ganges and Hindustan proper, while those who professed the other, were on either bank of the Indus and in the south of India; that the two rival sects existed in amity for some time, till the Brahmins, having introduced castes and endeavoured to exalt themselves above their opponents, brought on the Mahabharat or great war, which happened posterior to the invasion of Alexander the Great. He maintains that though both these religions were in their origin nearly connected, the greater antiquity is in favour of the Brahmins, or the orthodox followers of the Vedas; that the Buddhists were a sect, who abandoning the ordinances of the Vedas and the company of the Brahmins, adopted and altered an atheistical system, the origin of which may be traced back five centuries before the Christian era. He supposes that the reformation of orthodox Brahminism should be placed not long before the Christian era when the Brahmins by degrees came to personify the elements and the planets, and from giving expression to their sentiments in allegory wandered from the pure Theism, inculcated in the esoteric doctrines of Sadeism into a creed which acknowledged varied existencies of Divinity, upon which they speculated, till they fell into a system of meditation and mysticism, of which they declared the rewards to be liberation from this life, and immediate union with the first great and eternal cause.

With regard to the Jains, he contends that they were originally Buddhist nomades of the N. E. of India, whom the tide of Mahomedan invasion during the 7th and 8th centuries of the Christian era drove amongst the Brahmins of the south, and who, endeavouring to reconcile the more objectionable parts of their own faith to that of the Brahmins, amongst whom they came, gave rise to a modification of the then Buddhist tenets which is now known under the name of the Jain religion. To these Brahminized Buddhists he ascribes the execution of the sculpture in the cave of Elephanta, Ellora, Ajunta and Abu, in which their attempts at reconciling their own original tenets, with Brahminical mythology, are distinctly discernible.

The arguments are supported by an appeal to our general experience of the revolution of the world to the geographical distribution of the several tribes and nations to whom allusion is made, and by some quotations from Greek, Hindu, and Arab authorities.

The President in proposing the thanks of the meeting to Dr. Bird for his paper, which had been listened to with much interest, observed that while he was prepared to dispute some of its important positions, it was but fair that it should be laid before the learned world for a candid criticism, in the state in which it had been communicated to the Society.

It was then proposed, in pursuance of a notification made at the last meeting, that the hour of the monthly meetings of the Society should be changed from 12 to 3 o'clock, an hour which it was thought, would better suit the convenience of members in general, and no objection having been offered, a resolution to that effect was unanimously agreed to and passed accordingly — Bombay Courier.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE NATIVE EDUCATION SOCIETY OF BOMBAY.

This meeting took place on Saturday the 2d January, in the Society's rooms, and was very numerous attended. The Right Hon'ble the Governor was in the chair. Among the persons present were the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, the Members of Council, the Chief Secretary, the Accountant-General, the Civil Auditor, the Military Auditor-General, the Judge-Advocate-General, the President of the Literary Society, the Elphinstone Professors, and several other gentlemen, clerical, civil, and military. The native company included nearly all the most eminent members of the community, and presented an agreeable mélange of costume, language, and religion. Parsees, Hindoos, Jains, Sunnees, Sereys, all sat amicably intermingled. There were some names too of historical association; the descendant of the Nuwab of Bednore who fought and suffered for the British in the war with Tippoo Sahib; the sons of Gangadhar Shastree, whose assassination in some measure led to the last Marhatta war and the representative of Naroba Autya, in whose possession the treasure of the Peshwa was seized after the capture of Poona, all called up recollections, curiously contrasting with the peaceful purpose of the present meeting.

As soon as His Excellency had taken the chair, Capt. Pope, the secretary of the Society, read the Report of the Committee for the past year. In addition to a satisfactory statement of the Society's finances, this document noticed the completion of a new range of school rooms for the accommodation of the English school; the arrival of the Elphinstone Professors of Science and Belles Lettres; the satisfactory progress in all the schools of the institution; and the election of four new "West" and two "Clare" Scholars. It also alluded to an offer made to the Society by Government to make an arrangement for employing some of its most qualified students in the public service in the districts, under the Revenue Commissioner; which arrangement, on mature consideration, it was thought not advisable to enter on immediately, as those whose qualifications would have entitled them to be selected, — the old West scholars, could not be spared from the school till those recently elected were sufficiently advanced to supply their places. In noticing the English school, the Report stated that the progress made had surpassed the warmest anticipations entertained at the last meeting. The master, in addition to the usual school hours, had instituted evening meetings for examinations in science and general studies. These meetings were open to the public, and excited considerable interest: they were well attended by the Natives; and several European gentlemen, who had made a habit of attending, and themselves examined the scholars, had expressed their warmest admiration at the extent and solidity of the information evinced. So great and so evident was the improvement in this school, both in the scientific and the general department, that the directors considered the warmest commendations and thanks of the society due to the masters, Mr. Bell and Mr. Henderson, for their zealous and most successful labors.

The following resolutions were then passed.

Moved by Sir Herbert Compton, seconded by Francis Cowasjee, Esq.

"That the report which has been read, be adopted as the report of the Society, and ordered to be printed."

Moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sutherland, seconded by Jemsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Esq.

"That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Directors for their service in conducting the affairs of the Society, and that they be requested to continue in office."

The pupils of the Marhatta, Guzerathee, and Hindoostanee schools were then successively examined by the Rev. Mr. Wilson and the Rev. Mr. Stevenson. They read portions of works in these several languages, explanatory of the system of English jurisprudence and similar practical matters; and answered very readily a strict cross-examination of the sense and grammatical construction of the passages — the result, in the opinion of the Examiners, evinced a very decided improvement on the last year.

The Mathematical Department of the English school, under Mr. Bell, was next examined in the following order.

1. One of the lower classes, on commercial terms and phrases. In this examination the pupils were put through the whole circle of ordinary commercial language, and in their explanation of the several terms, and their replies to the queries put incidentally to them, showed that they possessed a very large stock of correct and minute information on this most useful subject.

2. The assistants and West scholars of last year, — in the department of mathematics, were examined on the demonstration of propositions selected from the first 6 books of Euclid, on trigonometry, mensuration of heights and distances, and of plane surfaces. These they went through on the board with very great readiness.

and exactness, to the evident surprise and pleasure of the scientific gentlemen present. In Natural Philosophy, this class was examined on the principles of uniformly accelerated motion, and gave equal satisfaction.

3. The newly-elected West and Clare scholars were next examined on a variety of problems, and on the demonstration and useful applications of geometrical theorems.

After the scientific department of the English school had been concluded, the examination of the general department, under Mr. Henderson, was gone through in the following order:

1st. A recitation of a portion of Sheridan's speech on the Begum charge.

Ditto of the debate in the tragedy of Cato.

Ditto of a humorous lecture on law,—Bullum v. Boatum.

Each recitation being followed by a copious and most successful examination on all the particulars of history, biography, geography, and general information in any way connected with the several subjects.

2d. The assistants and West scholars were examined on the general principles of civil law.

3d. The prize boys of the other classes in general history and geography.

The examination in this department exhibited the same results as those in the scientific,—in both instances bearing honourable testimony to the zeal and ability of the masters, and giving a fair promise of what this institution may yet achieve on the native mind. The above, however, would give but an imperfect idea of the real progress of this school: the class of subjects selected for examination was necessarily limited to a few out of many in which the scholars had been prepared. The time too had its bounds, and many who, in a small room and private examination would have been tempted to take part in the mental anatomy, and probe the information of the students to the utmost, were here spell-bound by the genius loci and the august presence in which they sat.

Thus, in the lower branches, arithmetic and grammar,—in the higher, algebra and chemistry, and the history and classification of literature, were necessarily omitted in the public examination. The writer of this sketch has been present at several of the private meetings alluded to in the report, and seen the pupils sifted most minutely by visitors of the first acquirements. In science, he has heard them examined on the principles of chemical attraction, the electro-chemical and anatomic theories, the ordinary operations of practical chemistry, and the nature and combinations of the various simple and compound substances which form the basis of the science. The same boys who worked out the mathematical problems at the public, he has seen at the private examinations go through a series of interesting chemical experiments, and afterwards explain the rationale of each by diagrams on the board, with a clearness and quickness which were perfectly astonishing. The same lads he has heard deliver speeches from Demosthenes, Cicero, and Chatham,—recite verses from the English poets, and then stand the brunt of all possible questions, arising out of the subject matter of their recitations;—thus, for instance, he has heard a philippic of Demosthenes followed up by a sketch of Philip's career, and the history of Greece at the period:—Philip soon merged in Alexander, and then followed Alexandria, Tyre, Arbela, Porus, Nicaea, Nearchus, the Indus, the Amers of Sind, and the commerce of Bombay. What rendered the matter still more interesting was to find the same individual foremost in every exercise; thus the little lad Narayan Dinanath, who distinguished himself at the public examination, both in mathematics and civil law, was in the private meetings the best orator and the most skillful chemist.

To return, however, to the meeting. At the close of the examination, His Excellency distributed prizes to a great number of boys who had distinguished themselves in the different schools, after which the following resolution was passed.

Moved by Jugonath Sunkersett, Esq., seconded by Bommanjee Hormuajee, Esq.

"That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Right Honourable Sir Robert Grant, for his kindness in taking the chair, and his able conduct in it, on the present occasion."

His Excellency hereupon rose and addressed the meeting at considerable length, and with great impressiveness, on the happy results of the day's proceedings, and the general objects of the institution. After alluding to what had passed at the last meeting, when his illustrious friend, the nobleman who had preceded him in the government, had presided at their proceedings, and bequeathed to him the cause of Native Education, he expressed the warm gratification he had felt and should ever feel, while in office, in attending to the bequest, and the pride and pleasure which he felt in seeing on this occasion so many of this great community, of all castes and classes, and religious persuasion, assembled around him, and heartily co-operating in support of this excellent institution, and of the cause of Native Education. The most sanguine anticipation indulged in on that occasion by his illustrious friend had been he would not say realized but far surpassed by the results of this day's examination. Of the progress of the scholars in the languages of India he was himself not competent to speak, but he had been informed by the learned gentlemen who had examined them, that there was a very decided improvement upon last year. Of the progress of the English school in all its departments, those who had heard the astonishing display of information, both in quantity and quality, which had just been made, could entertain but one opinion: for his own part he would acknowledge that he sometimes found it difficult to follow the scientific students in the rapid and easy manner in which they performed the several tasks assigned them: and that it was not merely a matter of rote, a part got up for display on this occasion, must be evident from the manner, the expression of countenance, the tones of voice, the intelligence and emulation, which marked the whole examination. Gratifying as this exhibition eminently was, he was anxious to impress upon the students that they must not rest there, but must press onward with renewed ardour to perfect the work so happily begun; they must not mistake the means for the end; these acquirements were after all but means—they were accomplishments, and elegant accomplishments, but must not supersede the solid fruit, the true end of all education that mental discipline and high moral feeling which alone would fit for honorably fulfilling the duties of whatever station in life Providence might thereafter severally assign them. This was the great aim of all properly directed education, and unless this were attained, all the ornamental parts, however brilliant—all intellectual acquisition, however dazzling, would be of little sterling value in life, like the plumage of the bird they might serve to adorn, and elicit admiration, but the muscle and the nerve of the wing alone could confer safety and power, and uphold their owner in difficulties. He would wish it to be impressed on the native community generally, that success in this institution would be a passport to success elsewhere. He did not think that the most healthy state of public education where Government was obliged to hold out its patronage as an inducement and a reward. There was a state beyond, where education was prosecuted for its own sake, and knowledge sought for its intrinsic worth and he hoped that state would ere long come to pass: but there was an intermediate stage where the fostering hand of Government was necessary, and he would say nam on the Government which then held back from affording its encouragement. Under this view he was willing to offer all the aid to Native education that was in his power, and with this idea that offer had been made by the Government to this institution which he had no doubt would be eventually made available in one shape or other. He hoped, however, the day was not far distant when the members of this important community would seek to educate their children, not with the view of obtaining thereby a passport to subordinate employment under Government, but of qualifying them for taking that part in public life, and filling worthy those high offices, to which every great people should aspire.—Bombay Gazette.

MR. NORTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS TO SIR R. PALMER.

On Thursday, the 31st December, a special Court was held to administer the oaths of office to the new Chief Justice, Sir R. B. COMYN; which ceremony drew together a crowded assemblage. The Royal patent was read by the Registrar, appointing Sir R. B. COMYN to the high post, and the oaths were then administered by Sir RALPH PALMER. On the completion of these formalities, Mr. NORTON, in the name of the Bar and the profession at large, pronounced, evidently under the influence of strong emotion, a farewell address to the learned and able Judge, who now retired from a Bench he had so long adorned, encircled by all the respect that pre-eminent talent and distinguished attainments can create, all the esteem that high character ensures, and all the affection and good will that the exercise of kindness and of contribution invariably carry in their train. We copy the Conservative's report of the Advocate-General's address, and also Sir RALPH PALMER's reply. The latter we need not characterize—it is correctly rendered in the report, and betrays its speaker's happy ease and terseness of expression, softened in the mould of an affecting farewell to those whom years of intercourse had made in forms of familiar association.

MR. NORTON rose and said,

SIR RALPH PALMER.

The whole profession—the Members of the Bar, the Officers of the Court, and the Solicitors—have assembled before the Court this day for the purpose of expressing their sentiments towards your Lordship on your retiring from the seat you have so long filled. They have been pleased to confide the honor of this task upon myself as their organ. I will not pretend to do adequate justice either to their feelings, or my own, on this occasion—but I am certain I shall faithfully represent them, when I state that these feelings comprise the sincerest regret at the loss they are about to sustain, and the warmest wishes for your future welfare and prosperity. Many of us have witnessed the benefits of your presidency over this Court for a long period—some have experienced them during the whole of your Lordship's career in India. It would not befit us, relatively situated as we are before your Lordship and the Court, to say any thing which should have even the appearance of a critical sanction of that learning and efficiency which has characterized your judicial administration. But we cannot be unmindful of these qualities. We cannot be insensible how much has been owing to your Lordship—assisted as you have been by the learned judge now about to occupy your seat, and whom the profession and the public congratulate as your successor—aided also, as you have been, by that able and most esteemed judge whose loss we have had so much reason to deplore—that the course of Justice has flowed, not in a scanty rill leaving half the channel of the law waste and dry—not in rapid turbulence so as to sweep away and destroy landmarks—but in a deep, an equal, and a copious stream, dispensing wide and real benefit over the whole surface of the community.

If I might venture to particularize I should be led to select that elaborate care and solidity which have distinguished all your decisions on the equity side of this Court. The whole profession, and those who come after us, must always feel that, in the pronouncing those judgments, your mind has been actuated by wider and nobler objects than the mere disposal of the questions before the Court, or even the dispensing requisite and ample justice, as between the parties. They have been made the vehicles of sound professional instruction. They have been made a boon and a valuable and lasting contribution to the just administration of the national law. The practitioners in this Court, and indeed the public at large (for their interests must ever be bound up with those of the efficient and pure administration of justice in the national Courts) must owe a perpetual debt to your Lordship for those Decrees, which have formed a mass of precedents in judicial Equity, the best digested perhaps of any the Indian Courts can boast of, and which cannot fail of the most beneficial effect in rendering the paths of right clear and even.

But, my Lord, I should forget a most particular duty due from me to those around me, due to my own feelings, due most eminently to your Lordship—if I should omit to mention our sense of the undeviating urbanity which has throughout characterized your demeanour to every member of our profession. We, my Lord, in the conflicts, and excitements, and anxieties, almost inseparable from a zealous performance of our duties to those clients who have entrusted their essential or dearest interests to our advocacy—we may, in some passing and occasional moments, have swerved from that respect which is not only due to the Court, but has by us always been felt so to be. But your mind has never on these or any other occasions been shaken from its just propriety—it has never been moved from an indulgent bias towards us. We have always experienced the utmost patience in scrutiny, and the utmost kindness and consideration in manner. It may be a gratification to your lordship's reflection as it surely is to us who testify it, that the dignity of the Court, so far from having been thereby impaired or compromised, has by nothing been more maintained and upheld—and, with it, as a necessary consequence, the respectability, the reputation, and the honor of our profession.

My Lord, we bid you farewell. We trust that this expression of our unanimous sentiments and feelings, coming from a profession to which you once belonged, and which you will always hold in honor, will have its share, among other testimonies of public respect, in your pleasing recollections of the time past in India. In that assurance, in the name of those around me—I may venture to add, from the sympathy I observe throughout this Court in all I am uttering, in the name of the public of this Presidency—I wish you every success, every eminence in public stations, which for the future service of our country, your Lordship may yet be called to fill.

SIR RALPH PALMER REPLIED.

MR. ADVOCATE-GENERAL.

I am indeed most highly flattered by the sentiments which in the name of the profession you have now been pleased to express; and to know that I carry with me on my retirement from this Bench, the good wishes and kind feelings of those with whom I have co-operated in the administration of justice in this country, will, I assure you, be to me a never-failing source of extreme satisfaction. Partiality, however, and private friendship have led you to express yourself in terms,—and to ascribe to me merits, to which in conscience I feel that I am not entitled.—To an honest and zealous endeavour to discharge, to the best of my abilities, the duties of the high office, with which I have been invested, I hope I may without arrogance lay claim—but to no more, for if the result has indeed been such as you have described,—grateful as I must feel in having been in any degree instrumental towards promoting it—you and every one who has attended this Court must know that I have not worked single handed, and most justly therefore have you referred to the aid which has been afforded to me, not only by him who is now no more, but during the whole progress of my labours by that able and ever ready colleague, under whose presiding influence, I may now congratulate the public no less than yourself, that justice in this Court is henceforward to be administered. But above all, if we have judged righteous judgment, to Him alone be the praise who makes the understanding to know and the heart to maintain the truth.

With regard to what you have been pleased to attribute to me as urbanity, if any thing deserving that term, has been evinced in my conduct on this Bench—I am not bound to confess that the courtesy, the kindness—and the respect that I have uniformly received from the Bar, the Solicitors and every Officer of this Court, have demanded such a return from me as of right—that it has been yours not “de gratia” but “de jure.”

"In other professions, in some at least, there are two leading principles, of constant command on the one hand—and obedience on the other. With us there is one principle pervading all alike. Independence of opinion and freedom of speech. To make those qualities, however essentially useful, that they may conduce alike to the promotion of substantial justice, and to the creating and cherishing that good feeling and harmony which ought to exist among all the members of a Court—and which when it does exist, adds not only to the comfort and happiness of those who practise in it—but cannot fail to win also the respect of the public, they must ever be accompanied by a proper—not servile—but gentlemanly deference for the opinions of others and a mutual forbearance towards these infirmitates of our common nature, which in spite of the very best endeavours to the contrary, will break forth, whether to be seen in the impudence,—or perhaps sometimes the petulance of the Judge,—or in the overstrained zeal—and sometimes hasty expressions of the Advocate.

"Damus hunc veniam petimus que vicissim" was the maxim which I endeavoured to lay down for myself upon taking my seat on this Bench; and if I have, as, from the terms in which you have expressed yourself this day, I may hope has been the case, at all acted up to that maxim on my part, I am sure that there has been many, and many, and many a time when I have had occasion to seek it on yours—and I am equally sure, that I have never sought it in vain.

Accept then, Sir, for yourself and for those in whose name you have spoken, my most grateful thanks for all the kindness that I have received at your and their hands, and specially for this last and to me long enduring mark of esteem and regard—and with my best and cordial wishes, that so long as duty or inclination may induce any of you to prolong your stay in this country, your health, wealth and prosperity may daily increase; and when the happy time shall arrive for returning to your native home—that, in the bosom of your friends and your families, you may long enjoy the blessings of the land, with the fruits of your labours—I now bid you all sincere—Farewell.—Madras Herald.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

PIZARRO.

Our Theatrical Secretary understands the public taste, and is determined not to pay it an unearned compliment at the expense of his own pocket. He is aware of what "a beggarly account of empty boxes" almost invariably follows the announcement of a play of intrinsic merit. On his Benefit nights, therefore, he appeals to the eye and not to head or heart. The more the play depends upon adventitious aid the better. "Scenery, Dresses and Decorations," are the catchwords of his advertisements. These are baits that never fail. Gorgeous come in shoals. There was scarcely standing-room in the house on this occasion. We need not explain to our readers that the play of Pizarro, so judiciously chosen by Mr. Farmer, is mere fustian from the first scene to the last. Its sickly sentimentality—its extravagant heroism—and its stilted and unnatural diction must be sufficiently obvious to a mature and healthy judgment. It is a sad thing that Sheridan should have associated his name with such a production. It is true that it is little more than a translation from the German, but the choice of such a play for translation and the style in which it is "done into English," show that Sheridan had no genius for the tragic drama. He should have been satisfied with his fame as a wit. In his comedies the brilliant thoughts and fancies sparkle as incessantly as fireflies in a grove. But he had no mastery over the graver and deeper passions. In the play of Pizarro human nature is melodramatized after the same manner as inanimate nature is bedaubed and varnished on a tea-tray. Such glaring colours, however, catch the vulgar eye. The crowd are enraptured with these glittering effects, in which they think that nature is not exaggerated but surpassed. The language of Pizarro is neither verse nor prose. It reminds us of Dr. Johnson's censure of blank-verse; "if it be not tunid and gorgeous," said he, "it is crippled prose." Sheridan, though eschewing blank-verse for an equal vocal measure of his own invention, has contrived in this tragedy to combine all the faults attributed by the critic to the unrhymed heroic metre. The style is not only inflated and gaudy, but it limps into the bargain. It was not however, our Secretary's purpose to weigh the literary merits of this play; he had only to consider its scenic and pecuniary capabilities. He glanced to the tune of "money in both pockets." We, on the other hand, who are "nothing if not critical," cannot help expressing our dissatisfaction with the choice of this portion of the evening's entertainment, as far as the understanding is concerned. We were in such bad humor with the piece itself, that we were not likely to be very favorable critics upon the manner of its performance, or the execution of the accessories. But not thinking it quite fair to expect much, even from the best actors, on such an occasion, we shall refrain from any attempt to characterize either their merits or defects. Individually, indeed, the actors were of little importance. They merely added by their presence to the general effect of the spectacle. "Now," says Puff in the Critic, "now, for my magnificence, my noise, and my procession!"

"The play stands still; damn action and discourse, Back fly the scenes, and enter foot and horse."

This couplet of Pope's seems to have been suggested by a passage in the Rehearsal, "The plot stands still," says Smith. "Why, what the devil is a plot good for?" replies Bayes, "to bring in fine things."

In the theatrical exhibition of Wednesday evening the 20th January, it appeared to us that the tailor and the actor seemed to divide the public admiration in very equal proportions. Some of the dresses were extremely brilliant and called down thunders of applause.

"Such was the shout, the long applauding note
At Queen's high plume, or Oldfield's petticoat."

Booth enters—hark! the universal hail!

"But has he spoken?—Not a syllable."

"What shook the stage, and made the people start?"

Calo's long wig, flowered gown, and lackered chain."

If Sheridan was merry at one of Cumberland's tragedies, he suffered the same insult himself on our Chowringhee Boards, for when the audience were tired of admiring they relieved themselves with laughter. The risible functions could hardly have been more powerfully exercised at the broadest farce. The appearance of the Peruvians, a rowd of dusty legged syces and grass-cutters, the carts drawn interruptedly by ragged tatters, and the "Virgins of the Sun," with the boots and pantaloon of their male representatives visible below their petticoats, threw the audience into convulsions.

The farce, properly so called, (for Pizarro is styled a tragedy,) came first in the order of performance, though as its precedence was avowedly a matter of stage-convenience only, we have noticed the longest piece first. The title of the farce is "One, Two, Three, Four, Five." It is a slight dramatic sketch, the effect of which depends entirely upon the filling up of the principal part, which is that of an actor who successively represents five different characters. Mr. Farmer undertook this difficult task and succeeded better than his best friends expected. He gave us imitations of Farren, Keeley, Jones, Harley, and Mathews with great truth and spirit. The versatility of talent which he displayed on this occasion confirms us in the favorable opinion which we have already expressed of his histrionic powers. We did not like his representation of a Frenchman; it was an extravagant caricature, both in dress and manner; but his Sir Peter Teazle (Farren), his Doctor Endall (Harley,) and his

Sam Dobbs (Kenley), were capital. His imitation of Mathews would have been better than any of these, if he had not mimicked that actor's occasional habit of running his fingers through his hair, rather too frequently. In other respects it deserved very high praise.—Literary Gazette.

MRS. ATKINSON'S CONCERT OF SACRED MUSIC.

The first part of this concert on the 24th January, consisted of selections from Jefte in Masepe, and an oratorio by Barthelemon, never before performed in this country. The music was chaste and beautiful, the production of genius of no mean order. The opening duets by Mrs. Atkinson and Madame Valadares are exquisite pieces, and were most charmingly executed. The Rondo is a beautiful composition, and was given in Mrs. Atkinson's well supported by the accompanying violins led by Mr. Philip Delmar. The fugue which closed the first part of the concert, is not the least pleasing part of the selections from Barthelemon, but the execution of it requires considerable delicacy; and the effect would have been better, in our judgment, if the piece had been given according to the intention of the composer, as a quarter, followed by the choral finale. It must be observed, however, that a composition of this kind must be repeatedly heard to be well-understood. We hope some of the pieces from Jefte may be re-introduced in the succeeding concert.

The music of the second part is better known to the public, with the exception of the Solo from Haydn very appropriately sung by Madame Valadares. On future occasions, we would suggest the adoption of the plan usual in concerts in England, namely, to give the words that are to be sung, recitatives and all, in the programme. People who are not familiar with the music, have but an imperfect conception of it if they have not before them the words of the songs.

We must not conclude without noticing the coming of the Napalese Envoy towards the end of the first act. We cannot say what impression the music made on him; but when the concert was concluded, Mrs. Atkinson played on her Seraphine to show him the powers of the instrument and then sang a verre of the Persian song of Taxe-be-taxe and another of the national anthem. His Excellency expressed himself much pleased, and through the medium of his little boy presented Mrs. Atkinson with a diamond ring.—Englishman.

ITALIAN OPERA—IL BARBIERE DI SIVIGLIA.

The "Barbieri" again attracted a numerous audience to Chowringhee on the 2d January, and no wonder, for it would be difficult to provide a more exhilarating entertainment than the performance of this truly delightful opera offus, and now that the season is at its height and Calcutta brim full of Cis and Trans Ditchers, it would have been marvellous indeed if a goodly concourse could not have been assembled to partake of a regale so excellent. Of this opera much has been said and written, iterated and re-iterated, but the extraordinary popularity it has acquired in every clime and country, is a far more emphatic eulogy than tongue or pen can deliver. To say that this general popularity can ever be attained by any but the highest order of excellence, would be to write down the world one gigantic ass; and although we are ever ready, with becoming candor, to acknowledge the existence of asininity both as an endemic and as an epidemic, still we are firm anti-contagionists, and we have no hesitation in expressing our conviction that the whole world was never at the same moment and for a considerable period visited by this terrible disorder. We trust we have been sufficiently guarded in dealing with this very nice question.

The music of the Barbieri has much to complain of, having endured a considerable portion of that rough kindness which falls to the lot of those who are in the enjoyment of popularity. Thus it has been nearly suffocated with caracens in the boarding school, it has suffered much injury at the hands of street practitioners, it has been grievously mutilated by compounders of quadrilles, and it has been subjected to every species of torture which the ingenuity of that most pestilent race of variations and Pot Purridors could devise. Notwithstanding these and a thousand other indignities which "popular merit of the unworthy takes," there stands the Barbieri not only unharmed by its manifold wrongs, but absolutely increasing in attractions as it advances in age. This is an abundant answer to all obijurgation.

The performance of Saturday the 2d January, was, we believe, generally allowed to be the best of this opera, and many probably consider it as, on the whole, the most successful achievement in Calcutta operatics. Certain it is that the audience appeared contented and amused to the last, and we observed little felling-off towards the end of the piece. The Amateur who played Almaviva maintained fully the reputation which his debut gained for him. He evidently felt more confidence and found more leisure to attend to stage effect, and the minutiae which add so infinitely to the value of a performance, but which are too often disregarded or misconceived. It is the sedulous care of such minutiae which renders Battali's comic acting so masterly, and which imparts a charm to Signora Schieroni's performance in Rosina and Isabella, which makes even her bye-play in the highest degree interesting, and instructive to those who would excel in the craft. The acting of Almaviva throughout the whole of that most difficult and trying piece the Finale of the First Act is deserving of the highest praise, and, indeed, to say that he played up well and successfully to such practised and masterly comedians as Schieroni, Pizzoni and Bettali, and that he appeared to no disadvantage after the finished performance of Caravaggi in this part, is praise which no Amateur, speaking and singing in a foreign language, need think stinted. He made several decided hits, and varied the performance pleasantly in many parts. We merely allude to this portion of the performance as the most arduous, and the success of which is consequently the most striking, but we think the whole of it was remarkable both for ability and judgment. Of his singing we have little to add to our former remarks. What we have said of the good result of increased confidence applies quite as strongly to his singing as to his acting. His opening Cavatina was sung, we think, with more firmness and deliberation than on the former occasion, and it was received with warm plaudits by the audience. We may here remark that the tact displayed by this Amateur appears nearly as much in his mode of disposing of difficulties, as in his execution. There are passages in this Cavatina and in the Duett with Figaro which no singer with the compass of this Amateur's voice, could possibly give as they are written excepting in falsetto, but by means of a sort of vocal macadamization, inequalities are some how or other planned away, and at the very moment when we are protesting that some obstacle is insuperable, we find the singer bowing away on the other side with a most provokingly free-and-easy gait. These are buffets which the critic must bear as he can. The Duett "Al Idea," did not go off as smoothly as last time. This was probably owing to a false start in the first instance, the Orchestra leading off in one key and Pizzoni bolting into another, whilst Mr. Linton was vain striving to make the parties hear reason in the shape of the true chord which neither leader nor singer had hit. Really we must say that such exhibitions are not creditable. There is no excuse for Signor Catania's blunder, for we would not insult him by pleading in extenuation, that the music required transposition. Neither is there any excuse for Pizzoni, for he not only was absolutely wrong, but he was also relatively wrong;—not even condescending to err amicably with the Orchestra, he must have a particular error of his own! Possibly it may be said that he acted according to a well known law in Mechanics, and was propelled in a diagonal direction by the pressure of two opposing forces.

We thought Signora Schieroni in particularly good voice, and we never saw her act with more spirit. Pizzoni and Bettali also were excellent—but the performances of these three favorites in this opera have been so often noticed with the commendation they deserve, that we think it quite unnecessary to add a word. The con-timid indisposition of the Amateur who is our Basilio persistent, prevented, we regret to say, his resumption of the part, and we were consequently deprived of our favorite "La Calanthe." The character remained with Garrate, but he wants some power to give richness to it, although his voice told extremely well in the Quintett.

Mrs. Atkinson introduced some variety into her air, which is very pretty and was well sung, but we think a little more acting would have improved it, its effect is capable of being greatly heightened by good coloring.

The chorus were good, and the Orchestra, barring the occasional irregularities which we believe are quite inevitable in a band so constituted, acquitted themselves respectably.

We hear that Generali's glorious opera "I Baccanali di Roma" is in a state of forwardness and that there is talk of bringing it out in a fortnight. We have no doubt it will be well received for the music is very fine and it will have the support of the Amateur who played Almaviva and who is to take a leading part in the "Baccanali." But surely the public would not object to another performance of the "Barbiers" first!—Huikaru.

OPERA OF I BACCANALI DI ROMA.

Generali's grand serious Opera of I Baccanali di Roma was brought out here on Friday the 15th January. Having been unable to attend any Rehearsals, and the Opera being quite new to us, we are somewhat at a loss to give an account of the performance; for who pretends to understand an Opera till it has been seen and heard half a dozen times? Although there was very much to admire, the whole bore remarks of haste and imperfect rehearsing—of the infinite difficulty in short, of getting up an entirely new opera where, owing to the wind instruments being part of a military band—not oftener to be obtained than two or three days in a week—and from other circumstances, only a few rehearsals can be had. The very idea of bringing out a new opera in a fortnight and in defiance of such difficulties would be treated in Europe as an absurdity, or a miracle; and the extent to which they were overcome on Friday evening at Chowringhee was exceptis excipiendis greatly creditable to all concerned.

The orchestra most of all exhibited flagrant evidence of the want of sufficient study and practice; so much so, indeed, that the despairing performers on the stage were occasionally obliged to enchain the recitative with inter-pellations in the nature of interpellations exhorting the attention of their colleagues below, who, leader and all, seem to forget that the artists on the scene are not bound to follow them in all their variations from time and tune, but that on the contrary it is the business of the orchestra to watch the artists on the stage with unremitting attention, and to wait upon them, even in those egarements to which the nature of dramatic action or even the caprice of the artists may give rise. It is the want of care in this respect which so often absolutely compels the ill-starred vocalists to have recourse in self-defence to nods and winks, and beating of time manibus pedibusque to arrest the furious gallopade of the orchestra; a practice ruinous to dramatic illusion.

In spite of these defects, however, and of certain comical "unrehearsed stage effects," occasioned partly as we were sorry to hear by the illness of Mr. Leyding there was much to admire in the representation of the Opera.
The music is exceedingly beautiful, and although, Piz-zoni excepted, all the performers seemed to have suffered in some slight degree from a rehearsal the previous night, which terminated after mid-night, much of this music was exquisitely sung. Of the splendid exertions of the amateur who performed Ebusio it is impossible for us to speak too highly. Without his aid indeed, we could now scarcely get up any Opera, either serious or comic, and he is equally successful in both. Nothing could be more happy than his elegant and graceful personation of the youthful Roman. In action and costume all was correct, and some of his attitudes more especially, perfect studies. The musical execution too, of the part was admirable—most impressive. The numerous passages in which the amateur and the Schieroni (Teacuti) were heard together, in first and second, were most beautiful and must render this Opera we think very attractive.
To our unlearned ears it seemed that we had never heard any thing more effective and delightful than the quintetto and finale of the first act. The beautiful duo between Schieroni and Bettali was also sung with great effect, and the Signora's execution of the slow and pathetic movement was exquisitely touching. This morceau we learn, the execution of which elicited so much applause is an interpolation from Meyerbeer's Leule di Grenada, and a very happy one it is. Numerous other passages in the opera received full justice, at the hands of the performers, and merit particular mention; but we have only time to add that Pizzoni was in good voice, though he would perhaps have improved the general effect in the concerted pieces if he had moderated the exercise of his unimpaired powers, for the sake of harmonizing better with those who, less robust, felt the effects of the previous night's fatiguing rehearsal. We wish too, that he would contrive to require the prompter less in his recitative, and further, we would fain petition that too useful and ever active stage functionary to exercise his vocation however diligently, yet a little more sotto voce, than is his wont. Mr. Squires too, that eminent but vociferous man of machinery and master of various tongues, would do well to be less audible in his directions to the scene-shifters. On one occasion he fairly startled Ebusio, who on his entrée was greeted by a loud voice from the coulisses or sacred Groves, —which said or seemed to say,

"The devil take ye, hoist away!"

The scenery was indeed extremely mutinous, and occasionally could neither be coaxed nor threatened into position. All these little drawbacks, however, will be removed by repetition; and we hesitate not to express our conviction that after a little more study and practice, I Baccanali will be found one of the most delightful musical treats ever yet presented to the public.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was present, and the Nepalese Envoy and suite also graced the performance with their attendance.—Bengal Herald.

UNCOVENANTED ASSISTANTS' PENSION FUND.

Report of the Committee of the Uncovenanted Assistants, on the subject of their Pension Funds.

Your Committee in the present stage of their operations, feel it to be a duty which they owe to their constituents, to lay before them a succinct statement of their proceedings since the last General Meeting. Your Committee have spared no pains nor endeavors to accomplish the objects of their appointment; but at every succeeding Meeting which they held, fresh difficulties presented themselves, on a subject considered so complex by the numerous considerations embraced in it. Your Committee, however, after a patient investigation of all the points that came under their deliberation, resolved upon the following scheme for the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, viz.

That the Uncovenanted Service Family Pensions be divided into three separate Branches; viz. The Widows' Fund—The Fund for Male Children—and the Fund for Female Children. • The Widows' Fund to consist of 5 distinct classes; the subscriptions regulated according to Table No. 1 entitling the Widows to the undermentioned pensions, from the date of the demise of their husbands; all arrears of subscription being previously paid up.

First class	Rupees	100 per mensem
Second	70	do.
Third	56	do.
Fourth	42	do.
Fifth	28	do.

The Fund for Male Children to be kept distinct, the subscriptions to be as in Table No. 2, and the pensions derivable from it to be 12 Rs. per mensem to each child of a deceased member of the Fund, until he attain the age of 18 years, unless he be an orphan; in which case his pension shall be augmented to 16 Rs. per mensem.

The Fund for Female Children, to be also kept distinct; subscriptions to be regulated by Table No. 3, and each Female Child of a deceased subscriber to the Fund to be entitled to a pension until she attain the age of 21 years; unless previously married.*

It was the intention of your Committee to have submitted the above Scheme for the sanction of their constituents, accompanied by a Code of Rules, so soon as the Tables above alluded to, which have been prepared by a Sub-Committee, with considerable labour, had undergone a sufficient test from persons experienced in Annuity calculation. To obtain this test, your Committee were recommended to apply to one of the Gentlemen of the Committee of the late Government Assurance Society, and the opinion formed by that gentleman from a cursory review of the Tables prepared by a Sub-Committee, led your Committee to conclude that the rates of contribution inserted in the Tables, were too high compared with the rates of Annuity Societies generally, and not commensurate with the risk, besides being considered beyond the means of the majority of the service. Your Committee have therefore come to the determination of resorting to professional aid, for obtaining a proper set of Tables; and with this view, they have it in contemplation immediately to invite tenders from persons inclined to offer themselves for the duty in question, for an adequate remuneration. Your Committee have been obliged to adopt this means, as few, if any of them, have leisure to devote to the consideration of the intricate questions involved in such calculations, and your Committee trust, that you will put it in their power to offer such remuneration as will induce competent individuals to undertake the task, since correct Tables are alone wanting to complete their labors in the formation of a scheme, which will afford to our widows and children the means of a comfortable subsistence, when their natural guardians are removed from them by death.

Your Committee are far here about to address a letter to Lord William Bentinck, reminding His Lordship of the promise which he made to the deputation that waited on him previous to his departure for England, and informing him of the steps which have been taken on their part, towards the formation of the Intended Fund; and from His Lordship's influence, your Committee entertain a well grounded hope that their wishes will meet with due consideration from the Home and Local Authorities.

In the month of October last, the attention of your Committee was drawn by an application from certain individuals to consider the expediency of appealing to Government against the effects of the new currency orders. A memorial to the Governor-General of India in Council was consequently resolved on, and prepared under the direction of your Committee, which was afterwards numerously signed, and forwarded to Government. This Memorial and the reply which was given to it, have already been published for your information in the Journals of the City.

Chairman of the Committee U. A.

Calcutta, January, 1836.—Hurkaru.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF VEGETABLES.

The Annual Exhibition of Vegetables took place on the 20th January, at the Town Hall, and attracted a very respectable number of spectators, amongst whom we noticed the Chief Justice and family, Sir Benjamin Malken, the Comander-in-Chief, Colonel Dunlop and Beatson, Dr. Marshman, the Hon. Mr. Melville, &c.

As usual on such occasions, there was a little confusion at first, although every precaution had been taken, by previously issuing tickets, to all intending competitors to secure regularity and guard against fraud.

There was a Committee appointed by the President to select the best samples; it consisted of Colonel Dunlop and Messrs. Walker, Kyd, Bell and Masters. The baskets thus chosen, were sent to a table at the extremity of the Hall, where Lady Ryan presiding, pronounced a final decision on the different kinds, as they were brought forward; awarding to each, according to their respective merits. The successful mallies, were honoured in having their medals presented to them by the Misses Ryan.

The highest pecuniary rewards had been fixed, as last year, at sixteen rupees, but the Lady President, anxious that none should leave the Hall without some little encouragement to future exertion, directed the largest sums to be broken.

Lady Ryan next proceeded to the front entrance door, and as each mally (whose produce had not been selected for the higher prizes), passed out, kindly distributed, one, two or three rupees, until it was discovered, that several who had been handsomely rewarded at the table, had the effrontery to present themselves a second time, with different baskets, while others resorted to the equally mean artifice, of dividing the contents of one basket into several, for the sake of extorting a few extra rupees. Some thirty mallies were therefore turned out, but without any thing to mark the displeasure felt at their petty rascality.

The display was highly satisfactory, and exceeded the most sanguine expectations of members of the Society, considering the heavy rains, which fell after the first sowings and destroyed most of the young plants in private gentlemen's gardens.

The cabbages and cauliflowers were particularly fine, and we were happy to find that the benefit of the regulation proposed recently by Sir John Peter Grant, to include the mallies of private gentlemen's gardens, has been in two instances recognized.

The first was the finest specimen of celery from the garden of a Mr. J. Penny (the Revd. we believe) residing in Elliot Street, who received a medal for paying attention to his master's interest.

The second was a medal awarded to a Mr. J. Rodrigues for the onion, and a very fine specimen of the white brinjal. A few very superior sugar-canes were also sent by Mr. Rodrigues, but as this was strictly an Horticultural exhibition, nothing beyond praise could be dispensed.

Some of the competitors had several medals from former annual exhibitions. Perhaps it would be judicious to exclude from competition those who have won medals several times successively, and give scope to other competitors who might equal, although they could not excel, them. Now also that the Society have effected by their encouragement so much improvement in our vegetables, and have brought them perhaps to as great a degree of perfection as possible, we would suggest, to that body to turn their attention to our fruits, and to afford an equal encouragement to the careful cultivation of them also, which we have no doubt would be attended with an equally beneficial result.—Hurkaru.

* From considerations connected with the remuneratory proposition for the compilation of a new set of Tables, independently of their great extent rendering it inconvenient to put them in type, it is considered inexpedient to publish the Tables alluded to, but they can be inspected by any Unconnected Assistant on application to the Secretary to the Committee. To give a general idea of them, it may be sufficient to state, that for the mid Ages, the contributions average one-third of the pensions proposed to be granted.

SUPREME COURT.

THURSDAY, JAN. 7, 1836.

This being the first day of the term the Court sat at ten o'clock.

Thomas de Aquino, who had been convicted at the last session of a rape upon a child under seven years of age, was brought before the Court to receive sentence.

Mr. Justice Grant had thought it right to postpone passing sentence under the circumstance of this case, till the present term.

The sentence was that the prisoner be transported for life to Penang.

IN THE MATTER OF HOLLOWAY.

Application was made for the postponement of the argument of this case till Thursday next, in consequence of the illness of Mr. Turton who was counsel for the Habeas Corpus. The postponement was assented to by the Court.

IN THE MATTER OF HARRIET MACNAIRN.

A writ of Habeas Corpus had been obtained calling upon one Robert Macnairn to produce the bodies of three children specified in the writ, the return to which was now put in.

The return stated that the children named in the writ were his own children by Mary Cassidy and that the said Harriet was born in May 1828, the second Mary in December 1829, and the third Margaret in 1833; that the said Robert Macnairn was not married—that Mary Cassidy left his house in May 1834, without any reasonable cause, he having shewn no unkindness whatever to her, that for several years she had been much addicted to drinking, and that the said Robert Macnairn feared that if the children were intrusted to her, her example would contaminate their morals; that since she had left his house she had been living in a state of prostitution; that the children were regarded by him with the kindest paternal feelings, and that he intended to send them to Scotland to his own friends and relations; that they were now upwards of a hundred miles from Calcutta in a situation which could only be reached by water in the rainy season, the river Madabungh being at the present season too shallow to allow boats to pass; and that to send them such a journey by dawk might probably endanger their lives.

Two affidavits were put in to contradict the affidavits of the mother upon which the writ was obtained.

Mr. Marnell who applied for the Habeas Causell as Counsel for Paupers, objected to these affidavits being read without being first filed and his client having an opportunity to inspect them.

The return was directed to be filed together with the affidavits abovementioned and another in the French language, and the case was adjourned till Monday next to afford the party applying for the writ time to answer their contents.—Hurkuru.

MONDAY, JANUARY 11.

IN THE BUSINESS OF THE PROVING OF THE WILL OF GEORGE PAGE DECEASED.

This was a rule nisi, obtained on a former day, to show cause why the interrogatories filed for the promovent should not be taken off the file. It appeared that the practice of this court hitherto has been to file interrogatories for the promovent, and for the Examiner in Equity to examine the witness upon them. It was argued for the impugnant that this was contrary to the course pursued at home, and that it was not authorized by any of the rules and orders of the court though it had been the practice here as near to that of the London Consistory Court as possible, ordered that in future the Ecclesiastical Registrar must examine the witnesses of the promovent upon the allegations of the libel merely, without written interrogatories. This rule nisi was made absolute, but not with costs, as the promovents acted on the practice of this court.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM HALLOWAY.

In consequence of the indisposition of Mr. Turton, the argument in this matter was postponed, by consent, till this day week.—Englishman.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15.

COMMON LAW SIDE.

MACDORMOND versus DEARIE.

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings.

Mr. Pearson addressed the Court for the plaintiff.

This was a question arising out of a demand for passage money on board the Sea Horse, pilot vessel, of which the plaintiff had the command.

The case rested upon two questions; the one whether an undertaking was entered into by the defendant to the extent alleged in the plaint; the other whether the responsibility of that engagement fell upon the defendant during the whole time. By the permission of the Government, the Pilots of this presidency were allowed to take passengers, who for the sake of health, or other reason were desirous of proceeding down the river. The terms upon which this accommodation was granted were fixed by the Government, and those terms were in fact the basis upon which the agreement, the subject of the action, was founded. Conformably with the regulations on this subject the defendant in the month of March last, applied by letter to the Master Attendant, stating that the Revd. Mr. Charles and his wife, and the defendant, intended to go down the river in a Pilot vessel. The defendant took upon himself the whole arrangement of the transaction, and subsequently had a private conversation with the plaintiff, in which he stated the period for which the accommodations were intended to be taken. On the 18th of March the parties went on board. They had two cabins; and subsequently two other passengers came on board, Mr. Halket and Mr. White. These two gentlemen were so well pleased with their treatment whilst on board that they wished to prolong the period of their stay, if the defendant would give up his cabin, a circumstance which, considering the respectability of the parties, told much for the conduct of the plaintiff and the accommodations he provided for the defendant. This the plaintiff refused and said that he should not leave till April. On that very evening, however, the defendant left the vessel, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles on the 27th. It need hardly be mentioned that it is necessary upon occasions of this kind to lay in stores and provisions proportioned to the length of the voyage and the number of passengers—this was done and the vessel was amply provisioned as would appear by the bills and receipts for commodities furnished for that purpose. On his return to Calcutta application was made to Dearie for the passage money of all the party he having entered into the agreement for the whole accommodation. Nine hundred rupees was the sum demanded, and the answer to that demand fully establishes the admitted responsibility of the defendant on the contract. That answer was conveyed in these terms "when Mr. McDormond sends a correct bill the amount will be settled." This admitted the contract. Now the remuneration allowed by the Government Regulations corresponded with the sum demanded by the plaintiff, and the Court would decide whether that was a correct bill or not. To prove this case the Advocate General called Mr. Samuel Smith, Assistant to Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co., to whom was shewn a letter which he proved to be the hand writing of the defendant. This letter was read stating the defendant's intention to proceed to sea in the Sea Horse for perhaps a month.

Mr. John Joakim sworn.—I recollect a conversation with Mr. Dearie in March last. He came to the Bankshall, and inquired for a pilot vessel; I mentioned the Sea Horse commanded by the plaintiff. He said he required two after cabins for himself and the Revd. Mr. and Mrs. Charles. I said I would introduce him to Mr. MacDormond; and the latter came soon after he left the Bankshall. I told him of Mr. Dearie's wish. Dearie said he wanted the cabins for a month or six weeks. Lieut. Baker and Dr. Voss called a day or two after that and asked for accommodation on board the Sea Horse. I told them that the two after cabins were engaged by the defendant. Dr. Voss was very ill and said he would make shift with a small cabin. By the Government Regulations the Pilots are entitled to charge their passengers eight rupees a day for the first fortnight and after that six; for ladies the charges are six and five: a Branch Pilot is entitled to half the accommodation, and if he gives up his cabin he is entitled to a charge of eight rupees. I do not know of any other applications.

Cross-examined.—A Branch Pilot is entitled to eight rupees for his share of the accommodation; applications are made to the Master-Attendant or Marine Board—and that is all that is requisite. The rule is first come first served without reference to the length of time the party engages. I told the defendant it was necessary to make an application to the Master-Attendant, which he did that very day. A Government servant going on duty is entitled to half the accommodation. Parties usually state the time they intend to go on board.

Re-examined.—The Regulations were published in the Gazette and may be found in the Directory.

The Revd. James Charles.—I knew the plaintiff and defendant. On the 18th March I went on board the Sea Horse; I went for no fixed time. Mrs. Charles and Mr. Dearie went with me. I went on board near Fort Gloster. I left the vessel on the 27th of March at the Light House station; defendant left four or five days before. We were treated with civility and there was nothing to complain of in respect of the table. Mr. Dearie is a partner in Bruce, Shand and Co.'s. Doctor Voss was a passenger and Mr. Halket and Mr. White; they left with Mr. Dearie. I heard no conversation between plaintiff and defendant on the day he quitted the vessel; but one of the parties, Mr. Dearie, said that Mr. White had come to Mr. Dearie, that Mr. MacDormond had asked him to give up his cabin, but Mr. White desired him not to do so. Defendant left the vessel one or two days after this conversation, not on the same day.

Cross-examined.—I was recommended by Doctor Voss to go further South. I am subject to sea sickness, and I would not on that account engage the cabins for any specific time. I should say I was uncomfortable on board. Mr. MacDormond was not on very good terms with the passengers, being of a different rank and class. I had what is called the Government accommodation. Mr. Dearie had the accommodation appropriated to the commander of the vessel. On leaving, I gave Mr. MacDormond a draft which was returned to me nine days after, when I heard for the first time that the cabins had been taken for a certain time: I gave the draft into the plaintiff's own hand. After the defendant had left, the plaintiff came to me and said I might now have Mr. Dearie's cabin as both had been taken for my accommodation. The plaintiff wrote to me on the subject of the passage money, in consequence of which I applied to the Marine Board and stated the whole case to them.

Re-examined.—I gave the draft just when I was leaving the vessel. The plaintiff said something after the defendant had gone, implying that the defendant had practised imposition upon him; I said he could not possibly be capable of imposition. I saw that the plaintiff was dissatisfied at his passengers leaving him, and that was the time he mentioned imposition.

John White.—I know the plaintiff; I went on board his vessel on the 18th of March last; I would not accept Mr. Dearie's cabin. I was asked by plaintiff whether I would accept it, I said no; my reason was that I would not allow Mr. Dearie to give up a comfortable accommodation on my account.

John Jenkins.—The plaintiff had his supplies from the firm of Jenkins, Low and Co. to which I belong; he purchased stores in the month of March last for the Sea Horse to the amount of one hundred and thirty-three rupees.

This was the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Clarke submitted that no case was made out and the party must be nonsuited, but corrected himself at the suggestion of the Court, a tender having been made and money having been paid into Court by the defendant. He contended that there was no agreement proved for a specific time; that the conversation with Mr. Joakim at the Bankshall could not be considered in that light; that the application was for no specific time, but in indefinite terms—that is to say, perhaps a month, under which term the defendant was at liberty at any time within the month. He then called John Boyle.—I am Attorney for the defendant. I went to Mr. Hudson on the first of July and tendered to him two hundred and sixty-eight rupees. I stated verbally upon what account I tendered it. I also sent Mr. Hudson a note; he has notice to produce it. I stated that it was for Mr. and Mrs. Charles and Mr. Dearie's passage money on board the Sea Horse. He said he considered Mr. Dearie had already made one tender. I said yes, but Mr. Dearie required a receipt in full of all claims, but I merely offered the money on a simple receipt for the amount.

C. B. Greenlaw, Secretary to the Marine Board.—There was no correspondence on the subject of the demand made in this action.

The witness was here asked a question relative to the provisions made by the Regulations on this subject, but

The Advocate-General objected that the Regulations would speak for themselves.

Mr. Justice Grant.—What charge do the Pilot make upon such occasions?

Witness.—I don't know what they do charge, I only know what they ought to charge.

By the Court.—All persons have a right to the common cabins and public servants on public duty are entitled to have the commander's cabin. There are three authorities to whom applications are made to go on board a Pilot vessel: the Government, the Marine Board, and the Master-Attendant. The Pilot himself has no voice in the matter. A party is not required to specify the time he intends to be on board.

The Advocate-General in reply admitted that he must abandon the claim for the commander's cabin with respect to the rate of the charge that is settled by the Regulations. As for the time comprehended in the agreement, although it might not be reduced to a matter of mathematical proof or specification by deed, yet that it was to all moral certainty evident that that time was the period of a month. Stores were paid in for a month, and although the defendant's letter might say perhaps a month, yet as it was impossible to obtain supplies on board, it was necessary to provide the vessel for a month certain. In all human probability the permission given was for a month, as no public officer would grant so vague a permission as is implied in the terms "perhaps for a month." The Court took some little time to consider and returned their verdict recognising the contract for a month, and giving the plaintiff damages 464 rupees, making together with the sum of 268 rupees paid into Court, 732 rupees.

• Sha Beharree Lall v. Mrs. C. Smith.

This was a rule nisi obtained on a former day, to show cause why the trial should not be postponed till next term.

on the ground of a material witness, who is now residing at a distance of 800 miles from Calcutta.

Mr. Clarke now shewed cause, advertising to the affidavit of Mr. Swinhoe, defendant's attorney, who, in the first instance, had not sworn there was a good defence, but had subsequently amended the affidavit. The learned counsel put in the affidavit of Mr. Sandes, who swore that after this action was commenced, he called on the defendant, and she offered to pay the three agreements on which the action is brought; viz for Rs. 3,000, 35,000, and 5,000 by instalments, one-half to be paid during the then month. These terms the plaintiff offered to accept, provided the defendant gave security for their performance; and the latter had subsequently satisfied the claim for Rs. 5,000 by a note of hand, which has been accepted by a merchant in Calcutta. This promise on the part of the defendant and the payment of one of the amounts, was, the learned counsel argued, sufficient to induce the court to discharge the rule.

Mr. Advocate-General in support of the rule, argued hypothetically that the defendant might have a good defence, having been fraudulently induced to give the notes of hand. But, putting aside supposition, it was quite possible that a woman, not conversant with business, might think herself liable when she was not so. Besides, the payment of one note affords no presumption that the others are due. Rule Absolute. Trial postponed till next Term.

RAM BEEBEE V. ONE OF THE ATTORNEYS OF THE COURT.

This matter, which is a complaint against one of the attorneys of the court, was ordered to be referred to the Master, to inquire and report on all the circumstances. — Englishman.

IN THE MATTER OF HARRIET MACNAIRN.

It will be recollected that a writ of Habeas Corpus had been obtained calling upon Robert Macnairn to produce the bodies of three children, to which the said Robert Macnairn had made his return, stating certain circumstances, to establish which, he had put in certain affidavits, to which the party applying for the writ not having put in contradictory affidavits, the Court decided that no order could be awarded thereupon. — Hurkaru.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 27.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES CULLIN AND ROBERT BROWNE.

Mr. Advocate-General applied to the court that Mr. D. Macintyre may be discharged from being assignee to this estate, and that Mr. Thomas Holroyd may be forthwith appointed. The learned counsel, as to the discharge of Mr. Macintyre, moved on a petition from that gentleman, which set forth that he is in a state of weakness and great debility, and that his medical adviser, Dr. Nicolson, has certified that he must immediately proceed to sea for the re-establishment of his health. The petition contained various schedules setting forth the progress that had been made towards winding up the affairs of the estate, from which it appeared that the factories had yielded 7,800 maunds of indigo, valued Sa. Rs. 10,41,685, of which Sa. Rs. 3,06,215 were already realized. The cash balance in hand amounts to Sa. Rs. 2,30,935, and there is in hand indigo, in value, about Sa. Rs. 7,30,000 amounting together to something more than nine lakhs. But then, here was a point to which the learned counsel was desirous of calling the court's attention. The assignee had been obliged to pledge assets to the extent of Sa. Rs. 5,72,000 in order to redeem certain mortgaged property, and consequently, there remained but Sa. Rs. 3,94,412, equal to three and a half per cent. for the progress of a dividend, while on the other hand, the indigo factories, if carried on, would require an outlay of Sa. Rs. 8,96,200 for the ensuing season, including Sa. Rs. 3,02,252 already disbursed. The court would recollect when Mr. Macintyre was appointed, the subject of his remuneration was referred to the creditors, who recommended a commission of four per cent. on the dividends for that purpose. That recommendation was adopted by the court, and with that remuneration Mr. Macintyre stated himself at the time to be perfectly satisfied. He was still satisfied with that arrangement; but unfortunately the situation of the estate had not yet enabled him to divide anything amongst the creditors; and he was now compelled to resign before there had been a dividend on which he could claim the commission. The petition further represented that the assignee had incurred expenses during the two years since the failure, amounting to Sa. Rs. 75,429, which had been paid out of the assets of the estate and debited in the books. Under these circumstances the assignee referred the subject of his remuneration to the consideration of the court.

Sir Edward Ryan said, the best course would be to call a meeting of creditors and to lay before that meeting a statement of the assignee's accounts, from which they might furnish some data for the guidance of the court. Besides, in this matter, Mr. Macintyre was the sole assignee; and it was right that the creditors should have the most complete opportunity of inspecting his accounts.

Mr. Advocate-General would offer not the slightest opposition to this course, but he would suggest to the court, that, as the petition contained an abstract of the affairs of the estate, it also contained the most complete data for the court to go by. At least, he would say it was data as regarded the remuneration; as to the propriety of the court vacating the appointment, he had to present a petition, signed by 211 creditors whose claims amounted to Sa. Rs. 45,00,000, praying for the appointment of Mr. Thomas Holroyd. He also submitted Dr. Nicolson's certificate of the state of Mr. Macintyre's health, and his friend Mr. Leith now informed him that Mr. Macintyre, who had been present during the early part of this proceeding, had been compelled by indisposition to retire. Under these circumstances he hoped the court would put no obstacle in the way of the assignee's immediately proceeding to sea.

Sir Edward Ryan, after perusing the petition for the appointment of Mr. Holroyd, remarked that it was not, as has been stated by the learned counsel, signed "by 211 creditors," but "for" that number. Mr. Mackillop, himself a creditor to the amount of Sa. Rs. 1,98,000, had signed for a number of others; Cockerell and Co. held powers of attorney, and had also signed for a number of creditors, and Mr. Macintyre himself had exercised a similar authority. However, with this certificate and this petition, there was sufficient before the court to induce it to vacate the appointment.

Mr. Holroyd was then appointed, and ordered to call a meeting of the creditors, at an early date, to take into consideration the subject of the late assignee's remuneration.

The 2nd of February was declared to make a dividend in Fergusson's estate of 10 per cent, and in Colvin's of 5 per cent. The following dividends were also declared: In the estate of Andrew Heberlet 10 per cent. — G. A. Prinsep 2½ per cent. — R. E. Betley 8 per cent. — Martin Petrie ½ annas per cent.

IN THE MATTER OF GEORGE CHRISTIANNA.

The insolvent, an uncovenanted assistant of Government, has refused to comply with the order of the court to pay to his assignee one third of his salary for the liquidation of his debts. An attachment was directed to be issued forthwith. — Englishman.

JOHN PALMER.

The daily papers have announced to us the death of Mr. John Palmer, which took place at 2 o'clock on the morning of Friday, the 22d January.

Few men who have died among us have established a stronger claim to a tribute to his memory than John Palmer—a name, which is known and respected in the remotest part of British India, and we believe, we may add, in every portion of the British dominions.

The Calcutta Courier has given a brief memoir of the deceased, which, hurriedly written as it was, is extremely well expressed, and embodies some of the most interesting facts in his personal history. From that source and from a memorandum furnished to us by a friend, we have drawn up the sketch which follows of a career which presents many claims to our admiration.

Mr. John Palmer was, we believe, the younger of several sons of the late Lieutenant-General Palmer, so well known in his day, as the Confidential Private Secretary, in fact, the Confidential Minister of Warren Hastings, who died a Lieutenant-General, at Berhampore, on the 20th of May 1816, after having filled the highest offices in the diplomatic line in India for more than twenty years, and finished his career as an officer on the Bengal Staff. He was acknowledged to be second to no one in the Company's service for talent, experience, and that honourable independence of mind for which his son was distinguished. General Palmer entered the Bengal Army from the King's service in 1770, rather later in life than is the usage of the present day, and his children, we believe, were born in America or the West Indies.—Two found employment in the Bengal Army, and died Field Officers.

John Palmer, the subject of this memoir, was brought up for the Navy, which he entered as is customary at a very early age, and in which he served several years, until, we believe, he obtained his commission, having, during that time, been in a vessel which engaged the celebrated Suffrein. Mr. Palmer, however, left the Navy when his prospects of advancement were destroyed by the general peace of Paris in 1783.

Mr. Palmer first entered into business in Calcutta about fifty years ago in the retail line in partnership with Mr. St. George Tucker, now a Director of the East India Company—afterwards conducted it by himself—and subsequently joined Mr. Barber, with whom he carried on business under the firm of Barber, Palmer and Co. Mr. Palmer afterwards entered into partnership with Mr. Traill, whose partners, Messrs. Paxton and Cockrell, had proceeded to Europe. Mr. Traill himself, shortly afterwards, retired from the Calcutta firm, and Mr. Palmer continued the business under the well known firm of Palmer and Co., which in 1830 failed, and drew down with it, within a few years, all the long established agency houses of this place which could not withstand the universal shock to credit and confidence, which the fall of such a house and such a man at the head of it produced.

The great success which for so many years attended the house of Palmer and Co., and the almost unparalleled credit that house commanded, have been justly ascribed more to the liberality and kindness of heart of the head of that firm, even then to his intelligence and enterprising spirit; but unfortunately for himself, and for those who became afterwards associated with him, an excess of that generosity which had won for him the gratitude of so many, led in later times and altered circumstances to the disastrous result we have mentioned, and which has been the source of so much distress. His inability to refuse applications for pecuniary aid and his reluctance to question the integrity of others, were mainly instrumental in producing the failure—an event which Mr. Brownrigg's attempts to retard by the adoption of the opposite course, so far from retarding we believe accelerated. There probably never was a more unhappy period in Mr. Palmer's life than that in which, while efforts were making by his partners to retrieve the affairs of the firm, his liberality was entirely restrained and he was reduced in his own office, as he expressed it, to a cipher. When the failure took place, such was the confidence of the natives in Mr. Palmer—such their respect for him, that many came forward with offers of liberal assistance—but the case was too desperate to admit of any relief of that kind. The creditors in general, to mark their sense of Mr. Palmer's merits, placed his name at the head of the list of Assignees. The Chief Justice when the list was presented to him, regretted that a legal objection existed to such a nomination, but he seized the occasion to pay a feeling tribute to the character of Mr. Palmer and to express deep sympathy in his misfortunes.

About three years ago Mr. Palmer was enabled to re-establish himself in a business, which is we believe in a most flourishing condition: and out of profits of this concern Mr. Palmer supported and assisted many distressed creditors of the late firm—a fact more to his honour than any recorded in his history. Justice has not been done, as a citizen and member of our community, in any of the notices of his death, to Mr. Palmer's claims on our respect and grateful recollection. His name was to be found at the head of every association for resisting wrong and supporting right, and it is in no small degree to the influence of his venerated name and to his strenuous and public spirit, always judiciously tempered by sanity and discretion, the fruits of his sound judgment and experience, that this community is indebted for keeping alive the feeble spark of resistance to arbitrary authority among Englishmen in India, which has withstood so many attempts to extinguish it for so many years, and which at length burns a bright and steady flame of liberty—liberty of speech, of printing, of person, and of property.

Mr. Palmer was one of the first to take Mr. Buckingham by the hand: and to his influence and generous aid we owe the impulse to the improvement of the Indian Press given by the establishment of the Calcutta Journal.

During our brief reign of terror, when Mr. Buckingham was proscribed by power, and many thought it dangerous to associate with him, M. Palmer still adhered to him and became, in association with Mr. George Ballard, one of the trustees for the management of his property when he was banished to England, and he adhered to him to the last.

Mr. Palmer was in short, an independent citizen, a generous and steady friend—he has lived esteemed and beloved—and his death will be deeply lamented by all who had an opportunity of estimating his virtues.

He lived to a good old age, but his strong constitution and the good health he generally enjoyed gave promise of much longer life. The immediate cause of his death was a quincy. He expired about 2 o'clock in the morning in the 70th year of his age, and his remains were carried to the grave, followed by a more numerous concourse of friends and others who respected his memory, than perhaps has ever attended any funeral in Calcutta. —Beaumont Herald.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

OPIMUM.—The Cowajee Family left Calcutta on the morning of the 12th January for China, with a cargo of 1,821 chests of opium on board, the largest freight yet taken by any of the clippers—the quantity shipped in the four clippers since the opium sale is about 4,000 chests.

The first opium sale took place on the 24th January, when six hundred and fifty chests were disposed of. The biddings, made in Company's rupees, were very brisk, and from twenty to fifty lots were occasionally run off together. The first lot was knocked down at one thousand one hundred and seventy and a few lots followed at one thousand one hundred and sixty-five; but the biddings soon passed one thousand two hundred, and the second moiety of the Patna, sold after the Benares, ranged at one thousand two hundred and eighty and one thousand two hundred and eighty-five. The following is the general result of the sale.

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar,	4,500	1,290	1,165	1,255-9-1	56,50,075
Benares,	2,000	1,240	1,205	1,222-12-2	24,45,525

GUIDE TO THE REVENUE REGULATIONS OF AGRA AND CALCUTTA.—Mr. J. C. Marshman has just published a Guide to the Revenue Regulations of the Presidencies of Bengal and Agra, which he has condensed into two octavo volumes without omitting a single unrevoked clause of the fiscal code. Bengali and Persian translation of the work are to follow.

SPORTING.—The Cawnpore Lancer Cup was won by General Stevenson; the Calcutta Magazine Cup, by Mr. Dale's B. E. M. Howrah; and the silver cup presented by Sir Charles Metcalf, by Mr. Cockerell's black Arab horse Comet.

NEPAULESE MISSION.—The Nepaulese Envoy, General Martaubher Singh, and suite arrived at Sulkea on the 14th and the General embarked on board the Honorable Company's yacht Sonumookes, towed by a steamer and accompanied by numerous boats freighted with his body-guard, at 4½ p. m. on the 15th January. The troops commenced an indiscriminate sniping of musketry as soon as they neared the Mint which they kept up until they came abreast of Chandpaul Ghat, where the General, who was accompanied by Mr. Trevelyan, Dr. Bramley, Capt. Symth and F. W. Birch, disembarked under a salute from the ramparts of Fort William, and proceeded in Mr. Trevelyan's carriage towards Ballingunge, where a house has been taken for the Ambassador—his troops following in marching order.

The General and a number of his followers visited the Opera in the evening and seemed much entertained.

On the 21st January, The Governor-General held a Durbar at which the Nepaulese Envoy was received in state. After the interview the troops of the Envoy were inspected by the Governor-General and presented arms in the British and Nepaulese style. The Commander-in-Chief and Staff and most of the Military Staff of the Presidency, attended the Durbar. The presents from the Rajah of Nepal, which were exhibited on the occasion, consisted chiefly of magnificent furs and embroidered dresses, kookries, some enormous tusks of elephants, a leopard and a tiger nursed by a woman, and a rhinoceros.

On the 22d January His Excellency the Envoy, with his son and suite, attended by Mr. Trevelyan, paid a visit to the Hurraws Press, and inspected the whole establishment with great attention, avowing much curiosity as to the different processes of printing, asking many questions and displaying great readiness in comprehending the replies. His Excellency witnessed the entire process of printing from the business of composing to that of printing off a sheet, and took a stick of matter in his hand and requested to be furnished with one to send to Nepal with his own explanations. He comprehended the nature of the work in a moment and appeared much interested and gratified, as were his little boy and suite. The Envoy is tall and very handsome—his countenance beams with intelligence and he evinces an anxiety for information as to our arts and sciences, manners and customs, which all are desirous to gratify. The General's costume is exceedingly rich—a dress of crimson velvet richly braided with gold and trimmed with fur, a splendid gold band, with a clasp glittering with diamonds, and a magnificent turban with a tiara of brilliants in front and wreathed with pearls, &c. He also wears a pair of European gold epaulettes. The costumes of his officers and suite are also very picturesque.

The Nepal Regiment was reviewed on the 27th January, by the Commander-in-Chief, Sir H. Fane, and exhibited a high state of discipline, firing with all the precision of our best drilled battalions. It is said that the Regiment has commenced its return march for the hills in order to reach them before the hot winds set in.

THE WEATHER.—The weather, for this latitude, has been intensely cold the whole of the past week; the thermometer in the open air being occasionally as low as 40° and never until the day before yesterday higher than 62° in a confined room.

The Courier of the 18th states, that ice was, for the first time on record, naturally formed on the ground in the Botanical Gardens on the night of the 17th January.

LA MARTINIÈRE.—The masters of the Martinière have been appointed. Mr. W. Masters, recently of the Verulam Academy, is to be head-master, Mr. Cameron second-master, and Mr. Henwood third-master. The chief mistress has not yet been appointed, and the names of those nominated to the other situations have not transpired. In the rules and regulations of this institution, which have been published, the Committee explain, that the reason of their raising the standard of qualification of the masters so high as they have done, is less with reference to children on the foundation who may evince superior talents, than to scholars who will pay for their education and whose parents or guardians may be desirous of securing to them the benefits the institution will offer in masters of first rate capacity.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the 17th January, a boat full of men, women and children, proceeding from Bally to Kalli Ghaut, ran foul of a sunken boat near the Ghosra sand, and was upset: all the passengers, except the manjee and two Bhramins, were drowned.

MILITARY BOARD.—In consequence of Col. Cragie's taking his furlough to England, Capt. Gavin Young, formerly Secretary and acting Member of the Military Board, has succeeded the Colonel as a permanent Member.

SHIP LAUNCH.—A Ship registered about four hundred tons, but intended to carry near a thousand, was launched from the dock-yard of Mr. J. C. Thomas on the 26th January, and named the Emily.

IRON BOATS.—Another iron boat was launched on the 19th January and named the Junna. The name of the vessel recently launched, and which was asserted to be the last, is the Megha and not the Surmer as stated.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The Public Library seems to progress very slowly. About seventy names have been subscribed but only 8,500 rupees have hitherto been realized. The Government, however, have purchased the College books to the Library, and many volumes have been presented by individuals. Mr. Stacey has been appointed Librarian on a salary of one hundred rupees per month, and bookshelves are about to be provided at a cost of 1,500, which, with other contingent expenses for furnishing a reading-room, &c., will exhaust the whole of the assets in hand. An opinion prevails, that the connection of the Honorary Secretary (Mr. Stocqueler) with the Library tends to starve its success, by preventing many hostile to him from subscribing to the institution. He has subsequently resigned.

COFFEE HOUSE.—It is stated that Mr. Woodruff, the enterprising proprietor of the Oriental Bazaar, intends to establish a Coffee House in Calcutta, resembling similar establishments in England, on a respectable footing.

MASONIC PROCESSION.—The 27th December being the anniversary of St. John, the patron Saint of the Freemasons, about sixty or eighty of the fraternal body assembled in Lodge Humility with Fortitude No. 279, in Fort William, and marched two by two, to St. Peter's Church accompanied by the Governor-General's band playing "Come let us prepare, ye brothers that are," and after attending divine service they returned to the Lodge in the same order, the band playing Burns's farewell. An admirable and appropriate discourse was delivered on this occasion by the Venerable Archdeacon, who took for his text the 25th chapter of St. Matthew, verses 34 to 40.

RAJAH RAJNARAIN.—The Governor-General presented Rajah Rajnarin at a private audience, on the 29th December, with a large gold medal of honor, having inscribed on the obverse, the Company's arms richly chased, with the motto upon a dark ground in a circle—Auspicio Regis et Senatus Anglus—and on the reverse, the words "Presented by the Hon'ble Sir Charles T. Metcalfe, Bart., Governor-General of all India, to Rajah Rajnarin Roy, Bahadur, A. D. 1835. The medal was manufactured by Messrs. Twentyman and Co and is fitted with a clasp to be worn upon the breast like a star.

BANK OF BENGAL.—A notification has been issued by the Bank of Bengal, signifying that from the 1st January, all drafts of constituents must be expressed in Company's rupees. This intimation has created a great deal of dissatisfaction among the merchants, traders, &c. who complain that the Bank has made this change before it has been adopted in the public offices generally, and in the Union Bank, which makes up its accounts half-yearly like the Bengal Bank, on the 30th June and 31st December, but which has postponed introducing the proposed change until the 1st of May next in order to suit the convenience of its constituents.

The Bengal Bank has also declared a dividend of the rate of eleven and a half per cent. for the last half year.

MILITARY BANK.—The annual Meeting of the Military Bank, held at the Town Hall on the 28th Jan., was attended by the Directors and the Secretary alone. The abstract of accounts showed the receipts during the past year to amount to some rupees 1,40,504, which being added to the balance on 1st January 1835, some rupees 32,583, gave a total of 1,73,187. The disbursements amounted to 95,406, leaving a balance of some rupees 47,781, from which the dividend was paid for 25,890 being deducted, a balance of 21,891 was left for present dividend. It was accordingly determined to make a further dividend immediately of 34 per cent. upon the sum on which the last dividend of 10 per cent. was paid, namely, upon some rupees 5,54,900, the total amount due to the shareholders after deducting the dividend of eight times in the rupee.

COMMERCE AND SHIPPING.—The mercantile community, in order to establish a Committee of Surveyors of Shipping, to manage all business in that department on a consistent plan, invited candidates for these situations to send in their names to the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce on the 30th December, when a selection of three surveyors was made. Messrs. Stocqueler, Gordon and Macaulay were chosen from among the candidates. These gentlemen spoke before the meeting of, equality and will be restricted from deriving any emolument individually from other sources, as that which survey for ship-owners or others, the fees charged for the same are to be thrown into a fund for future stipendium.

INDIAN JAILS.—A Committee, in which the three Judges, Mr. Macaulay, Mr. Shakespeare, and six other gentlemen are members, has been formed to inquire into the state of the Indian Jails and propose an improved plan of prison discipline, the junior member, Mr. J. P. Grant, to act as Secretary.

Government has also officially called on the Magistrates to report on the state of the jails and the classification of prisoners in them.

BENGAL CLUB.—According to advertisement, a meeting of the members of the Bengal Club took place, on the 30th December, to consider the propriety of expelling Mr. Stocqueler from the Club. The Honorable Mr. Melville took the chair. About forty or fifty members attended the meeting.

Mr. Longueville Clarke proposed

"That the statement contained in an article of the Englishman newspaper of the 11th December, wherein it is alleged, that the manner in which the invitation to the Commander-in-Chief was preferred, was obviously to subserve selfish and slavish purposes, is untrue, and conveys a scandalous imputation on some of the members of the Club."

Mr. Pattle proposed as an amendment, seconded by Mr. Osborne.

"That the very reprehensible editorial article of the Englishman newspaper of the 11th December, has not disturbed the harmony and order of the Club."

A very animated discussion took place, in which Mr. Longueville Clarke, Mr. Dickens, Col. Heatson and others spoke in favor of the original motion and Mr. Pattle, Mr. Osborne, Mr. O'Hanlon and others against it. On a division, Mr. Pattle's amendment was carried. Mr. Stocqueler, when the matter had been decided, apologized to the Committee at large, and to Col. Heatson in particular, for imputing to them improper motives of action which it appeared had not guided them.

After Mr. Pattle's amendment was carried, it was proposed by Mr. Uday and seconded by Mr. Deeds "That the thanks of the meeting be voted to the Committee for having brought this matter before the Club."

About fifteen Members also met at the Club House on the 19th January to discuss some proposed new rules. The principal object of which were to restrict members from publishing remarks on matters connected with the institution, the making statements in the newspapers regarding the subjects that have taken place within the Club House—on pain of expulsion. Dr. Rankin was called to the chair, but as he declined taking it on the ground that he could not conscientiously do so over the introduction of members which he had come there to oppose, but he ultimately consented to act as Chairman on condition that he should speak and vote as he pleased. A great deal of irregular discussion took place on the first proposition, and several members rose and objected to the Chairman, who declared that the remaining propositions would thus be and not revived. The meeting then dispersed in considerable merriment at the expense of those who had suggested this calling of it.

MUNICIPAL DONATIONS.—The statement that Rajah Benwari Lal had recently presented the Committee of Public Instruction with ten thousand rupees, is incorrect; Rajah Bijoy Gopind Singh, of Furpura, the individual who contributed that sum. The following donations have been made to the Committee by natives:—Rajah Biddynaught Roy, fifty thousand; Rajah Nunsingh Chunder Roy, twenty thousand; Rajah Cally Sinker Roy, twenty thousand; Rajah Benwari Lal Roy, thirty thousand; Rajah Gooroo Prasad Roy, ten thousand; Rajah Harry Nath Roy, twenty thousand, and Rajah Babu Chandra Roy, twenty thousand.

ABOLITION OF THE MARINE BOARD, &c.—It is stated that orders will shortly be received from England to abolish the Marine Board and the Marine Pay Office, as well as the Semaphore Establishment, unless the Mercantile Community, decide on continuing the latter at their own expense; and that the notification will come out with Lord Auckland.

THE RANEE-GUNGE COLLIERY.—The Ranee-Gunge Colliery was sold by public auction by Moore, Hickey and Co. on the 3rd January, to Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, for 70,000 sicca rupees.

THE HARVEST.—The rice harvest in Bengal is nearly all brought in, and a more plentiful one has not been reaped for many years. In the counties immediately surrounding Calcutta, paddy is selling at four maunds, and cleaned rice at two maunds per rupee. Grain has not been so cheap for the last forty or fifty years.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE'S PORTRAIT.—The portrait of Sir Charles Metcalfe, painted by the East Indian painter Mr. Swaine, is now placed in the Town Hall, suspended over the first landing place of the staircase on the left on entering the building on the north side.

THE COPPER COIN.—Considerable inconvenience and loss are experienced by the poorer classes in consequence of the want of an abundant supply of the new copper coin. The shroffs have got possession of nearly all what is extant and are retailing it at fourteen annas and three pice for a Company's rupee, thus extorting one anna and three pice from the lieges, who are obliged to submit to this imposition, as they are unable to obtain the coin elsewhere, none being procurable at the Mint.

Mr. Gomes, a public spirited individual, has however entered into an arrangement with Government for supplying pice to the lieges with a view to defeat this conspiracy of the shroffs against the poor. He has obtained the sanction of Government to be supplied with five hundred rupees' worth of pice at a time from the Mint, which he proposes supplying to the public at the rate of fifteen annas and three and a half pice for the Company's rupee, deducting half a pice to defray the expense of opening shops in various places and to remunerate himself.

LIEUT. COL. KENNEDY.—Lieut. Col. William Kennedy, Military Auditor-General, died on board of the Star of India, off the Botanical Garden, on the 7th January.

NEW CALCUTTA LAUDABLE SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting of the New Calcutta Laudable Society took place on the 26th January, but was poorly attended by half a dozen persons. The accounts produced made a very satisfactory show. The fund, in hand on the 31st December, amounted to Rs. 2,77,795, which divided by 62 limited shares would yield Rs. 4,484 per share in excess of 4,000 Rs. per share already paid, or a nett excess of about 3,700 Rs. per share after striking off the percentage balance taken over as usual from the old societies. The sum actually guaranteed to the holders of limited shares under the arrangements of last year was only Rs. 6,000, so that at present the fund was more than sufficient to meet the demand of a lakh and a half, and the position of the Society is consequently most satisfactory.

EARTHQUAKE.—An earthquake was felt at Chitragutta on the 24th January. The shock lasted about a minute and a half. The movement was from north-east to south-west.

SUICIDE.—A native woman of loose character, committed suicide on the 24th January, by hanging herself by the neck. The cause which instigated her to commit the melancholy deed is unknown.

RAPE.—Another rape case, in which the parties concerned are a Mahomedan named Shaukh Bannoo and a native Christian girl named Martha, has been under the investigation of the Police, previous to being transferred to the Supreme Court.

STEAM MEETING.—The requisition to the Sheriff for another Steam Meeting has upwards of two hundred signatures, obtained in Calcutta alone. The station of Dum-Dum has added a great many signatures, and the gentlemen of the other presidencies have generally united in the requisition.

UPPER ORPHAN SCHOOL.—In consequence of the recent attacks on Mrs. Wyatt, a letter has been addressed to the Management, signed by forty-two out of forty-four of the senior wards of the school, who are capable of fully comprehending the nature of the document, expressing their entire satisfaction with the treatment they experience from that lady. Dr. Duncan Stewart has been appointed medical attendant to the institution.

NEW FLOUR MILL AND COTTON SCREWS.—Another flour mill has been opened at Cossipore, on the same principle as the mills of Messrs. Smithson and Co on the Strand. There is also a large building now being erected near Messrs. Jessop and Co's establishment in Chive Street, intended for cotton screws.

MR. ROBERTSON THE AFRONAUT.—This gentleman recently arrived from France with a balloon, and intends shortly to ascend in it for the gratification of the denizens of the City of Palaces. Subscription books are now in circulation, inviting the public to support an undertaking which involves such serious expense and risk as that contemplated. The Governor-General, it is said, has already set an example by subscribing largely.

GRAND CRICKET MATCH.—A very spirited and interesting cricket match was played on the 1st and 2nd January, on the Esplanade. Eleven Etonians against all Calcutta. The Eton men won the throw for innings—and the Calcutta men went in, and scored 133 runs, 19 byes, and 2 wide balls, total, 154. The Eton men then went in, and two of their crack wickets went down immediately without a run. Then Eton men seems bothered exclaimed a voice on the ground. The odds seemed heavily against them, but they were now on their mettle, and to it they went in right earnest, and at half past two, had scored 147 runs, 7 byes, and 3 wide balls, total 157. The Calcutta men now indulged themselves in a little refreshment, and went in for a second innings, which ended a little before sunset, they having marked 110, thus leaving the Eton men 107 to make up in their second innings. The Eton men went in again yesterday afternoon, and won the match, having 4 wickets to go down.

It was an exceedingly good match. The Calcutta men's best fielders and their two bowlers are superior; but the Eton men have here an advantage over their opponents as they have four bowlers and all excellent. The Calcutta men, moreover, possess a most admirable second stop. It must be observed that the Eton men had never played together before the match, and some had never handled a bat or thrown a cricket-ball for years. As matches with Etonians possess some a token of his admiration of her skill and she was to go to sing to his children.

FREE SCHOOL MEETING.—At a meeting of the subscribers to the Free School on the 30th January, the Reverend Mr. Wamberley, Charles Maitkenze, Esq., of the Civil Service, and James Kyd, Esq., were elected Governors of the school. Mr. W. Byrnes was also present. There was a discussion on a proposition that the Bishop and the Archdeacon should be ex-officio Governors, giving them the same power of voting as the other Governors. The proposition was opposed and on a division the numbers were equal. The Archdeacon maintained that these functionaries were ex-officio Governors and that he claimed a right of voting. As the numbers were equal, however, there is to be a special meeting to decide the point in dispute.

RETRIBUTION. JOHN PALMER.—A cast of the late Mr. John Palmer's features has been taken by Mr. R. S. Thomsen, so skillfully as to preserve with the most perfect accuracy the expression of the features—the expression is indeed marvellous in one respect, as that of serenely reclining in death, but still, even in death, retaining that placid serenity of countenance which deserved not the living in the period of his misfortunes and the evening of his days.

BENGAL, &c.

DELHI.—The late Shumshooddeen's estate and other property, are to be sold by public auction. The Patahlah and Khutal Rajahs, are expected to be the principal purchasers. The Rajah of Ulwai offered six lakhs for the sporting establishment, but Government refused the sum tendered.

Mr. Goulding, of the Customs' department, received a severe wound in the head in his attempt to secure smuggled property. Two of the offenders were captured.

The King of Delhi's Darogah has been killed by a fall from his horse.

A severe shock of earthquake was felt at Delhi on the 20th December, between the hours of ten and eleven. The effects were clearly perceptible and felt to an alarming degree by the inhabitants in the western precincts of the town.

Much disorder has prevailed in the King's Palace. The eldest son of the King having been nominated heir apparent, Mirza Saleem, the younger son, in consequence, created the dissensions supported by the Court adherents. Sooja-ul-Mulk, who arrived from Mecca on the 17th November last, has been married to the daughter of Walleahud. The King presented him with many valuable presents on the consummation of the nuptials, which so enraged Mirza Saleem, that he absented himself from Court for three days, at the expiration of which time His Majesty sent for him and ordered him to offer the customary presents to his nephew, which command he reluctantly complied with. His Majesty is completely ruled by Mirza Saleem's party, who recently made him insult Walleahud, by refusing a title, which he had promised to grant to his son-in-law Sooja-ul-Mulk.

Numerous robberies have recently taken place in Hyderabad, accompanied in four or five instances with murder. Several of the offenders have been captured.

Mr. Rayshaw, Assistant Collector of Customs, has made a considerable seizure in salt, which was concealed in wells near Bulloughbar.

Dr. B. K. Godswami, a Doctor in the service of the Government of Delhi, has been requested by his royal mistress to proceed to Allahabad to arrange matters in her name in case of the King's demise, for which service, he has been appointed honorarily, he is to receive twenty-five thousand rupees.

CHEMICAL LECTURES—Dr. O'Shaughnessy gave his first lecture on chemistry at the new Medical Institution on the 2nd January, much is expected from this gentleman's ability and science.

NEW HINDU SECT—Allusion is made by one of the correspondents of the Christian Intelligence for December, to a new sect founded by the late Baboo Jeymarayun Ghoshal, formerly of Kidderpore, latterly of Behares, where he shadowed a collage. I hear numbers are said to amount to about a hundred thousand. They are called Kurta Bahas, or worshippers of the Creator, and deny that Brahmins are gods, reject all idols, perform no shraddha or any ceremony connected with idol worship. Their creed is, that there is but one God, and that to think of him constitutes worship; that this was the way of the sages; that he pointed out. They are blamed by the neighbours for beinglothful and neglecting their duties, they never cut their hair, shave their beards, nor pare their nails, and they are abhorred and persecuted by the orthodox Hindus.

The Kurta Bhojr Sect, however, was not instituted by Joyanarun Ghosal, the real founder of the Sect appears to be Ramchurn Ghose, a Sudgopa of Ghoswari, on the opposite side of the river near Hooghly. He instituted the Sect about forty or fifty years ago, and his son still enjoys the distinction which at first belonged to his father as head of the Kurta Bhojur.

MILITARY ITEMS—Captain F. W. Birch, of the 11st N. I., has been appointed Superintendent of Police, in succession to Capt. Steel, who is about to proceed to England on account of his health.

Captain Higginson has been appointed to the charge of the Mysore Princes in succession to Major Honeywood, who is about to proceed to England.

II M & 38th embarked on the 3d Jan., from Chinnah on steamers. It was transhipped at Calcutta to other boats and proceed to Saugor, Private Hallway, about whom there is a question pending in the Supreme Court, was made over to the charge of the Brigade Major, King's troops, Fort William.

Ensign M V Abbot, of H M's 13th, was tried at Mawpore on the 4th December last, for associating and drinking with Sergeant W. Perina, Private B. Levy and the James Hack, and has been dismissed the service.

CALCUTTA TRADE ASSOCIATION.—The Calcutta Trade Association have sent out a circular, recommending the members of that body to agree to a general arrangement by which all debts due or contracted before 1st May next, when the commercial new year commences, shall be claimed in such rupees or an equivalent in Company's rupees, and from and after that date all transactions shall be done and payments received in Company's rupees. This recommendation has been adopted.

MRS ATKINSON'S CONCERTS.—Mrs. Atkinson's first concert of sacred music on the 22nd January, was very numerously attended and the performance great satisfaction. Mrs. Atkinson was in very fine voice and her brilliant execution greatly surprised and delighted the Nepalese Envoy, who with his suite attended the Concert. The General has presented Mrs. Atkinson by one of his sons forty gold-mohurs as Several thousand tea plants in a very flourishing condition, have arrived at Ghurmuctseur Ghat from the Botanical Gardens, and are intended to be planted in the hills.

The town duties of Delhi have been abolished.

The smuggling across the Jumna is said to be extensive to a very great extent in spite of the preventive establishment, which is in a great measure accounted for by the river, about twenty miles north of Delhi, being in many places not more than knee-deep. The sugar crop which nearly failed last year, is very healthy this season owing to being protected from bad seed. The grand trigonometrical establishment has commenced operations.

The weather has been extremely cold. The thermometer stood as low as 27° on the 16th January, at sunrise, when the Jumna was partly frozen over. Ice was taken from vessels, which had been exposed during the night, an inch and a quarter in thickness.

Notwithstanding this favorable weather, considerable sickness prevails among the natives in the city.

His Majesty's 13th Light Infantry, quitted Delhi for Karnaul on the 14th January.

AGRA.—The Custom Houses of Bareilly, Furruckabad, Cawnpore, Allahabad, Mirzapore, Benares and Delhi, are to be forthwith abolished. This measure is stated to arise out of an excess of treasure over expenditure to the amount of sixty lakhs which is now in the Government coffers.

Orders have been received from the Political Secretary of the Agra Government by the Magistrate of Agra, to make over Hookum Chund and Fyttee Lall to Major Alves, whenever he may demand the delivery of them to the Jeypore Dugbar. On the 8th January, accordingly, Singhee Hookum Chund and Futtay Lall, left Agra, under the escort of twenty troops of sepoy, commanded by Capt. Lloyd, 36th N. I. on their way to Rajpoot in Alwar, in order to their being tried by the Jeypore State, as accomplices in the murder of Mr. Blake, &c on the 4th June last at Jeypore.

The villagers in the neighbourhood of Pulwut, recently represented to Mr Charles Gubbins that the zemindars endeavoured to extort black mail from them that gentleman instantly issued orders to restrain the zemindars from their lawless proceedings.

Major Sutberland, Resident at Gwalior, has subscribed one thousand rupees to the Metcalfe testimonial.

The manufacture of Desse salt in the districts of Agra and Muttra, on the left bank of the Jumna, has been prohibited for the ensuing and future seasons unless the zemindars guarantee the payment of the salt duty of one rupee per maund on the actual produce of the several villages. The salt manufacture on the right bank of the Jumna has not been interfered with.

A man assuming the character of a sepoy in his undress, purchased twenty-five rupees' worth of chintz at Dyttya, in the name of Capt. Sleeman, then on his way to the Hills, and paid for it with plated copper rupees. The same man, with the assistance of a companion, purchased goods at every considerable town that Capt. Sleeman afterwards passed through on his way to Agra in the name of that gentleman, and paid for them with the same base coin. Capt. Sleeman was informed of the fraud at Dhaulpore, and had the town searched, but found that the man had departed after getting rid of their base coin. Search was also made for the rogues at Agra but without success.

Mr G. Blunt has been directed to receive charge of the office of the Collector of Customs from Mr. Laing, the latter officer's salary being devoted to reduction. This will effect a saving of about 25,000 Rs. per annum, as the present salary of Mr. Laing is nearly 50,000 Rs. and the reduced allowances are not expected to exceed 24,000 Rs.

A woman recently committed suicide in the Naik Mundee, in consequence of her husband having deserted her.

The quantity of ice made during the past season already exceeds the amount made last year, being about 6,000 maunds.

AGRA AND ALLAHABAD COLLEGES.—Mr. W. M. Woollaston has been appointed to the head mastership of the College at Agra, and a Mr. Lewis to that of the College at Allahabad, vacant by Mr. Cooke's resignation.

ALLAHABAD.—TESTIMONY TO MR. COLVIN.—The brethren of Lodge Independence with Philanthropy have resolved on erecting a building near the Fort as a testimonial of their esteem for their last Master Mr Colvin.

The Bara Bae, with a large retinue, reached this station on the morning of the 11th January. She had encamped in the Lopee Bang, and was to proceed in a few days to Benares.

A great number of huts were burnt down on the 13th January, and property to a considerable amount destroyed.

CHUNAR.—A tiger recently strayed from the hills and killed four natives at this station.

FURRUCKABAD.—Orders have been received for the abolition of the Custom House in this place. The town duties only remain.

IOODEANAH.—Mr. Lowrie, the American missionary, has arrived at this station, where he has been joined by two of his country men, who contemplate a religious campaign against the Sheiks.

HANSI.—Sickness is on the decline in Hansi, and it is expected that, provided the ensuing season prove congenial, the station will be re-occupied.

The latest accounts mention, that the inhabitants were not then suffering from illness, which has been so prevalent during the greatest part of the past year.

MURRAYVA.—Great distress is experienced in this district from the scarcity of water. Supplies are obliged to be fetched from the distance of ten coss for the use of Mr. Metcalfe's camp.

A serious affray occurred recently at Mahim, a considerable village in the Hurrana line, between a body of the revenue officers under Mr Gawtkin, consisting of fifty men, and a gang of one thousand smugglers, who had determined to carry their goods across the line by force of arms. Two of the smugglers were slain, and the Daroga and two chuprassees of the Government wounded, on the occasion. The Collector of Customs has since ordered an additional number of men to be attached to Mr. Gawtkin's establishment.

MZERUT.—An earthquake was felt at this station on the 20th December. The shocks were sharp and distinct, and the direction of motion from north to south.

In consequence of a misunderstanding at a ball, a hostile meeting took place at this station recently, between an officer in the Camerons and an officer of H. M.'s 11th Dragoons. The affair terminated without injury to either party.

THE BOMBAY DAK.—The arrangements for accelerating the Bombay dak, have been completed and took effect from the 1st January. The acceleration has not taken place upon the entire road, but only extends to Sehore, a distance of three hundred miles from Agra. The speed contracted for is five miles per hour in the dry weather, and four in the wet.

STOB KERAMAT SIKH.—Synd Keramat Ally, the lively and intelligent companion of Conolly's journey overland from Tehran to India, has been appointed to a Judicial office, under the Superintendent of Ajmere, corresponding to the Sudder Amership of the Provinces.

CUSTOM CHOWKEE.—Mr. S. Bowring, the Deputy Governor at Rangoon, who has been appointed to arrange the new law of Customs Chowkees from Etawah to Allahabad, has taken advantage of the patronage which this affords to give service to some of the students of the Agra College.

HINDU RAO.—It is stated that Hindu Rao has recently received from the Gwalior Government one lakh and twenty thousand rupees—his pension for one year.

FUTTEHPUR SEKURFE.—Intermittent fever is raging to an awful degree among the inhabitants of this place: within the last three months one thousand one hundred individuals are said to have fallen victims to the distemper, out of a population of about fifteen thousand.

CHANDERNAGORE.—It is stated that the venerable Governor of Chandernagore, Monsieur Corder, is about to retire from the Government of that settlement.

An attempt was recently made to smuggle salt from Chandernagore. The farmer, or some purchaser from him, prepared a despatch of 4,000 maunds to be conveyed in the night by water to Hooghly. This was intimated to the Magistrate, and that functionary prepared a body of burkundazs to pounce upon the party. The smugglers were apprized of this in time, and reconveyed the salt to their depot. The salt has been put under arrest and a question, on which there are very opposite opinions, has arisen—whether salt once exported ought not to be considered as an interloper on its return, and excluded from the privilege of the farm.

The salt farmer is said to have still on hand eleven thousand maunds of last season's salt, which will be enough to supply the denizens of Chandernagore for the next four years at least.

NATIVE STATES.

BHITRONI.—The Rajah has returned from Deig whither he had gone to espouse another wife, the first proving unfruitful.

A Christian merchant of Calcutta recently imported into this state a small investment consisting chiefly of shades, looking-glasses, &c. &c. of which the Rajah alone purchased ten thousand rupees' worth.

UMRISUR.—The Sheik Rajah, in the hope of encouraging the Shawl manufacture of this town, has quadrupled the import duties on Cashmere and Ludak wool for foreigners.

JULALABAD.—Dost Mahomed has moved a considerable force, commanded by his second son, on this town with a view to invade the Sheik territories on the expected demise of Runjeet Singh. He has also directed his eldest son to collect and organize new troops with all possible speed and to join his brother.

LAHORE.—Cholera is making fearful havoc among the people in Lahore, about a hundred individuals daily falling victims to this baneful pestilence. The richer class of inhabitants have fled across the Hydrotas to escape the plague.

The latest accounts from Lahore state that Runjeet Singh was again very ill, and that Khatwar Shere Singh had arrived from Cashmere in expectation of his father's death, when, it is generally believed, he will contest his brothers' title to the throne.

Maharaja Runjeet Singh has so far recovered, as to be enabled to inspect his Cavalry with whose efficiency he expressed himself much pleased. The Maharaja has forwarded a communication to Mian Singh of Cashmere, requesting him, either to resign the Agency of that country or pay an annual sum of twenty-seven lakhs.

GOOMSUR.—Intelligence has been received from Goomsur up to the 6th December. General Taylor had arrived at Camp on the 28th November. The Goomsur Rajah had given orders to all the villagers to abandon their houses and take to the jungle, on pain of his displeasure. The greater part of them had obeyed, but some remained to collect the harvest, though the grain will be earned into the jungle also until some settlement of the country is made. Several prisoners have been captured, and a great many of the enemy have been put hors de combat and are so scared that they are seldom to be fallen in with. The total loss on our part is twenty men killed and wounded, but the fever has made fearful havoc among the men, and some of the officers have been obliged to quit camp from its effects.

Mr. Russel arrived at Goomsur on the 11th January, and has been diligently employed ever since, but matters were somewhat suspended as it was reported the Rajah was dead. The Louise arrived at Goomsur with reinforcements on the 4th January, and two six pounders from Vizagapatam had arrived in camp.

ELZSCHPOOR.—Among the sepoys employed to coerce the people of the state, some professors of thuggery have been detected practising their atrocious trade. They have been made over to Captain Sleeman to be dealt with according to law.

CABUL.—By the last accounts received from Cabul it appears that Dost Mahomed's sons were both encamped near Jullalabad, within a march of each other, awaiting instructions to attack Peshawur, and that they had been joined by numbers of the Muttiah Putans, and several other Mahomedan Chiefs. Dost Mahomed Khan had left Cabul to join his sons. He has been fortunate enough to recover jewels to the amount of several lakhs of rupees from banditti, who were afraid to dispose of them in the market, and has appropriated the money accruing from the sale of them to the expenses of the expedition against Peshawur. The Khan has dismissed the greatest part of the Afghan soldiery in his employ and has substituted the Kuzul Bash for them, who now constitute the main force of his army. Twenty thousand of these soldiers had been sent to Jullalabad, ten thousand of whom had succeeded in surprising the Nazim of Peshawur (who was on his way to invest Bysool, which place had been taken by the Khan's troops) at the gates of Peshawur and forced him to retire into it with the loss of many of his followers.

Nawab Abdoolah Khan has been released from his prison in Cabul by Dost Mahomed, on paying the sum of two lakhs of rupees.

CWATTO.—It is stated that Hurree Holkur has deputed his vakeel, Gunput Rao, to Calcutta, with a thousand followers, for the purpose of petitioning the Supreme Government.

PESHAWUR.—Upwards of one hundred desperate characters have been apprehended at Peshawur and hanged haphazardly on the adjacent trees, by order of the Hakem, as a warning to the others engaged in notorious practices.

The Burreckruze zemindars of Mozufferabad, revolted from the authority of the Nazim of the province, and refused to pay the stipulated revenue, vowing vengeance on the Shikhs, whom they murdered whenever opportunity occurred. The Nazim being greatly troubled by the proceedings of the Burruckness, issued orders to Sirdar Hoor Sing to coerce them. The Sirdar accordingly proceeded against the hordes of the Pattans with ten mounted troops and a few guns, and invaded the village of Tippera, where these marauders had taken up their station. An engagement commenced between the Sirdar's troops and the Pattans, by the former opening fire from their cannons on the latter; but the contest soon became a hand-to-hand combat with swords, in which the Sheiks ultimately triumphed, leaving upwards of two hundred of their adversaries defunct on the field—the remainder having fled to the mountains for refuge. About eighty Pattan robbers were also subsequently captured, out of a gang which attempted to rob the Sheik's cantonments, and shot to death.

CASHMERE.—Mr. Vigne, by the last accounts, had re-entered the valley of Cashmere where he intends to remain sometime, adding to the treasures of his valuable portfolio.

JEYPORE.—The Jeypore Ranees has expressed her distrust to the Rawul at the recent proceedings at Joudpore, and advised that a messenger should be dispatched there, in order to obtain an authenticated account of them.

Lieutenant-Colonel Alves, it is said, is now perfectly satisfied that Jotaran was the instigator of the recent tragical events in Jeypore; but the natives generally believe that Luchmun Sing, the Rawul's son, is the guilty party.

SHEKAWATTEE.—It is stated that the troops are to be removed from Shekawatee immediately, and that the two forts will be restored to the Ranees of Seekur. It is also reported that Captain Forbes, of Shekawatee Kuzzaks, now at Jhoonjoo, will be retained on the present footing, to insure the peace of the country after the Company's troops have quitted it.

MADRAS.

SUPERSTITION.—Some of the Thodurs of the Blue Mountains have been recently tried at Coimbatore, for having massacred fifty or sixty of the Koorinar caste, about a year ago, on a pretence of their having caused a mortality among the buffaloes.

ANOTHER CONSCIENTIOUS RESTITUTION.—Another conscientious restitution of ten thousand rupees, has been anonymously made to Government.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.—The John William Dare, which had for a long time been conceived a missing ship, returned to Madras from Moulmein on the 2nd January.

ARCHDEACON ROBINSON.—There was a meeting of subscribers for the tribute to the venerable Archdeacon Robinson on the 30th December. The Provisional Committee reported that the subscriptions amounted to 3,300 rupees, one-fourth of which was contributed by the Clergymen of the Archdeaconry.

SIR ROBERT COMYN, KT.—On the 31st December, before a special court convened for the purpose, the Hon'ble Sir Robert Comyn, Kt., was sworn into office as Chief Judge of the Supreme Court at Madras, in succession to the Hon'ble Sir Ralph Palmer, Kt., resigned.

COLONEL HANSON. has returned to Madras from Australia, and resumed the office of Quarter-Master-General.

RESIDENT OF TRAVANCORE.—The supersession of Mr. Casamajor has been finally determined in favor of Col. S. Fraser, who has been appointed Resident of Travancore on the retirement of that gentleman.

CHANGE OF EDITOR.—It is stated that the gentleman who sometime since edited the Madras Times, and recently labored in the Standard of which paper he is still editor, has assumed the editorial management of the Conservative also.

THE MUNRO STATUE.—The Committee of Management of the Munro Statue at Madras, have written to the Home Committee expressive of their surprise at Mr. Chantry's delay in executing the statue.

THE ARCHDEACONRY.—The Bishop has appointed the Rev. Henry Harper to the Archdeaconry of Madras, vacated by the resignation of Archdeacon Robinson, who has embarked for England.

GUNTOOR SEALING-WAX.—The Madras Times of 9th January, intimates that sealing-wax, as good as the best Dutch or English kinds, is manufactured in Guntour, and sold at from eight annas to one rupee per pound.

SIR JOHN GORE.—His Majesty the King has sent to Vice-Admiral Sir John Gore, the insignia of military order of the Guelph, as a proof of the regard His Majesty entertains for him, accompanied by an autograph note of condolence on the loss of his son. The Lords of the Admiralty, also, have been pleased to signify their approval of Sir John's proceedings in the duties of his late command in the East Indies.

PORTO NOVO IRON WORKS.—The Porto Novo Iron Works are proceeding with much activity. Some of the articles manufactured at the Works are said to be equal to any produced in England.

BANGALORE COURT-MARTIAL.—The court-martial which has been sitting at Bangalore on Soobroyah, late a writer in the Commissariat Department, has been dissolved, the number of members sick having reduced the court below the legal number; and another court-martial has been ordered, of which Col. L. Wahab of the 52d Regiment, is to be President, and Lieutenant-Colonel Alves one of the members.

BOMBAY.

SLAVE DEALING.—His M.'s brig Thetis, has brought sixty-five slaves from Porebunder, to which port the unfortunate people were conveyed in an Arab vessel from Maculla, from which place they were exported in consequence of a famine. The speculation, however, failed; for the Rana of Porebunder being under stipulations, similar to those entered into with the Imam of Muscat, to put a stop to slave dealing, gave up the above mentioned individuals to the British authorities.

THE HUGH LINDSAY.—The following intelligence respecting of Hugh Lindsay appears in the Bombay Gazette of the 6th January.

"By the brig Two Brothers from Maculla the 1st December, which arrived here on the 3rd Jan. we learn that the Hugh Lindsay, had reached the parallel of that port in nine days and two hours from the time of leaving Bombay, thus performing, it is said, the best voyage she had ever made. As it was late when they neared the land, they did not anchor until the following morning. All the fuel was expected to be on board by the evening of the 22d November, when they were to start for Judda, touching at Mocha. All the passengers were well."

PIRACY.—A buttella, commanded by a native, which left Bombay for Jumboosur on the 10th January, was attacked the same night at no great distance from the Light House by armed pirates, about ten in number. Some of the crew of the buttella threw themselves overboard, but a few of them, including the merchant to whom the greater part of the boat's cargo belonged, were wounded by the pirates, who carried away the whole of the property on board, amounting in value to upwards of 1,000 rupees. The corsairs escaped with impunity and remain undiscovered.

MALACCA.

MR. DE WIND'S ASSAILANTS.—Count Von Ranzew, his son and ayce, were found guilty at the recent criminal sessions, the first as principal and the two latter as aiders and abettors in the assault committed on Mr. De Wind,—and sentenced, the Count to one year's imprisonment, the syce to six months' confinement, and the son to a slight corporal punishment.

JAVA.

A letter from Batavia, of the 17th November, mentions that the Government, who are the principal holders of sugar and coffee in Java, have decided to have no more public sales of those articles, but to ship their coffee and sugar to Holland through the factory. Also that it was said, that an import duty of 75 per cent. was to be levied on foreign manufactures imported in Java, more particularly on cottons and woollens. •

SIAM.

Advices from Bangkok up to the 25th November, state that the Siamese Government were under considerable perplexity as to the course they should adopt towards Cochinchina. They are evidently afraid of the Cochinchinese, but the Siamese ruler cannot tolerate the idea of quietly bearing the defeats he has recently sustained.

A Siamese junk bound from Bangkok to China in June or July last, fell in with a boat, with a crew of twenty-nine men and pulling twenty-seven oars, at the entrance of the Gulph of Siam. The people in the boat enquired if they could have a passage to China, said they had twenty-five chests of opium, eight cetties of camphor barus, and one or two piculs birds' nests in the boat, and proposed to give two chests of opium to the crew, and divide the remainder of their property with the commander of the junk as the price of their passage. The terms were accepted, and the crew before quitting the boat set fire to and destroyed her. The boat is said to have been from Singapore.

PENANG.

PIRACY.—The pirates who infest the neighbourhood of the Straights and Penang, are becoming bolder as they find the impotency of the local Government to coerce them for their depredations. Four or five fast pulling boats, armed and well manned with these sanguinary and merciless corsairs, have recently been prowling about the passage between Penang and the main land, and kidnapping the passengers from small boats passing to and from Province Wellesley, the neighbouring islands and the different fishing towns of the island, many of whom have been taken away and, it is supposed, sold into slavery. Several Chinese fishermen have also been captured and taken away from the fishing stakes, and numbers have in consequence abandoned their occupation. It is reported that the pirates were rendezvousing in a small bay on the west side of the island of Teluk Coomba, and that they might have been extirpated by a small land and sea force, but nothing was attempted to effect this desideratum, as the Government seems to be unable, from the want of power "to disburse one farthing", to adopt any effectual measure for their suppression, without permission from Bengal.

The depredations of the pirates having been brought to the notice of the Admiral, his Excellency dispatched the boats of the Winchester in quest of them, and two prizes were shortly after captured and sent in. One of these boats, as her crew stated, turned out on trial to be the inoffensive bearer of an answer to a letter that she had brought to the settlement from the Rajah of Ligore. The other boat's crew have been remanded to prison under very suspicious circumstances.

THE NAVAL COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Naval Commander-in-Chief and family, were to leave Penang on H. M.'s ship Winchester for Ceylon on the 20th December.

CAPT. LOW.—The designation of Capt. Low, has been changed by the Governor-General of India in Council from Assistant-Resident to Principal Assistant, Province Wellesley, in order to insure the continuance of that officer, when he may be promoted, in his situation, which (by the present Regulations regarding Military officers holding civil appointments) he could not do with his old designation.

SINGAPORE.

SIR E. GAMBIER.—Sir Edward and Lady Gambier and Mr. Keer, Registrar of the Court of Judicature, arrived at Singapore on the 5th Dec.

ROBBERY.—A robbery took place on board the brig Ann, a day or two before her departure for Halifax. The robbers dropped quietly under the stern of the brig in a boat and entered the cabin by one of the stern windows, from whence they succeeded in carrying off the Captain's writing-desk, containing the ship's papers and accounts, with ten dollars. The mate imagining he heard a noise on deck, got up and on looking over the stern saw a person half into the windows; thinking he was going in, he stepped aside to get a piece of iron that was at hand to throw at him, but the noise he made in doing so scared away the thieves, three in number, who pulled away towards New Harbour with a rapidity which rendered pursuit useless.

CHINA.

FIRE AT CANTON.—A destructive fire broke out in Canton on the 22nd and raged with unabated fury until the evening of the 23d November, when it was partially suppressed. At one time it was expected that the wind would have driven the flames towards the British factories, and the crews of the vessels in the harbour were kept in readiness in consequence to remove the property on the approach of the fire, but it was fortunately quenched before it made its way beyond the walls.

Canton papers to the 15th December, give very favorable accounts of the opium market. Patna is quoted at from Spanish dollars 760 to Spanish dollars 790, and Benares at 720, at which rates some of the importations per Water Witch had gone off.

Captain Länders of the Forth fell in with a rock in the China Seas, seen twenty years ago, which Captain Ross afterwards in vain searched for, and ascertained its position to be lat. 8° 47', long. 110° 19' East; twenty-two leagues east of Hulo Sopato, and in the track of ships going down the China Seas in the north-east monsoon. The rock is not larger than a long-boat keel up, and probably only visible in a heavy sea.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kuhn's Monthly Price Current, January 31, 1836.)

The pressure of shipments of Indigo and Silk, and the unusual scarcity of arrivals from England during the last quarter, have so far reduced the quantity of available tonnage as to have occasioned an extraordinary increase in our rates of freight. This precarious state of things have strongly affected our market, in regard to the activity which prevails usually at this season, and with exception of shipments of Indigo,

Opium, Silk and Silk Piece Goods, the general transactions have been during the whole month of an uncommonly limited scale. Dead weight is not obtainable, for Indigo and Silk to London £2. 11 s 12 per Ton are asked. The rates of the day may be considered nominal, as the scarcity of available tonnage subjects the scale to modification. The limited transactions we have to report in the general Bengal staples, are with exception of Indigo and Silk chiefly for the French and American markets. 13 vessels are at present loading for these two countries, while there are only 4 upon the list for England.

INDIGO.—The importation of produce up to this day is reported at Rs. 191,645 against Rs. 59,570 for a corresponding period last year, showing an increase this year of 1,775 mounds; 10,000 mounds are still expected to arrive should this quantity not be exceeded, the crop of this season would fall shorter than was anticipated 3 or 4 months ago, and be under the average of the last 10 years, which we reported in one of our previous numbers, to be 1,18,550 mounds.—The uninterrupted very dry weather, which followed immediately the cessation of the rains, may have influenced in some degree this reduction in the produce.

We have had five more public sales at Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co's. New Indigo Mart, whose reports we copy.

6th Sale, 6th January.—Considerable private sales have been effected during the last eight days, and a public sale held at the New Mart of 270 chests of Indigo, went off with great animation at prices fully higher than any obtained this season, ranging close on those of last year for similar qualities.

The Market, therefore, may now be considered as opened: buyers of all classes having bid freely for the French, American, and English Markets and the Gulf, notwithstanding the reported gloomy accounts of the home prices, brought out by the Oriental from Bordeaux up to the 4th September.—About the time that vessel sailed, accounts of this season's crop had arrived in Europe, leading parties to expect at least 1,25,000 to 1,30,000 mounds;—under that impression it is not to be wondered that prices should be unsteady, if not flat; yet in a London Price Current, dated 21st August, it is stated that "Importers accept buying in prices of late sales, except for picked parcels for which advance of 8d paid, good business is bought in lots of last sale, at Auction, 10 chests of Manila west 2s. 11d. to 4s. 3d. per lb."

7th Sale, 11th January.—311 chests of Indigo were put up for public sale this day, the whole of which went off freely at prices equal to any obtained this season.

There was great competition amongst the buyers for the French, American and English Markets, all parties being evidently resolved to purchase at the rates of the day.

8th Sale, 18th January.—379 chests, the whole of which went off with great spirit, prices ranging fully ten or fifteen rupees higher than sales of last month.

There is evidently a brisk demand, particularly for the French Market, whilst sellers hold firmly under the belief that the crop will not exceed 1,10,000 mounds.

The 9th Sale, 19th January, has gone off much the same as the last, the biddings for all but a fine mark J A 8 were animated and general.

The 10th Sale took place on the 26th January. Very extensive purchases have been made by private contract at an advance on former prices, and the sale at the Mart fully maintained the advance; the lower qualities selling much higher in proportion than the finer descriptions of Indigo. The principal purchases were made for the French and English Markets.

There was also a public sale held by Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall and Co. at the Exchange, of about 200 chests, and another is advertised by Messrs. Jenkins, Low and Co. of about 150 chests on account of the estate of Messrs. Crutchen, Mackillop and Co.

Foreign agents, and particularly the French, who had held back during the last month have come forward and purchased freely, the market may therefore now be considered as established, and continues in a very animated state. Prices range now 10 to 15 Rs. per mound higher than at the same time last year. One well known mark, I. A. 8. 134 chests were bought in at 160 Rs. per mound at the public sale held at the Exchange, and Rs. 165 per mound has been refused for 250 chests out of 267 of whole cakes of a favourite Kishnagar mark.

The well known mark J D and C has been sold at 150 and the H and M at 155. The quantity remaining in the market is small.

Shipments to a considerable extent have been made through the Honourable Company on account of Planters, under advances for bills on London at the exchange of 2s. 3d. per Rupee, by way of remittances.

OPPIUM.—Notwithstanding the very large quantity brought forward at the first public sale this season on the 6th instant, considerable animation prevailed and the biddings were brisk, 150 lots were run off consecutively to one buyer at the price of Company's Rupees 1255 per chest, and more than one of the principal houses connected with China, bought upwards of 1000 chests. The quantity and extent of shipments which followed immediately this public sale was never witnessed before in Calcutta; about 4,200 chests were cleared for China, at the Custom-house, on the 6th, 8th, 9th and 11th instant, and the total number of chests shipped for China during this month amount to 4444 chests.

The following are the particulars of the above mentioned public sale.

	highest Compy. Rs.	lowest Compy. Rs.	average Compy. Rs.
Behar, chs 4500	1290	1165	1255 9 1
Benares, „ 2000	1210	1215	1222 12 2

The supposed quantity of the present crop to be sold at Calcutta this season is 15,800 chests of which 6,500 were disposed of at the first sale.

RAW SILK AND SILK PIECE GOODS.—Shipments to London of Raw Silk by private Agency have been upon a very limited scale during the last four months, scarcely above 1000 mounds. The importation from the Interior by the Honourable Company, being since 1st May 1835 only 2894 mounds, of which 1340 mounds were shipped in December last, the total exports of this article for England will fall considerably short of the former years. This circumstance may affect the prices in England. Shipments to Bombay have been on the contrary rather heavy. The November band is now arriving in the market, but inferior to last year's produce.

In Silk Piece Goods we have to report a greater activity, the Americans having purchased freely and shipments to England having been also during this month on a rather extensive scale. The fabrics continue in active operation, and prices are well supported.

COTTON.—The unfavourable accounts received from China, and the scarcity of available Tonnage for England have greatly affected the prices of the several descriptions.

SALTPETRE.—Operations in the purchases of this product have been very limited, owing to the scarcity of Freights.

SUGAR.—27,083 bags were shipped during this month, of which 1437 are destined to the home markets.

LAC.—The demand for products of this classification continues limited, and prices experienced no alteration.

RICE.—The crop having been extraordinarily abundant in all quarters of our neighbourhood, and the scarcity of Tonnage for England and the Mauritius so uncommonly sensible, the transactions have been during the whole month of a proportional limited scale, and prices of all descriptions are greatly on the decline.

WHEAT.—Shipments have been confined to New South Wales, and sales very limited; prices are, however, well supported.

HIDES.—The scarcity of Tonnage in the Port has particularly affected the demand for Hides, and our market may be reported in regard to this product, without any alteration.

LINSEED.—The market continues as represented in our last, and not a single sale has come to our notice.

GINGER.—Has continued in steady demand, and prices have experienced a further increase.

METALS.—The Copper market continues depressed notwithstanding the very reduced importation. A sale of 4500 mounds Privian Shah, at an increase of 1 Rupee per mound of our last month's quotation, is the only transaction of importance we have to report. Although there is not much business doing in Iron, the market is firm and prices steady. Spelter has advanced a few annas, purchases are confined to local wants. No transaction of importance has transpired in Lead. Quicksilver continues to be wanted, and has further increased in price. The market in regard to the articles under this head appears to want firmness in respect to price.

TWIST.—A supply of about 400 bales is reported per Montrose from Liverpool. We mentioned in our last number, prices of the assortments well supported, but since the market has receded.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.—The market although not unfavourably disposed, is at present rather inactive, arising from the absence of orders from the Interior and from neighbouring ports.

WOOLLENS.—Very few sales applicable to this division appears on the returns for the current month.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

[FROM THE BENGAL HURKARU.]

The subject of the Municipal Government of the City of Calcutta, the nature and extent of its proper local funds, and their disputed sufficiency for the purposes for which they were established, have often been discussed; sometimes with reference to the circular letters of the Chief Magistrate, calling upon the inhabitants to take part in the management of their own affairs; sometimes in noticing the proceedings of the Court of Quarter Sessions.

These discussions have, however, led to no practical result, partly from want of co-operation on the part of the public, arising perhaps from deficiency of information on the subject; partly from the disinclination of individuals to devote time to a subject which, although interesting and important to all, affects none so directly as to induce them to take much pains, where the result of their trouble is not, in their opinion, likely to be successful.

We willingly respond to the call which has been made upon us, the subject being perhaps more familiar to us, than to most of the inhabitants of Calcutta, as we have for some years given it much of our attention, and have frequently discussed it in these columns.

We submit the subjoined abstract, exhibiting the constitution and duties of the Court of Quarter Session, and the amount and application of the various municipal funds, to which we have added Tables of the income and expenditure of the Assessment for 1832-33, and 1833-4.

We have annexed an extract from the Hurkaru of 1833 which gives some particulars of a discussion on the subjects above noticed at the Town Hall on the 1st November of that year.

We trust all interested in the subject (and who is not?) will support by their signature, a petition to Government on the subject, praying that all Local Municipal Funds, may be placed at the disposal of the inhabitants of Calcutta, to be administered either through a reformed Court of Quarter Session or by Commissioners elected by the inhabitants. Such a petition we will engage to prepare with aid of "Counsel, learned in the law" if a sufficient number of inhabitants express their wishes to that effect. We are confident such a petition, supported as we hope and expect it would be by the Bench, could not fail of success.

The other branch of the subject, the revival of the Court of Quarter Sessions, as an efficient legal tribunal, for hearing appeals from Police Magistrates and trying cases of misdemeanour, we should be disposed to treat as a secondary matter—one, too, on which there is much difference of opinion and which might be safely left to the Chief Justice and the Legislative Council; but on the question of the local funds and their administration there can be but one opinion on the part of the tax-payers, who ought with might and main to strive with the tax-receivers until the point be conceded to them, which it will not be, without much entreaty—if at all.

THE COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

The Court of Quarter Sessions is known to the people of Calcutta, only through the medium of an advertisement in the newspapers, which appears quarterly in the following form:—

"Notice is hereby given that a General and Quarter Sessions of the Peace will be holden by His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the town of Calcutta and Factory of Fort William in Bengal, and the places subordinate thereto, at the Office of the said Justices, in the said Town of Calcutta, on Wednesday, the — day of — instant, at the hour of 12 o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, for the purposes of the Assessment.

Clerk of the Peace.

Clerk of the Peace Office, the — day of — 183 —.

The Court meets nobody knows where, and few understand why. Some indeed have asserted that there is no such Court—that it never assembles, and if it does, that it is only as a matter of form, and has no business to transact and no authority to enforce its decrees. In all or most of these respects they are wrong—the last line of the advertisement shews why it meets, and its place of meeting is stated, though where the office of the Justices is, may not be clearly understood;—sometimes it is at the Town Hall—sometimes at the Police. The Court certainly has no building of its own, nor any particular place permanently assigned for that purpose. It does assemble quarterly, however, and not only has important business to transact, if its duties were understood, but has full authority by Act of Parliament to perform that business and to enforce its decrees.

As so much ignorance appears to prevail as to the constitution, nay the very existence of this Court, without the assembly of which no Assessment whatever can be levied on Houses in Calcutta, we shall offer a brief history of the establishment and subsequent recognition of this Court, from the act establishing it in 1753, to the latest act affecting it, the 9th Geo. IV., commonly called the Indian Criminal Act.

This explanation is the more necessary, as it is desirable in the first instance, to shew the powers and constitution of the only Municipal Tribunal we possess, and by virtue of whose decrees, the principal of our Town Duties—the House Assessment—is levied.

The Calcutta Courts of Quarter Sessions and Requests were established so far back as the reign of Geo. II., by Charter, dated 8th January, 1753, which also established a Corporation, consisting of a Mayor and nine Aldermen, and made the Mayor's Court of Quarter Sessions a Court of Record.

By the Act of the 13th Geo. III., which established a Supreme Court at Calcutta, so much of the preceding Charter as made the Mayor's Court a Court of Record, was abrogated, and the Justices ceased to be Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer: but nothing further.

By another Charter of 14th Geo. III., dated 26th March, 1774, the Court of Quarter Sessions and Court of Requests were especially made subject to the Supreme Court.

By the 33d Geo. III. the Governor-General in Council, by Commissions issued under the seal of the Supreme Court, had power to nominate as many covenanted servants of the Company or other British inhabitants, as they may think qualified to act as Justices of the Peace—the Governor-General, Members of Council, and Judges being at the time and previously, the only Justices of the Peace.

The Criminal Act (9th Geo. IV.) also recognizes the Court of General Quarter Sessions; it likewise directs certain cases to be referred to it for adjudication by the Police Magistrates, and a right of appeal to it in all cases of summary conviction, under this act or otherwise.

Sir Edward Ryan, in his charge to the Grand Jury on the occasion of the introduction here of the new Criminal Act, commented on this subject. He showed that General Quarter Sessions established under the Acts which preceded the constitution of the Supreme Court could still be legally held, and that they were absolutely necessary for carrying into effect the provisions of that Act.

We subjoin the Chief Justice's remarks, as they are quite decisive on these subjects.

"I am fully aware that it has not of late years been usual to hold any Court of General or Quarter Sessions, except for the purposes of making assessments on the owners or occupiers of houses, according to the provisions of the 33d Geo. 3. s. 2. s. 153. I find, however, from the minute book of the Sessions, that Courts of this description have been held by the Governor-General and Members of Council; and that Grand Juries have been summoned and charged by the Chairman to enquire, though no persons appear to have been tried. I can have no doubt of the power of the Governor-General and Council to hold a Court of Quarter Sessions. The Charter of 1753, expressly empowers the Governor or President of Fort William and the Council, for the time being, or any three or more of them, to hold a Quarter Sessions of the Peace, four times in the year, and they are authorised to do all acts that Justices of the Peace in England may, under a Commission from the Crown. By section 36 of the Letters Patent of 1774, the power given to the Governor and Council under this clause to act as Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer was, and is, repealed; but their jurisdiction as a Court of Quarter Sessions is expressly recognised by the 21st section.

"The 38th sec. of the 13th Geo. 3. 63, also expressly enacts that the Governor-General and Council are to have authority to act as Justices of the Peace, and to do all matters and things which appertain to that office, and are empowered to hold Quarter Sessions within the settlement of Fort William four times in every year, and the same shall be at all times a Court of Record.

"I know that it has been considered a question of some doubt and difficulty, whether any of the Statutes enable Justices of the Peace under Commissions from this Court to hold a Court of Quarter Sessions, for any other purpose than those of making an assessment. I will not now enter into the difficulties to which the various Statutes relating to this subject give rise.

"I can only say that whatever may be the inconvenience (which I should have thought would have been present to those who assisted in the framing of this Act) it will be absolutely necessary that a Court of General or Quarter Sessions should be held, in order that the decisions of this Statute may be complied with. This necessity is the more apparent from the provisions of the 48th and 49th sections.

"The 48th section provides that in all cases (not limited to conviction under this Act) where the sum adjudged to be paid on any summary conviction shall exceed Fifty Sicca Rupees; or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one calendar month; or conviction shall take place before one Justice only; any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such conviction, may appeal to the next Court of General Quarter Sessions. The clause goes on to direct the notices, &c. which the party appealing shall give, and provides for his discharge, if in prison under the conviction, on his giving surties, to try the appeal. The Court at such Sessions is to hear and determine the matter of the appeal.

"The 49th section provides that no such conviction or adjudication made on appeal therefrom shall be quashed, for want of form, or removed by certiorari, or otherwise, into any of His Majesty's Superior Courts of Record.

If the two sections to which I have just referred, are to be construed as applying only to convictions under this statute, there can be no doubt that a Court of Quarter Sessions should be regularly held, the necessity for which would be still more apparent if these sections are to be taken according to their literal meaning, without reference to the other clauses of the Act which precede them. Whichever may be considered the right construction to be put on these sections, it is clear that the Charter under which we act, expressly recognizes the Court of Quarter Sessions as instituted under the proceedings by writs of mandamus, certiorari, &c. If therefore any party felt himself aggrieved by a summary conviction under this Act, against which owing to no Court of Quarter Sessions being held, he was unable (though entitled) to appeal, he would have a right to institute proceedings in this Court to compel the Court of Quarter Sessions to assemble and hear, and determine his appeal.

The legality of assembling the Court of Quarter Sessions being thus established, the question arises—What its duties, judicial and municipal, are, and ought to be?

There is no doubt but that such a tribunal ought, by law, to sit and try commitments for misdemeanours, &c.; to hear appeals from sentences passed by the Police Magistrates; to regulate the Assessments; and either directly, or by means of Officers specially appointed for that purpose, to superintend and control the appropriation of all local and municipal funds. With such powers and a due admixture of unpaid Members, the Court of Quarter Sessions would be a respected constitutional authority, influential for such and many other useful purposes.

The revival of the Court of Quarter Sessions, not merely as a matter of form necessary to legalize the Assessment, but as an open, efficient, and constitutional tribunal, is an object greatly to be desired; and as we have the authority of a Judge of the Supreme Court for asserting, that the provisions of the Criminal Act cannot otherwise be carried into effect, and have also experience to prove the expediency of its revival, it is difficult to discover why it is not awakened from its slumber and being first properly constituted, then required to do its duty, as directed by Act of Parliament and explained (as above) by our present Chief Justice.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL FUNDS.

We now come to the enumeration of the Local Funds over which we think the inhabitants of Calcutta, either through the Quarter Sessions, by means of District Committees, Commissioners of Conservancy, or other competent Municipal Court, ought to possess full and entire control.

The first and best understood of these funds is the Assessment which is levied under the sanction of the Court of Quarter Sessions, as will appear by the following extracts from Acts of Parliament.

By the 33d Geo. III. the Justices, in Quarter Session assembled, are authorized to "appoint Scavengers for cleansing the streets, and to nominate and appoint such persons as they may think fit, in that behalf, and also to order the watching and repairing of the streets as they respectively shall judge necessary; and for the purpose of defraying the expenses thereof, from time to time, to make an equal assessment on the owners or occupiers of houses," &c.

It is further directed that all "and every such Assessment or Assessments shall, and may, from time to time, be levied and collected by such person or persons and in such manner, as the said Justices, by the order in Session, shall direct and appoint in that behalf; and the money thereby raised, shall be employed and disposed of, according to the orders and directions of said Justices in Session respectively, for and towards the repairing, watching and cleansing the said Streets, and for no other purpose."

The present assessment of 5 per cent. amounts, nominally, to about three lakhs of rupees; but after deducting non-payments and the expenses of collection (say 30,000 Rs.) it yields only about two lakhs of rupees net. We ask, is this sum, or the net proceeds, whatever they may be, exclusively appropriated to "the repairing, watching, and cleansing of the Streets of Calcutta?"

Another Municipal Tax, levied under the title of Town Duty, yields about 2½ lakhs of Rupees. For what purposes was this imposed? and how is it appropriated? Is it devoted to the improvement of the City—as in all British and foreign free towns is the case; or is it paid into the General Treasury to be remitted to England towards defraying the expenses of our duplicate and triplicate Governments in London? It was given to the town in 1823, as a Municipal Tax applicable to local purposes, not only in Calcutta, but all over the country—but was resumed in 1829!

The profits of the Lotteries, which are avowedly "for the improvement of the City of Calcutta," yield, we believe, at least a lakh of rupees per annum. What becomes of this trifles? The Sub-Treasurer can probably inform us? The Lottery Committee can perhaps say why all "improvements" have been suspended for several years past? Is it that the funds formerly devoted to this purpose have been for some years pounded to repay a grant of a certain sum towards the improvement of the Town, made by Lord Hastings, out of the surplus fees (we believe) of the Court of Requests, which grant was "not confirmed" by the Honorable the Court of Directors, but ordered to be repaid. When this will be done who knows? Who is the comptroller of the Lottery Fund? and are the accounts a sealed book or how?

The Abkarry, a tax on licenses to liquor-shops, is another local fund; it yields about two lakhs and a half per annum, and as it is raised at the expense of those most likely to break the peace, it should surely be devoted to keeping the peace—it would form a very neat item to the credit of the General Fund, and would cover the Thanadaree establishment and all incidental charges. In a statement of the Town disbursement of 1828-29, we find this item given, under the head of receipts at 2,59,152 rupees; may we not hope to see it brought to credit in the next audit of the account of the Quarter Sessions?

Here then are four local taxes, yielding about nine lakhs of rupees per annum; we know who pay and who receive them; would it be very unreasonable to expect to know how they are spent! or would it be outrageous to ask that some of the tax-payers should have a voice in the disposal or application of them? We are far from implying that there is any misappropriation; but it would be satisfactory to the inhabitants to know that they do get "value received" for their money; and that it is applied to purposes of which they approve.

If the Government give up the Abkarry and the Town Duties, the Lottery profits, the Fines, Surplus Fees, &c. —the General Fund will then afford to support the Thanadaree establishment, and all Police expenses, Magistrates and Constables included—a perpetual stop need not be put to all improvement and necessary repairs, &c. as at present—the Government would be doing an act of justice—the people of Calcutta would be grateful and, we are sure, would cheerfully join in their endeavours to make these funds go as far as possible, if entrusted to their management, as we think it will be conceded they should be. This would form the first most popular step in self-government, and as it is widely rumoured that important alterations in all departments of the State are under consideration, we hope we do not look in vain, for the efficient re-establishment of the Court of Quarter Sessions and the delegation to its management, or to that of popularly elected Commissioners of all local municipal funds.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS, CALCUTTA, 1ST NOVEMBER, 1833.

After the proceedings of the Sessions had closed for the day and the Chairman was about to rise, Mr. Samuel Smith inquired of Mr. McFarlan whether the assessment on house-rent was the only fund over which the Quarter Sessions had control? whether it had not also control over Town Duties, the Abkarry, the surplus of the Petty Court's receipts, the profits on the Lotteries, and other Municipal Funds of various descriptions. Mr. McFarlan replied that they had not, and in reply to several other questions stated that the surplus of those items went, he supposed, to the credit of Government; that the total expenditure entered in the above abstract was defrayed by the inhabitants of Calcutta, out of the assessed house taxes, that the Government had no right to control their

(the Quarter Session's) proceedings, but admitted that the Quarter Sessions was solely composed of Police Magistrates, who could be discharged at the pleasure of the Government. Mr. Smith then remarked that the Court was a mere nullity, even as to the little that was left to its disposal, for the tax-payers had no voice in it and how could the Police Magistrates be expected to advocate the rights of the inhabitants of Calcutta, when by so doing they might give offence to the Government, and get discharged from their situations. He maintained that the people of Calcutta had an undoubted right to control the disposal of their own money, a right which was acknowledged and practised even in some of the most despotic countries.

Mr. McFarlan said he did not wish to prevent any gentleman from expressing his opinions on any subject, but it would be as well perhaps to confine themselves to the duty, which they had assembled to perform. He had willingly given what information he possessed on the points on which he had been questioned, but it would perhaps be as well to recollect that they had met there "for the purposes of the assessment."

Mr. Smith admitted the justice of the chairman's remarks, but stated that he had very quietly waited till the conclusion of the business for which they had met before starting any new subject. That the special business of the day having ended, he took advantage of the opportunity to ask, in open Court, for information that might be refused if applied for privately. He had put a few questions to Mr. McFarlan and he had very kindly answered him, for which he (Mr. Smith) was extremely obliged. What he (Mr. Smith) said was merely in the way of conversation, and the questions he had asked had been put with a view to elicit information for the benefit of the community. Perhaps Mr. McFarlan was not aware of it, but it was pretty generally believed that the Quarter Sessions had the disposal of all the funds he (Mr. Smith) had named, and it would therefore be advantageous to them to have those retaining that opinion undeceived. Here were they (the inhabitants of Calcutta) obliged to pay all the enormous expenses of the whole Thanadaree Establishment in addition to the Conservancy of Calcutta, as specified in the abstract, out of the Assessment fund alone, while the proceeds of all the other Funds he had mentioned went into the pocket of Government; and even over the expenditure of the assessment Fund they had no control whatever. He thought the inhabitants of Calcutta ought to come forward and petition the Government to place all those funds he had named at the disposal of the Quarter Sessions, and he also thought that that Court ought to be differently constituted—its members ought, to a certain extent, to be appointed by election of the inhabitants of Calcutta, so that the expenditure of their funds might be controlled by Magistrates of their own choice.

Mr. Robison said, if we understood him rightly, that the act of Parliament constituting the Court of Quarter Sessions required that it should be composed of Magistrates; and that the Governor-General, being the representative of the King, enjoyed the royal prerogative of displacing any of the Magistrates, if he thought fit.

Mr. Smith remarked in reply that the King had no authority to displace the Aldermen of London, and he did not see why the Court could not be composed of Magistrates of a similar description. All he wished to urge was that it ought to be composed of independent persons.

Captain Steel remarked that the honorary Magistrates had been appointed here and mentioned the names of three or four.

Mr. Smith replied.—Then they have not done their duty! Why are they not here? It was high time that a new Commission of the Peace were issued, and that proper persons were selected who could, and would, fairly represent the inhabitants of Calcutta. In conclusion Mr. Smith stated again, that the Court of Quarter Session was not properly constituted, and referred to the act, by which it appeared that it ought to be composed of the Governor-General, the Member of Council, the Police Magistrates, and such other of the inhabitants of Calcutta, as were Justices of the Peace.

The Quarter Session were then adjourned.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

CALCUTTA, 3d FEBRUARY, 1836

Present

W. C. Blaquiere, Esq.	Chairman
C. K. Robinson, Esq.	Magistrates
P. O'Hanlon, Esq.
G. J. Siddons, Esq.
Bihoo Hadharam Deb,
J. Young, Esq.	Clerk of the Peace
Capt Birch,	Collector
Messrs Graham and Carr,	Assessors

It was resolved—That the present Assessment of 5 per cent be taken as the Assessment for the ensuing quarter commencing 1st May next, and that notice be given in the daily paper, that all persons having objections to make against the valuation at which they are assessed—do come in and appeal before the 16th inst which appeals will be decided on the 27th, and from day to day afterwards until the whole are disposed of.

Mr Samuel Smith suggested that the Assessment should be made in Company's rupees instead of sicca rupees, i.e. that the former should be deemed equal to the latter in the Assessment valuations also that the accounts of the Assessment be kept in Company's rupees from 1st May.

Upon this subject, Mr O'Hanlon expressed a favourable opinion generally, he thought the former suggestion should be adopted in all cases where real loss to the landlord required a mitigation—thus could be shewn by petition in the usual way. On this subject he read, "as a part of his speech" (the Court refusing to give out these documents) two letters addressed to the Chief Magistrate one from Mr Deputy Secretary Grant—the other from Mr Accountant General Morley. By the former it appeared that, agreeably to public notice the Company's rupee was to be deemed in all matters to be equal to only 15 16th of a sicca rupee. By the latter it was required that all accounts of the Assessment should be rendered in Company's rupees and not from the 1st May next. To this effect the Court eventually decided.

Although the Chairman of the Court refused to receive these documents (which we will publish, if we can obtain them) as being informal in not being addressed to the Court, but to an individual Magistrate yet it was admitted that that Gentleman (Mr McFarlan) was the origin of communication with Government and no other Magistrate took, or was permitted to take any share in the management of Conservancy affairs—or any control over the collections or disbursements.

The Cash account of the Assessment for the last quarter was laid on the Table by the Collector and as yet have been permitted to take a copy, we subjoin it.

We also obtained a copy of the general Abstract of the year's account which we likewise publish.

We attended the Court of Quarter Sessions on the 3d February, and were sorry to see so few of the Inhabitants present. Mr Blaquiere was in the Chair and there were several Magistrates present, who all appeared willing to receive every necessary information as to the general accounts and disbursements of the assessment, respecting which however it appears that none of them, except Mr Blaquiere, possessed any knowledge as the entire management and control of all conservancy matters are, it appears, vested in Mr McFarlan the Chief Magistrate. His accounts exhibited, as far as they go, speak well for the diligence of the present Collector—the collections being considerably in excess of former years—principally owing to the realization of old outstanding balances.

The net receipts for the past year appear to be nearly 40,000 rupees in excess of the preceding year, but the disbursements are also 10,000 rupees in excess.

Upon this subject, Mr Smith on his own behalf and on behalf of others, present or absent, and fortified by the knowledge of circumstances stated in open Court, claimed permission to examine the accounts at leisure, with a view to ascertaining the nature and expediency of the disbursements and the right of the Chief Magistrate to exercise sole authority in such matters. Permission to this effect was granted.

In reference to some remarks, it was stated that Mr McFarlan as Conservancy Magistrate, acted under the immediate authority of Government, and not under control of the Court of Quarter Sessions which was assembled, it would appear, solely to sanction the levying of the assessment. If the Government have placed Mr McFarlan independent of the control of the Quarter Sessions, the act is illegal—it is in violation of an Act of Parliament which places all control in this Court, and this control we hope to see exercised in future, with some degree of vigilance.

We trust the Trade Association will take up this subject and petition the Governor of Bengal to remodel the Conservancy Department, in conformity with the Act of Parliament and also solicit Government to place at the disposal of the inhabitants all local municipal funds to be administered either by the Court of Quarter Sessions, or by an efficient and responsible corporation or commissioners, elected by the inhabitants. We pledge ourselves to keep the subject before the public and the Government while there is any hope of a compelling so desirable an object.

It was suggested that the Court should from 1st May next keep its accounts in Company's rupees, which was acceded to. It was also suggested that the assessments, or rather the valuation of houses assessed should be made in Company's rupees instead of sicca rupees, i.e. the same amount in the new currency as in the old, but this was overruled leaving the subject open to be determined upon appeal according to circumstances—the appeals will we suspect be numerous—if not individuals cannot complain. If they do not seek the redress open to them which is simple and attended with no expense, it is their own fault.

The usual assessment of 5 per cent was ordered for the ensuing quarter.

This is but a bare outline of the proceedings of this Court which were of an unusually interesting character. We shall return to the subject and if possible offer something like a connected report—supported by documents in illustration of the facts above adverted to and in explanation of the anomalous position of this at present very inefficient Municipal Court. We hope soon to see it reformed and to be able to furnish a much more satisfactory account of its transactions. —Hunkaru.

The Magistrates met in Quarter Sessions at the Police Office—Mr Blaquiere presiding in consequence of the unavoidable absence of the Chief Magistrate. His colleagues of the bench Messrs Robinson O'Hanlon, and Siddons, and Bihoo Rulamt Deb were present also Mr James Young, the Clerk of the Peace, Captain Birch, the Collector Messrs Grant and Carr, the Assessors and one or two of the public, besides our brethren of the daily press—but a sorry answer to their call upon the public spirit of the inhabitants.

The Collector's abstract of his receipts and disbursements for the last quarter was laid upon the table, and the following resolution to the usual effect was adopted:—"That the present assessment of 5 per cent, be taken as the assessment for the ensuing quarter, and notice given in all the daily papers that all persons having objections to make against the said rate or the valuation at which they are assessed, do come in and appeal before the 16th instant"—the ensuing quarter being that which commences on the 1st May next. From the 16th February, the Magistrates adjourn till the 27th, when the appellants are to be heard, and upon every succeeding day until every case of appeal shall have been disposed of.

Mr. Samuel Smith suggested that after the 1st May, the assessments should be made in Company's Rupees at the same rate in amount as now in Siccas. He said, if the batta difference were exacted, it will be a hardship in many cases, as he could shew in his own business, and he was satisfied tenants in general would not pay that difference. The Magistrates severally pointed out that the duty of the Collector being to take a fixed percentage, it mattered not in what currency it were taken; and on enquiry whether any orders had been received from Government upon the subject, two letters were produced which Mr. O'Hanlon read to the meeting. In these it was distinctly laid down that the collections were to be made in Company's Rupees after the 1st May, and the balance of account then appearing in Siccra were to be converted into the new currency at 106 108. Mr. O'Hanlon, after reading over some items in Captain Birch's statement, asked the Accountant, Mr. Watts, if there was any order in his office for the charges of 2½ per cent. to the Collector, 1½ per cent. to the Collector's Sircars, &c., to which Mr. Watts replied in the negative, observing that the controul of these matters rested solely with the Chief Magistrate. Mr. O'Hanlon said, he himself knew nothing about those expenses, for he had never seen the accounts, but he thought they ought to be made public. Mr. C. K. Robison said, that for his part, never having been allowed any sort of controul in the matter, he had always refused to sign the Quarterly and Annual Abstracts. Mr. Blacquiere said, the Magistrates in Quarter Session had a clear right of controul, and it was their own fault if they did not exercise it. Mr. S. Smith considered that the people of Calcutta were paying a variety of municipal taxes—he could shew a list amounting to nine lakhs Town duties and Abkaree inclusive (Mr. Siddons remarked that he had very much over estimated the town duties, which for Calcutta alone were short of 170,00 Rs.)—and ought to have a voice in their appropriation. He begged to know if the meeting would order or authorise the publication of the statement now produced. Both Mr. Robison and Mr. Blacquiere objected to giving any order or even authority for the publication, chiefly because such sanction might be construed into an authentication by them of a statement regarding a department with which they had nothing to do; but agreed in the general propriety of publicity, and in declaring as a matter of principle, that Mr. Smith and every other person who paid these taxes, had a clear right to inspect the accounts, and to take and publish any notes from them. Mr. O'Hanlon went further, and directed the accountant to afford Mr. Smith all the information he might desire, and sharply lectured Mr. Watts for questioning the Court's right to make such order imperative upon the Chief Magistrate. He also overruled a similar demur on the part of another of the functionaries to deliver over to Mr. Smith a memorandum produced for the information of the Magistrates.

It appeared that the collections of the four last quarters had exceeded those of either of the two years immediately preceding: this it was explained, had arisen from the gradual recovery of the town from the effects of the great commercial failures, which had caused arrears in the collection and much depression in the rent. The gross amount of the assessment is now about 280,000 Siccra Rs. — Calcutta Courier.

The Quarter Sessions of the Peace presented a much more animated scene than we suspect has distinguished the apartment in the Police Office in which it was held for a long time past. There were several persons present, and much "desultory conversation." After all, however, it must be confessed that nothing material was elicited beyond a distinct recognition of that which, it seems, has never been disputed—viz., the right of the tax-payers to look into the assessment accounts. If any thing has been established, which was not established before, it is that we, gentlemen of the Press, have not been quite as active as becomes us in procuring the regular publication of accounts current, and investigating the appropriation of the funds raised by assessment. If this had been done, it is probable that Messieurs the Magistrates, instead of leaving to the Chief Magistrate only the task of disbursement, would have conformed to the terms of the Act of Parliament, and superintended the outlay themselves. In the absence of any present means of scrutinising the accounts, we do not blame Mr. McFarlan, for the manner in which he has disposed of the municipal resources, albeit we sometimes run over crows in the dark streets, swallow more dust than accords with our appetites pulverulent, and run an occasional risk of being "rapped o'the costard" for want of a good preventive police. But we do think usurpations of power ought not to be tolerated any more than quiet surrenders of legitimate authority and public trust, and we are likewise of opinion that had the whole of the magistracy given their attention to the business which pertains to their offices, as members of the Court of Quarter Sessions, they would probably have discovered many an opening for a more economical distribution of the funds.

It appears, by a statement in the Hurkaru, that the assessment collected in the years 1832-33 and 1833-34, fell short of the purposes to which it is applicable by some 74,000 rupees, which has consequently imposed upon Government the necessity of making good the deficiency from the public Treasury. In the year 1834-35, however, the assessment was short of the expenses by only 20,000 rupees and upwards; and in the year 1831-32, as we were informed, the assessment was considerably in excess of the burthens. This elicited from Mr. Samuel Smith, who, we are bound to say, took a very active and praise-worthy part in the discussions, an opinion that more diligence had lately been manifested in the department of collection; but it appears to us, and indeed we were so assured, that the deficiency in the accumulation since 1832, has arisen entirely from the great commercial failures; events which brought down the rents of houses, put householders hors de combat, and rendered the collection of money altogether a very troublesome task. The truth of this is proved by the state of the collection in the present moment of returning prosperity—when in the very face of reduced rates, a sum of 50,000 rupees above the previous two years' collections, is exhibited to the admiring eyes of the taxed community.

Still, even under the improved aspect of affairs, and taking into consideration the probability of many advantageous suggestions being offered through the public papers (when the accounts shall have been published) we are disposed to think that the assessment will be found insufficient to the purposes contemplated, in its levy. Under this view we did not support a proposition emanating from Mr. Samuel Smith, for the reduction of the rate of assessment to five Company's rupees per cent. That measure, though supported with a shew of reason, would reduce the total assessment by eighteen thousand rupees per annum, and thereby put the conservators of public comfort in a worse condition than they now are. Our earnestness in the matter of Municipal Government arise from a conviction that we ought voluntarily to allow of an addition to our burthens for the sake of additional advantages.—Englishman.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE FREE SCHOOL.

The Annual Meeting of the Subscribers to the Free School took place on the 20th January pursuant to advertisement.

The Rev. T. Robertson took the chair, and on being asked who was chairman, replied that he was by right,—a right which was not conceded to him, the meeting being a general meeting, and he was accordingly formally moved into the chair.

The particular business of the day, was the election of governors. The following gentlemen were regularly balloted for and elected; viz. Messrs. C. Mackenzie, J. Kyd, W. Byrn, and the Rev. C. Wimberly.

After this business had been disposed of, Dr. Corbyn submitted a resolution on the propriety of submitting the annual reports of the institution to the approval of a meeting previously to publication. This resolution was agreed to.

Dr. Corbyn proposed a second resolution to the effect that increase of the allowances of the office bearers should not be authorized without the consent of the general body of subscribers.

A third resolution, submitted by Dr. Corbyn, was to take into consideration the late increase of the secretary's salary.

Mr. W. Byrn proposed a resolution confirming a previous resolution of the Institution passed in July, 1833, giving to the Lord Bishop and the Archdeacon the right of voting in committee, of which they had been deprived by a vote of the Governors on the appointment of the Rev. T. Dealtry to the office of archdeacon. This proposition was opposed by the Rev. T. Robertson, the Rev. C. Wimberly, and Captain Birch. The chairman was proceeding to put it down summarily when Captain Birch interfered, and it was put to the vote. On a division there were 10 in favor of the proposition and 10 against it. Finally it was determined that these propositions should be submitted to a special meeting to be convened for the purpose.—Englishman.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE FREE SCHOOL.

A special General Meeting of the subscribers to the Free School took place on the 16th February, for the purpose of considering certain propositions submitted to the general meeting, regarding the propriety of the vice-patron and visitor having a vote in the committee of management, &c. &c. On the motion of Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. Kellaer, the venerable Archdeacon Dealtry took the chair.

The Venerable Chairman opened the proceedings, briefly alluding to what had taken place at the meeting recently held. With regard to one question he expressed his regret that it had ever been brought forward, and he now suggested that it were better all discussion should terminate on that point, and that the suggestions by a writer in the Englishman should be adopted. He entirely disclaimed any share in the proposition affecting him as visitor which had been presented at the former meeting.* With regard to the two other resolutions, the first of which went to tie up the governors from expending more than Rs. 1,000, without the sanction of a meeting of subscribers, and the second touching the expenses incurred by the church, he thought with regard to the former, that the governors were already restrained by the rules of the institution from entering into a larger expenditure; and as to the second, a reference to the accounts, would show that an efficient clergyman had been procured at a real expense to the institution of not more than Rs. 150 per annum. There had been much misrepresentation on the subject, but a reference to the accounts would bear out the assertion; and he appealed to the subscribers, whether that sum was too much to procure an efficient clergyman for so noble an institution. As far as the resolution affected him as visitor, he again sincerely hoped that it might not be pressed, fully aware as he was that these discussions led to misrepresentations which were highly injurious to the institution.

Mr. Wale Byrn explained the grounds on which he had brought forward a resolution at the last meeting, giving the Bishop and Archdeacon a vote in the meeting of the governors. This was supposed by some of the subscribers to be a new rule, brought forward to confer additional powers on those dignitaries, whereas it was but a resolution confirming one that had three years ago received the sanction of the subscribers. It was as follows:—"That the visitors of the institution, the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, and the venerable the Archdeacon be allowed to hold a seat in the committee of Governors, ex-officio, and to assist in the deliberations of the executive." When the Archdeacon sent in his resignation, a discussion arose, whether he should continue to have a right to sit or vote in committee, and the committee decided, as he (Mr. Byrn) believed, in forgetfulness of the rule just read, that the Bishop and the Archdeacon were not entitled to vote at the ordinary meeting of the committee. Under this rule Mr. Corrie had attended a meeting of the committee, and as he (Mr. Byrn) had been the original proposer of the rule, he confessed he did not like to see it abrogated without an appeal to the subscribers by whom it had been originally sanctioned. Therefore with a view to put an end to all doubts he would move, that the resolution passed in 1833, be confirmed. It had been said that the visitors had not exercised the right. Be that as it may, that they possessed the right was clear, from a resolution passed by a body fully entitled to confer it. A right, too, which had been exercised by the visitors for twenty years; and that fact, in his opinion, superceded the necessity of showing, that similar powers were conferred on visitors of similar institutions in England. It was due to Mr. Corrie to say that he had originally brought forward this resolution without the then archdeacon's concurrence, and it was no less due to Mr. Dealtry to state that he had acted entirely without consulting or advising with him.

The Rev. Mr. Macqueen corrected Mr. Byrn. The committee had never questioned the right of the visitors to attend their deliberations; on the contrary, that right was fully conceded to them; all that was objected to was their right to vote. The practice prior to 1833 had been correctly stated by Mr. Byrn as far as the right of the visitors to attend the deliberations of the committee went, but there was nothing to show that they had a right to vote also. However, as the Venerable Chairman was averse to raising a discussion on the point, it was obvious that the question might very easily be settled. The Chairman had relinquished his right.

The Chairman begged that he might not be misunderstood. He had answered for himself alone, and not as to the rights of others. But for this he would answer, that neither the Bishop nor himself would ever interfere, where that interference was calculated to produce effects injurious to the institution. He might be might also add that they would never think of coming near this or any other institution, unless they thought they could be useful in promoting the general good. For himself he declared that he had never sought power or influence, nor did he do it now, and whatever might be the fate of a resolution, which he hoped would not be pressed, he assured the meeting that it would in no way affect the interest he felt for the welfare of the school. As far as his influence went, whatever it might be, it should be exercised for the good of the institution, and he thought it could be exercised just as well without a vote, as with one in the committee.

* A resolution confirming a previous resolution of the institution passed in July, 1833, giving to the Lord Bishop and the Archdeacon the right of voting in committee, of which they had been deprived by a vote of the Governors on the appointment of the Rev. T. Dealtry to the office of Archdeacon.

The Rev. Mr. Macqueen hoped it would be understood that his objection to the Bishop and Archdeacon sitting in committee was grounded on principle, and he would in the same manner object to the Governor-General taking his seat in their deliberations as the patron. It was evident that their presence would put a restraint on the proceedings of the committee. In fact the clergy would be hampered by their diocesan's presence, for they would not like to put themselves in opposition to the known wishes of their head, and in like manner the other services would feel a restraint by the presence of the Governor-General.

Mr. W. Byrn replied that this argument went to giving the visitors a seat as well as to allowing them a vote. He thought Mr. Macqueen ought to follow it up by a resolution to that effect.

After some conversation, the following amendment was moved by the Rev. Mr. Robertson and seconded by Mr. Samuel Smith.

"That the Bishop and the Archdeacon being respectively, visitor and joint visitor, have a seat among the governors; but that they cannot be considered qualified to vote."

The following amendment was then proposed by Mr. W. Byrn and seconded by Mr. F. D. Kellner:

"That with the view of removing all doubts which exist as to the construction to be given to the resolution passed at the General Meeting of the 22d June 1833, it be resolved that the Bishop and Archdeacon, as visitors of the school, shall have the power of voting on all matters of business connected with the institution."

On a division there appeared for the amendment 15, against it 18. Mr. Robertson's resolutions was declared to be carried.

Dr. Corbyn with reference to a letter on the subject of the Free School in the Englishman, had no doubt but that the writer was present, and would hear his reply. In the first place, with regard to building the church out of the funds belonging to the school, he thought, if the subscribers had acted as they ought to have done, they had come forward at the time, to have voted the Governors; had he been in the position he was now, he would have gone much further, he would have demanded that those governors should replace the funds they had so misapplied, for it was by the example afforded by such replacement, that future misapplication would have been prevented. The writer had freely admitted that the building of the church was an egregious blunder; but he argued, now that the church is built, it ought not to be abandoned. In answer to this, however, he would put it to the meeting, whether because there had been one misapplication, further misapplication must necessarily follow,—whether because there had been one egregious blunder a series of egregious blunders must be perpetrated in,—whether because they had suffered from one evil, a multitude of evils were to be inflicted? The writer had doubted the propriety of pulling down the church; he also doubted the propriety of such a proceeding; but of this he had no doubt whatever, that the builders ought to be responsible for the funds so misapplied. Looking at a neighbouring church, St. James's, built subsequent to the opening of St. James's school, the subscribers to the latter would not permit one fraction of their funds subscribed, to go towards the erection of the edifice, and he would like to know from those gentlemen who argue in favour of the church, whether the children would not have been equally benefitted by the religious instruction afforded in the school? or whether the children of the Orphan School did not receive religious instruction equal to that afforded to them in the church of St. Thomas? True it was, this was no new subject; but he mentioned it to shew the necessity of preventing further misapplication,—to prevent the funds from being diverted from the purpose for which they were subscribed, namely, for the education of poor destitute children. It was acknowledged that the building of the church was a decided misapplication, and now there was a large amount devoted to maintain—

Archdeacon Dealty interrupted Dr. Corbyn. It was not a large amount; he was informed that the sum taken from the school funds did not amount to more than 100 Rs per mensem.

Mr. Corbyn.—Be it so; though the statement does not tally with the account in my hand. However we have misapplication upon misapplication. In the first place the church is built out of funds intended for the education of the children, a chaplain is appointed, and now the chaplain's salary is increased without consulting the subscribers. Now, is it not necessary to put a stop to this yearly increasing diversion of the funds from their proper purposes? For mark, how Mr. Garstin's salary has been increased. In the first year he is to have 250 Rs. per month till he is ordained by the Bishop; then it is agreed that this shall not be increased till the pensions fall in, but in defiance of this resolution the committee increased Mr. Garstin's salary.

Mr. Corbyn concluded by proposing the following resolution which was seconded by Mr. D. Clarke:—

"That the funds of the Free School being contributed for the support and education of destitute children, it be considered a misapplication which provides out of them the payment of the salary of the clergyman to St. Thomas's Church, and the resolution of the Governors of the 11th February and 12th August, 1835, assigning the Rev. A. Garstin, a salary as chaplain, be null and void."

The Rev. Mr. Robertson said he agreed with Dr. Corbyn that the building of the church was a misapplication of the funds, and in justice to himself he must state that he did all in his power at the time to prevent it, but now as the church was built, the question whether they were to have a chaplain was quite a different consideration.

Some conversation followed in which Mr. Judge, Mr. R. Smith, Mr. S. Smith, Captain Birch and Mr. MacFarlan took part. At length the Rev. Mr. Wimberly proposed the following amendment:—

"That in consequence of the difficulty of mustering an adequate number of subscribers so as to be able to arrive at their general opinion touching any new measure brought forward at the general meetings, and also with the view of obviating the incessant and insalutary changes to which the institution is subjected by conflicting party measures, it be resolved that the powers of all general meetings of the subscribers be restricted to the election of the governors, to whom shall be entrusted the control and management of all the concerns of the institution."

The proposition was received with astonishment, which presently gave way to a burst of laughter. When the confusion subsided,

The Rev. Mr. Wimberly explained, that as the subscribers elected the managers, the remedy was, if the latter acted injuriously to the interests of the institution, to vote them out of office.

Mr. Samuel Smith enquired if there was any regulation which authorized the displacing of the governors by a vote of the subscribers?

The Venerable Archdeacon explained,—the subscribers only appointed four of the governors, of the remaining six, four were of the select vestry, and two were appointed by Government.

The Rev. Mr. Wimberly immediately withdrew his amendment. He had not the most remote intention of taking from the subscribers the control they had over the governors.

Dr. Corbyn's resolution was now read in an amended form as follows:—

"Resolved that no salary of any of the higher appointments, such as superintendent, chaplain, master, mistress, or any other servant of the institution receiving from the institution above 50 Rs. per month, be raised, but with the consent of the subscribers at a general meeting."

The Rev. Mr. Macqueen proposed as an amendment rule 7, of 1833, as follows:—

"That all sums of money acquired by the School from legacies, extraordinary donations or otherwise, of 1,000 rupees in amount or more, be forthwith vested by the Governors for the time being in Government Securities; and that a majority of the governors shall have authority to appropriate the interest of the Government securities and other annual income to the current expenses of the School; and that no part of the funds vested in such manner shall be applied to any other purpose whatever, unless with the sanction of a public meeting, consisting of a majority of subscribers and donors resident in Calcutta."

The amendment was put and carried.

Captain Birch had voted for the amendment, but he saw no reason why he should not also vote for the original motion, as the two did not at all interfere with each other. The chairman thought the original motion tied the committee too closely. Mr. Samuel Smith, however, was of opinion, that it was a very prudent precaution. The Rev. Mr. Macqueen differed from Mr. Smith and the mover; he considered that the resolution took the power of rewarding from those, who from their situation as governors, were the best judges where rewards ought to be bestowed; and after all the subscribers would have to proceed on information, furnished by the governors. After some remarks from the Rev. Mr. Robertson, Mr. S. Smith, and Mr. Judge, the resolution was put to the vote and lost by a minority of 14 to 18.

After this business was disposed of, the subscribers proceeded to ballot for a new Governor. Dr. Corbyn and Captain Birch were nominated: for the former there appeared 15, and for the latter 14

The chairman then brought to the notice of the meeting an application from the parents of the boys who had drawn the lotteries from 1832 to 1833. At the latter date the governor had come to a resolution to place the sums paid by the Lottery Committee as a reward for the boys' services into the School fund. The application was for Rs. 250, the amount paid into the School funds, prior to passing the resolution. After some conversation it was determined that the resolution should not have a retrospective effect, and that the amount paid into the funds prior to 1833, should be given unto the boy's parents.

The next resolution was carried on the motion of Mr. Kellner, seconded by Mr. C. F. Byrn.

"That for the future no individual be eligible to be selected as Governor unless he be a subscriber of the qualified standing."

The following resolution was moved by Mr. Martin, and seconded by the Rev. Mr. Robertson:—

"That in future, annual subscribers of 16 rupees be entitled to one vote, those of 32 rupees to two votes and those of 48 rupees to three votes; beyond which no additional votes to be allowed: and further, that all persons entitled to vote must have been Subscribers at least six months previous to the meeting at which their vote or votes respectively shall be offered."

Much conversation followed. Mr. Kellner moved the following amendment, which was seconded by Mr. Wale Byrn and carried:—

"That the old rule which gave the right of voting equally to all subscribers of 16 rupees and upwards per annum, do stand unchanged."

Thanks were then voted to the chairman, and the meeting separated.—Englishman.

STEAM FUND MEETING.

Proceedings of a Public Meeting of the Subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, the 16th February, 1836.

ALEXANDER COLVIN, Esq.,—Chairman.

The Secretary to the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund having read the Report of the Committee, it was.

Proposed by John Abbot, Esq., seconded by J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., and resolved,—That the Report now read be adopted and published for general information.

The Secretary having submitted for the consideration of the Subscribers an abstract of certain printing bills and charges amounting to Sa. Rs. 56-9 incurred in connection with the Requisition for a Meeting to memorialize the Supreme Government to enlarge the interval between the proposed dates of departure of the Hugh Lindsay from Bombay, it was Proposed by M. Joseph Esq., seconded by J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., and resolved,—That the amount of Sa. Rs. 56-9 be disbursed out of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

Proposed by Jas. Sutherland, Esq., seconded by John Abbott, Esq., and resolved,—That this Meeting sanction the Committee of this Fund acting in concert with the Requisitionists for a Public Meeting on the 5th of March next, in the promotion of the objects for the attainment of which that Meeting is called, and the application of any portion of the New Bengal Steam Fund which they may deem necessary to carry the Resolutions of the said Meeting into effect, subject to confirmation by a General Meeting of the Subscribers, to be called at six weeks notice in conformity with the 8th Resolution of the original General Meeting of the Subscribers held on the 22d day of June, 1835.

ALEX. COLVIN, Chairman.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman and the Meeting dissolved.

Report of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the Subscribers, at a Meeting held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on the 16th February, 1836.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, beg to lay before the subscribers the accompanying "summary statement of receipts and expenditure on account of the New Bengal Steam Fund from the 1st August to the 31st ultimo," showing a balance in favor of the Fund of Sicca Rupees 71,774-2-7; to this is to be added the sum of Sa. Rs. 1,301-3-9, being the amount estimated to be receivable, making in all Sa. Rs. 73,075-6-4.

The Committee have not failed to watch with unceasing interest every occurrence connected with the important object of their appointment, with a view to take advantage of any opening by which their interference could be rendered available towards the success of that object.

In their last report, under date 4th August last, laid before the Meeting of the subscribers, held at the Town Hall on the 17th of that month, they referred to the Resolutions of the Committee of the House of Commons, under date 14th July, 1834; viz, that it was then expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of a Steam Communication from India by the Red Sea; that it should be left to His Majesty's Government, in conjunction with the East India Company, to consider whether the communication should be, in the first instance, from Bombay or from Calcutta, or according to the "combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee;" and finally, that by whatever line the communication should be established, the "net charge" should be equally divided between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, including in that charge the expense of the land conveyance from the Euphrates on the one hand, and the Red Sea on the other, to the Mediterranean.

The Committee hailed this resolution as the certain fore-runner of the immediate establishment of the communication either to Bombay alone, or as they most confidently hoped, on the comprehensive plan recommended by them. They waited with anxiety certainly, yet without fear, for the result. They regret, however, to have to state that up to the end of August last, a period of thirteen months subsequent to the resolutions, nothing decisive would appear to have taken place. Indeed, with exception to a report, that the Honorable the Court of Directors have given instructions for two large steamers to be built at Bombay, which, it is hoped, may be made available for the communication between that place and Suez, nothing at all would appear to have been done.

Under these circumstances, the Committee have considered that a renewed expression of the public feeling in this country is desirable.

They, therefore, authorized their Secretary to make known these sentiments to such individuals as take a deep interest in the matter, with a view, if practicable, to obtain a public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, for the purpose of taking the existing state of the question into consideration, and in the hope of inducing the whole Indian community once more to come forward and express their continued anxiety for the completion of the communication.

The result has been a requisition to the Sheriff of Calcutta for a Public Meeting, and the fifth proximo has been fixed on for the purpose.

The requisition has four hundred and sixty-six signatures, European and Native and contains the names of almost every individual in Calcutta, of rank, station, and talent, with the exception to those, who, from their elevated station, are precluded from joining in the requisition, but who are nevertheless understood to be most friendly to the object, and to the measures about to be adopted for its attainment.

The Committee cannot for a moment doubt that the result will be one general appeal to the Home Authorities, for the establishment of the communication, the "great importance" of which as well to Great Britain as to India is now acknowledged by the House of Commons, and of which the late Governor General, Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, recorded the following as his matured sentiments —

"I have been a zealous supporter of the cause of Steam Communication with Europe from the strongest conviction, confirmed by every day's further reflection, of its vast importance to innumerable interests, both national and commercial."

"I cannot command the opportunity of forwarding its future success, but if within my reach, you may depend upon the exertions of my most earnest efforts to promote its progress and to obtain for India an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences, that in my opinion it would be cheaply bought at any price."

By order of the Committee,
C B GREENLAW, Secretary.

THE STEAM MEETING.

TOWN HALL, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1836.

H. M. PARKER, Esq., in the Chair.

At a Meeting of the Requisitionists held this evening, the annexed Resolutions were determined upon to be proposed to the General Meeting for adoption on the 5th proximo. The Meeting consisted of about 40 gentlemen—

Resolved.—I. That a select Committee of the House of Commons did, under date 14th July, 1834, among others, report to the House the following Resolutions.—

“That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the experiments which have been made have been attended with very great expense; but that from the evidence before the Committee, it appears that by proper arrangements the expense may be materially reduced, and under that impression it is expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of Steam communication from India by the Red Sea.

That it is the opinion of this Committee that it be left to His Majesty's Government in conjunction with the East India Company to consider whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay or from Calcutta or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee.

That it is the opinion of this Committee, that by whatever line the communication be established, the net charge of the establishment should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, including in that charge the expense of the land conveyance from the Embarcadero on the one hand, and the Red Sea on the other, to the Mediterranean.”

Resolved.—II. That effectual measures not appearing to have been taken consequent on the above Resolutions, it is expedient that a petition be presented to the House of Commons praying that such measures may be adopted as are requisite for the immediate carrying the Resolutions into effect; and that Memorials be addressed to the Right Honorable the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India, and to the Honorable the Court of Directors, praying that they will unite in giving the fullest possible effect to the above Resolutions.

Resolved.—III. That the Petition now read be adopted, and that the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, as a body already constituted for the purpose of furthering the cause of Steam communication with England by way of the Red Sea, be requested, after the same shall have been signed, to cause it to be transmitted to an influential member of the House of Commons conversant with the affairs of India with the request of this Meeting that he will present the same to the House of Commons and support the prayer thereof.

Resolved.—IV. That the Memorials to the Right Honorable the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India, and to the Court of Directors now read be adopted, and when signed by the Chairman on behalf of the Meeting, forwarded to the Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council with the respectful request of this Meeting that His Honor in Council will forward the same with such support as their important object may seem to merit.

Resolved.—V. That the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund be requested to adopt such other measures as may be considered necessary to give the fullest possible effect to the above Resolutions, and generally to exert themselves to secure the great object of their original appointment.

The following Committee was nominated to prepare the draft of a petition.

Mr. W. H. Crawford, of Bombay; Captain T. J. Taylor, of the Madras Cavalry; Messrs. J. Mackillop, W. P. Grant and C. B. Greenlaw, of Calcutta.—Hurkaru.

UNION BANK,—CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 17, 1836.

At a Special General Meeting called to confirm or annul the Resolutions of the 14th January, 1836.

Captain VINN in the Chair.

Moved by Mr. W. R. Young, seconded by Mr. Sewell—

Resolved 1st.—That pursuant to the 68th clause of the Bank Deed, which requires the confirmation of a second General Meeting by a majority of two-thirds present, before any alterations in the fundamental rules can be carried into effect—this special General Meeting does hereby confirm the following resolutions passed at the Special General Meeting of the 14th January of the present year—viz.

“2d.—That the sum of Sa. Rs. 31-4 or Co's Rs. 33-5-4 be added to the present shares of Sa. Rs. 2,500 or Co's Rs. 2,665-10-8, making the new shares Company's Rs. 2700 each.

4th.—That in order to provide against an accumulation of capital stock, proportioned to the probability of immediate business, the Bank be open to subscriptions until the to the effect of two hundred shares only, and the option of subscribing be reserved for present proprietors alone until that period, each proprietor being allowed one-third share on each share he now holds and that the remaining two hundred shares be now cancelled.

5th.—That the blank in the foregoing Resolution No. 4, be filled up as follows “30th April 1836,” reserving sufficient shares for the proprietors now in Europe until the 1st January, 1837, when if not taken they will be sold to the other Proprietors at a price not below par.

6th.—That the shares reserved for sale in this country which may not be taken by the 30th April, 1836, shall be offered to the Proprietors on the spot, and sold to the highest bidder at a price not under par, at the Union Bank.”

Moved by Mr. Shaw, seconded by Mr. Bruce—

2.—That in order to obviate the inconvenience of minute fractional calculations of dividends on the new or supplementary shares, all such new shares be only considered entitled to participate in regular dividends from the 30th April, but that parties wishing to pay their purchase money into the Bank at any time before that day, be considered in that respect as fixed depositors, and receive the usual rate of 4 per cent. interest for the sums thus provisionally paid in, during the broken period between such payment, and the 30th April, the date from which all accounts are to be kept in Company's rupees.

Moved by Mr. Maclean, seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore—

3d.—That the Directors do take the necessary measures for carrying the above Resolutions into effect.

Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Baboo Cowajee—

4th.—That the thanks of this Meeting be offered to the Chair.—Hurkaru.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 6th Jan. 1836.

The Honorable Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

Sir Charles D'Oyly, Bart., E. A. Blundell, Esq., and Dr. H. Falconer, proposed at the last meeting, were duly elected members.

The meeting then proceeded to the annual election of office-bearers, when by scrutiny of names,

The Rev. Dr. Mill, W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir B. Malkin, were chosen Vice-Presidents for the ensuing year; and Messrs H. T. Prinsep, J. R. Colvin, C. H. Trevelyan, C. H. Cameron, D. Hare, Ram Comul Sen, Captains Forbes and Penber-ton, and Dr. Pearson, members of the Committee of Papers.

The ordinary publications of the Society during the past year, had been confined to the Index of the first 18 volumes of Researches, and a new edition of the Library Catalogue.

On the 6th May, it was resolved to give additional attention to the Society's museum of Natural History. A curator and establishment were appointed, and measures were taken to accommodate the museum of antiquities, models, images, &c. in the gallery around the staircase, leaving the lower suite of apartments entirely open for objects of Natural History.

To the gallery also was added the fine collection of pictures, munificently presented by the sons of the late Mr. Home, one of the oldest members of the Society. These alterations and the preparation of Mineral Cabinets had enhanced considerably the year's expenses, but the good effect had amply compensated. To the museum of fossil remains, some splendid additions had been conferred by Colonel Burney, Colonel Colvin, and Mr. Dean, and the collection of recent Osteology and of birds had been properly arranged and classified. A catalogue raisonné had simultaneously been prepared by the Curator, which would hereafter be submitted to the Committee of Papers for publication. In the meantime the strenuous assistance of members and friends of the institution was solicited to render the Society's museum worthy of public attention.

The resolution of the Government to make over the Library of the College of Fort William to the Public Library lately instituted in Calcutta, was coupled with a reservation of all the works exclusively oriental, of which it is known that the College possesses a very extensive and valuable collection, comprising the whole library of Tipu Sultan. These, it was generally understood, the Government would be willing to transfer to the Asiatic Society should a request be expressed by this body to obtain them. As their possession would necessarily involve an increase of establishment, the Committee of Papers had hitherto hesitated making any application on the subject, but it was evidently desirable that such an opportunity of enriching its collection should be hailed with eager desire by a body devoted to the cultivation and study of Indian literature and history.

The Secretary apprized the meeting that he has received from Mr. W. H. Smollett, the box of papers of the late Mr. Moorcroft, which were in possession of the late W. Fraser, Esq., and which he was willing to place at the disposal of the Society, on the conditions expressed by the deceased viz that any profit accruing from their publication should go to the benefit of Mr. Moorcroft's relatives in England.

The Society entirely concurring in this view, resolved, that they should be immediately forwarded to Professor Wilson in England, to be made use of along with the former manuscripts, on the conditions specified.

A letter from the Vicar Apostolic of Cochun, was read, requesting the Society to forward the specimen of the Dictionary, which he regretted to hear could not be printed in Calcutta, to the Oriental Translation Fund in England, in case that body should be inclined to patronize its publication.

A letter was read from Captain C. M. Wade, transmitting a second memoir by Mr. Charles Masson, on the subject of the discovery at Baghian in the Kohistan, at Cabul and Kabul.

The memoir had been detained in Capt. Wade's possession since the month of June last, in consequence of some official correspondence with Col. Pottinger to whom the coins to which it relates have been finally forwarded for the Bombay Government.

The present memoir adds the names of Diomedes, Palerkos, Alooutenes (?) to those already known, and gives some valuable information on the sites of the Alexandria ad caesem Caucasii, &c.—Calcutta Courier.

Wednesday Evening, the 3rd February, 1836.

Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

Lieut-Col. J. Colvin, Engrs., Lieut-Col. L. R. Stacy, John Neave, Esq., C. S., and Lieut. A. Cunningham, were proposed as Members by Mr James Prinsep, seconded by Sir Edward Ryan.

Rajah Vijaya Govinda Singha Behadur of Poona was also proposed by Mr. James Prinsep, seconded by Koomar Radhacant Deb.

Read a letter from Mr. F. A. Blundell, acknowledging his election as a Member of the Society.

Read the following letter from His Highness Prince Esterhazy, Ambassador of His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Austria at the British Court

"London, August 4, 1835—" Sir,—In reply to the letter you addressed to me on the 25th January last, I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the boxes containing each twenty-five copies of a Tibetan Dictionary, and Grammar, prepared for publication by the Hungarian Traveller Mr. Alexander Csoma Koros, and printed at the expense of the British Indian Government under the auspices of the Asiatic Society.

"These fifty copies being destined by Mr. Koros to be presented to the different public Institutions of His Imperial Majesty's dominions, I lose no time in assuring you that the learned Author's intentions shall be faithfully fulfilled.

"The enclosed letters and the Oriental works you have sent to the Antic Councillor Von Hammer, have also been forwarded to their destination.

"I have not failed to inform my Government of the liberality with which the Indian Government has replaced the sum of 300 ducats, transmitted through the Embassy to Mr. Csoma de Koros, which had been lost by the failure of Messrs. Alexander and Co., and anticipating its intention, I seize with great pleasure this opportunity to express to you, and through your means to the Indian Government, as well as to the Asiatic Society, the high sense I entertain of the kind protection afforded to my learned countryman in His Britannic Majesty's dominions in India. Allow me to offer my sincerest thanks for such generous conduct.

"I have the honor to be, &c.
ESTERHAZY."

Copy of this letter was directed to be communicated to the Government and to Mr. Csoma de Koros, who left Calcutta a short time since on a tour through Turkestan and to the west of India.

Read a letter from H. Chamber, Esq., Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, directing that the Sixty Copies of 4th, 5th, and 6th volumes of Fatawa Alemgiri, subscribed for by the Madras Government should be forwarded, and enclosing a mittance for the same.

Also similar letters from the Register of the Sudder Dewani, and Secretary of the College Council of Fort William.

LITERARY AND ANTIQUITIES.

The Secretary read the following extracts from the correspondence of Mr. Wigne, from Little Tibet and from Cashmir, of which this traveller is stated to have made a beautiful series of drawings, and an accurate panoramic view, which will be much prized in Europe.

"Iskardo, 10th September, 1835.—I have now been in this very wild and extraordinary place four days, and am pleased with every thing. I set off from Cashmir by boat to Bunderpur, seeing every thing done myself to prevent delay, and took leave of the governor about 12 o'clock. We had a merry glide of it till night, when the mosquitoes became exceedingly numerous and troublesome; arrived at Bunderpur on the great lake the next morning, and heard the agreeable intelligence that a mounted guard of 10 men were waiting my arrival in Ahmad Shah's frontier. I spent the rest of the day in a visit to the Shumladier hill, and the next morning we were fairly off. At that station I was joined by Nazim Khan, the same man that had eaten your salt for a month and some days, with a letter from Ahmad Shah. He told me he had been waiting three days in the neighbourhood, not liking to make his appearance among the Sikhs. Like the man much, he is very intelligent and amusing. What a glorious view we had on the second morning, two-thirds of Cashmir and toward Tibet, one mountain in particular of immense height, totally covered with snow from the shoulders upward named "Diarmul."

"In three days we reached Gures, a very pretty valley, a little higher than Cashmir, entirely surrounded by the loftiest mountains, but bare; merely growing buck wheat, vetches, and barley. After leaving Gures, we passed a place which a few men could defend against an army; where the Sikhs and Tibetans fought two days. Further on after passing over a most desolate country, I was met by Ahmad Shah's son. I had heard there were some marauders in the neighbourhood, but did not really imagine there was any truth in the account. However the young rajah, a very intelligent young fellow, assured me there were, and that his father had sent him to protect me. Imagine the wildness of this scene. Discordant but not altogether unimpressive music gave notice of his approach, and at last he appeared with some forty sepoy, and led horses. The next morning we marched in company with him while the approach of the thieves was hourly expected. They had but one way to come, and when we arrived near the scene of action, I observed parties stationed in different places on the mountains, to prevent all escape. Suddenly an alarm was sounded, and gave notice of their approach, and the thieves were soon surrounded and cut up. Ahmad Shah was therein person. I met him on the field of battle. He said he was so happy at having destroyed the robbers, and seeing me there that if he were at Iskardo, he did not know what he should do to manifest his joy. We all sat down in a large ring. His sepoy, shewing their wounds, and I administered pills to keep off fever. Of the thieves some returned, 72 killed, 15 escaped; but I don't think there were so many. They treated the wounded men horribly. The enemy came from the neighbourhood of Peshaur, and were driving off men, women, and cattle. I am delighted with the old Rajah. He appears to have some excellent English ideas about him and enjoyed the scene amazingly. The book said to have been written by the old Missionary, does not, he assures me exist. He shewed me an Armenian Testament that he had bought of some pedlar, which probably gave rise to the report. His faith in the theory of his descent from Alexander is strong. He talks freely of everything in and about the country, and has sent out men to procure me all kinds of curiosities. We make an excursion to a hot spring on the road to Yarkand in a day or two, and shall have some shikar, &c. I shall quit this extraordinary place, (a vale partly desert, washed by the Attock, a noble stream, quarter mile wide, some 15 miles long, and surrounded by bare rugged mountains on every side, of vast height) in about 12 days or so: the snow will then begin to fall. I expect a cold march of it. He is very proud of his rock crystal, of which I can bring away as much as I please. As to the productions of the valley, I am making myself fully master of them. He refuses no sort of information. The fort is on a rock covered with alluvial soil; raised in the very centre of the valley from the bed of what was once most likely a lake. In size, shape, and appearance, washed on two sides of the river, it bears some resemblance to Salsburgh; as to the works, a few shafts for the wood, and round shot for the stone, would destroy them in a few hours. It would be ridiculous (certain death) to attempt going to Yarkand. Since Moorcroft was at Ladakh, they have got the picture of an Englishman, so I am assured, painted on the wall, that all who see me may know him. Yarkand is about a month's march—a harkara could go in 12 days. I am going to a classical sort of equestrian sport in a day or two such as I was happy to hear remarked was played in the time of Iskander. It had struck me that the course was precisely the shape of the course of Caracalla at Rome.

"Cashmir, 23rd October, 1835.—Here I am safe and well; arrived yesterday after a very severe march of 25 days from Iskardo, over as rough roads, if they deserve the name, as can be seen any where. I have with me four Yaks and all kinds of things. I hope to start hence in about 10 days and shall come the shortest road to Lahor. So pray oblige me by making some arrangements about the Indus. I should like to hire a boat, men, &c. It must be big enough to carry my yaks. They are not tall but heavy. I expect Baron Hugel here in two or three days, and suspect I shall have a very narrow escape of stopping another year in India, but must do every thing I can to get off in time."

"Cashmir, 30th October, 1835.—I wrote to you a few days ago to mention my safe return, but forgot to send the enclosed inscriptions. Pray post them off at your earliest convenience to Cosma de Koros, author of the Tibetan Dictionary, or some person competent to undertake their examination and request a translation, if possible, and soon, with my compliments. I began my panoramic view from the Tukht yesterday, the weather continues fine. There is nothing new to communicate, excepting that I hear the Baron is coming road that Jammu and cannot be far off now. I must be at Bombay by the middle of January."

Of the inscriptions alluded to in the last extract, one at least is in clear Tibetan characters, and will be doubtless easily decyphered by M. Cosma de Koros, to whom they will be sent at Malda.

The Baron Hugel had deviated from his proposed tour after ascending the pass from Bunderpur to Iskardo into little Tibet, on account of the advanced season; he had since joined M. Vigne at Lahor.

The Rev. Mr. Bateman in a letter from Bombay, communicated a facsimile of an inscription, supposed to be in Cufic characters, found by Captain Thomas Jervis at the village of Wara in the Southern Konkan; the original stone of which he had presented to the Bombay Literary Society.

The inscription is apparently in the elongated form of Nagari character, found on the coins of the Saurashtra group, and may in time be made out.

Mr. Trail, Commissioner of Kemion, presented further facsimiles of the inscription at Baginwar, near Almorah, which were made over to the Rev. Dr. Mill, V. P. for examination.

An anonymous address "to the Members of the Asiatic Society" signed VENRTAS, Hobart Town, Vandiemann's Land, September, 1835, developed a new theory of the origin of the Yugas of the Hindus, and called upon the Society to examine the subject more closely.

Whatever may be thought of the address, which from its want of authentication cannot be noticed, it is satisfactory to find the Society's research made the subject of study in the new colony.

PHYSICAL.

Lieut-Col. Colvin presented on the part of Lieutenants Baker and Durand, three fossils from the Dadpur collection, of great interest.

1. Part of the jaw of a rhinoceros, with two molar teeth attached.

2. The molar tooth of a camel; of which new fossil genus, they possess now the entire head.

3. A very distinct head of a fish.

To these Colonel Colvin added, on his own part, four fragments of the fossil shell of a tortoise, of gigantic dimensions.

The same officer presented on the part of Lieutenants Baker, a series of the fossil shells from the stream of blue marl, underlying hard sand, gravel, and yellow sand, inclined at an angle of 45° in the low range of hills at the head of the Delhi Canal. A sketch of the strata accompanied.

A note from Mr. B. H. Hodgson called the Society's attention to a paper and drawing of a new species of Colaptes, submitted to the Society several years since, of which by some inadvertence no notice had been taken.

A duplicate of the article was now furnished

It appears that the bird is described as new by the Zoological Society in 1832, thus depriving the author here of the priority of discovery and publication

Specimens of Cynyrus, Mahrattensis and Rynchoca Capensis—presented by M. Boucher

A specimen of Rana Theorniana—presented by Captain Lloyd, Indian Navy

Specimens of Squalus Zygonia and Maximus—presented by Mr. F. Shaw, of the Surveying Vessel Flores.

A collection of skins of birds, of snakes, fishes, Cuscuta and Mollusca—presented by Lieut Montreux Indian Navy, and Mr. F. Shaw.

A collection of skins of birds—presented by W. D. Smith, Esq.

A memoir by Messrs. Falconer and Cautley, on the peculiarities of two new species of fossil Hippopotamus, found in Siwalik range, was read.

A series of Geological specimens from the Shekhawati country, were presented by Mr. Falconer.

A memoir on a Geological collection made in the country between Hyderabad and Nagpur, and presented to the Society by the collector, Dr. Malcolmson, with a descriptive map, was submitted—Journal of the Asiatic Society for Jan

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA

Wednesday, February 10, 1836

A General Meeting took place this morning at the Town Hall

THE HON'BLE SIR E. RYAN, PRESIDENT, IN THE CHAIR

The proceedings of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Captain C. G. Dixon, Superintendent in Mhairwarrah, proposed last month, was duly elected a Member of the Society.

The following gentlemen were proposed.

T. J. Turner, Esq., Commissioner, Bundelcund, proposed by Col. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Bell, Charles Lyall, Esq., proposed by Mr. Piddington, seconded by Mr. S. Smith.

The Officiating Secretary laid upon the table 12 copies of the 2d volume of the Society's Transactions, which he had just received from the Serampore press, with a note from Mr. J. C. Marshman, proposing to undertake the editing of "Buchanan's Statistics."

Mr. Marshman conceives that all these valuable reports, if judiciously arranged, pruned of redundant matter might be compressed within 800 octavo pages, and that 300 copies of such a work would cost 1,600 rupees

Some difference of opinion prevailed as to whether the expense of publishing Statistics, came legitimately within the sphere of the Society's views, but previous to taking the subject into further consideration, it was deemed expedient to consult Mr. Jas. Fraser—and Mr. Piddington undertook to see that gentleman—when the Society would be better prepared to dispose of the question.

The President directed the attention of the Meeting to the discussion which took place last month, regarding the establishing a regular channel through which the Society might conveniently look for cotton seed, and with special reference to a proposal, which had been submitted by His Excellency Sir H. Fane, it was unanimously

Resolved.—That the Commander-in-Chief be solicited to write to Mr. Thompson, President of the Board of Trade, and to express the great anxiety felt by the Society, to have a direct channel opened, in order to secure a regular supply of fresh cotton seed from America, and that a letter of credit be given to the effect of one hundred rupees annually, to meet such expenses.

Further.—That the whole amount he invested in the distribution of seed should be "Upland Georgia."

This arrangement was considered amply comprehensive with reference to the large orders, now in course of fulfilment by private individuals, in virtue of previous Resolutions.

Mr. Storm proposed that a trial should be made to introduce the Egyptian cotton

Resolved.—That two hundred rupees be set aside for this purpose, and that the Officiating Secretary do take such measures, as will ensure a speedy supply

Mr. Bell suggested, with reference to an Official letter which lay on the table, from Captain Sleeman, to the address of C. E. Trevelyan, Esq., Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, and generally to the growing enquiry of the Otaheite sugar-cane, that some prompt measures should be adopted to obtain a supply, from the Mauritius, for distribution throughout India. Mr. Henley, late of Bengal, now a resident in the Isle of France, had recently, while on a visit to Calcutta, tendered his services to the Society through the Officiating Secretary, in any way they might be available.

The Hon'ble Mr. Melville also kindly offered to communicate with a friend on the subject, and it was resolved, that both these offers be accepted, and that the Officiating Secretary be authorized to go to a certain expense, for freight, &c attending a regular series of supplies.

Mr. Kyd noticed that the shipment of canes should be arranged, so as to ensure their arrival in Calcutta between the months of March and May.

The Secretary laid upon the table, lists of the names of mallus to whom medals and rewards had been given at the exhibitions of vegetables which took place on the 20th ult. and 3rd instant.

Some notes were handed to the Officiating Secretary by the Hon'ble Mr. Melville, proposing amendments for the consideration of the Committee, on the subject of prize vegetables.

The following communications were read, viz.

No. 1.—From Captain W. H. Sleeman, General Superintendent, to the address of C. E. Trevelyan, Esq., Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, dated Camp Kirowlee, January 6th, 1836, enclosing copy of a letter from Captain Ouseley in charge of Hoshungabad district, under date the 10th August, 1834

Captain Ouseley states that the India-cane received on the 16th March had begun some every fortnight from the 1st April up to the 10th August 1834, and had grown very well indeed, but that the first month's sowings were not so good, as that sowed with the first rain in June.

Captain Onseley intimates his intention to distribute all the seed that might be collected to the patals, &c. of the district.

Captain Sleeman's experiments were equally successful, and he states that the Indian-corn supplied by Mr. J. Bell, was found to thrive very well in the Sagar district, that the seed there produced on being transplanted to the Jubulpore district, was found so much finer than the ordinary corn of the country, that the whole of a large crop has been distributed for seed among the farmers.

Captain Sleeman agrees with Captain Onseley, that the best crop was derived from seed planted after the first showers of the rainy season, but fears that this superior corn will degenerate in native hands from being sown too closely together.

Captain Sleeman bears testimony to another important fact, viz. that the Otaheite sugar-cane is now in point of size, colour and quality, the same as when fresh planted in his grounds at Jubulpore in 1828, which demonstrates, that nothing but a little attention to soil, mode of planting, and treatment, is wanting, to introduce this very superior cane, into every sugar district throughout India.

2.—From G. J. Siddons, Esq., Post Master General, dated 2d February, 1836, in reply to a letter from the Officiating Secretary, soliciting that parcels of seeds for dispatch by dak bhanghy, might be received at the Post office, bearing postage.

The Post Master General sets no obstacle to the concession of the indulgence solicited, but recommends that the Society should apply to Government as he is not vested with authority to meet their wishes in this respect.

3.—From Col. Dunlop, dated 30th January, presenting in the name of Captain C. M. Wade, a further supply of seeds, the produce of various countries between the Indus and the Caspian, which Captain Wade describes as superior to any before sent.

4.—From Captain C. M. Wade to the officiating Secretary, dated Serapoor, 1st January, enclosing a draft for his subscription to the Society, and requesting occasional supplies of seed, received from the Cape, America and England, for distribution among natives in that vicinity, who have expressed a wish for fruits and vegetables of foreign growth.

Captain Wade is also anxious to introduce the English pear and apple.

5.—From James Prinsep, Esq., dated 2d February, forwarding two volumes of the transactions of the Philosophical Society of Geneva, presented to the Agricultural Society of India.

6.—From W. Bruce, Esq., of Calcutta, dated 1st February, presenting in the name of Captain Jenkins, a bag of cotton, sent to the latter, by M. Hugon, who states it to be produced at Newgong from American seed.

7.—From G. T. Hodgkinson, Esq., dated 2d February, presenting to the Society, a bag of uas cotton seed, and a few ginger roots, both received from Jamaica via Liverpool, also, two pots of clover, grown at Akra from English seed, accompanied by two bottles of the seeds for distribution to any gentleman who may be desirous to give it a trial on a large scale, together with some cassava roots introduced here.

Mr. Hodgkinson is of opinion that ginger can be produced in Bengal equal in every respect to the best Jamaica, and an opportunity now occurs to give it a fair trial, by a careful propagation of the few roots, which appear to be vegetating.

They were imported in a cask well soldered, imbedded in a light sandy mould, a circumstance worthy of notice, since Mr. H. had before received a supply carefully packed in a wooden case, which were all good for nothing.

The "uas" is described by Mr. Hodgkinson to be a very superior description of cotton, "though of rather too long staple, which, tending to weaken its strength, lessens in some degree its value."

This defect Mr. H. thinks may be remedied by change of soil and climate, and recommends the Society to forward it to the neighbourhood of Mirzapore, and if possible to adopt the American mode of cultivating it in squares.

A further supply of madder seed was likewise presented by Mr. Hodgkinson.

8.—From Mr. D. W. H. Speed, presenting a basket of arrow-root-bulbs, grown by him at Alipore, and from part of which cultivation the powder was made, which was shown at the Town Hall, on the first Annual Exhibition of Vegetables for this year.

9.—From Mr. J. W. Masters, enclosing a prospectus of the Garden Kalendar, which he proposes to edit, on being supplied with information from such members, and others who may feel disposed to contribute to the extent of their experience, with a sample of brown corn, produced in the Botanical Garden, from seed received from Captain Weston of Sydney through C. K. Robinson, Esq.

Memo. This is the same grain, of which Mr. Bell presented an unripe sample on the 9th December last, from seed received through the same channel.

Mr. Masters describes it as a very hardy and prolific grain, and now that it is ripe the Officiating Secretary will be happy to supply any gentleman who may desire to cultivate it.

10.—Extract of a letter from Col. Burney, dated Ava, 6th December, 1835, to the address of James Kyd, Esq., acknowledging receipt of some Cape seeds sent him by Mr. Kyd, and speaking in the highest terms of their excellence.

Col. Burney considers this parcel a great treasure, adding "you have no idea how many people you have made happy and grateful here." This must indeed be the case, when it is stated by Col. Burney that the large portion of the inhabitants are dependant on the leaves of trees, as a substitute, while the wealthiest are confined to brinjals, love-apples, pumpkins, radishes and a few peas.

Col. Burney's communication is accompanied by a specimen of a kind of hemp brought from the Vhan Provinces of Pinda and Yonk Yonk, a week's journey to the S. W. of Ava.

11.—From H. Piddington, Esq., a small bag of "riz creole," (creole rice) from Maumus which is considered a great delicacy among the inhabitants.

Mr. Piddington suggests that some gentlemen connected with that trade, be requested to give it a trial here.

12.—A parcel of kidney cotton with the seed attached, presented by Mr. Kyd in the name of Captain Scott, Master Attendant at Malacca, where Capt. Scott states it to have been produced.

13.—From Capt. Sage to the Officiating Secretary, dated the 26th January, calling for a copy of the Society's proceedings of the 12th August last, relating to the Dinapore Branch Society.

(The President Sir E. Ryan, here withdrew and the chair was taken by Col. Dunlop V. P.) After a very long discussion, Captain Sage being present, during which most of the members withdrew. The following minutes was drawn up by Capt. Sage and Mr. Fiddington conjointly, and the officiating Secretary was ordered to give it a place in the proceedings of the Society.

Then Capt. Sage called to the notice of the meeting the paragraph relative to the Dinapore Branch Society, from the published proceedings of the Society of India of the 12th August, 1825, stating the question to be one "unconnected with Agricultural pursuits," which was calculated to mislead those unacquainted with the subject of the resumption of the Branch Society's Charter at Dinapore—when the meeting being desirous of removing such an impression as the paragraph might be calculated to produce, and being wholly ignorant of the transactions referred to, expressed itself as far from wishing to attribute any thing in the way of personal interest to Capt. Sage, who had been the Secretary to the Branch Society for six years."

JOHN BELL, Officiating Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, 10th Feb. 1836.—Hurkara.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, 6th February.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy and Mr. E. W. W. Raleigh, proposed at the last Meeting

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read

From E. T. Harpur, Esq, Surgeon 55th Regt N 1, A. Macqueen, Esq, Surgeon H. M.'s 3d Buss, and J. Anderson, Esq., Bombay, requesting that their names might be withdrawn from the Society.

From W. Bell, Esq., enclosing a specimen of friable calcification successfully extracted by him.

From Messrs Beckwith and Co of Bombay, forwarding the Society's account current, and a hundi for 248-13-8, being the balance of last year's account

From Thomas Oxley, Esq, forwarding two preparations for the Society's Museum with a description of the same, viz.

No 1.—A portion of the left ventricle and a couple of inches of the aorta slit open, shewing an aneurism of one of the pouches of Morgagni.

No. 2.—Specimens of worms found in the heart, pulmonary artery and aorta of a dog.

The subject of the first case was a convict who was said to have received a kick in the scrotum from one of his companions, upon which he immediately expired

On dissection, the pericardium was found to be filled with coagulated blood produced by the rupture of the aneurism above-mentioned.

The worms were found in a terrier bitch about 3 years old, which had been ailing for some time before her death, exhibiting great restlessness and defection of spirits. The heart was hypertrophied and the worms which were forwarded, were discovered in considerable quantity in the heart twined around the columnar carina and the great vessels, some even in the minute branches of the pulmonary artery. They were small sting-like bodies, possessing but little vitality.

A specimen of stony concretion found in the stomach of a cow, was presented for the museum by J. Hutchinson, Esq, on behalf of the Medical Board

The following communications were then presented.

A paper on purulent discharges from the bladder and rectum in hepatic diseases, by J. Mount, Esq, Surgeon H. M.'s 11th Dragoons.

Sketch of an undescribed species of venomous serpent belonging to the genus noja, by Dr. Cantoi Cases of sickness prevailing among the sepoy at Agra, with reports of the medical officers attached to the various detachments affected, presented by the Medical Board.

W. H. GOODRICE,

Secretary Medical and Physical Society.—Hurkara.

LITERARY SOCIETY AND AUXILIARY OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

The Annual Meeting of the Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society on the 30th January attracted to its interesting proceedings no less than 9 members! The President, Sir Robert Compton, filled the chair, and the Rev Mr. Spring performed the duties of Secretary.

The chief business of the meeting was passing the accounts of the preceding year and filling up vacancies in the Committee. The former were satisfactory, shewing that notwithstanding the unaccountable apathy of our Literary Society still possess an annual income of above 4000 rupees, and in the latter the selections were judicious. Colonel Cullen, Captain Rowlandson and Dr. Macleod went out of the Committee by rotation—the first desired to remain out, Capt. Rowlandson was re-elected, and the vacant places filled up by the Venerable Archdeacon Forbes and Mr. Minchin—Mr. Harpur pledged his best exertions to impart a Literary tone to the Society, in view of the solitary reputation as a Book Club in Calcutta enjoyed, and the Honorable President expressed his willingness to give at all times to the Society the benefit of his valuable co-operation in their labours. We congratulate the public upon the general disposition that was evinced, to assist and encourage the extraction of its full measure of Literary and Scientific good from what ought naturally to prove such abundant material as the resources of this Society—the assembled body it is true was but small, yet the little rushlight may, and we hope will, excite a broad blaze, and the members at large rally around the symptoms of rekindling animation. It is in this hope we would let by gones be by gones and refrain now from comment on the non-assembling of Committee, which was avowed in the course of the meeting.

In deference (though rather unnecessary) to the absent majority, specific resolutions were not come to, but the members of Committee present, in what transpired, stand pledged to two useful steps—the one removing from Messrs. Parbury, Allen and Co. the choice of Books to be despatched from England for the Society, and which duty it is hoped that Mr. Clark will undertake,—and the other, to appoint an examining Committee, for inspection of the regular stock of Books, and to discard that mass of rubbish in the shape of trumpery novels, &c. which has too long disgraced the shelves of the Society's Library, and which Messrs. PARSONS and Co.'s diligence only keeps on the increase.

Aut rest we may observe that the Journal in a pecuniary point of view appears to be a losing concern; but we trust that the Committee, when entering on active and vigorous operations, will press upon the earneat attention of Government the able suggestions of our correspondent Philosophicus in reference to exemption of such work from postage. The abovementioned fact, is to a certain extent, evidence of its paralyzing effect, and the incontestably useful object of publications of this nature should surely plead with a loud voice for a removal of the obstruction. — Madras Herald.

BOMBAY BRANCH OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, was held in the Society's Rooms, on Wednesday, the 27th January.

The ordinary business of the meeting having been transacted.

The President proceeded, agreeably to an intimation given at the last meeting, to take a review of the past proceedings of the Society, and of some of the various subjects of inquiry, especially connected with the west of India, which still invite consideration. He first referred to the topics adverted to in the discourse delivered at the formation of the Society by Sir James Mackintosh.

He (Mr. Wilson) expressed his regret that on the subject of Natural History, the transactions of the Society contain very few communications. The study, he observed, being directly conversant with the works of God, is, in all circumstances, possessed of the highest interest, and conduces both in intellectual gratification, and moral improvement; and in such a country as India, so vast in its extent, and grand and multifarious in its productions, it is possessed of peculiar charms. The sojourners in Bombay have in the mountains and forests, and islands in the neighbourhood, innumerable objects, connected especially with Geology, Botany and Zoology, which allure attention, both from their comparative novelty and intrinsic interest. The report of observation and discovery connected with them would form an agreeable recreation even to those who may be most ardent and persevering in their researches into the other important objects of the Society's investigation. On the subject of Statistics, he repeated the opinion expressed by Sir James Mackintosh, that they form the data of Political Economy; and adverted to the several notices given in the Transactions, and in the publications of the Royal Asiatic Society, &c. by Dr. Marshall, Coates, and Bird, Captain Jervis, and Lieut. Burnes, and in connexion with them to a paper by Mr. Bruce, of the Civil Service, on the application of the principles of Political Economy, as received in Europe, to the state of India.

The present condition of the people in the different provinces in regard to language, religion, literature, science and art, means of support, and manners and customs, was next adverted to, as the paramount object of the Society's investigation.

In reference to the Parsis he noticed the illustrations of their history and chronology furnished by Sir John Malcolm and Colonel Kennedy; and of their religion and sacred books by Messrs. Erskin, Rask, Mohl, Shea, Neumann, and Atkinson, in their learned essays, or translations, from the oriental languages. The curiosity of the public respecting them, he remarked, however, is far from being satisfied, as is evident from the enquiries which frequently reach this place both from London and Paris. He had great hopes, that professor Burnoulli's attempt to furnish a faithful translation of the Vendidad Sâdê would be successful. Should that great scholar fail, from the disadvantages of his situation in Europe, the facilities for the accomplishment of the work, furnished in Bombay, should not remain unembraced. Much light still requires to be cast on the popular superstitions, and domestic manners of the Zoroastrians in India; and versions of the narratives which they have of their early settlement in this country, should be presented to the oriental translation fund. At a late meeting to the Committee of Correspondence of the Royal Asiatic Society, some of the more liberal natives in Bombay had been invited, on the proposal of Sir Alexander Johnson, to form themselves into an association with the view of collecting information on some of the topics to which he (Mr. W.) had referred. Little, he feared, however, could be expected from them without the co-operation of European scholars; and he was consequently decidedly of opinion, that should any of the Parsis of competent attainments and zeal, and respectable character and influence, ask memberships of this Society, it should be readily accorded.

With regard to the Muslimans, the researches of the Society, he conceived, had been most important. The question—so interesting in the history of the errors of the human mind—was Muhammed an impostor or an enthusiast, had been discussed with ingenuity by Colonel Vans Kennedy. The same distinguished orientalist had furnished us with a correct estimate of the literature of the Muslimans in Persia, and a lucid and minute abstract of the Muhammedan Municipal Law, a jurisprudence hitherto greatly overlooked, but of much importance. The distinctions between the Shias and Sunnis had been well illustrated by Sir John Malcolm; and the opinions of the Sufis and Mohdavis, by Lieut. Graham, and Col. Miles, Mr. Ross and Mr. Frissel, had contributed to the elucidation of the Musliman Ethics. What we chiefly want in reference to the Muhammedan religion, is a fuller account of the state of Arabic at the time of its origin, of the history of its religious influence, distinguished as much as possible from that of the military exploits and civil arrangements of its followers, which have hitherto almost altogether engrossed attention; of the general arguments by which its doctors have urged its pretensions in opposition to Christianity; of the Bohoras and other curious sectaries; and of the peculiar practices, superinduced upon it in this country by intercourse both with the speculative and superstitions Hindûs. The illustrations of this last point furnished by Col. Kennedy, M. Garnier de Tassy, and Dr. Herklots were respectively noticed, and also the works on Indian history, furnished by the Muhammedans, and translated by Col. Briggs, Capt. Rowlandson, and Dr. Bird.

After noticing, separately, the various tribes of the Hindûs of which there are accounts in the transactions of the Society, he observed that there are still many who require to be described. Those resident in the jungles, and mountainous districts, and who are probably the remains of the aborigines of the country, he considered particularly worthy of attention. He then noticed the exertions of the Society, and its members, for the elucidation of the Hindû religion and literature. The Society was the first body which had proposed a union for the promotion of translations from Sanskrit; and it had encouraged the printing of the Lildvati, and Prabodh Chandroday. Major E. Moor was the first to publish a general account of the Hindú Pantheon. In Col. Kennedy's treatise on the Ancient and Hindú Mythology, and in his essay on the Vendanta, we have very valuable quotations from the Shastras, and learned disquisitions. Nothing more important, in a literary and philosophical point of view, as yet appeared on the subjects of which they treat. In Bombay, two defences of Hindúism, the first published by natives, had appeared and been refuted. Here was published a translation of the largest portion of the Rig-Veda yet presented to the curiosity of Europe. A translation of the whole of this work, to which he believed Prof. H. H. Wilson had returned his attention, and of the Bhagavata Purana the greatest practical authority in the west of India, were desiderata. On the various sects of the Hindus, and on their provincial superstitions, and on the religion of the Jainas much light is required to be cast. He concluded his remarks on this subject by expressing his hope, that there are among the members of the Society those who will continue to contribute, as circumstances may call them, to the exposition of the different systems of faith which exercise their sway in this country; by pointing out the benefits of research connected with them, to all who wish to understand the native character, and to obtain a right key to the native mind, and desirable facilities for the introduction into the country of a body of rational and equitable law, the propagation of the Gospel and the advancement of general education; and by urging the speedy collection of Sanskrit MSS. in the Deccan, where they are to be found in a purer state than in any other part of India. He then adverted to the general subject of Hindú antiquities, and noticed in particular the descriptions which have been furnished of the excavations of Elephanta, Salsette, Ellora, Bág and Ajantá and which, though a few errors and oversights may be detected in them, are very valuable. Mr. Erskine's papers take the precedence in importance. Mr. Stevenson had been successful, to a great extent, in decyphering the ancient inscriptions at Karálí, and those at Kánadí in Salsette were very similar to them. The caves of Násik and Junar, &c. and the temples of Abu, Pálláná, and Gírnár, require to be particularly described. The ancient grants of land were next to them in importance. One had been translated by the late Dr. Taylor; and Mr. Wathen had been successful in decyphering and translating the most ancient of those in the Society's museum; and the results were both curious and useful. The ancient coins found to the northward, promised to be useful in a Chronological point of view, as had been well evinced by Mr. Prinsep, of Calcutta.

The small bodies of Beni-Israel, and Armenians in Bombay, were briefly referred to. A dissertation by one of the latter, on the antiquity of their native language, with notes by Mr. Dickinson, had been sent to the Royal Asiatic Society, and could not fail to be acceptable. There cannot be a doubt, it was remarked, that the Armenians can fill up important blanks in Church History, which, to the undue neglect of the Orientals, is principally formed on the authority of the Roman and Ryzantine Fathers.

In conclusion, the researches of Malcolm, Pottinger, Richard and Burnes, &c. in the countries adjacent to India, were noticed; and the hope was expressed that the Society will maintain the character which it has earned for itself, and prove not unworthy of its incorporation with the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, an incorporation which notwithstanding some disadvantages, must be admitted to be beneficial, as it secures that literary sympathy and communication which is great to be valued, and the circulation of the papers of the members in a convenient form, throughout the world.

It has then proposed by Mr. Bruce, seconded by Mr. Farish, and resolved unanimously—That the thanks of the Meeting be offered to the President for his very interesting and valuable address, and that he be requested to allow it to be printed, that copies may be circulated to each member of the Society.—Bombay Courier,

MEETING OF THE PRIVATE FRIENDS OF THE LATE MR. PALMER.

A Meeting of the private friends of the late Mr. Palmer took place at the Town Hall on the 16th February, pursuant to the invitation of Sir Charles D'Oyly. But as the meeting was expressly declared to be private, we do not feel at liberty to make further use of our notes than to say that it was decided to raise a subscription to defray the expense of a marble bust of the deceased to be executed by one of the best British Sculptors. It was understood that, if the funds raised considerably exceeded the expense of a bust, another meeting should be called, to decide whether a statue should not be ordered instead of, or a portrait in addition to, the bust.

Messrs. Cockerell and Co. were appointed treasurers. —Hurkara.

MEETING OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Central Committee of the District Charitable Society was held at the Town Hall on the 8th February, pursuant to advertisement, for the purpose of electing office-bearers and transacting general business. The President, Sir Edward Ryan, was in the Chair.

The office-bearers of the last year were re-elected with the addition of two Vice-Presidents, Sir B. Malkin and C. H. Cameron, Esq. The President, in requesting that Captain Birch would continue to act as Secretary, expressed the high sense the Committee entertained of the very important services that gentleman had rendered to the Society, in which just tribute all who take interest in its success must fully concur.

The Secretary read the Report of the Society for the past year, which will be published in a few days, for the information of Members, or we should have solicited permission to give it entire in our pages, notwithstanding its length, so highly do we estimate the value of its object and so desirous are we that the public should be made fully acquainted with them, which we are sure is all that is necessary to ensure the extensive support requisite to give full effect to the Society's humane labors.

The Report notices the great liberality of Lord and Lady William Bentinck and of Sir Charles Metcalfe—but regrets that, with a few honorable exceptions, all appeals to Native liberality in behalf of their suffering countrymen have proved in vain.

Lady William Bentinck has, it appears, made over to this Society the money accumulated by public contributions, under the denomination of her Ladyship's Fund—appointing the Governor-General, the Chief Justice and the Bishop of Calcutta, Trustees for the same, and directing that the principal shall be invested in Company's paper and the interest disbursed as specified, "without reference to religion, country or cast." This fund forms the first permanent endowment to the Society, and amounts, we believe, at present, to do about 10,000 rupees.

Sir Charles Metcalfe, in addition to his munificent private donations, has in his public capacity, authorized the Secretary to this Society, to grant to sick paupers, free admission to the General Hospital.

The report expresses thanks to the proprietors of newspapers who had occasionally given gratuitous insertion to the Society's advertisement, stating that persons willing to take employment as servants, apprentices, &c., might be heard of on application at the Secretary's office. This advertisement, however, it appears, has not been attended with much success. The Secretary had, it would seem, been applied to, in more instances than one, as if he were bound to provide servant, for masters and masters for servants: as if he were in fact, the Secretary to a servant's registry office! It has therefore been found expedient to remind friends of the institution that a person, by becoming known to this Committee, may occasionally be put in the way of employment—but the main object of the Society is to relieve distressed persons, not to provide situations of any kind.

The state of the Funds appear to have improved, notwithstanding the large demands on them. In the year 1834, the receipts were Sa. Rs. 52,942 9-6, and disbursements 50,502 2-6—the balance on hand, at the end of the year being 10,538 9 0. In the year 1835 the receipts were 54,592—5, and the disbursements 52,008 2 1, leaving a balance in favor of the Society, on the 1st January, 1836, of Sa. Rs. 13,122 7 4.

This Society, like others, have decided that from 1st May all disbursements shall be expressed and paid in Company's rupees.

Mr. Phipps's plan for the establishment of a School of Trades, in connexion with the Society, had failed, owing to several local obstacles; among which are the want of apprenticing laws, and the peculiar situation of young people who might be placed with tradesmen, and who would find themselves in an anomalous position, relatively both to their masters and the servants of the household; a circumstance, as the Report observes, very unfavourable to their morals and general welfare.

The Leper Hospital had again been taken under the management of the Society, in consequence of the improved state of its funds, and the decision of the Governors of the Native Hospital to withhold their support in future. Dr. Jackson had afforded his gratuitous services as Medical attendant, for which the thanks of the Society were tendered to him.

Thanks were also voted to a Sub-Committee, of which the Honorable Mr. Robertson was Chairman, for their valuable exertions in visiting the different districts and examining and revising the stipendiary disbursements—by which considerable retrenchments had been effected. It was resolved that a similar Committee should be appointed every year for the same purpose—a very judicious arrangement. In fact, all the proceedings of this Society are governed by such a careful and discreet management, that the funds of its charitable subscribers are most faithfully husbanded and watchfully administered—thus relieving a much greater number of really deserving objects, than twice the amount would effect under improvident arrangements.

A Lady's Committee has been associated with the Central Committee, to assist in furthering the objects of the Society, especially with reference to the employment of indigent females, able and willing to work. We are happy amongst the list to see the names of many ladies whose benevolence adds lustre to their rank in society.

We congratulate this community on the existence of such a Society, and we rejoice with the Committee, that it has been the instrument of doing so much good during the past year. We exhort all those who can spare any sum, however small, to aid in the relief of indigent fellow beings—to whom, their charity is distributed "without reference to country, religion or caste."—Hur-laru.

NATIVE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

We attended on the 13th Feb. an examination of the pupils of the Native Medical College and were equally astonished and gratified at the readiness with which the most difficult questions were answered. The examination commenced with chemistry conducted by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, Professor of that science. We are unable to give any very detailed account of it and can only state generally its nature. It embraced questions on the essential qualities of matter; examples of great extension of matter; the purposes of matter; on the difference between chemical affinity and attraction and other species of affinity and attraction, with examples; the meaning of a simple substance; enumerations of the different gases and the modes of generating them; the number of combinations which oxygen can form with a metallic base; from what substances oxygen can be obtained; whether there is but one mode of obtaining it from manganese; why sulphuric acid is the most economical agent for obtaining it from that substance; the chief properties of oxygen, nitrogen, nitric acid, carbon, &c.; and a great many other questions of much greater difficulty. In fact Dr. O'Shaughnessy admitted that he was pressing the students latterly rather hard, but we believe he was quite satisfied with the replies he obtained from them and from some particularly who seemed to be very young, and we heard several gentlemen present express their surprise and gratification.

Dr. Goodeve, the Professor of Anatomy, next examined the youths in Anatomy, and called on them to demonstrate several not very easy propositions. Principal Bramley afterwards aided in the examination and did not at all spare the youths. Dr. Duncan Stewart also put a number of questions to them, and we are not aware that in any one instance these gentlemen failed in obtaining satisfactory replies from some of the students. They evinced very great proficiency in the anatomy of the muscles and nerves, the course of the arteries and relative positions; and in osteology their practical knowledge was admitted by all the professional gentlemen present to be most extraordinary.

Altogether the exhibition was one of the most interesting we have witnessed, connected with education, and reflects the highest credit on the professors, to whose talents and exertions the native community are deeply indebted.

We seized the occasion to inspect the New College not yet quite completed, which shews that the Government have taken up this business of professional education in proper spirit. No niggardly economy is to be complained of here. The arrangements evince a truly liberal feeling.

The building when complete will embrace every object that can facilitate the acquirement of Chemical and Surgical knowledge. The Theatre is capable of holding 500 pupils, there is a room for the study of practical anatomy, a museum, a laboratory, a library and reading room, &c. The building was formerly the Petty Court Jail which has been greatly enlarged and has the advantage of having attached to it the police hospital where the pupils will have the opportunity of actual observation of disease in its various stages and the modes of treatment, explained by the professors. The institution is indeed a noble one, and gives every promise of glorious results entrusted as it is to the guidance of men, who in addition to great professional skill and judgment, are animated by a zeal worthy of the noble cause of professional education in which they are engaged. In estimating the advantages likely to arise from such an Institution, we should greatly underrate them if we supposed they would be limited to the mere supply of a certain number of native practitioners or to the relief to be derived to suffering humanity from the spread of professional knowledge. We must consider this Institution as a sort of normal College, which will in time supply teachers of other colleges, by whose means medical science will be rapidly diffused all over India, and we must take into account the effect which the increase of scientific acquirements must have in undermining the fabric of superstition and ignorance, and elevating the moral condition of the people. In short, we dare scarcely trust ourselves to express the hopes which inspire us when we look to all the consequences likely to flow from such institutions so conducted.

We have only to add that the pupils, about 70 in number, are chiefly Hindoos from 14 to 17 years of age, who are receiving general education at the Hindu College and who come over daily to the Medical College for two hours to receive professional education. At the expiration of the first year, however, we understand that the students will devote themselves entirely to the study of Medicine.—Bengal Herald.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

TO THE HON'BLE A. ROSS, ESQUIRE.

Governor of the Presidency of Agra.

The humble Memorial of the undersigned Uncovenanted Assistants or Clerks in the offices of Government at Allahabad.

Sheweth,—That your Memorialists are members of a numerous class of public servants in the different offices at this station, and they flatter themselves that they are useful in their humble sphere in proportion to the operation of those circumstances which universally exercise an influence on mental and physical exertions.

Your Memorialists will not trespass on your Honor's time and patience by indulging in preliminary observations, but proceed to place at once before your Honor the subject of this address, which they consider to be of importance to their respectability as members of a large community; to their independence as free agents; and to their rights and privileges as British subjects.

That for acts connected with their public employment, your Memorialists have always held themselves responsible to their immediate official superiors, and bowed with unmurmuring and respectful submission to their authority and may decisions; but for acts unconnected with their public duties, and done in their character of private individuals, or as a section of the people, they have always considered themselves amenable, in common with all classes of subjects, only to the ordinary laws of the land.

That your Memorialists have, however, with concern and alarm recently witnessed attempts on the part of some of the Government functionaries to assume and exercise over private acts a jurisdiction, which, as far as your Memorialists are aware, appear to be sanctioned neither by general practice, established precedent, the tacit acquiescence of Government, nor by the Regulations in force; and which, if permitted to be exercised, will tend, not virtually, but practically, to deprive them of all their rights, absolute and relative, as "natural men" or "free agents," and members of society, and subject them, for no other reason than because your Memorialists are the uncovenanted servants of Government, to hardships and grievances, from which communities of all denominations in the civil state are by common consent and usage, entirely exempted.

That your Memorialists are sensible that public authorities, or to be more explicit, the dignity of public office should be protected from insult; and it cannot be denied that it is sufficiently and absolutely protected in actual administration from contempt or disrespect by the laws enacted for that purpose. On the other hand, they are equally sensible, that high birth, high station, wealth, in short, all the adventitious constituents of personal greatness (contradistinguished from official dignity,) cannot ex tunc respect and homage, expect relatively, in so far as such superior circumstances or qualities are per se calculated to secure them by their irresistible moral influence.

That your Memorialists do not, by this mode of reasoning, intend to excuse or justify the wilful and capricious denial of the respect unquestionably due to private rank; but they may be permitted to observe that infringement of etiquette and good manners, is not an offence, which can justly call for the interference of official authority, and require to be visited with official punishment.

Your Memorialists may be further permitted to state that they are convinced, that it can never be either the desire or the interest of a liberal, just and free Government to impose severe and unnecessary restraints on the liberty of the subject, or to regulate and constrain his conduct in matters of mere indifference, and more especially in matters that, being of a strictly private nature, cannot, and do not, require the peremptory and authoritative interference of Government functionaries.

Your Memorialists deem it necessary to explain in this place the circumstance which have given rise to the present address, and they therefore respectfully beg to submit a brief and clear statement of the same.

A grass-cutter in the employ of Mr. R. Alexander, of the Civil Service, having lately trespassed on the premises occupied by Mr. D. Permien, late a clerk in the English establishment of the Sudder Dewanee Adawlut, was desired by one of that gentleman's servants to quit the ground; but instead of complying with this reasonable request, he threw down his load of grass and maltreated the servants. Mr. Permien, on hearing of the affray, and on inquiring into the truth of it, chastised the grass-cutter by the infliction of a few slaps on the face, when the grass-cutter went and complained to his master of the treatment he had received, and Mr. Alexander in consequence addressed a note to Mr. Permien, requesting an explanation of his conduct, but on receiving an uncourteous reply, preferred a complaint against Mr. Permien, through the officiating Registrar, to the court of Sudder Dewanee Adawlut, and the court (acting thereon, it is presumed, as employers, and not in its judicial capacity, for in the latter case its proceedings should and would have been formal) in consequence removed Mr. Permien from the appointment to which he had been a short time before temporarily promoted. These facts will be established by a reference to documents nos. 1 to 3.

Your Memorialists have not the remotest intention of standing up as the apologists of Mr. Permien's discourteous behaviour to a gentleman moving in a higher sphere of life. Indeed as a body they regret Mr. Permien's want of civility; but on the other hand, your Memorialists are at a loss to discover any grounds for subjecting an affair, private ab initio in every respect, to the scrutiny of official cognizance.

For the object of this address your Memorialists have deemed it sufficient to confine allusion to a single case, and they trust they have fully shown that the invidious and obnoxious power of interfering with private matters has been exercised in the above instance, to their serious prejudice, by public officers of high rank, respectability and intelligence, whose decisions are, therefore, the more likely to pass into and receive the sanction of an established precedent. The injury which such summary proceedings, as have been referred to in a preceding paragraph are calculated to inflict on your Memorialists is necessarily aggravated by its tendency to deprive them of all moral, political and private rights, which cannot but reduce their condition to a degraded and contemptible level.

Under all the circumstances urged by your Memorialists, they most humbly pray that your Honor would be pleased to prohibit the unpleasant interference from which they seek to be exempted; or should it appear that the authority in question is really and bona fide vested in the functionaries of Government, to prescribe rules defining the extent to which your Memorialists ought, in justice and equity, to be considered amenable to official notice, in matters of a strictly private character,—matters that do not and cannot in the remotest degree affect their public character or the discharge of their public duties. And finally in the event of your Honor deciding that your Memorialists are, or ought to be held accountable to their official superiors, even for acts committed out of the limits of office, your Memorialists respectfully entreat that your Honor would be further pleased to determine whether under circumstances of any provocation being offered to their feelings, the door of complaint in the proper quarter will be equally open to your Memorialists, and redress afforded for any private wrong that may be done to them. Your Memorialists the more confidently solicit this degree of consideration at your Honor's hands as they cannot persuade themselves that any impartial and enlightened Government would confer peculiar and exclusive privileges on one class, and recognise the existence of another only for the purpose of punishment, and never for any degree of protection.

And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(SIGNED BY NINETY-FOUR.

Allahabad, February 3, 1836.

No. 1.—Mr. Alexander requests that Mr. Permien will explain under what circumstances and for what reason he beat Mr. Alexander's servant, and took from him the grass he was then bringing to his stable, for which proceeding, if the man's statement be correct, no provocation whatever was given.

November 22, 1835.

No. 2.—As Mr. Alexander requests of Mr. Permien an explanation, and supposes he is bound to comply, Mr. Permien hereby refuses to do so. The man who supposes himself to be ill-treated can apply to the magistrate's court for redress.

November 22, 1835.

No. 3.—It having been reported to the Court by the Registrar, that Mr. Permien, one of the clerks on their establishment, had ill-used a syce in Mr. Alexander's service, of which he had been found guilty by the magistrate, and that on being called upon by Mr.

Hereby hangs a tale. Such was the Magistrate's zealous impatience and predetermination to find Mr. P. — guilty, that the case was called on and decided a day previous to that originally fixed, by notice served on the defendant, for hearing and this too without intimating to the defendant, in any way that the change had been determined on. Mr. P., who, it was admitted, had cause for provocation, was found guilty, of course, of taking the law in his own hands, and fined 15 rupees, a penalty double that inflicted by the same Magistrate a short time before on a person with better income who it was proved had drawn blood profusely from a Jew —

ONE OF THE 94.

Alexander, to explain the reason of his maltreating his servant, had written him a highly disrespectful letter, and this being the second time that the court have had occasion to find fault with Mr. Permien's conduct, the court having in the former instance been under the necessity of dismissing him from the office for grossly ill-treating one of the native sectioners, which punishment was remitted as an act of grace on Mr. Permien's promising to conduct himself properly in future.

The court are, therefore, pleased to mark their disapprobation of Mr. Permien's conduct in the instance now before them by removing him from the acting appointment which he at present holds, and direct that he resume charge of his proper office.

The Register will communicate the court's order to Mr. Permien.

Sudder Dewanee Nizamut Adawlut, Dec. 4th, 1835.

[REPLY TO THE ABOVE.]

TO MESSRS. E. G. FRASER, W. JOHNSON AND OTHERS, Unconvenanted assistants in the Government offices at Allahabad.

GENTLEMEN.—The Honorable the Governor having given his best consideration to the Memorial submitted by you under date the 3d instant, directs me to make the following communication in reply.

You represent that a jurisdiction over the private acts of the class of public servants to which you belong, not sanctioned by the regulations in force, has recently been assumed by some of the Government functionaries, and you pray that such jurisdiction be prohibited or if authorized that rules be prescribed defining the extent to which public officers of your class, ought in justice to be considered amenable to their official superiors for acts not affecting the discharge of their public duties.

The existing regulations for ensuring a faithful and efficient discharge of their duties by all subordinate public officers require that in the selection of individuals for employment regard shall be had to character, as well as qualifications, and they enjoin that the individual selected shall not be removed from their offices without proof of incapacity or misconduct. The character to which it is considered necessary to have regard before appointment is clearly character out of office; and it seems equally obvious that after appointment conduct affecting character out of office as well as in office is also required to be noticed. The regulations leave it to the functionaries whose duty it is to appoint and to remove to judge as to the character which ought to exclude from appointment and the conduct after appointment which ought to incur removal, but they guard against partiality or injustice on the part of those functionaries in the performance of this duty by making their appointments and removals subject to the revision of their immediate superiors.

The Honorable the Governor is of opinion, therefore, that the existing regulations afford to every class of public officers all the security against being unjustly deprived of their offices, which regulations are capable of affording, and that no ground exists for either altering or adding to their provisions.

In regard to the case of Mr. Permien, stated by you to have been removed from an office in the Sudder Dewany Adawlut to which he had been temporarily promoted, for conduct unconnected with the performance of his official duties, the Honorable the Governor does not think it necessary to give an opinion, as that individual has not himself complained of having been unjustly or illegally removed.

I have, &c.

SERAMPORE HOSPITAL.

The necessity of an Hospital for the natives having been long felt at Serampore, His Excellency the Honorable Colonel Rehling, on Thursday, January 28th, convened a meeting of the inhabitants, both European and native, at the Government House, to take the subject into consideration; when, His Excellency being called to the chair, Dr. Marshman stated that the number of natives who died at Serampore in the year ending December 1833, amounted to between six and seven hundred; and that on the average full five hundred were carried off by disease from year to year; adding, that of this number a full tenth, and possibly greater portion, might be saved from death if an hospital were provided in which their various cases might meet with timely and prompt attention; and that the saving of fifty human lives, from year to year, would repay all the labor and expense required to establish an hospital.

The following resolutions were then put to the vote and carried unanimously.

1. That a Society be immediately formed with the view of supporting and superintending an hospital for the reception of patients of every age and nation, afflicted with diseases of any kind, the leprosy excepted, under the auspices of Her Sacred Majesty Maria, Queen of Denmark; of which Society all who subscribe even so small a sum as a rupee monthly, shall be considered members.

2. That this Society appoint a perpetual President; and elect Governors, a Committee, and a Treasurer from year to year.

3. That a subscription be opened to defray the expenses attending this institution; and that any person who may subscribe only a single rupee monthly, shall be authorized to send at least one servant or sick native to the hospital.

4. That a house be forthwith provided for the reception of patients, together with medicines, and the attendants and servants requisite for the institution.

5. That His Excellency the Honorable Colonel Rehling, K. D., be respectfully requested to become President of the institution.

6. That J. C. Boeck and C. Tiernoth, Esqrs., the two Members of Council, be appointed Governors of the Institution for the first year, together with two, three, or four native gentlemen, at the option of the Committee.

7. That the following nine gentlemen, with the official members, form the Committee for the first year, with power to add to their number.

F. E. Elberling, Esq., Secretary to the Government.
J. O. Voigt, Esq.
The Honorable Capt. Hamilton.
The Rev. John Mack.
The Rev. John Leechman.
Mr. John C. Marshman.
Baboo Pran Krishnool Roy.
Baboo Gour Mohun Gossain.
Baboo Gooroo Prasad Bose.

And that Dr. Marshman be Treasurer for the first year.

8. That J. O. Voigt, Esq., be requested to undertake the duties of Surgeon and Physician to this institution, and that his offer of discharging them gratuitously for the first year, be gratefully accepted.

9. That after the example of the Asiatic Society, founded by the late Sir William Jones and the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, founded by the late Rev. Dr. Carey, the various meetings of the Committee be considered open meetings, which every Member of the Society has a right to attend.

10. That the next meeting be held at the Government House at half-past twelve, on Wednesday, the 3d of February.

That copies of these Resolutions be printed in English and Bengalee, and circulated in Serampore and its vicinity.—Friend of India.

THE EXHIBITION OF INDIGENOUS VEGETABLES.

The exhibition of indigenous vegetables took place in the Town Hall, on the 3d Feb. according to advertisement, and although to the eyes of Englishmen unacquainted with the names and uses of many of the varieties brought forward, the appearance might not be so inviting as the splendid specimens of cauliflower, cabbage, &c. under which the tables groaned on the last occasion, it was still a most gratifying sight to every one who looks beyond the precincts of his own garden.

But there are many sorts of native greens and roots, the flavor and excellence of which would be appreciated by all, if that kind of prejudice could be overcome, which has only cheapness for its apology.

We were sorry to find no intellectual or opulent native gentlemen among the visitors;—when will they be induced to put their shoulders to the wheel?

Notwithstanding the public notice given to each bazaar, that the produce was to be strictly indigenous, there were many baskets of very fine cauliflower, cabbage, &c. superior indeed to the best specimens exhibited a fortnight ago, and a basket of red cabbage and another of celery were equal to any thing we had ever seen in England, but, nothing was awarded to these candidates, who had come uninvited.

The number of mallies assembled on this occasion could not fall short of two hundred.

Medals were given for the finest yam, sweet pumpkin, onions, plantains, turmeric, chillies, and each of these successful candidates had an additional donation of four rupees.

Rewards of five rupees were given for the best brinjals, sweet-potatoes, native beans, and four rupees for best samples of ginger, cotchoon, pulbul, native spinach, sorrel, wood apples, gooseberries, lemons, guavas, papiahs, sapota, lall-saug, while for the second best baskets, three rupees were distributed; after which the Managers walked round the hall, dispensing one rupee to most of those who had not been brought forward.—Hurkaru.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

THE FOREST NOIR.

Little Nouveau had a good house and received for her exertions much applause. Of the Forest Noire, although doubtless a piece of great intrinsic merits we are not disposed to say much; the discriminating audience for whose edification it was represented, will doubtless appreciate all its varied excellence without assistance from us. There was much fighting, and no doubt much fun, for the amateurs enjoyed themselves, and the audience was philosophically passive; each individual spectator appeared to have armed him or herself with a triple shield of patience,—an excellent robe of durance on such high occasions. Catherine and Petruccio, was gotten up with great nonchalance; but the audience laughed much. Of the Catarina we are disposed to think very good things. She looked a terrible shrew at starting, and became very prettily and pensively submissive at the close of her matrimonial apprenticeship. Ilbel Petruccio, swaggered away in grand style, swore by 'cog's wounds' most braggadocioally and whipped his menials with great effect. He was exceedingly vivacious and sustained his arduous part with much energy and a very complete success. Grumio had a very droll appearance and evinced much comic humour. If we had time, we would say a great deal in praise of this amateur: he evidently liked his part and the part in return fitted him very appropriately. Of the other amateurs, and Mrs. Francis, we will only say, that they, one and all, we have no doubt, played their best, and are, whatever may have been the measure of their merits, entitled at any rate to that meed of praise which candid minds extend to the very best intention! In conclusion, we may observe, that these benefits have not heretofore proved very creditable exhibitions, and we see no reason to extend to this latest performance any privilege of exemption from the modicum of censure undergone its predecessors.—Englishman

MACBETH.

Macbeth was played at Chowringhee on the 25th February. In some respects the performance was decidedly good, but taken as a whole we have seen and we hope to see many better. None of the personages appeared to us quite at home in their parts. The representative of Macbeth presented a studied and elaborate delineation of the character, but to our apprehension it was wanting in intensity and in an adaptation of the voice and exterior to the varied emotion to be painted, and especially was it deficient in that solemn and affecting pathos which in the later scenes compels us in spite of ourselves to sympathize with the murderer. The performance was frequently forceable and at times highly impressive—but it never in our estimation rose to undoubted excellence. Mr. Leach's Lady Macbeth will not add to her theatrical reputation, but we are certain it will not detract from it. She has an innate preception of dramatic propriety and talent and perseverance which will always prevent her from sinking below mediocrity. But it is certain that the part of Lady Macbeth is beyond her power. She deserves every credit for the attempt, and to say that the performance exhibited no glaring defects but continued to interest the audience to the last, is to praise highly. But something more than the absence of defects and the generation of ennui is requisite in a character like Lady Macbeth's and we would counsel Mrs. Leach not to try it again—in a multitude of characters she is really great; but here she is only mediocre. Regarding King Duncan we will only state, what indeed is matter of history, that he was murdered. Whence the gracious Duncan derived his ideas of costume we know not, but such an odd assortment of hues has probably never been seen since the "coat of many colours" was fashioned. The flowing wig was really like nothing we have ever seen expecting that worn by Listen as Lord Grizzle, or that placed upon Lord Broughman's head in H. B.'s caricatures. Really in bona fide Tragedy some caution should be used in these matters. Macduff was well played, but we should not consider this line of character best suited to the state or powers of the amateur who played it. The music was excellently got up and the witchery, with the brilliant aid of Mr. Farner's magnificent lights and diabolic contrivances, had as the play bills say, "unprecedented success."

The amateurs did not venture upon the innovation which it was whispered they meditated in the matter of Banquo's Ghost. There he sat a stiff as hasty pudding pointing at his frontal sinus according to the approved practice of our wise ancestors, although it is evident that with equal propriety might the air-drawn dagger be suspended by a piece of pack-thread before Macbeth's eyes. The monstrosity too of tartan dresses was pertinaciously adhered to. It is a great pity that the illusion was not fully kept up by Macbeth's soliloquizing in the sonorous dialect of Thurness-shire.—Bengal Herald.

I BACCANALI DI ROMA.

Generali's grand Serious Opera I Baccanali di Roma was repeated on Friday evening the 5th February night at the Chowringhee Theatre, after an interval longer than usual of 3 weeks from the first representation—owing to melancholy circumstances, to which we shall no further allude than by saying that the sacrifice of time and profit on the part of the artistes was extremely creditable to their good taste and right feeling. The interval, however, appears to have been employed in very diligent study and rehearsing, if we may judge by the greatly increased effect with which I Baccanali was brought forward on the present occasion. In fact we doubt whether any one performance, even from the very commencement of our Calcutta Ope-ratio era, has ever yet gone off, as a whole, so successfully. The music is in itself exceedingly beautiful, and most skilfully adapted to the action and story: while the three interpolations from Rossini, Pacini and Meyerbeer, if not quite so characteristic in this respect, threw a variety of effect by no means unpleasing into the graver and perhaps slightly parrucal strain of the original composition. We do not in saying this, mean any thing of disparagement to the style of Generali's dramatic music and particularly to that of the Baccanali. Indeed, we are of opinion that the not unfrequent recurrence of popular motive and simple harmonies is one of the chief attractions of this very Opera, which thus obtains favor in the sight, or we should rather say the hearing, of the hundreds who understand and relish an easy second travelling in thirds and sixths, while the ten in that hundred who apprehend and enjoy more elaborate harmonic cookery find abundant provision of the most recherche fare in the concerted pieces, chorusses and particularly in the charming and most ingenious orchestral accompaniments of the Baccanali score.

We have ventured an opinion that the general effect of the Baccanali on Friday, was equal if not superior, as a whole, to any thing yet produced in Calcutta by the Italian artistes. We are disposed to go further and to say that we never heard the artistes themselves in better voice, one and all—and never heard them one and all use their voices more effectively. But as the terms of this eulogy strictly interpreted do not comprehend him—without whose powerful, kind and constant help hardly an Opera could now be got up at all, we must take leave to make especial mention of the admirable acting and singing of the amateur to whom we allude. Any thing more finished than his personation of the youthful Roman, we do not remember to have often seen. The natural pathos with which he delivered the recitative, and the taste and skill with which he executed the beautiful music assigned to Ebucio, though written for a high tenor, merit warmer commendation than consists with the sort of reserve understood to be enjoined on newspaper criticism in speaking of amateur performances.

With regard to the professional artistes, we are under no such restraint. Signora Schieroni's acting and by-play in particular are always graceful and impressive in the highest degree, and her style and execution as a singer, of the best and purest kind. On the present occasion it appeared to us that she equalled or surpassed any of her previous efforts. Battali was forcible, correct, and pleasing, as he always is, and Pizzoni made quite a hit in his solo in the second act borrowed, if we remember right, from Rossini's Maometto second. The finest thing perhaps in the Opera was the quartetto and finale to the first Act.

Mr. Linton presided with his usual, or more than his usual, vigour and skill; and as it has too often fallen to our lot to speak evil of the orchestra, we are the more anxious to do justice to Signor Catania and his corps among whom we perceived a very commendable improvement in the main point of attention to the singers, though occasional instances did occur of acceleration in time and the old besetting sin of ultra-loudness in accompaniment.

We trust that the remarkable practical proof afforded by this very successful second performance of the Baccanali, of the advantage gained by repetition, will not be lost either on performers or audience, and that we shall soon have this pleasing Opera again, notwithstanding the clamours of Goths and Vandals for perpetual novelty. No person of musical taste pretends even to understand, far less thoroughly to enjoy, an opera, until he has heard it half a dozen times and so made himself familiar with its elaborate music.

Mercadante's Comic Opera of Elisa e Claudio is announced for Friday evening.—Hurkaru.

ELISA e CLAUDIO.

Mercadante's Serio-Comic Opera Elisa e Claudio was performed at Chowringhee on the 12th February. We have no very violent liking for the monster which springs from the union of Music and the Drama and which, the youngest of the family, bears the name of semi-seria—holding with the toper who objected to five water grog that it is a spoiling of two things each excellent when taken abstractedly. The toper aforesaid has no doubt some secret preference for one of the parties whose bans he forbids, and we will not deny that one of the daughters of the family of Melodrama has peculiar charms in our eyes—though which is the favorite is neither here or there. This much only will we confess, that it is not she who resembles the semi-virtumque beven semibovemque viram. There is we know the highest authority for the interspersion of the ludicrous with the grave in dramatic representations, but the arguments by which it is justified, viz. the necessity of affording relief from emotions which might become too intense, and the judiciousness of heightening effect by contrast—however substantial in reference to the Legitimate Drama, have little weight when the Musical Drama is concerned. For Music having no words at its command but working solely by means of sounds which address themselves principally to the senses and only remotely and indirectly to the mind—cannot be supposed to excite any emotions or passions of great intensity. With respect to the effect of contrast, too, it is to be observed that the language of Music, taken unconnected with words, is too vague and ill-defined to admit of any such application as will ensure the production of a certain effect on the hearer. It is more than doubtful whether there is any series of sounds which can be said to belong to any particular passion or emotion, or whether a given succession of modulations might not equally serve for one of Durante's masses or for an Aria Buffa by Cimarosa. All this, however, is nothing to the purpose.

Mercadante has a high name in Europe and he certainly merits it as a versatile and clever composer—he is one of the most successful followers of the prophet Rossini. There is however nothing of that genius or originality in his works, which could have enabled him to found a new school. He has applied himself to the cultivation of the reigning style, and he has produced a number of Operas, many of them extremely beautiful. His compositions are, we think, more remarkable for a graceful and well-ordered harmony and for a skillful application of instrumental effects, than for richness of invention in his melodies, although of course there are many exceptions and none more striking than the beautiful air Se m' abbandoni, which was so charmingly sung by Schieroni. There are a great many good pieces in Elisa e Claudio but as a whole we have always thought that the Opera has been overpraised. None of the Duets are of a high order of excellence—we do not even expect the famous Claudio, Claudio,—and one, which affords a situation as the highest dramatic interest, we mean the duet between the bereft Elisa and the Conte, is heavy and monotonous. The opening cavatina of Elisa "Giusto Ciel" is a sweet conception, very skillfully instrumented. The full pieces are impressive and not too much overlaid with accompaniment, a vice which we are grieved to say is too apparent in some of Rossini's finales and quintets. The most original piece in the Opera, as it appears to us, is the chorus Tuote non temete, which is highly imaginative.

We now come to offer a word or two as to the executive, and here we are compelled to say that we cannot honestly compliment the Company on their singing. There was a certain degree of languor and weariness throughout the Opera which we have rarely witnessed in the performance of our artists. Mrs. Atkinson was evidently not at home in her part, which is quite unsuited to her histrionic powers. The characters of Am- naida and Cristina demand no extraordinary stage acquirements, as in them the acting is quite secondary to the singing,—but the part of Elisa requires pathos, tenderness and sentiment, to say nothing of dramatic skill. It is no reproach to Mrs. Atkinson to say that her want of stage practice, and of opportunity for successful study, render her development of a character giving scope to the highest order of dramatic talent, a task of extreme difficulty. But it would be useless to attempt disguising the fact that the performance was not successful. In her singing Mrs. Atkinson exerted her great talents with her usual effect, and, if there had been nothing for Elisa to do but to sing, we should have had little to object to. The part of Claudio was filled by the Amateur who has with such ability played a principal rôle in two preceding Operas. The performance was characterised by the skill and discrimination which this gentleman has uniformly shown in his acting and singing. We have never heard him in better voice, and in mastering as he has done the very difficult part of Claudio and in conducting the Opera to an even moderately successful issue, we are inclined to think that he has accomplished the most difficult task he has yet undertaken. But even he partook somewhat of the general languor. The Orchestra was but indifferent and the choruses were not, we think, so good as usual. The house was not full.

Notwithstanding all we have said, it must be allowed that the audience appeared pretty well amused and sometimes laughed heartily;—but we cannot conscientiously recommend the repetition of the Opera.

BARRIERE DI SIVIGLIA.

Rossini's "Barbieri di Siviglia" was the entertainment at Chowringhee on the 20th February. This admirable Opera has been repeated we know not how often, but its reception is still as warm as it was when the attraction of novelty was superadded to the intrinsic excellences it possesses as a musical composition of rare polish, and as a capital stage piece. It certainly has succeeded more perfectly in Calcutta than any of the other Operas which have been got up here, and although the cast of it has undergone frequent alterations, we cannot recollect any occasion on which it failed to give satisfaction to the audience.

The performance of the Barbieri has so frequently been noticed in this Journal, that nothing is left for us to say regarding either the music or the acting, for we are quite sensible that although the public may approve very much of a repetition of the Opera, our readers are not likely to relish the reiteration of our comments. We will only therefore remark that the piece went on with great smoothness and went off with striking eclat. Bettali's acting was unusually racy and unctious, and he was so excellently supported by Almaviva, Schieroni and Pizzoni that nothing of the rich comic effects, with which the piece is replete, was suffered to escape. The whole of the second Act from the opening "Pace, pace", to the end of the famous Quintett "Buona sera", may be cited as a perfect specimen of rich and sterling comedy—to say nothing of the musical part—such as would do credit to any stage in Europe. The only novelty of the evening was the re-introduction of Basilio's noble air "La Calunnia," which has been omitted in the recent representations of the Opera, on account of the difficulty of finding a substitute for one whose loss is yet fresh, and whose memory will long be cherished by all who take an interest in the Opera, and by the infinitely more extended number of those who appreciated his worth, generosity and enthusiasm. Signer Garate, who has the part of Basilio, is well known to the public as an indispensable member, or rather section of the Operatic body. Hitherto, however, he has not appeared as a solo singer, although he has often taken six of the parts in a Quintett, and has been known to sing suprano, tenor, and bass in a chorus at the same time. The air

"La Calunnia" is one of great difficulty and for a first essay rather a hazardous undertaking, but we are happy to say that Garma acquitted himself very creditably. He has a really excellent voice, which cultivation and practice might make much of. It is, however, properly, a tenor, although as we have said it is every thing by turns—and as such is not adapted to a song intended for a bass voice which should be called "de profundis." But he sang the song very well, and with a little more emphasis and colouring—which will come with practice—it would have been decidedly good.

The house, we are sorry to say, had a very discouraging appearance at the commencement of the Opera—it filled up rather during the evening, but was indifferent at the fullest. Something of this may perhaps be ascribed to the change of night. Something to the frequency of Operas, a performance having occurred each week for the last three weeks. The deviations from established practice was unavoidable in both respects, but is not likely to occur again. We understand that Rossini's admired opera "La Italiana in Algeri" will be performed next. This opera, which was exceedingly popular here, has not lately been repeated, as the part of Lindoro could not be filled up; but the accomplished representative of Almaviva has kindly undertaken it, and we feel confident that the opera will be produced in a very complete state.

MADAME VALADARE'S CONCERT.

Madame Valadare's concert at the Town Hall on Saturday the 27th February, was very well attended, although we noticed the absence of many whom we are accustomed to see on such occasions. They took tickets we believe, although they did not honor the hall with their presence.

As we were unable to attend till the first act was half over and obliged to depart before the second act commenced, we are unable to offer any thing in the shape of a critique.

Those pieces, both vocal and instrumental, which we were fortunate enough to witness, were well performed; and we hear that the whole concert reflected great credit on the performers; the conductor, Mr. Linton; the readers, Mr. Delmar and Mr. Valladares, the husband of the beneficiare.

The female vocalists who usually assist at public concerts, were not, and it appears could not be, engaged for this occasion; so that the whole labor of that department rested on Madame Valladares and her sister, Miss Soubolle, aided by Count Almaviva, (who very kindly gave his valuable support) Messrs. Linton, Taylor, and Hely. We observed also Signor Garate and his Italian band, who were very effective in the choruses.

Two of the vocal pieces were omitted in consequence of the indisposition of Madame Valladares.

The Overtures; Madame Valladares's Cavatina; Miss Soubolle's Aria, with Mr. P. Delmar's Flute Obligato; Monsr. V.'s Fastid on the Violin; and the Glee Mynheer Van Dunck, by Mr. Linton, Mr. Taylor, an amateur and choruses, were, we hear, the most effective performances of the evening.—Hurkaru.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

This morning the Advocate-General moved for a rule to show cause why leave should not be granted to file a criminal information at the suit of Longueville Clarke, Esq., against Mr. Rankin, a gentleman in the Company's military Service. The substance of the grounds on which he moved is shortly this:—Mr. Clarke is, it appears, professionally engaged in some proceedings on the ecclesiastical side of the court on behalf of a lady; some days ago a gentleman called on him alleging that he was acquainted with the lady in question, and proceeded to make enquiries regarding the state of suit. Mr. Clarke thereupon asked him if he had seen the lady's solicitor, or had brought an introduction from her, and Mr. Rankin admitted that he had done neither the one nor the other. Mr. Clarke abstained from expressing the surprise he experienced at this conduct of Mr. Rankin and contented himself with being very cautious in his answers. He explained to his visitor the technical cause of the delay, and recommended the gentleman to apply to the lady's solicitor; and it was not until he was on the point of taking leave that Mr. Rankin stated his name. On Saturday last Mr. Clarke received a note from Mr. Rankin seeking for further information respecting the lady's case obviously impugning the conduct of her solicitor, and also concluding with a request that his name might be concealed and his note returned to him out of motives of delicacy towards the lady in question. Upon this Mr. Clarke immediately handed over the note to the lady's solicitor, and addressed a note to Mr. Rankin apprising him of what he had done, and commenting upon the indecency and indiscretion of Mr. Rankin's conduct. The reply of Mr. Rankin to this letter, which was couched in very strong language, elicited an immediate answer, which was sent back unopened in the envelope in which it had been sent to Mr. Rankin, with a statement on the outside, that all further communication must be through a third party. The seal of the letter was broken. Mr. Clarke then directed Messrs. Collier and Bird to point out to Mr. Rankin the consequences to which he had exposed himself, and the reasons which induced Mr. C. to adopt the course he has since pursued. Another note was then read from Mr. Rankin to Mr. Clarke also couched in very strong language.

The court upon hearing this statement granted a rule nisi.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4.

Shaw v. Freeman.

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case for the plaintiff. This is a case of a description which, to the credit of society be it said, rarely comes before this court. The plaintiff is Mr. William Ambrose Shaw an indigo factor at Bhaugulpore, and the defendant is a Mr. Freeman who lives in the district. One would have thought that parties living in the same neighbourhood might have carried on their business amicably, or that, if disputes did arise, they might have been referred to the society of indigo planters at Bhaugulpore for adjustment. However, Mr. Freeman was of a different opinion, and took other means for the settlement of his grievances which neither society nor this court will sanction. It so happened that Mr. Freeman having taken a pottah of certain char land, a dispute arose between the parties, Mr. Shaw claiming the land as part of the cultivation of his ryots. It was unnecessary to enter into the particulars of this dispute, as it had little to do with the present action, but out of it had arisen an insult so serious that it was impossible any man of common feelings of honour could submit to. The dispute arose in March last, and was decided in the Mofussil court in favour of Mr. Shaw's claim to the land, the magistrate thinking Mr. Freeman was not entitled to hold possession. However, that gentleman not content with the decision of the magistrate, or with appeal to higher court, thought proper to take an extraordinary course to obtain that satisfaction which he was denied in due course of law. He wrote a note to Mr. Shaw, which he (the learned counsel) would read to the court.

Mr. Shaw begs to repeat that in the event of Mr. Shaw persisting in breaking his agreement, he, Mr. Freeman, will be driven to the unpleasant necessity of taking the first opportunity of making public to every one at Bhaugulpore and elsewhere his Mr. Shaw's want of faith and honesty in his engagements, written or verbal, his disregard to truth, and his non-repugnance in forfeiting his character as a gentleman; and this, if Mr. Shaw persists in endeavouring to evade the said verbal agreement, Mr. Freeman will undertake to prove to the satisfaction of any one who may wish to enquire as to the truth of Mr. Freeman's charges.

The learned counsel continued: he supposed Mr. Freeman imagined that Mr. Shaw would submit to resign what the law had decided in his favor; but not so. Mr. Shaw was one of the oldest indigo planters at Bhaugulpore, the most respected, and the most respectable; and Mr. Freeman's bullying not having succeeded according to his wishes, that gentleman proceeded to carry his threats into execution by sending a circular round to the society at Bhaugulpore, which he would now read to the court.—

TO THE RESIDENTS AT BHAUGULPORE.

"Gentlemen,—However painful and repulsive the task, Mr. Freeman feels it a duty he owes to the society at Bhaugulpore, to expose in their true light the principles and character of one of its members, viz. Mr. W. Shaw.

"Mr. Shaw having forfeited his word and written engagement, and having violated the terms of a most solemn written agreement with Mr. Freeman, Mr. Freeman holds himself bound by his promise held out to Mr. Shaw under date the 4th instant, to put every one upon his guard against such a character, and to publish that the said Mr. Shaw is a man void of all sense of honour, faith, integrity or shame; and as such Mr. Freeman takes his opportunity of posting him as a person void of all honourable principle in having broken through his engagements, both verbal and written,—in having violated his most sacred written pledge, as the inventor of the most wanton falsehoods,—and as having forfeited all claims to the character of a gentleman, and a member of a respectable society. The above facts Mr. Freeman undertakes to prove to any person who may be inclined to inquire into them."

"To Mr. Harding, Col. D'Aguilar, Mr. Steer, Dr. Innis, Major Graham, Mr. Jackson, Dr. Webster, Lieut. Swatman, Adjutant Don, Mr. Lee Warner, Mr. Hawes, Mr. Lymbart, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Field, Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Garfield, Mr. Johnson, and others.

This, continued Mr. Prinsep, was circulated to the society at Bhaugulpore so long ago as April last, and since that time nothing in the shape of accommodation has been done by this defendant. The paper had been circulated to the civilians in the neighbourhood, one of whom, apprehensive that it might lead to a breach of the peace, took measures to acquaint the magistrate of the district, and the parties were each bound over. Thus, this court was the only course which Mr. Shaw could take to uphold his character as a gentleman, and the necessity of his having recourse to it was apparent. It was not only important that Mr. Shaw's character should stand well with the society at Bhaugulpore, but also that it should stand well with the house in Calcutta with which he was connected. Excessive damages was not the object which the plaintiff sought; but to give the defendant an opportunity of substantiating his charges and to have an opportunity to rebut his accusations. Defendant, however, had let go his opportunity of pleading a justification by pleading the general issue. What defence would be set up the learned counsel was at a loss to imagine, but he supposed that some attempt would be made to mitigate the court's censure by attempting to show that defendant had received some provocation which induced him to pursue the course which he had adopted.

Jurisdiction was proved by the roll furnished to Government by the magistrate in the district, containing a list of British subjects residing in the district.

Assistant-Surgeon J. James deposed that the description of Mr. Freeman as a British subject in the roll above-mentioned, was in defendant's hand-writing.

Lieut. Frederick Blood, examined by Mr. Clarke, deposed that he was an officer in his Majesty's navy, and happened to be at Bhaugulpore at the time of the circulation of the paper by Mr. Freeman. At the request of Mr. Shaw, witness went to Mr. Freeman and demanded a copy of the circular. Mr. Freeman replied that he had sent it to Lieut. Swatman. Witness proceeded to the house of that officer where he made a copy of the circular which he now produced. Lieut. Don was at the house of Lieut. Swatman at the time witness copied the circular. (Cross examined by the Advocate-General.) The copy and the original were not examined by any person but myself.

Assistant-Surgeon W. B. Webster also proved the publication. On his cross-examination by Mr. Leith, witness deposed that he had heard of a disagreeable letter from Mr. Freeman to Mr. Shaw, and one also from Mr. Shaw to Mr. Freeman. Had heard of the dispute about churs, and that subsequently the decree of the magistrate had been reversed, and that Mr. Freeman is now in possession of the lands. Mr. Shaw's letter was pretty sharp; so was Mr. Freeman's. Witness knew that Mr. Freeman proposed to submit the dispute to a reference which was refused by Mr. Shaw. At the time the paper was circulated, Mr. Shaw was in possession of the lands which Mr. Freeman thought were his own.

Mr. Prinsep now proposed to put in the copy of the circular taken by Lieut. Blood.

The Advocate-General submitted that the copy ought not to be received, as the original was not proved to be in the possession of defendant. But the court overruled the objection.

This was the case for the plaintiff.

Mr. Advocate-General replied. This case did not appear of so much importance as his learned friend in his opening had endeavoured to attach to it. Indeed, his friend must have felt the ground trembling under him because he had introduced that which was not supported by evidence. It had been stated that there were angry disputes about some churs, and that the magistrate having decided against the defendant, the latter has, in consequence, issued the circular on which this action is brought. But what had appeared from the evidence was that Mr. Shaw had taken possession of the lands which belonged to Mr. Freeman. How he had taken possession of them did not appear, but unfortunately this court furnished plenty of instances, that indigo planters when they took possession of lands, not their own, were accustomed to do so by violence. The court would recollect a case in which something more serious than a circular had ensued, were death had followed, and a trial in this court had been the consequence. But what did the defendant do? He wrote a letter which had been read, but not put in evidence; to this letter, as the court had heard, Mr. Shaw returned an angry reply, and a circular in which the plaintiff was described as a man without honor or principle. He was not going to justify those terms, nor could they be justified but by the record that would stamp the plaintiff with infamy for life; but the charge was not of a serious description or one which a gentleman whose mind was irritated might not make. It did not charge the plaintiff with theft; had it done so, he might go through life with the stigma; but now all that could be said, was that some time ago, another indigo planter, with whom he had a dispute, had stated that the plaintiff was not a man of strictly honourable feeling. It was alleged that the plaintiff had lost the society of his friends and neighbours, but their lordships would see that they were here ready to give evidence for him in a court of justice, and to whom the learned counsel had not dared to put a single question to show that the plaintiff had suffered in society by the imputations now complained of. The learned counsel hoped the court would take into consideration the light character of the words, and not visit his client with any but a light verdict.

The Court.—There can be no doubt but that there must be a verdict for the plaintiff. This libel is not of a light character as the counsel for the defendant has described it; on the contrary, the words are strong, the plaintiff being described as a man void of all honor and integrity, and without pretension to the character of a gentleman. It is alleged that no damage has been proved, but it is quite impossible to say that the circulation of the libel must not have had a very injurious effect. Taking into consideration the letter written by Mr. Shaw as going in some degree to lessen the amount of damages, we cannot give a verdict for a less amount than Rs. 1,000.

SALAR HUK V. JOKEERAM.

This was an action on two policies of insurance effected on goods shipped in Calcutta in 1833, for Patna. The defendant resides in the territories of Runjeet Sing, but as it was stated by the plaintiff, has a cootie in Calcutta, where he has gomastas and carries on the business of a river insurance agent. The policies were simple and set forth, as is usual, in the name of a hindoo deity, the leakage of the roof, the negligence of the crew, damage by damp to be at the hazard of the owner of the goods; burning, sinking, and robbery to be at the hazard of the insurer. Defendant's gomasta put a man on board, who remained until the boat reached Monghyr. He then left the boat, and proceeded to Patna, intending to see the goods landed at that place, but the boat was sunk immediately after sailing from Monghyr. Defendant mainly relied on his plea to the jurisdiction, and called witnesses to prove that his cootie was closed before the plaint was filed. There was, however, evidence to prove that the gomastas remained in the house to collect outstanding debts, and the court thought that was sufficient. Verdict for the plaintiff, Sa. Rs. 7,605.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5.

William Woolen v. William Duff and James Barnes.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

Mr. Osborne stated the case for the plaintiff. In this case the plaintiff is a member of the civil service, the defendants are indigo planters at Purneah, and the action is brought to recover a sum of Rs. 34,000 money lent and paid to the defendants. In 1827-8 the plaintiff was residing at Purneah, where the defendants had extensive indigo factories which they rented from the late firm of Palmer and Co. In 1827 that firm thought proper to circumscribe the amount of their advances, and it became necessary that Messrs. Duff and Barnes should endeavour to provide other resources. In this emergency they applied to the plaintiff, who was at the time on terms of intimacy with both the defendants, but on terms of particular intimacy with Mr. Barnes, and who consented, actuated by motives of friendship to Barnes, to lend from time to time various sums of money, to allow them to carry on their joint business. The loans were to continue for a long period of time, extending from December 1827 to August 1829, at the end of which period the amount due was Rs. 34,379. The payments were made in a great measure to T. and P. Palmer in Calcutta Barnes drawing on George Palmer at Purneah. The facts are simple and the evidence complete, though it would appear that the defence will require some management, from the long line of senior counsel engaged in it. It appears that defendants, though otherwise in partnership, have covered in their defence, and by employing the whole of the senior counsel, have reduced my client to the sad expedient of leaving his case to be conducted by me. Mr. Osborne then read the following letter.

"My dear Woolen,—I never in my life sat down to write you under such unpleasant feelings as press upon me at this moment, for Duff informs me that although the agents were made acquainted with my having borrowed money for the concern, they told him they would not provide for it till the close of the season, and would allow us a credit of only Rs. 20,000 to go through with. He is as anxious as I am myself to pay you the sum we have used, and urges me to endeavour to borrow the money upon his bond jointly with mine. And this I shall be most happy to do if it can be effected. But I do not believe any of the natives would lend it us for a few months, I have reason to believe I could borrow the amount from Colnet upon this security, but before doing so I would wish to ask your sanction. Had it not been for the circumstances mentioned in your last, I should not have hesitated to ask to let the sum remain of interest until we had closed the season, but situated as you are, and as we are from the niggardly conduct of Palmer's house, I am both annoyed and hurt, and could I have anticipated such behaviour from them, when I borrowed the money from you, I would have allowed the factories to go to the devil rather than have used one rupee. I will write you at the moment of receiving Duff's letter, and as there is no time to lose, let me beg of you to inform me immediately, whether I shall apply to Colnet or not. If you say "no," can you mention any native from whom I should be likely to obtain it? He would secure his 12 per cent. interest, and risk there is none, for the produce of the year under any circumstances will much more than provide for it. I am so dreadfully harassed in mind at this untoward occurrence, that it is out of my mind to allude to any thing else. Do pray write me a line by the bearer, and tell me what to do, (signed) J. Barnes, dated 13th May, 1828, addressed to W. Woolen, Esq.

"My dear Sir,—I am just favoured with your account and shall immediately refer it to Mr. J. Barnes, as well as your letter I fear it will be out of our power to pay you half of the debt down, without a sale can be effected of the indigo of this season, of which I see but little likelihood at present; but the whole of the proceeds of last year shall be made over to you, and I and Mr. Barnes will give you a life insurance for your claim, and a bond for the debt, in order that you may recover in the event of a lapse. "When you intend to favour us with a call, would you let us know to prevent our being from home. With best compliments to Mrs. Woolen, I remain, yours sincerely, (signed) J. Duff, dated 30th Dec. 1830, addressed to W. Woolen, Esq."

The jurisdiction was proved.

The witnesses for plaintiff and defendants were ordered to retire out of court.

Mr. Peter Palmer was called and produced the books of the firm of T. and P. Palmer, but the books not being original or having been kept by a scribe, the witness was allowed to refer to them. Examined by Mr. Osborne. I recollect a payment having been made in December 1827 to the order of James Barnes. The money was paid for Mr. Perry, whose timbers we had. Captain Robinson was appointed on behalf of Mr. Woolen, and T. and P. Palmer were agents for Mr. Perry. I received directions from Captain Robinson not to pay any sums of money to the consigner; this was with reference to the proceeds of the timber. Captain Robinson said Mr. Woolen had advanced sums of money to Mr. Barnes on the strength of the timber being mortgaged to him. We could not place the proceeds to the credit of Mr. Woolen, but to the credit of the consigner. I believe Mr. Woolen was in our debt. There was a payment to Mr. Barnes in the month of December. I think there was two, one for Rs. 1,200, and one for Rs. 5,000. The first payment was made out of the proceeds of the timber; both payments were so made. They were made on acceptances of sums falling due. This letter dated 14th November, 1827, addressed to my brother Georg, contained a draft for Rs. 5,000. I have made a search, as much as I could, for the draft, but have not been able to find it. I suppose it is amongst some of our old papers.

Mr. Thomas Palmer, examined by Mr. Leith. We had a brother in Purneah, a banker, of the firm of Barker and Palmer. We remitted to that firm on the faith of drafts drawn on us by Barnes. This letter (A) speaks of a draft for Rs. 5,000. We received a draft from George Palmer on this occasion. The amount was transferred to Barker and Palmer's credit. We debited the payment to timber in account. This timber account was the account of Mr. Perry. We were agents for the timber in 1825, and afterwards joint agents with Captain Robinson. In June 1826 we understood that the timber belonged to Mr. Woolen. There has been no demand made on us by Mr. Perry. We honored all Barnes's drafts, on account of Perry, out of the proceeds of timber.

Captain John Robinson, examined by Mr. Osborne. I superintended the timber for plaintiff in 1827. T. and P. Palmer had half the agency; we were not to sell without each other's approbation. I concluded the timber was Mr. Barnes's, but that plaintiff was interested on account of advances to Barnes and Perry, and so I heard from Barnes. I understood he was interested by lending money, and I considered the proceeds were to go to repay him. I had no specific communication on which to found that belief. (By the court) Barnes gave me reason to think that it was Woolen's money with which he and Perry carried on business. I do not know where Perry is: I cannot recollect the exact words from which I gathered that impression.

Mr. George Palmer examined by Mr. Leith. The timber was sent down to Calcutta consigned to T. and P. Palmer by Perry; part of the proceeds were paid over to Woolen's order. I conceive they were so paid because I know that Perry borrowed money from Woolen, to carry on the timber concern. It strikes me that Perry at one time made over all the timber to me on plaintiff's account. The firm at Purneah, of which I was a member, discounted the notes, which were afterwards sent to T. and P. Palmer at Calcutta, and the payments were made by them to us as the notes fell due. This (A) is in my hand-writing; I must have received the sum mentioned in it. I know the defendant Duff; he rented four factories from Palmer and Co. from 1827 to 1831. I generally understood from Barnes that the greatest part of the money received by discounting the drafts, was for the use of the factory. Every body in Purneah knew Duff and Barnes were partners, though there was no positive proof. The witness then deposed to the hand-writing and signatures of the defendants, on several documents put in, but not read by the officer. (Cross-examined by the Advocate-General.) The timber was made over by a kind of assignment from Perry and Barnes. The deed is in the hand writing of Woolen, but I do not recollect the particulars. (Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke.) Woolen was at the time judge of Purneah, but he has since been suspended. I do not know that it is contrary to regulations for the Civil Service to lend money to indigo planters, but very likely it is. I am not aware that they are sworn not to lend money. I know of Barnes being indebted to Mrs. Mary Woolen. I do not recollect if plaintiff told me so. I was plaintiff's banking agent, and have made loans for him in Mrs. Woolen's name, by plaintiff's direction.

Dr. Barker deposed to the hand-writing of the defendants to thirty documents put in but not read by the officer. In reply to Mr. Osborne. I was residing at Purneah in 1827, 8, 9, and 30 and am acquainted with the defendants who carried on factories rented from Palmer and Co. Barnes conducted the business of some of the factories. They held themselves out as indigo planters. I do not know that they were partners, but I have seen Duff at Purneah, and he appeared to be interested. (Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.) This letter speaks of a bond. I have heard plaintiff say that there was a bond given to him. He told me a year ago that he held a bond. I have no distinct recollection of hearing of it before. I should suppose that he told me it was a bond for money owing from Duff and Barnes. (Cross-examined by Mr. Grant.) I believe this document is in Mr. Strettle's hand-writing. I know nothing of the document to which it refers.

The court intimated that they thought this was a fit case for arbitration, and that they were clear from the evidence that there was a liability, and that the liability was joint. Defendant's counsel, however, though they had no objection to a reference on a mere matter of account, should the court be entirely against them, declined to go to arbitration at the present stage of the proceeding.

Mr. William Cobb Hurry examined by Mr. Leith, deposed that he was Duff's agent from 1830 to 1834, and that he made advances to Barnes at the request of Duff, and under his guarantee. Never heard that Duff was a partner, but to the best of his belief Barnes and Duff were connected. This letter is in Duff's hand-writing; plaintiff's letter was enclosed; and it contained a request that I would make an arrangement with plaintiff, which I did not do being already in advance with Mr. Duff. (Cross-examined by the Advocate-General.) The enclosure was a demand for money from plaintiff on Duff.

This was the case for the plaintiff, and Mr. Osborne, at the conclusion, on behalf of the plaintiff, offered to submit to arbitration. The offer was declined by defendants' counsel. The court again intimated that from the documents put in evidence, they were quite clear that there was a joint debt.

Mr. Advocate-General submitted for a non-suit; first, that there was no satisfactory evidence of partnership, and that there was no evidence that the advances made out of the proceeds of the timber were on account of the defendant Duff. But the court again expressed a decided opinion that there was a joint debt.

Mr. Advocate-General then urged that the action was brought in assumpsit, but the evidence went on a debt due on a bond. Plaintiff could not maintain an action on a bond without the production of the instrument, nor could he convert a bond debt to an action of assumpsit.

Mr. Clarke followed, insisting that the letter of demand from Mr. Strettle distinctly stated that the debt was due on the joint bond of Barnes and Duff.

Mr. Strettle, the attorney, was examined as to the letter of demand, and deposed that it was written after a casual visit from plaintiff; and without inspecting the document alluded to. The learned counsel put another question which witness declined to answer; his information having been derived from a professional communication between attorney and client. The witness however deposed that the bond was in favor of Mrs. Mary Woolen, to the amount of Rs. 15,000, and that plaintiff would not make a ~~mandavit~~ debt, because he had not given a consideration for the bond.

Mr. George Palmer deposed. Mr. Woolen gave witness a copy of a bond to show Mr. Duff last year. There were two names to it. The amount was Rs. 15,000, and it stated that he then borrowed Rs. 15,000 more. As witness understood, Duff and Barnes owed plaintiff a large sum of money which this bond was a part.

The Court.—It is quite clear that the bond was given to the wife and not to the husband; and this does not prevent plaintiff maintaining an action in assumpsit, provided defendants owe him a larger sum. There must be a verdict for the plaintiff, and the best course will be to give one rupee damages, with leave to move to enlarge the amount.

MAJOR CAPE & ASSIGNEES OF CRUTTENDEN AND CO.

Mr. Nott made a special application to the court that on the affidavits which he held in his hand the Prothonotary should be ordered to file a plaint thereto annexed. The plaint, which was an ejectment, had been presented to the Prothonotary to be filed on the 21st of January, and contained two demises, one in the name of the real plaintiff, Major Cape, and the other in the name of Mr. Andrew Wight, who was the trustee of an outstanding term to bar dower. A warrant of attorney to Mr. Boyle was annexed to the plaint for the purpose of being filed at the same time, and was signed by Mr. Wyborn in the name of the lessors of the nominal plaintiff, Major Cape, and Mr. Wight. The Prothonotary refused to receive the plaint on the ground that the 110th plea rule of the court required that the special application should be first made to the court. Mr. Nott insisted that Mr. Wyborn, as the lawful attorney of Major Cape, was entitled to lay a demise in the name of Mr. Wight as Major Cape's trustee, even without his consent; but in this case it was sworn that Mr. Wight knew of Mr. Wyborn's intention previously to his leaving for England, that he made no objection, and that an indemnity for the possible costs of the action was offered to him, which he declined. The court granted the application.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION. C

This was an order nisi, obtained on a former day, calling on Assistant-Surgeon George Campbell Rankin, of the third battalion artillery, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him, for endeavouring to provoke Mr. Longueville Clarke to commit a breach of the peace. The substance of the affidavit is reported in another page.

Mr. Leith rose to show cause, and put in a voluminous affidavit sworn by Mr. Rankin, detailing the nature of the proceeding regarding which he called at Mr. Clarke's chambers. It is not necessary to give a detailed report of the affidavit, and the less so, as it necessarily contained statements regarding a proceeding on the ecclesiastical side of the court, of a painfully distressing nature to a lady of high and exemplary character. Mr. Rankin swore that the lady, who is, and has been for some time on terms of intimacy and friendship with his wife, being uneasy at what she considered an unnecessary delay in the prosecution of her suit, desired him to call on the attorney and enquire as to the cause. He did so; and distinctly informed the solicitor that he was authorized by the lady to make the inquiry. The attorney entered fully into the nature of the suit, and informed him that it was necessary to proceed with the greatest caution, as he was well aware of the character of the lady's husband against whom the proceedings are instituted. Subsequently he was desired to wait on Mr. Clarke, the lady's junior counsel. He found Mr. Clarke at his chambers, sitting in an open room, into which he (Mr. Rankin) went, without having his name announced by the servants. Mr. Clarke entered freely into conversation with the deponent, replying to questions which the deponent asked under the impression that Mr. Clarke had been fully informed by the solicitors that he was authorized to make the inquiry. At the conclusion, the deponent, desirous, for obvious reasons, that this name should not appear connected with the proceedings, intimated his wishes to Mr. Clarke, who thereupon shook him by the hand and said, "certainly, we understand those things at the Bar." A few days after this the lady received a letter from her solicitor stating that the serious indisposition of her senior counsel, Mr. Furton, had delayed the application. This letter was forwarded to the deponent who wrote for information to Mr. Clarke, the deponent being at that time quite unconscious of there being a rule at the bar which would prevent counsel from making any disclosure, nor did Mr. Clarke at the interview mention or hint that a communication to him would be contrary to professional usage. Mr. Clarke replied in terms, which, contrasted with the friendly feeling exhibited at the interview, the deponent could not but consider as gravely insulting, and conveying an impression that the deponent's interference in the lady's affairs displayed a want of delicacy, as it was imprudent and uncalled for. Mr. Rankin swore that he wrote the reply under feelings of great irritation, but neither in that reply, nor in any other letter, in one of which he stated that all further communication must be through a third party, had he ever contemplated or intended to provoke Mr. Clarke to commit a breach of the peace. On the contrary, deponent believes that it was Mr. Clarke's intention to provoke him to fight a duel, but that, out of respect for the lady whose domestic misfortunes would have thus gained publicity, he was determined to take no notice of Mr. Clarke, who, in his opinion, had failed to display that courtesy which is due from one gentleman to another.

Mr. Leith, after the affidavits were read, rose to show cause. He fully concurred with what had fallen from the Advocate-General that it is the duty of the Court to protect a barrister from insult in the performance of his professional duty.

But the Chief Justice interrupted Mr. Leith, and after consulting with his brother judges, intimated the opinion of the court that the application ought to stop. In this case the intention to provoke the party to fight a duel is positively denied, and though the court were aware that there are cases in which a rule may be granted notwithstanding this denial, the words here were equivocal, and taken with the affidavit, the court thought the party had no such intention. However this was only a suggestion, Mr. Advocate-General could go on or not as he pleased.

Mr. Advocate-General thought that he ought to proceed. Of course he would go on the cases in which the court had granted the rule when the party had denied the intention. He thought the words were sufficiently strong.

Chief Justice.—Besides what we have stated there is another question. Whether there has been a provocation given or not?

Mr. Justice Grant.—There are cases in which the words used convey an impression of an intention which cannot be doubted, but here the words are equivocal, "all further communication must be through a third party," and the affidavit, and this gentleman's desire not to wound the feelings of the lady whose affairs are unfortunately mixed up in this transaction, take off the impression the words might otherwise convey.

Mr. Advocate-General referring to Mr. Rankin's affidavit, thought it contained grounds sufficiently expressive of Mr. Rankin's intention to provoke Mr. Clarke to commit a breach of the peace.

Chief Justice.—You can take your own course. There is no difference of opinion on the bench. We have only thrown out a suggestion.

Mr. Advocate-General would not have hesitated to stop after the first intimation from the court, if the language of the affidavit of Mr. Rankin had not given him ground to apprehend that he could go on successfully. He would not now persevere after the court's opinion had been so expressed.

Rule discharged, each party paying their own costs.

FLETCHER, ALEXANDER AND CO. V. AGA KURBOLI NAKHOD.

This was an order nisi calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the trial of this case should not be postponed until the 1st day of March 1837. The particulars of the case are as follow:—

The ship John Adam, of which the defendant is the sole owner, sailed hence for England in March 1832, but was obliged to put back to repair damages sustained by a gale she met with in the Indian Ocean. On being unloaded it was ascertained that some of the cargo shipped for England was damaged, and a survey having been held, a large portion was condemned and sold by Captain Butler, who was then the commander of the ship, and who took upon himself to act as agent of all concerned. Captain Butler appointed Bruce, Shaud and Co. as his agents; and paid to them, as such, all the proceeds of the sale of the condemned goods, to be transmitted by them to Gledstones and Co. of London, for the purpose of there meeting the demands of persons entitled to the same. Captain Butler also gave the Aga, who was entitled to the freight, amounting to £1,200, a bill for that sum, drawn by him upon Gledstones and Co. against the funds so transmitted. The Aga indorsed the bill over to a third party, and obtained for it two promissory notes of Alexander and Co's. each for Rs. 6,000. These promissory notes remain unpaid. The Bill of Exchange for £1,200 was indorsed over by Alexander and Co. to Fletcher, Alexander and Co. and had been returned from England by that firm protested for non-acceptance. The Aga has given notice of a set-off, and obtained a rule in March 1834, to postpone the trial till the third term in that year, and in November 1834 he obtained another order to postpone the trial for one year on the ground of a commission required to examine Captain Butler, who is now residing in England. The cause was set down for trial the first term this year, and a rule nisi having been obtained as above stated.

Mr. Prinsep now shewed cause, mainly relying on the repeated postponements, and the defendant having taken no steps in the commission to England.

The court discharged the rule, and the cause being down on the Term Board was now called on, but witnesses not being in attendance, counsel could not proceed, and it was struck off the board.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15.

IN THE GOODS OF ROBERT ROOTE.

Mr. Clarke applied for probate. The testator was in his life time an assistant in the Brigade Major's office at Agra, in which capacity he accumulated a little property. When taken ill, the testator ordered a draught of a will to be prepared, in which, after various little legacies, he appointed the Rev. Dr. Parish and Lieut. Mitchell, his executors, and the Calcutta Free School residuary legatee. When the draught was prepared it was read to the testator who said he would sign the will if his executors approved of the manner in which he had distributed his property. Dr. Parish's approval was immediately communicated to him, but before the approval of Lieut. Mitchell arrived, the testator sunk into a state of insensibility from which he did not recover. Mr. Turton, on a former day, applied for probate on the joint affidavit of Dr. Parish and Lieut. Mitchell, which set forth these circumstances. There was no doubt that the testator had dictated what he meant to be his will in the event of Lieutenant Mitchell's approval of it, but his entire approval was suspended on that event, and as he was insensible when the approval arrived, under those circumstances the court refused the application. A commission however was granted to swear to further facts, but as the affidavits now offered were not varied, the court thought they ought not to hear counsel on an application regarding which a majority of the bench, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Grant, had already decided.

SESSIONS OF QYER AND TERMINER.

FEBRUARY 18, 1836.

W. Bruce, Esq., Foreman, J. C. McCallaghan, R. Campbell, J. G. Laurell, R. K. Mackenzie, G. E. Adam, J. B. Biss, J. J. James, J. Hunter, W. Moore, E. Harding, C. G. Balgavay, A. D. Rios, F. McArthur, J. Elliot, G. Jessop, C. G. Millman, P. A. Cavorke, R. A. Cavorke, P. J. Sarkies, M. M. Maruk, Esqs., and Baboo Russomoy Dutt and Rainsbury Dutt.

A few minutes after 12 o'clock the Chief Justice attended by his colleagues Sir John Grant and Sir Benjamin Malkin came into Court, and after the usual formalities were gone through, Sir Benjamin Malkin, who conducts the trial during the sessions, charged the Grand Jury at considerable length, explaining to them the particulars of some intricate cases which are to come before them.

A True Bill has been found against one Janknuth Ghose for perjury. This is a case brought on by a Commissioner of the Court of Requests; and a true Bill against Acheon, Alooon, Achue, Alooon, Apagloon, Aching, Aho and Alece, for murder.

Mr. Justice MALKIN charged the grand jury, briefly noticing the few offences in the calendar, some of which are of an aggravated description. His lordship entered on the details of a charge of forgery brought against one Joygopal Dutt pointing out of the scarcity of the evidence which would be brought before the jury and also what the prisoner has alleged in his defence. The case is peculiar, the prosecutor being the prisoner's own brother. The prosecutor represents that sometime ago his father went on a pilgrimage, having previously entrusted the two brothers with some Company's paper, which, the prosecutor represents was kept in a box, and in a place to which the prisoner had access. The paper was taken away under circumstances which attached suspicion to the prisoner; and when it was so taken, it had on it five endorsements only. After the lapse of a considerable length of time the prosecutor heard of the paper having been presented at the treasury for the purpose of receiving the interest, and in addition to the five endorsements it had another endorsement which purported to be the prosecutor's signature. The prisoner is now charged with the crime of forging this endorsement. There is no evidence to show directly that the prisoner is the person who committed the offence: it rests only on his knowing where the paper was kept, and other circumstances calculated to raise suspicion. The reason the learned judge directed the Grand Jury's attention to this case was the peculiar circumstances under which it would come before them, and he thought it right, as they would hear the evidence for the prosecution only, that they should be made acquainted with the defence set up by the prisoner; he alleges that when the father returned from the pilgrimage, the paper was delivered to him and given back by him with the father's endorsements and the prosecutor's also. It appeared the father's endorsement was on the back, but as the father was not forthcoming, the learned judge mentioned the fact, that the jury if they considered his evidence absolutely necessary might throw out the bill, and the prisoner might be tried for the offence when the father's testimony should be procurable.

His lordship then pointed out to the jury, some recent alterations in the law regarding a crime, for which two European soldiers are in custody, and afterwards noticed two other cases of an ordinary description.—Englishman.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 22.

NEW FORM OF OATH.

Baboo Russick Krishna Mullick, the Editor of the Gyananatak, being one of the Petit Jury, prescribed a form of oath that he wished should be administered to him. It was worded nearly thus:—"I call Heaven to witness that between my Sovereign Lord the King and the prisoners at the bar, I shall give a verdict according to the evidence I hear." The oath was accordingly administered to him by Mr. Blacquiere, the Chief Interpreter, under the sanction of the Judge on the Bench.

Two Soldiers of H. M.'s 44th Regiment stood charged with the guilt of a base and unnatural crime, but they bore a most excellent character from the Commandants of their Corps, and the guilt not being by evidence proved against them, they were acquitted by the Jury. The Judge ordered their remaining in custody until the Grand Jury should be discharged, to ascertain whether any other indictment should be laid against them.

A true Bill was found against Baboo Ashootos Day and Promothonath Day for perjury.—Calcutta Courier.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6.

In the matter of Ruggooram Gossain.

Mr. Clarke obtained an order nisi for a declaration of insolvency against Ruggooram Gossain, formerly a partner in the Calcutta Bank, and the banian to the firm of Palmer and Co.

In the matter of James Cullen and Robert Brown.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of Mr. Macintyre, stated to Sir Benjamin Malkin the substance of the application made before Sir Edward Ryan on the last court day, also the proceedings of the meeting of Crutenden and Co.'s creditors on the 30th January, and of the adjourned meeting on Thursday last. The learned counsel also read the recommendation of the committee appointed at the meeting last mentioned; viz "that Mr. Macintyre's expenses be borne by the estate on condition of his giving up all claims to the commission of four per cent. originally allowed him." In this application, said Mr. Leith, it is necessary to call the attention of the court to the proceedings of a meeting recently held. At that meeting various objections were brought forward as to Mr. Macintyre's unfitness, one of which was that he was an uncertificated bankrupt at the time of his appointment, and to this it was replied by Mr. L. that he had obtained his discharge, and that he had subsequently paid twenty shillings in the pound,—although a mere moral, and not a legal, obligation. At a meeting of creditors held immediately after the failure of the insolvents, and which recommended the late assignee to the court, the subject of Mr. Macintyre's bankruptcy was brought forward.

Mr. Dickens rose to interrupt the learned counsel.

Mr. Leith objected to Mr. Dickens being heard. It had been decided in the matter of Colvin and Co. that an attorney for a creditor could only appear by an attorney of the court or by counsel. He submitted, therefore that Mr. Dickens could not be heard.

Mr. Dickens appeared not as an attorney but as a creditor; and put in his own affidavit, which set forth that his name was inserted in the schedule as a trustee for the children of Mordecai Haynes. This, he apprehended, gave him a right to be heard, and to apply for the ground of the statement by Mr. Leith that Mr. Macintyre's situation of a certificated bankrupt was mentioned at a meeting convened two years ago.

Mr. Leith could have no objection to Mr. Dickens as a bona fide creditor. The proceedings of the meeting alluded to did not appear on his grounds, and he could therefore only speak as to his impression. However he would attach no weight to the circumstance, and proceed to what was more plainly before the court. It appears there has been a sum of 75,000 rupees expended by Mr. Macintyre for expenses incurred in the management of this estate, including the whole expenses of the establishment. It was perhaps necessary to inform his lordship that applications had been made from time to time for leave to carry on the factories, and that authority had been obtained by the assignee. Of course, he had largely contributed to form the amount of expenditure, but if his lordship would look to what had been the expenditure in insolvent estates not greatly differing from this, he would find that these charges were exceeded, and that they were greatly below the amount required for the establishment previous to the failure. The items objected to at the meeting, and he was obliged to anticipate the objections here,—were the payments to the two insolvent partners, Mr. Cullen and Mr. Brown, who had each received for a certain period Rs. 400 per month; viz. Mr. Brown up to October 1833, and Mr. Cullen up to the commencement of the last six months. The latter gentleman was still employed on the business of the estate and Mr. Brown had continued his services without any remuneration, from October 1833 to January 1834, when he quitted the country for England. These payments were made on the authority of a meeting called soon after the failure, duly advertised, and which at the same time recommended that the assignee should be paid by a commission on the dividends declared, and that the payments to the partners, viz. 1,200 rupees per month should be deducted from the commission. This recommendation was duly brought before the court, and confirmed. Subsequently Mr. Macintyre is obliged by ill-health to leave the country and is released by the court. Now under these circumstances, he (the learned counsel) felt some difficulty to satisfy his mind, that there could be any reasonable objection why the court should not concede to Mr. Macintyre what had been conceded to him by the creditors. Looking at the original contract with the creditors that the late assignee was to be paid a commission; remembering that this had been confirmed by the Insolvent Court; considering also that he is obliged to retire not by his own act, but by illness, or in legal phraseology by the act of God; that his illness has been greatly aggravated by his anxiety, labour and unremitting assiduity in the affairs of the insolvent firm, putting aside all legal claims, is it more than fair to ask, is he not entitled to have the expenses paid out of the estate, when there is not a suspicion of his honesty or integrity? There was one remark it would be as well to make regarding the last meeting, that it was not so numerous as those formerly held; but the court would recollect, that the meeting was regularly called by public advertisement, and if the creditors neglected to attend it was not for them to make any objection to what had been done in their absence. But of the number that did attend, the larger amount of claims was decidedly in favour of the recommendation submitted to the court, there being out of the crore and eleven lakhs due by the estate forty-six lakhs for the recommendation, and only five lakhs and eighty thousand against it. Under these circumstances the learned counsel submitted that Mr. Macintyre be allowed that which the creditors had already conceded.

Mr. Dickens, as a creditor, opposed this application, and in first instance took a technical objection, that Mr. Macintyre had not complied with the terms of the 30th section of the Indian Insolvent Act, wherein it is set forth, that in case any assignee shall be unwilling to act, the first thing he is to do is to transfer all the estate to the new assignee the court may appoint. He held in his hand the grounds on which Mr. Leith had applied for this order, but neither in that not in the application to resign by Mr. Macintyre was there the smallest evidence of the delivery of one farthing to the present assignee, and until that is done this court is not in a situation to make any order whatever. In the second place here is a petition from Mr. Holroyd, unsigned but verified by an affidavit, and again, here is a petition from Mr. Donald Macintyre signed "Waddington and Wilson," and in these the resignation of Mr. Macintyre and the appointment of Mr. Holroyd is inserted in a general way and in no other. On these two grounds he objected, in the first instance, to the order being granted.

Mr. Justice Malkin.—What part of the 30th section do you allude to?

Mr. Dickens referred to the act, "to account for and deliver up all such estate and effects." He has not given up all the effects. There is an apparent and acknowledged deficiency of Rs. 75,000. However, said Mr. Dickens, to go to the merits of the case. A statement has been brought forward, and said to be the substance of what took place at a meeting of creditors, at which I put a question to a gentleman named Mackillop, whether Mr. Macintyre is a certificated bankrupt? Mr. Mackillop replied that Mr. Macintyre was a certificated bankrupt, and that subsequently to his appointment as assignee of this estate he has paid his creditors twenty shillings to the pound; and I was also informed that Mr. Mackillop, a partner in the London house, which was the corresponding house of Crutenden, Mackillop and Co., was Mr. Macintyre's assignee. I then said that it was not made known to the creditors or to this court that the said Donald Macintyre was a bankrupt. It has been argued that a certificated bankrupt does not disqualify Mr. Macintyre from being assignee, but in my apprehension, and so I will urge it, this bankruptcy does disqualify him, and it was gross neglect in him not to have made known his situation to the creditors and to this court. But passing to the items of expenditure, I find Mrs. Brown's marriage settlement, amounting to Rs. 3,17,000, as appears by the schedule, is secured by mortgages on this estate, and I state further in my affidavit, that there is other property belonging to this lady; secondly, as to Mr. Cullen, he has received or is entitled to receive, as Secretary to the Laudable Societies,—I state from my own belief, founded on some experience,—a salary equal to Rs. 1,000 per month. Now I find that Mr. Macintyre was to receive a commission of four per cent on the declared dividends, out of which he was to pay these salaries to the partners. I impute no blame to them for receiving the money, nor to him for paying it out of his own goods; but it is for this court to say whether he must give it out of the goods of the creditors. I then proceed to state what took place at the last meeting, and to set forth this resolution which I proposed in lieu of a report of what is called a committee of creditors.

"Resolved, that in the opinion of the creditors here assembled, there is no ground whatever for departing from the terms of the order of the 11th January, 1834, by which Mr. Donald Macintyre was appointed assignee with liberty to pay himself a commission of four per cent. on all declared dividends, including the allowance to James Cullen and Robert Browne, and in lieu of all charges, but law charges."

This resolution was rejected by a majority of 10 to 7.

I shall not comment on the statement regarding the amount of claims of the majority, because it is not verified on oath. [Mr. Leith here corrected Mr. Dickens.] True, it is; I find I am wrong. Then as to the merits of this application. I state that, to the best of my belief, Mr. Macintyre was acquainted with the pecuniary affairs of the insolvents; that he has charged house rent Rs. 375 per month, and that all the salaries are at a high rate, much higher than necessary. Then on what ground does he now ask that, a part of his charges, Rs. 75,000, should be charged to the estate, for I shall presently show that this is not the whole amount! The insolvents, under the terms of the order, were to receive Rs. 600 per mensem, but I find no amount charged to Mr. Cullen since last July, and no amount charged for house rent since last November. Both of which will have to be paid, and, therefore, instead of Rs. 75,000, the amount will be Rs. 80,000, or Rs. 40,000 per annum. I have not much to say as to the general management of the estate, but when a counsel comes here to speak of economy, it might be expected that he would produce a statement, easy to be procured, showing the amounts disbursed by other assignees to estates similar to this. Of the five agency houses that have failed in Calcutta, that of Colvin and Co. bears the greatest resemblance to this; and if we are to say Mr. Macnaghten's expenses for three years have been Rs. 27,000, what will become of the comparison? In this case too, Mr. Macintyre has taken Rs. 75,000 out of the estate; he was not at liberty to take it out for one hour; he was not under any circumstances, at liberty to take it out without paying interest; further at the time he makes this request, he has not shown that he is able to repay it, or that he has it in his hands. His disqualification by being a bankrupt and concealing that fact, affords no ground for the court's indulgence; nor will what has been stated at another place with reference to the amount forthcoming give him any claim to it. It has been shown that there is now in hand four lakhs of rupees only, which might allow him to call a dividend of four per cent. on which his commission would be Rs. 18,000, instead of Rs. 80,000 that he asks for, without showing why he has not made a dividend before this period. Besides this he has made a deliberate contract, subjecting the estate to a considerable loss, and he now comes with this application, grounded on nothing but the state of his health. It has been said that it is the practice of assignees to charge ad interim, but if so, they ought to ask for the sanction of the court, that the court and the creditors may know what they are about; failing in which, they ought to be made to refund with interest. Therefore Mr. Macintyre has been guilty of distinct breach of duty. He has not shown that he has made the amount good, or that he is able to make it good; and I say neither in equity nor justice is he entitled to Rs. 60,000 out of the Rs. 75,000 which he claims. I may also state to the court that there will be another application made to-day regarding the remuneration to be given to the new assignee, who has refused to agree to the terms of the recommendation of the meeting of creditors.

Mr. Leith in reply said, the observations of Mr. Dickens appear to be divided into two heads; first, that the expenditure is extravagant; and secondly, that Mr. Macintyre at the time of his appointment, was a bankrupt, and that his appointment is therefore void ab initio. As to the first, there is not sufficient evidence before the court, and further there is a discretion left to assignees which this court will not interfere with. The decision in the appeal to the Supreme Court on the petition of Messrs Hurry and Burkinyoung established that this court will not interfere with the assignee's discretion, and that if Mr. Dickens had any specific charge to make against the management of Mr. Macintyre that it must be brought either on the Common Law or Equity side of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Malkin thought that Mr. Leith need not trouble himself further on that part of the question.

Mr. Leith would therefore confine himself to the circumstances under which Mr. Macintyre has been obliged to withdraw himself from the office. It is established that an act beyond the parties controul shall rescind the contract; and here the party was permitted to withdraw, it having been shown that his life has been endangered by his continuing in the situation. He could state that the illness of Mr. Macintyre had been greatly increased by the anxiety he had manifested to do his duty, and that he only yielded to the accumulated ills of anxiety of mind and disease of body and to the peremptory order of his physician, and that he previously refused to listen to the advice and remonstrance of his friends, absent himself from his duty to go to the Sandheads. Now having satisfied the court that there was an absolute necessity for withdrawing from the office, that his integrity was unsuspected, that his hands were clean, and that there was not the slightest ground for suspicion, will the court when he is obliged to resign, when he is incapable of completing his contract, visit him with this heavy penalty? The court would recollect that it was Mr. Macintyre's interest to declare a dividend, and surely if it was found that rather than do so he had applied the funds to the advantage of a complicated and disordered estate, the court would not refuse to sanction every fraction of the expenses. It had been in Mr. Macintyre's power to declare a dividend long before this time, if he had been so inclined but instead, he had, advantageously for the creditors, appropriated the funds to the paying off mortgages. Thus by not declaring a dividend, he had sacrificed his own interest, clearly showing the morality of the transaction.

Mr. Dickens.—What mortgages? And it would be as well for counsel to remember that it is not the assignee, but the court that declares the dividend.

Mr. Leith stated the mortgages were mentioned in the committee's report.

Mr. Dickens did not deny that the statement had been made at the meeting.

Mr. Leith was surprised that his friend who had detected the non-payment of part of Mr. Cullen's salary, and the house rent, should not have also observed the large sum, mentioned in the committee's report, paid to redeem mortgages.

Mr. Dickens.—I find not a word regarding mortgages in the committee's report. I am aware that the attorney at one of the meetings said something with reference to mortgages, but 'set-off' was also mentioned.

Mr. Leith found the mortgage amount was only mentioned in the attorney's statement, but that was sworn to.

Mr. Dickens was ready to admit that Mr. Macintyre's statement set forth that the present amount of mortgages was only Rs. 5,90,000.

Mr. Leith said that was sufficient for his case. At the time of filing the schedule as it appeared by it the amount of mortgages were Rs. 25,00,000, so that it would appear that nearly Rs. 20,00,000 had been paid off.

Mr. Dickens objected to this statement. It was no Rs. 25,00,000, for mortgages, but for mortgage claim and set-off. Were these inaccuracies continued it would be impossible for him to know what he had to meet.

Mr. Leith continued to argue that Mr. Macintyre's conduct had been strictly honest and conscientious, and that in paying off the mortgages rather than declare a dividend he had acted not for his own interest, but for the benefit of the estate. As for the point that the appointment was void by reason of Mr. Macintyre's being a bankrupt.

Mr. Justice Malin.—No, that is not the point. It was Mr. Macintyre being a bankrupt in a particular bankruptcy.

Mr. Leith contended at great length that this did not affect the legality of the appointment, and urged that Mr. Mackillop was not in India at the time the appointment was made. That this might have been a ground for raising an argument against Mr. Macintyre's being appointed at first, if it were feared that his connection with Mr. Mackillop would lead him astray from his duty to the creditors. It was, however, now too late to argue this which might have had some weight prospectively, but could have none now when it was clearly established that such connection had not prevented Mr. Macintyre doing his duty uprightly and honestly. As to the two particular items which Mr. Dickens had inadvertently upon so strongly, although Mr. Leith was not little surprised at the use which his friend Mr. Dickens had made of them—considering their insignificance, he however thanked his friend for bringing them forward and dwelling on them, as it shewed that he (Mr. Dickens) had diligently sifted the accounts of the Assignee and the placing forward those two insignificant items discovered the barrenness of his ground and a strong negative proof of the accuracy of those accounts and the integrity of the assignee in the management of the estate. As to the agreement with the creditors being a deliberate contract, he insisted that Mr. Macintyre's illness being the act of God, the equity of the Court would rescind the contract; and that as the estate had had this benefit of the expenditure and not Mr. Macintyre, it was but fair on every principle of justice and equity that the estate should bear the expenditure. Supposing, Mr. Leith argued, that Mr. Macintyre had died, would the court have ordered the payment of this amount out of his estate? Then having been placed in the next stage to death, it was against every principle of equity not to order the payment of this sum out of the estate.

Mr. Advocate General appeared for Mr. Holroyd, but he had very little to say on this occasion. The court had heard that the late assignee was to have had four per cent. on the declared dividends; it had heard that Mr. Macintyre had been compelled to resign before a dividend had been declared, and that according to the strict letter of the court's order—but he, (the Advocate General) had nothing to do with that—that he now came to the equity of the court,—that a meeting had been held, and that the creditors had recommended “that Mr. Holroyd be allowed a commission of 1 per cent. upon the forthcoming dividend and 2½ per cent. on future dividends, to include all expenses, excepting law charges, and that the balance of the commission originally allowed be carried to the credit of the charges already incurred.” Now the court would find there was nothing touching Mr. Holroyd in the order granted by Sir Edward Ryan, and it did appear that the creditors had slept somewhat out of their province in giving an opinion on a subject not referred to them to consider. Moreover, it would appear, that, in the first instance, and at a much larger meeting of creditors than the last, that four per cent. on the declared dividends was the remuneration recommended, and it did not appear where the court had again referred to say that the original amount should be diminished. He apprehended that Mr. Holroyd stepping into Macintyre's place would abide by the original terms;—he apprehended,—and there could be no doubt of it,—that Mr. Holroyd, taking Mr. Macintyre's troubles, would take his advantages also, and so indeed it appeared he ought by the thirtieth section of the act, which contemplated no change, but that of an assignee incapable and unwilling for one capable and willing. His friend Mr. Leith had spoken much of a committee and of a report; but he had little to say on that subject, the committee was neither legislative, judicial or executive, and he had as little to say to the report. He could however say a great deal to shew that their recommendation was unreasonable. As to the conduct of Mr. Macintyre prior and subsequent of the appointment, he entered not into the question; but he did not like that Mr. Macintyre's conduct should impose a tax on his successor, which he said, was ill judged, nay more, that according to his judgment, Mr. Holroyd ought not to suffer for the real or imputed misconduct of his predecessor. He could say much on this subject, but much was not necessary to induce the court to hesitate before it rescinded the order when the circumstances were not changed from what they were when the order was passed except the circumstance of Mr. Macintyre himself. As to a commission of one per cent. on the forthcoming dividend; on what was the calculation grounded that there was a dividend to be so soon forthcoming? Out of a sum in hand of nine lakhs, six lakhs were required for indigo advances, therefore if a dividend is paid, they would not only have to borrow for advances, but also to pay off mortgage. Thus, then, all the money, and more than all, having to be laid out, there is not a shadow of reason for saying that there will be less trouble for the new assignee,—nay more, the first dividend will be the most difficult of all, as the assignee will have to investigate the right of the creditors to claims, which he will not have to do on the making of the second. Why Mr. Holroyd should be cut down to one per cent. he would like to know, for the act appeared to him unpretended. He thought he had heard of some rates of agency in this town,—he was not certain—what he was saying was all supposition of course,—where the agents,—he would not say committee,—claimed two and a half per cent. for receiving what they now recommend the assignee to have one per cent. for paying. Now taking into consideration that Mr. Holroyd would have to pay an establishment for the sole purpose of the business of estate, four per cent. did not appear too much on the declared dividends. However it was a delicate thing to press and he would urge nothing further.

Mr. Justice Malin said as this was a subject of some importance, he would take time to consider, and consult with the other Judges and would adjourn the hearing till the next court day.

IN THE MATTER OF NUDKISSORE SEIN.

The insolvent was examined by Mr. Prinsep, touching a Company's paper for Rs. 14,000, given to him by Rajkissore Sein immediately after the failure of the firm, of which they were both members. The insolvent deposed that the money was given to him by Rajkissore for his support, that Rajkissore concealed much more after the failure, and that, he, the insolvent, being a school-boy when he executed his assignment to trustees, was unconscious of its meaning and omitted to mention that he was in possession of the paper. Proceedings in equity had been instituted by Mr. Macnaghten, the receiver, for the recovery of a Company's paper for Rs. 4,000, part of the sum above mentioned, and it was urged by the learned counsel, that this was sufficient to induce the court to declare the petitioner not entitled to the benefit of the act, having put his creditors to unnecessary expense, and that at least his discharge ought to be delayed under the provisions of the 57th and 58th sections of the act.

Mr. Clarke appeared for the petitioner, and urged that the assignee was perfectly satisfied with the insolvent's conduct. But the court adjourned the hearing to the next court day.

Sibnarain Sein was declared entitled to the benefit of the act. Rajkissore Sein was again remanded, not having been able to serve a witness with a subpoena, who, it is alleged, is in possession of some property which belongs to the insolvent's wife.—Englishman.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20.

In the matter of James Cullen and Robert Browne.

Sir B. Malkin, with reference to the application on behalf of the late and present assignee, made an order in substance as follows, with consent of parties:—

That it be referred to Mr. Elliot Macnaghten to report upon the questions connected with the Assigneeship of the Estate of Cruttenden, Mackintosh and Co., namely, what would be a fair remuneration to Mr. T. Holroyd, Assignee of the Insolvent's Estate? What is the probable out-turn of the Estate applicable to a dividend and the length of time likely to be required to realize it? What the probable expense of management, the Estate being discharged from the allowance to Cullen and Browne? Whether the expenses incurred by Mr. Macintyre appear to have been reasonably and beneficially incurred? What proportion of the whole labour and expense likely to accrue in the management of the Estate has been actually incurred by Mr. Macintyre? What in his judgment, now that the result of the Estate is better ascertained than it originally could have been, would have been a fair remuneration to the original Assignee if he had continued to act until the concern was completely wound up!—with liberty to report on any other circumstances which come to his knowledge in the inquiry, which he thinks reasonable for the information of the Court.

In the matter of W. F. Clarke and others.

Mr. Advocate General applied for an order nisi that the assignees shew cause why the Bank of Bengal should not prove for six lakhs and a half of rupees. The learned counsel stated that the debt was a balance remaining unpaid of twenty-seven bills, some of which were drawn, others indorsed, and others accepted by the late firm of Fergusson and Co. At the time the late firm of Alexander and Co. were fearful they should not be able to meet the demands of their creditors, they applied to the other agency houses for assistance, four of which agreed to make advances to the extent of twenty lakhs. Subsequently one of the firms withdrew from this agreement, and the amount was reduced, therefore, to seventeen lakhs, which the agency firms raised by a drawing or endorsing or accepting bills, which were afterwards discounted at the Bank of Bengal; Alexander and Co. giving the firms securities in indigo factories and landed property, which securities were afterwards made over to the Bank of Bengal by the agency houses as a collateral security. After the failures of the whole of these firms, there was an application made for the sale of the indigo factories and landed property, and subsequently the assignees of Alexander and Co. were allowed to redeem the mortgages at a sum for which the property valued by persons experienced in such matters. The amount was paid over to the Bank in part liquidation of the debt, but there still remained a balance of rather more than six and a half lakhs, and for leave to prove for this amount the present application was made. Order nisi.

Dividends were declared of ten per cent on the estates of Fergusson and Co.; five per cent on that of Colvin and Co.; three per cent on Mackintosh and Co.; and two per cent on that of Frith and Gordon. We believe the two first mentioned will be in course of payment next week; viz. Fergusson and Co. on Monday and Thursday; and Colvin and Co. on Tuesday and Friday.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

SUPERINTENDING SURGEONS.—It is stated that intelligence has been received by Government, that Superintending-Surgeons are to be allowed to retire on the pay of Lieut.-Colonels immediately on their promotion, instead of serving two years in that grade as formerly; also that the three additional annual retirements from the Medical Fund have been sanctioned.

SIR CHAS. METCALFE.—Lord Auckland has brought out the insignia and patent of the Grand Cross of the Bath, conferred by His Majesty on Sir Chas. Metcalfe. The Baronet was invested with great ceremony on the 14th March, of which or full account will appear next month.

BENGAL ARCHERS.—The silver arrow was shot for by the Bengal Archers on the 30th January, and won, after a close contest, by the junior member of the company, Lieut. Lindsay. The large silver bowl contested for by the Bengal Archers, was won by their Captain, Mr. C. W. Smith. The condition under which the bowl was shot for, required 4 consecutive ends to carry off the prize the 1st night, and 3 consecutive ends the second and subsequent nights. The equality of four or five of the members prolonged the competition until the 4th night, when Mr. C. W. Smith gained the first three ends, and was accordingly declared to be the holder of the bowl for the current year.

THE AGRA PRESIDENCY.—Sir Chas. Metcalfe has received a letter by the Zenobia, intimating the abolition of the Agra presidency, and stating that the Government is to be administered by a Deputy-Governor, to be appointed by the Governor-General.

The Agra Bill passed into an Act, on the 31st of August and has been published in Calcutta.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The Chamber of Commerce, it is said, has accumulated upwards of thirteen thousand rupees from subscriptions, in excess of its current charges; and as the fund is likely to go on increasing, it has been suggested that a suitable edifice should be either purchased or built for the business of the Chamber, which is at present carried on in two or three hired rooms at the Exchange.

EARTHQUAKE.—The earthquake noticed last Sunday as having been felt at Chandernagore on the 24th January, produced such a considerable shock in Sook-Saugor as to bring down several pieces of plaster from the roof of Mr. A. Larruleta's house.

SEVERITY OF THE COLD.—The accounts received from several places of the severity of the cold during the night of the 17-18th of January, deserve to be recorded. The ice observed in the Botanic Garden was found in small pools. At one of the Soonderbun estates, ice was obtained in a saucer simply exposed upon the ground. At Dum-Dum and Barrackpore, there was hoar frost. At Sook-Saugor, ice was formed of considerable thickness in a plate or basin placed in an open verandah, and some injury was done to a coffee plantation in that neighbourhood by the frost.

COFFEE HOUSE.—Messrs. Spence and Wetherill have met with so much encouragement to their proposition for a Subscription Coffee House, that they have decided on carrying the plan into effect, and the alterations in the frontage of Loudon Buildings have in consequence commenced.

THE NOVENA.—On the 30th ultimo, the annual festival of the Novena being concluded, there was a brilliant illumination both inside and outside of the New Catholic Church at Howrah, and after the chanting of the usual vespers, a very pretty display of fireworks was exhibited. A large concourse of people filled the Church on this occasion.

CHANGE OF EDITOR.—Mr. Sutherland, finding himself unequal to the incessant anxiety and labour which the Editorship of the Bengal Hurkaru involves, has resigned that office, which has been re-assumed by the managing Proprietor, who will conduct the Editorial duties, with the aid of several gentlemen whose talents and services have been engaged in support of the principles advocated for so many years in the Hurkaru.

BRAHMINEE-BULLS.—In consequence of a Brahminee-bull in Sulkeah having recently gored an old woman in a most dreadful manner, the Acting Magistrate has ordered all these noxious animals to be transported to the opposite side of Balloo-Khal.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The curators of the Public Library have received from the College of Fort William the whole of the books, 5,000 volumes, granted by Government for the use of the Library. No delay will now take place in opening the Library.

Mr. Stocqueler has resigned the Honorary Secretaryship to the Library. The affairs of the institution, it is said, are going on very satisfactorily, and that there will be eleven thousand rupees available for the purchase of books after paying all expenses, when the next instalment is collected.

CUSTOM HOUSE.—It is stated, that in addition to the jetty about to be erected, the appraisers and searcher's offices of the Custom House, are for the further convenience of merchants and importer, to be located on the wharf so as to be immediately contiguous to the place appointed for the deposit of goods pending their clearance; and that suitable buildings are to be erected for that purpose.

BRIGADIER BROWN.—Brigadier Brown has been appointed one of the executors to the will of the late Begum Sombre; and his remuneration is fixed at seventy-five thousand rupees.

CUSTOMS COMMITTEE.—It is stated that the first report of the Customs Committee, on the existing system of sea and land duties of all India, is now before Government. The report commences with a detail of the land customs of Bengal, Bombay, Madras and Agra, takes a review of the customs laws of the several presidencies, and exhibits generally their operation.

CRATTENDEN AND CO.'S ESTATE.—Mr. Holroyd, the new assignee to the estate of Crattenden and Co., with prompt and sound judgment, has commenced selling off the various property of the estate. The ruinous premises in Cossitollah, formerly Duckett's coach manufactory and subsequently Messrs. Lamb and Co.'s auction, were sold on the 12th February, by Messrs. Jenkins, Low and Co. for 32,200 rupees, which, considering the ruinous state of the buildings, is as much as could reasonably be expected for them.

THE COSSIPORE FOUNDRY.—The Foundry at Cossipore was last week visited by the Governor-General, on which occasion the efficiency of the establishment was put to the test by a large cast of iron, which entirely succeeded. The establishment was also visited on the 11th February, by their Excellencies the Commander-in-Chief and the Goorkha General, who inspected with much minuteness the several departments for the fabrication of ordnance, and appeared to be greatly pleased with the arrangements, particularly General Martabhar Sing, who manifested an eager desire to make himself acquainted with every part of the operation.

STEAM TUGS.—The firm of Carr, Tagore and Co. have purchased the steamer Forbes for 1,10,000 rupees, and the new Emulous, (that is, the machinery of the old one with a new set of boilers coming out from England, and the vessel now building at Howrah to receive them,) for 90,000 rupees; and the two tugs, at their joint cost of two lakhs of rupees, are made a joint stock concern, divided into two hundred shares of one thousand rupees each, of which sixty shares were subscribed for as soon as the plan came out. This arrangement will secure the mercantile community against the chance of finding the river unprovided with a tug.

MR. CURVIN.—A circular has been issued from Calcutta, under the sanction of the Commander-in-Chief, submitting a letter from Mr. Curvin to the Barrackpore Committee, trusting to the Army for the protection and support of his family during his absence; to meet which the Committee suggest, that each Regiment in Bengal be invited to forward to the Union Bank, the amount of 60 Rs.

CAPT. GILLON.—Capt. Gillon, commander of the bark Skimmer, has been arrested at Pondicherry, and is likely to be handed over by that Government to the authorities at Madras, for having without authority, taken possession of the Danish settlement at the Nicobars some time in November last, on finding no garrison there to oppose him. The Danish, French and British Governments having taken up the cause. The bark Skimmer is under insurance in Calcutta for twenty-thousand rupees, to cover a mortgage on her, held by Mr. M. M. Manuk since October 1833, who is much alarmed at the report of her commander's proceedings, and suspicious of a design to keep the vessel out of his reach.

INDIGO PASSES.—The Chamber of Commerce, have obtained from the Board of Customs a suspension of the new rule respecting indigo passes, laid down in the Collector's circular of the 12th of December last, having satisfied the Board of the great inconvenience that would attend its operation. The Board have accordingly directed, that the merchants shall be allowed to export indigo, brought down to Calcutta under free passes, without being required to prove identity. Regarding another proposition of the Chamber an assurance has been given, that the question of abandoning the system of free passes altogether, and making up the loss of revenue, by a levy of six or eight annas per chest on indigo imported into Calcutta, will receive the Board's early consideration, and be submitted to that of Government.

THE NEPAULESE ENVOY.—The baggage, together with a great number of valuable presents and purchases of General Martabhar Singh Thappu, the Nepaulese Ambassador, left Calcutta on the 17th. The General followed on the 19th February.

MILITARY BANK.—The Military Bank, it is stated, is about to declare a dividend of seven and a half per cent., there being now 25,000 rupees applicable to a dividend more than the balance exhibited at the last meeting, by the sale of one of the houses mortgaged to the Bank.

THE CHARLES EATON.—Advices have been received of the appearance of a part of the crew of the Charles Eaton, which vessel, it was conjectured, had been lost in Torres' Straits on 15th August, 1834. It seems that five of the men have arrived at Batavia from Amboyna whither they had made their way from Timor-laout. The account the men give of themselves is any thing but satisfactory, and in some particulars is contradicted by facts which have come to light through more credible sources. According to the story told by these fellows, the Charles Eaton went to pieces very soon after they left her, and all hands must have perished immediately. In contradiction of this it has been ascertained, that on the 15th of last August, the ship was seen hard and fast ashore, and standing in such a position that the passengers and others might have maintained themselves alive as long as their provisions lasted.

LUNATIC ASYLUM.—Mr. Beardsmore has announced his intention to receive private patients in the Lunatic Asylum under his charge.

BANK OF BENGAL.—Mr. Alexander Colvin was on the 17th February, elected a director of the Bank of Bengal, in place of Mr. Cowie resigned.

INFANT SCHOOL.—The half yearly examination of the children of the Infant School took place on the 20th February, and the ladies and gentlemen present, of whom there was a large number, seemed highly gratified at the exhibition of the children. Another school on the same plan, it is stated, is about to be opened by a widow lady of the name of Blandford, near Loudon Buildings, for the reception of gentlemen's children.

MR. WAGHORN.—A prospectus of an Egyptian Agency about to be established by Mr. Waghorn, has been published in the daily prints. That gentleman has fixed himself at Suez, and offers his services to passengers, and undertakes also to forward letters or packets between Alexandria and Suez on reasonable terms.

COLONEL TAPP, it is said, is likely to succeed Major Kennedy in his political office and military command at Subathoo.

LEGISLATIVE ENACTMENTS.—An act and a proposed act of the legislature have been published. The latter affects the indigo planters, and contains a provision which will afford them some protection against the violence of zemindars, or other intruder, intending to deprive them of their plant. The former is an extension of the present Insolvent Act for three years from the 1st of March.

SALT SALES.—It is stated that Government have determined to do away with the salt sales. A price is to be put upon each description of salt in the Government sales, and any person may buy as much or as little as he pleases, at the fixed rate.

LOTTERIES.—The Gyananneshun says, that the Lottery Committee have been recommending the abolition of the Government lottery, and that this public nuisance is therefore likely to be done away with soon. The statement has since been contradicted.

MOOFUSSIL.

AGRA.—The ice made at this station during the season amounts to about 8,500 maunds.

Hookim Chund was examined by Lieut.-Col. Alves on the 19th and 22nd, but nothing was elicited from him to corroborate the documentary evidence, which, it is stated, clearly fixes the Jeypore tragedy on Jotaram and his party. Futte Lal was to have been examined on the 15th, and at the termination of his examination Lieut.-Col. Alves was to return to Jeypore.

Canine madness prevails to a considerable extent in Agra. In Taj-gunge several native children and their father, who endeavoured to save them, were bitten by a rabid dog, and one of the children and the father have since expired of hydrophobia. Orders have been issued for the destruction of all vagrant dogs.

MUTTRA.—A son of Saajaool-Moolk, Timoor Shah, lately arrived at this station en route to Calcutta, where a knavish attendant stripped him of half his property, the other half becoming the booty of the Muttra thieves, who broke into the shop where the unfortunate traveller was sojourning. He immediately returned to Loodcanah.

On the evening of the 19th January, a deroity was committed in the city, in which a mchajan, his son and a burkandaze were killed, and another man severely wounded. The robbers retired with impunity, carrying off property to the amount of thirty-six thousand rupees.

ALMAGHUR.—On the 27th January, His Highness the Raja of Kishungur, with some thousand attendants, passed through this station on a pilgrimage to the Ganges.

MYNPOORIE.—The dispatches of collections, amounting to about 18,000 rupees, from the tehseeldar treasuries of the 1st and 2nd Division of Shekoabad, were attacked on the night of the 14th January at Girool, about 18 miles from Mynpoorie and the same distance from Shekoabad, by a large body of decoits supposed to be Budhukas, and about 14,000 rupees carried off. The information reached Mynpoorie about 9 A. M. on the 15th, when Mr. Lean, after sending information to Mr. Fraser, the Magistrate then in camp in the district, and the neighbouring Magistrates and thanadars, set off immediately towards the Ganges, with a view of closing the ghauts and communicating with the Magistrate of Saleswan. It is said that a chuprassie recognized one of the leaders of the gang.

SAUGON.—A severe storm occurred here on the 28th January, accompanied with dreadful peals of thunder and vivid flashes of lightning. Capt. Wilson's house was struck by the electric fluid and burnt down.

DELHI.—Capt. Sanders assumed charge of the artillery on the 9th January.

LOODKANAH.—Baron Hugle and Mr. Vigne arrived at this station from Cashmere, on the 27th January.

JUANPORE.—It is reported that several indigo concerns in this district are about to be closed after working off the stubble plant, in consequence of the frost having ruined the prospects of the planters.

THE BEGUM SAMROO'S TROOPS.—The whole of the troops and establishment belonging to the late Begum Samroo, have been paid up and discharged without the smallest disturbance having taken place.

DELHI.—Our troops in Shekawattie will shortly move to the neighbourhood of the city of Jeypore, where, it is said, a new cantonment will be formed.

The kidnappers of Delhi continue to steal young children, both within and without the walls of the city, and, it is said, find a ready sale for them in the palace of the Great Mogul.

Great excitement has lately prevailed among the salt traders, in consequence of the reduction in the duty on Sambur salt, which has recently been put on the same footing as the inferior country salt. The traders had been induced to export large quantities of the common salt, in consequence of a report circulated among them, that in order to meet the loss which would result from the abandonment of the Sambur salt duty an additional duty would be levied on all other salts, and they are therefore losers to a considerable amount. This excitement has for a time effectually stopped the exportation of salt.

Serious affrays, it is stated, almost daily occur now in the neighbourhood of Rhotuck, between the Customs Establishment' peons and the smugglers of salt. In one instance lives have been lost, and in several wounds of the most severe description given and taken.

The Lahore Mission, on its return from Calcutta to Lahore, reached Delhi on the 23d January, and encamped outside the Cashmere gate.

Mr. Cowley, the artist, is employed on a historical painting, representing the King of Delhi and four sons, a species of grouping in high estimation amongst the native princes.

Mr. Alexander Fraser, by the prompt and judicious measures he has adopted, has considerably checked the smuggling on the Rhotuk customs' line.

ALLAHABAD.—The Leper Asylum has been completed and will shortly be ready for the reception of pensioners.

The Allahabad Customs' House, the last in the Agra presidency, has been abolished, and the system of inland and transit duties abandoned.

The Baza Baie arrived at this station on the 11th January en route to Benares, whither she goes on a pilgrimage.

The tax on the Hindu devotees who bathe at the junction of the waters during the Mela, amounted on the 25th January, to about sixty-four thousand rupees.

A robbery, attended with murder, was committed, on the 25th ultimo, near the Baza Baie's camp. A nautch-girl and her attendant were assaulted by a gang of armed men, severely beaten and stripped of every thing they had. The attendant died the next day from the treatment he received. Several robberies have also been committed at the fair; and a burglary was perpetrated on the house of a merchant, and property to a large amount carried off. One of the burglars was apprehended, but none of the property has been recovered.

A man named Gungadon was executed on the 5th February for having murdered his brother in consequence of his having refused to supply him with some new articles of clothing which he required.

BENARES.—A tremendous hail storm has been experienced in Benares, which has almost entirely destroyed the grain for twenty miles in length and four in breadth. Some of the masses of hail are said to have been about two pounds in weight.

DACCA.—The Government school at this station, is said to be in a flourishing condition, having the names of more than 130 boys in the register of attendance.

THE BEGUM SOMBRE.—Her Highness the Begum Sombre, died at her residence in Sirdhanah on the 27th January.

FUTTYCHUR.—The report of the Rum Distillery near this station having been destroyed by fire, is incorrect.

MOORADABAD.—The weather has been remarkably cold in this district, the thermometer being at day-break as low as 22° and in the day rising to 28°. Ice an inch thick as covered the nullah near the Nuwab's house.

MANNODLA THE DACOIT OF JESSORE.—This celebrated bandit, whose depredations and daring, it is said, has for some time past kept the inhabitants of the villages in Jessore in terror, and obtained for him the soubriquet of the Robin Hood of Jessore, and whose activity and cunning has hitherto baffled the utmost efforts of the magistrates of the district to apprehend him, has at length, through the tact and perseverance of Mr. Donnelly, the present magistrate, been captured and lodged in prison.

NATIVE STATES.

GOOMSUR.—The last accounts from Goomsur state, that there is now no doubt of the death of the Rajah. The country, however, will be taken and the power of the chiefs destroyed. Several men have been taken in arms at our outposts and four incendiaries, who had also committed murder, have been hanged by sentence of a special court-martial. Letters dated the 30th January, state, that in the western side of that country, a strong range of hills had been cleared of the rebels. The destruction of their granaries and some night attacks made on the rebels, had completely intimidated them. The young Rajah has since expressed a desire to deliver himself up to the Commissioner, who has gone to Nowgaum, and hostilities had in consequence ceased.

KURNOOL.—There is a probability of hostilities taking place shortly at Kurnool, a strongly fortified independent town, inhabited chiefly by Puttans and Arabs. The present ruler of this state was raised to the musnud through the authority of the British, but has long borne the character of a most debauched and profligate ruler.

JAYPORE.—Jotaram has not yet been removed to Rajghur; he still remains at Deosa. Lieut.-Col. Alves has gone out on a sporting trip, accompanied by two of the Rawul's sons.

AURUNGAHABAD.—The Nuwab viceroy, having convened an assembly of his umlah, informed them of the numerous acts of oppression, &c. attributed to them, and stated that the very next act of injustice or oppression brought to his notice, should be summarily punished. This exhortation was followed by an instant removal of some of the most corrupt of the Umleh and the substitution of others of better character.

LAHORE.—Runjeet Singh, in consequence of the present peace, has granted leave of absence to several bodies of his troops for a month or two. Raja Ruttun Singh has forfeited the favour of Runjeet Singh, and his jagheers have been confiscated for opposing the wish of his master. Now Nehal, the grandson of Runjeet, had fallen in love with the reputed beauty of the daughter of Ruttun Singh and demanded her in marriage: the father, however, refused to send his daughter to the royal seraglio, as she had long been betrothed to the son of a fellow sirdar. He even resisted the solicitations and orders of Runjeet himself, who by virtue of his royal prerogative confiscated his property, and threw him into prison. The Raja, however, has effected his escape, and will probably "turn rebel" for his uncourteous treatment.

It is further stated that Runjeet Singh having brofght Sultan Mahomed Khan to Lahore, under the express promise of appointing him agent of Peshawur, and having failed to keep that promise, the brother of Sultan Mahomed, Dost Mahomed Khan, assembled 15 or 20,000 Mulkeas, &c. at Jullalabad, whence he intends marching forthwith on Peshawur and taking vengeance upon Runjeet.

MYNPOORIE.—A dacoity was committed recently in a district of Mynpoorie on a tehseeldarry remittance, and cash to the amount of about fourteen or fifteen thousand rupees was carried off by the marauders.

HEERATT.—The carrier-traders, who conduct the trade between this country and Eeran, Russia, Mazindaran and Toorkistan, have lately been so harassed and pillaged by the marauding Beloches, that they one and all represented their case before the Heeratt ruler Sha-Kamren, a son of the unfortunate Shah-Zuman, who derives no inconsiderable income from this trade. Urged by their solicitation and the fear of his revenue being impaired, he sought out the Beloches, and coming on them unawares, a ganguinary conflict ensued, which terminated in the slaughter or capture of the principal loaders of these hordes.

The victory has been followed up by the Shah, who is now investing one of their strongest holds, the fort of Las.

MURTPORE.—His Highness the Raja has just proceeded to Roobas, accompanied by his dewan, Bolanath, and a large cortege. The chief amusement of the Rajah and his minister, is that of flying kites and endeavouring to cut the strings attached to that of each other.

MADRAS.

GOVERNMENT PURCHASE OF BULLION.—The Government have refused compliance with a petition which was addressed by the merchants of Madras to them requesting that they would resume the purchase of bullion, the Chief Secretary stating in reply that the Government is precluded from resuming the purchase as requested in the petition.

LIEUT. SPRYE.—Lieut. Sprye, who had been suspended the service by Sir Frederick Adam, has been restored by orders of the Home Government.

MR. BROWN, of the Civil service, also suspended from some judicial office by Sir Frederick Adam, has likewise been triumphantly restored, and is about to return to India.

ROBBERY.—A singular case of robbery has been under investigation at the Madras police office. It appears that a gentleman, hitherto considered a respectable member of society, called at Mr. Pharoah's, the librarian, and enquired the price of some articles in the shop. The shopman went up stairs to inform Mr. Pharoah that there was a person below, and during his absence, it is alleged, Mr. Pharoah's gold watch was taken from the place where it was usually suspended. The watch was immediately missed, and has since been traced to the individual who entered the shop and who is now in custody.

THE BREAKWATER.—The Madras Gazette states, that the Breakwater Committee have not the slightest idea of abandoning their undertaking, but on the contrary they are as sanguine as ever of being able to complete it.

ST. GEORGE'S INFANT SCHOOL.—An examination of the children attached to this institution took place on the 5th January at the College Hall, and they evinced considerable improvement since the last examination.

BOMBAY.

NAVIGATION OF THE INDUS.—One of the Ameers of Scind has expressed a desire to have a steamer built for him at Bombay, to navigate the Indus, and the Court have been requested to send out engines for her.

ROBBERY.—Another robbery has been perpetrated in the village Dhauadab, and property to the value of about five hundred rupees carried away, a woman killed and a man wounded.

SERIOUS ASSAULT.—On the 17th January a sailor, who was running away after escaping from the hands of the police peons, severely wounded a native on the road with a knife. The man is not expected to survive.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta, attended by the Venerable the Archdeacon of Bombay, the Revd J. Bateman, Captain LeMessurier, and Dr. Webb, reached Aurungabad on the 15th January. His Lordship was received with great respect. On entering the Nizam's dominions at Toka, he was met by a guard of honor composed of H. M. regular troops, cavalry and infantry, and on reaching the cantonments, a salute of 17 guns was fired. His Lordship preached and performed some other ceremonies at the station, and thereafter proceeded to see the lions of Hyderabad.

THUGGEE.—The son of a respectable trader of Tulhelgaum near Poona, and his servant, were murdered near Nanneij, in the Nizam's territories, by, it is supposed, a body of thugs and their bodies buried by the side of a nulla, from whence being dug out by wild beasts, they were discovered by the villagers. No trace of the murderers has been discovered.

PENANG.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.—A most daring assault and robbery was committed at Batu Kawan in Province Wellesley on the night of the 1st January, upon the opium and arrack farm house in that district, by a gang of Chinese fishermen and others, owing to the farmer having refused to allow a Chinaman named Kway Ahay, to have any liquor on credit before he had discharged the debt he owed to the farm. The man collected a body of about thirty other Chinese, armed with spears, tuts and choppers, and attacked the farmer and his servants, three of whom were severely and dangerously wounded. The robbers then broke open the farmer's cash-chest and took from it twenty-five dollars, carried off the whole of the chandang, of the value of about twenty dollars, and broke several jars containing samsou. Six of the gang were apprehended; but the constable of the district deemed it expedient to release them.

PIRATES.—Five Chinese fishermen, who were fishing to the westward of the Island on the 23d January, were assailed with stones by the crew of a small piratical boat consisting of six Malays, which induced them to jump overboard and swim towards the shore. Two succeeded in gaining the shore, the other three were captured and carried off to a large pirate prow which was standing seaward. Twelve other pirate boats chased and fired upon an Achinese prow from the Pedier Coast, while entering the harbour through the southern channel opposite Pulo Kundi, but she made her escape by a fresh breeze springing up that soon brought her safely to the anchorage.

SINGAPORE.

THE SCHOONER BOMBAY.—One-sixteenth of the amount of vessel and cargo, has been decreed by the Recorder for salvage of the Schooner Bombay, to Capt. Quin and the officers and crew of H. M.'s sloop Raleigh.

MALDIVE ISLANDS.

Letters received from the Maldive Islands state, that the survey is being prosecuted with spirit. Only one instance of sickness had occurred, and the natives were peaceable and gave every assistance required of them.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.—Letters from Rangoon give a very favorable account of the proceedings of the new Woonghee, who, it appears, is very anxious to settle justly and expeditiously all suits brought before him, and, although not very quick and intelligent, is patient, honest and firm. He made an attempt to re-introduce the ceremony of unslipping, but an English merchant, Mr. Trill, on whom the demand was first made, resisted it with determination, but with great good humour, and soon persuaded the Woonghee to give up the point.

The new Woonghee has, however, recurred to the former exorbitant charges for harbour dues, &c. which had been greatly mitigated by the deceased Woonghee. The Carnatic and the Thetis were charged at the old rate; but on a remonstrance from the agent of the Thetis, the extra charge was refunded; no favor, however, has been shown to the Carnatic.

The Resident has had a fight with the Court on the subject of the aggression committed by a large party of the wild tribe called Singfos, who entered our territory to the southward of Suddiya in Assam, and burnt and plundered a village occupied by another sect of the same race. After some trouble, the Resident persuaded the Court to send a strong party and an officer of rank to the offending Singfos, and allow Captain Hannay, the officer commanding the Resident's escort, to accompany the mission. The party left Ava on the 22d Jan., and are to go by water to Mogoung, and thence across the country nearly due north, to the vicinity of Suddiya.

BANDITTI AT KYOUK PHYOO.—By recent letters received from Kyouk Phyoo and Akyab, it appears that in the interior, banditti, armed and in considerable numbers, have again made their appearance to the great annoyance and terror of the peaceable inhabitants. Several officers with detachments both from Akyab and Kyouk Phyoo, have been sent out to suppress them, but at the last accounts particulars had not been received, as to the progress which had been made towards dispersing them; though from what had been heard, no doubts were entertained as to the favourable result of the expedition. A regular armed force meets with the greatest difficulty in endeavouring to penetrate the thick jungle in which the lurking places of the banditti are to be found. They are, it is said, organized under a chief, and levy their contributions on the villages where there is no means of resisting their demands.

CHINA.

DEATH OF CAPT. KEEN.—Capt. Keen, commanding the Lady Charlotte, of Liverpool, while proceeding, on the 22d November, from Whampoa to Canton in a boat under sail, was capized off the Dutch Folly and drowned with one of the boat's crew.

The statement that the robbers of the Troughton had been tried and condemned, is incorrect; these men remain untried though in confinement.

SEIZURE OF AN ENGLISHMAN.—The second officer of the Fairy Queen was seized on the 2nd of December last, while proceeding to Whampoa in a Chinese boat, and his person and the ship's letters have been secured and detained, until a large squeeze is paid.

DISURBANCE ON BOARD THE LORD LOWTHER.—A serious disturbance recently took place on board the Lord Lowther in China, which originated in the crew having obtained a quantity of spirits from the gun-room and become intoxicated, and which it was found necessary to solicit the aid of H. M.'s sloop Raleigh to quell. The ringleaders of the disturbance were taken on board of the Raleigh and have since proved very tractable.

COCHIN CHINA.

From the latest intelligence received from Cochin China, it appears that that country was in a state of great ferment, the people being in daily expectation of an attack from the Siamese, to repel which they were making extensive preparations, and evinced considerable jealousy of all foreign vessels visiting their ports. The British brig Fattal Gunny, which left Singapore for Tiong Muee with a cargo of gambier, opium, &c., was prevented by the Cochin Chinese authorities from having any communication with the shore, and ordered to depart from the outer roadstead under penalty of confiscation, although the strictest examination was made into the objects of the voyage and the nature of the cargo on board; a guard was also placed on board until instructions respecting her were received from the head-quarters at Soon-Wah.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kulo's Monthly Price Current, February 29, 1836.)

The scarcity of tonnage alluded to in our last number, continues up to the present time, and the transactions in Sugar, Saltpetre, Rice and other articles of bulk have been thereby considerably impeded.

The Indigo season having now terminated, and Silk arriving slowly from the interior, our produce market, in general may be described as excessively dull. On the other hand in articles imported from Europe, and principally in Twist and white Cotton Piece Goods, considerable business has been transacted. (14D140).—The late Sales have been made at an advance on previous rates, and in addition to the present state and future prospects of this article, we cannot do better than transcribe the following reports from Messrs. Hickey, Thomas and Co. and others.

A public sale was held on the 1st February, of Indigo, belonging to the state of Messrs. Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. of on Purneah and Mirzapore.

The Mirzapore Indigo excited much competition among the French and Arab merchants, and the prices were fully supported throughout, and shows the state of the market for similar qualities to be still advancing.

The demand for the Purneah Indigo was not so general—the purchases were chiefly for the French and English markets. A good part of this parcel was cracked and broken.

The Sale was well attended and the bidders exhibited considerable activity in the market, and it is supposed prices will still further advance.

The Sale on the 3d February went off on the whole with more spirit than the last, and prices, particularly, on middling and low qualities, have shown a further advance; some extensive marks of fine Indigo have also changed hands at full rates, and the market assumes a very firm appearance, and present rates may be expected to rule throughout the season.

Another Public Sale was held on the 8th February, which included 168 Chests belonging to the Estate of Messrs. Cruttenden Mackillop and Co. the attendance was good and the prices obtained fully equal to those of the preceding week and show the market to be steady and susceptible of further improvement. The purchases were for the Gulph, England, and French Markets.

The Sale at the new Mart on the 12th February, went off with less spirit than the preceding. Purchases were made chiefly on English account. The J. A. 8, was bought for the French Market, after the sale for 161Rs cash all round without rejection.

The Indigo Sale, on the 20th February, went off with much animation, and the prices realized may be considered higher than the average of the season.

This result we anticipated from the exceedingly favorable accounts, received by the overland despatch from London to the 1st December.

The English Market is shown from these to be in a healthier state than has been known for years. The orders for home consumption, and for export to the continent of Europe, were as large that the support usually given by Importers became almost unnecessary, and out of 8173 Chests (an extraordinary number for the October Sale) only 600 were bought in a circumstance, we may venture to say, quite unprecedented.

This coupled with the also extraordinary deliveries during the months of October and November, namely 5,816 Chests, a quantity greater than was ever known to be delivered in these months, when the ports in the North of Europe are closed, proves, that the Stocks in the hands of consumers, both on the Continent and England, must have been quite exhausted.

A reduction of Stock in the London Ware-houses, has consequently taken place, and to the extent of 7,137 Chests.

From official returns in our possession, it appears, (taking the average of the last 5 years) that the quantity required for the London Market (to supply the Home Consumers and for Export to the Continent is about 90,000 Maunds, taking, therefore, the extreme estimate of the present Crop to be 1,15,000 Maunds, and deducting the Exports now in progress to different parts, not included in the above returns, which may be put down at about 9,000 Maunds, there would remain only 15,000 Maunds for England, exclusive of local consumption, and loss in weight—we may, therefore, reasonably expect an important advance upon last quotations.

We congratulate those who have purchased, and equally so our friends engaged in the cultivation of the article upon the cheering prospects.

Very little is remaining in the market.

The importation up to the date is f. m. 108307

At the same time last year 109365

(PIUM).—The market continues in a very animated state, owing to the favourable advices expected from China. Private sales are however confined to small parcels, the drug being in a few hands. The 2d public sale held on the 8th instant, went off with great spirit.

RAV SILK AND SILK PIECE GOODS.—The favourable accounts received by the last overland despatch from England fully confirm the opinions which we expressed in our number of August last. The circumstance then described still exist in full form, and the diminution of our supplies from the interior will be greater than was at first anticipated. The progress of private cultivation having been checked since June last, by the unfavourable season, it is highly improbable that the great efficiency caused by the retirement of the Honorable Company from the trade will be soon made up.

The market continues in a very animated state, and prices are on the rise. Shipments to the Coast and to the Gulphs are in great activity, and amount for the last nine months to 2,853 Maunds whilst the average of the last three years is 2,450 Maunds.

The demand for Curahs continues very steady and prices which have already improved may have a further rise; parcels as they arrive from the interior are eagerly purchased for the English market. There has been also a fair business done in Choppahs.

COTTON.—Few sales have taken place for the finer qualities, of which however there remains scarcely any thing in the market. The new crop is now coming in gradually. The produce of this season is expected to be very considerable.

SUGAR.—The Sugar market has generally improved since our last, owing to the difficulty of procurable tonnage for England. The transactions are confined to small parcels for shipment to the Gulphs.

L.A.C.—Lac Dye.—This article is more in demand; the fact of a diminished produce being now fully established by the official reports of the quantity received in Calcutta, and there can be no doubt that the prices of the best native quality (for example) have been for some time past remunerative.

Shell Lac.—Has rather a tendency to advance; several purchases have been lately made for the French market, and for American and England parties are eager to purchase at the present prices.

Stick Lac.—Prices steady.

RICE.—Bellam and Mungghy Rice meet with steady demand for shipments to Bombay and the Coast, and prices have improved. In the Grain sorts, suitable for the English market, but little doing, owing to the scarcity of tonnage. In regard to Mungghy Rice, we may observe that owing to its late extreme cheapness 14 annas per Maund, considerable orders have been received from Upper provinces, a somewhat remarkable occurrence.

WHEAT.—The small quantity remaining in the market, is extremely inferior, having become almost unmerchantable from the attack of the weevil. The principal transactions consist in the loading of several vessels, (lately arrived,) under contract for the Government at Sydney.

LINSEED.—The stock now in Calcutta belonging wholly to parties engaged in the supply of the English markets, is disappearing as fast as Tonnage can be procured. The market under these circumstances cannot be considered as being open, and we have consequently no transaction to report. The price is quoted nominally at 1 8 per Maund.

MFALS.—Copper.—Our prices are well supported, to which the moderation of our late imports has chiefly contributed; there is however a steady demand for the interior and we have no reason to believe in the existence of general stock at the great deposit of Mirzapore. Peruvian slub has again advanced; 5 200 mds were sold at 28 12.

Spelter.—The extraordinary rise in England as stated in the accounts lately received by the overland despatch, has not had a corresponding effect upon this market. The prices however will doubtless advance ere long, a movement which is at present retarded by the late heavy arrivals.

Lead.—Scarcely any business has been done in this article; a single sale of 700 mds. pig lead at Rs-6 is the only reported occurrence during the month.

The few transactions in Iron are confined to assorted bar, with a further decline in prices, the market is bare of the other descriptions. One Inch Hoop Iron is much wanted, and the inquiry for Sheet Iron is brisk.

Tim Plates.—Are dull and prices have declined.

Steel.—We have no transaction of Swedish Steel to report.

Quicksilver.—Continues in request.

Twist.—Considerable sales have been made lately in white Twist, and it will be seen that prices have somewhat declined. The importation since our last were per William Southouse 223 bales per Joana 399 bales per Devilton 42 bales and per Zenobia 9 bales. In Turkey Red Yarn and Orange Twist very little has been done.

WHITE COTTON PIECE GOODS.—With the exceptions of Shirtings and other descriptions of stout Cloths, which are as is usual on the approach of the warm weather, somewhat less in demand, the market has been extremely animated, and that the sales of nearly all description of Scotch Goods in particular have been very extensive. There have been lately some large orders in town for Book Muslin and Hankerchiefs to supply the trade to the Eastward.

Of the Printed Calicoes Neutrals and generally all the dark colours are less in demand at present; on the other hand Bengal stripes and single colored plates on fine cloths command ready sales at full prices. Our market however is so bare of these latter articles that very few sales have come to our notice.

WOOLLENS.—Fine Town Cloth have been lately much depressed, owing to some parcels which have been forced upon the market. In coarse Woollens the transactions are very limited as is usually the case at this season of the year.

SALT PETRE & HIDES.—A few transactions only for the United States.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND MEETING.

Pursuant to the notice which had been published in the different Presidency papers, a meeting of the subscribers to the Civil Service Annuity Fund, was held at the Town Hall on Saturday the 19th March. The attendance was unusually large, owing in a great measure to the personal interest attaching to the question which was to come on for discussion.

Mr. PATTLE, as chairman of the committee, having read the notice convening the meeting, Mr. C. W. Smith, at Mr. Pattle's suggestion, was unanimously called to the chair. Mr. William Young then stepped forward and requested an explanation of the Notice under which the members of the Civil Service had been called together, as it was perfectly unintelligible in its present shape. He submitted that, perhaps, the best plan would be to read the proceedings of the Committee of Management which had led to the notice, together with all the minutes that had been placed on record. Mr. Pattle briefly explained the intent and purport of the notice, but Mr. Young deeming the explanation insufficient, he put his first proposition in the form of a motion. The motion was opposed by Mr. Parker and Mr. H. T. Prinsep, the latter gentleman suggesting that it would be quite sufficient for the purposes of the meeting were the recorded proceedings to be read, without the minutes, which were voluminous and would occupy, unnecessarily, a great deal of time.

On the question being put to the vote, Mr. Young's motion was lost.

The Chairman then read the proceedings without the minutes.

Mr. PLOWDEN put the question as to whether proxies should be received on the present occasion, adding that he was in possession of a considerable number. Mr. Mangles, on the same ground, wished the point to be decided. The admission of proxies was agreed to, without a division.

Mr. MORLEY then rose, and with reference to the notice convening the meeting, moved that "the appointment of Mr. McClintock to the office of Secretary to the Civil Fund be confirmed." Mr. Oakes seconded the motion.

Mr. H. T. PRINSEP begged to engage the attention of the meeting for a short time while he entered upon an explanation of the grounds of a minute he had placed on record, in his capacity of one of the managers of the Civil Fund, and which had been made a subject of public discussion and taken in an offensive sense. It had never been his intention to set his face against Mr. McClintock individually, when it was proposed to confer upon him the office of Secretary to the Annuity Fund, but he did most decidedly object to the rendering that office an adjunct of the situation of Accountant-General's assistant. He could perceive no good reason whatever for the union, but was quite alive to the serious injury and inconvenience that might result from it. He considered that the service required in their Secretary a very intelligent, clear-headed man, which an Assistant to the Accountant-General might not always be, and he therefore thought it the duty of the management to select the fittest candidate who might present himself. For this reason he had supported the pretensions of Mr. Grant. He had not voted for Mr. Henry Torrens, because that gentleman was not a permanent resident in Calcutta. In illustration of the necessity for a superior and an intelligent Secretary, Mr. Prinsep related an instance of a recent oversight which had seriously jeopardized the interests of the institution.

Having offered what he considered a necessary explanation, Mr. H. T. Prinsep drew the attention of the meeting to the provisions of clause 23 of the Civil Annuity Fund Regulations, which required that the majority of votes which was to decide the question before the meeting should consist of three-fourths of the parties present, including proxies. Looking at the state of opinion as it was understood to exist, he thought it quite impossible that a vote of three-fourths could be obtained either for the confirmation or the rejection of the appointment. As an antecedent resolution, therefore, he would propose that the meeting should determine, by a vote of three-fourths of those present, whether the question before them should not be decided by a mere majority.

Mr. PATTLE, though he agreed with Mr. Prinsep, that the course proposed would be the most rational that could be adopted, supposing that the large majority required by the Regulations could not be obtained, yet he doubted how far the meeting was competent to decide the question before it by an undefined majority, until it had been clearly ascertained that there were not three-fourths of the parties present either for or against the confirmation of Mr. McClintock's appointment. He entirely concurred with Mr. Prinsep in thinking that a highly efficient Secretary was necessary to the due protection of the interests of the Fund, and the correct performance of the duties attaching to the office. He considered an extensive and sound acquaintance with arithmetic indispensable in such a functionary; for the matters that would come before him and the points to be referred to his investigation, might frequently involve arithmetical questions, the solution of which required ability of no ordinary character. In regard to the perpetual junction of the offices of assistant to the Accountant-General and Secretary to the Annuity Fund, Mr. Pattle declared his entire concurrence in the sentiments of Mr. Prinsep. He could not perceive that there was a shadow of reason in support of such an union.

Mr. GEORGE UDNY addressed the meeting upon the subject of the construction which he considered the 23d clause of the Regulations to bear. According to his view of it, three-fourths of the meeting were necessary to reject the nomination of the managers. He considered the controlling power of the service to mean a cancelling power only, and that therefore, if three-fourths of the parties present did not vote against the nomination of Mr. G. F. McClintock, he was, to all intents and purposes, the elected secretary.

Mr. MORLEY supported Mr. Udny's construction of the Regulation. Mr. J. P. Grant, on the other hand, contended that the power of the service was general: it could either confirm, reject, or alter. The managers in a matter of this kind could do nothing finally,—their nomination of the Secretary being only a provisional act, dependent entirely upon the result of a reference to the service at large, whose servant, and not the servant of the managers, the Secretary to the Fund unquestionably was. The terms of clause 23 were clear and distinct:—there was not one syllable in them regarding the cancelling or rejecting power of the subscribers, but simply a declaration of their power of control. All he wanted now, and all he had wanted from the first was fair play. As far as he was concerned he wished the whole matter might go back to the managers if they would only agree to decide, without regard to any past pledges, or to Mr. Dorin's argument, which had been almost unanimously abused by the service, and had even, he believed, now been given up by its author.

Much loose discussion and desultory conversation here arose respecting the proper interpretation of the clause; but it was quite impossible to take a note of anything that fell from the chorus. It would be pleasant, as a member of the civil service not long since observed, if, when gentlemen speak together at public meetings they would at least condescend to speak, as chorists sing—in parts.

When the conversation had subsided, Mr. Mangles addressed the meeting. He thought that the clause of the Regulations which had been quoted, left no doubt whatever of the power of the meeting to decide the question before it either way, and assuming that to be generally admitted, he would entreat his hearers to go at once to its consideration fairly and dispassionately. He thought that the conduct of the managers in nominating a Secretary without ascertaining what other candidates, besides Mr. McClintock, intended presenting themselves, highly to be reprehended, and exceedingly unfair to the service at large. There was too generally a disposition in Calcutta to regard only the views and interests of Calcutta residents, and to slight the wishes and votes of the members of the service stationed in the Mofussil. He thought the civilians at the presidency were in a manner the trustees of the interests of those up the country. But it was a bad omen when, not only in this case, but in all others which came before the service, there was an immense majority of Calcutta members of the service on one side, and an overwhelming majority of mofussil members on the other. On the present occasion this appeared to have been peculiarly the case, and much indignation had consequently been excited. He conjured the meeting, therefore, to vindicate the character of the Calcutta civil servants and to enter upon the question before it in a liberal, he would say a catholic, spirit.

Mr. TAYLOR (of Cuttack) wished to offer a few words before the question was put to the vote. The meeting had been called together for the purpose of confirming or rejecting an appointment made by the managers, but in the very notice convening the meeting they were likewise invited to consider whether Mr. Trower, an ex-officio member of the management, had any right to vote. Now he, Mr. Taylor, would submit that, until it was decided whether or not Mr. Trower possessed a clear right to vote, no appointment could be considered to have been made by the managers; and should it be held by the meeting that no such right existed, the second question as to the appointment naturally fell to the ground.

It was then resolved that the question of Mr. Trower's right to vote should be first determined. On that question being put from the chair,

Mr. J. P. GRANT begged to explain that his appeal to the service bore no reference whatever to Mr. Trower's right to vote. He had never doubted or denied that gentleman's right for a single moment, though it had been most perseveringly asserted by one of the newspapers which professed fair dealing,* that the reference to the service was grounded upon an objection to Mr. Trower's vote, and thereby a prejudice against his appeal had been created in several quarters. He could not conceive how the journal in question should so grossly have misrepresented his case, in the very face of the advertisement calling the meeting to be found in the same paper, from which it clearly appeared that the two questions were altogether distinct. Nor did he understand why those writers who professed the most liberal principles, and were constantly quoting Bentham, should have set their faces against an appeal to the wishes of the body of the persons interested in the matter. He thought that those who pretended to be guided by the doctrine of the "greatest good of the greatest number" were somewhat inconsistent in supporting a party which wished to force upon the service an appointment, against which the majority of those concerned had formally protested.

Mr. TAYLOR's motion that the question of Mr. Trower's right to vote as a manager having been put to the meeting, it was decided by a large majority that the vote was valid, four or five hands only being held up against that resolution.

Mr. PRINSEP's original motion was now brought forward again. Mr. Udny, however, moved an amendment to the effect that the meeting had been improperly convened, and that it had no jurisdiction in the matter immediately before it. Much irregular discussion arose upon this point, which ended in a reference to the Chairman, who decided that all objections to the jurisdiction or authority of the meeting should have been advanced ab initio, and could not be entertained now that the power of the meeting had been virtually recognised by its decision of questions which had arisen in the course of debate.

Several gentlemen, who had already spoken, having risen "to explain" the cry of "question" was generally raised, upon which Mr. Morley's motion was put to the vote, seconded as before by Mr. Oakes; and upon a division and scrutiny the numbers were as follows:—

FOR CONFIRMING THE APPOINTMENT OF Mr. MCCLINTOCK.

Messrs. Blgrave, Morley, Dorin, J. S. Reid, Oakes, Trevor, G. Udny, W. Palmer, H. Palmer, J. Hay, F. McNaghten, Turnbull, Harrison, Ramsay, Erskine, W. H. McNaghten, Thompson, Mackenzie, Gilmore, Wm. Young, besides 117 proxies, making altogether 137.

AGAINST CONFIRMING THE APPOINTMENT.

Messrs. Plowden, Mangles, H. T. Prinsep, C. Martin, Pattle, Oldfield, Siddons, Parker, Houston, J. Young, R. Walker, Millet, Hyde, Batty, Taylor, Bushby, Cumming, Stainforth, Pigou, Pringle, &c. &c. 191 proxies, making altogether 211.

The following resolution was then moved by Mr. Mangles:

"That the Managers having unanimously referred the matter of Mr. McClintock's appointment to this meeting, and it having been proposed by Mr. J. Morley, and seconded by Mr. Oakes, that the appointment of Mr. McClintock be confirmed; and it appearing on a division upon that question, that three-fourths of the subscribers present or voting by proxy are not in favor of confirmation (the numbers being ayes 137 and noes 211), Resolved, that the Secretaryship be vacant."

To this Mr. MORLEY moved an amendment to the effect that Mr. McClintock's appointment remain good until it should be disapproved by a majority of three-fourths, which, not being seconded, fell to the ground.

Mr. W. H. MACNAGHTEN after prefacing that he wished to see fair play, moved as another amendment, to refer to the service at large a specific proposition that Mr. Grant be appointed secretary, on the understanding that if he did not get a majority of three-fourths, the appointment already made by the managers should stand.

Mr. MANGLES said that such a proposition did not accord with his idea of fair play. Mr. W. H. Macnaghten replied, there was a difference between putting a man in the saddle who was out of it, and putting a man out who was in: and a reference being made to the chairman by Mr. Pattle and others, as to whether such a motion could be put with reference to the result of the division on Mr. Morley's motion, he gave it as his opinion that the office was made vacant by that vote. The amendment having, nevertheless, been seconded, was put to the meeting and lost, no one voting for it.

Mr. Mangles's motion was then put and carried, the numbers being

For the motion, present	21
General proxies,	67
Against, present	88
Majority	75

Mr. Mangles followed this up with a motion to recommend Mr. Grant to the choice of the Managers, on the ground of the number of subscribers who had voted for his appointment, but withdrew his motion on a suggestion of its inconsistency with the mover's own principle of selection, made by Mr. Torrens, who took the opportunity of declaring his intention to propose himself now again as a candidate.—Englishman.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Proceedings of the General Meeting of Proprietors and Subscribers of the Calcutta Public Library, held at the Library Rooms, 8th March, 1836.

The Hon. Sir J. Peter Grant in the chair.

PRESENT.

The Hon. Sir E. Ryan, C. Cameron, Esq., Rev. J. Marshman, W. P. Grant, Esq., J. R. Colvin, Esq., J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., H. M. Parker, Esq., T. Dickens, Esq., Baboos Russomoy Dutt and Prosono Coomarr Tagore, J. T. Pearson, Esq., Col. Beatson, Col. Dunlop, G. T. Speed, Esq., and others.

Report of the Curators of the Calcutta Public Library to the Proprietors and Subscribers thereof.

The Curators have pleasure in informing the proprietors and subscribers of the Calcutta Public Library, that the use of the Fort William College books have been made over to them by the Governor of Bengal under the following conditions, viz.

1st. That the Society shall provide a place and establishment fitting for the reception, care and preservation of the books lent them by Government, and if at any time for want of funds or any other cause the Society shall neglect or be unable to do so, that they will redeliver the books to any person whom the Governor of Bengal may depute to receive them.

2d. "That the assignment shall be subject to the approbation of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, and the books be reclaimable by the Government if this approbation be disapproved by that authority.

3d. "That they shall at all times be open to the examination of any person the Governor of Bengal may depute to examine them, in order to see that the books are preserved with due care."

Upon signing these conditions the Curators got permission to take away the books and they then thought it necessary to appoint a person in whom they might have confidence for the purpose of the taking charge of the books from the gentleman entrusted with the care of them by Government, and of carefully comparing the books delivered with the lists, which the Curators will be called on to acknowledge the correctness of. It became also necessary to arrange the books of which your library consists, and this not only in such a catalogue as might be of easy and useful reference, but also to arrange the books themselves in a manner consistent with convenience and economy both of space and funds.

These matters have necessarily taken up much time, but they appeared to the Curators of such importance as to warrant all the attention which has been paid to them; and they have satisfaction in announcing that a catalogue raisonne of all the works in the library is prepared and ready for printing, and that all the arrangements which appeared to them necessary to be made before opening the library, will be completed by the day on which they have called a general meeting of the proprietors and subscribers.

The Curators, after a careful consideration of the merits of the different candidates who presented themselves, have appointed Mr. Stacy to the office of librarian. They have also appointed Peery Chund Mitter to the office of sub-librarian. Considering all that was spent upon the establishment until the library was opened as diminishing the very small capital upon which the library depends, they have endeavoured to keep these expenses as low as a due attention to the work to be done would allow, and though they did not think it right to avail themselves of Mr. Stacy's liberal offer to do gratuitously all the laborious work preparatory to opening the library, they were glad to be able to secure his services, for this purpose at 100 rupees per month, or half the salary which it has been thought right to affix to the situation which he holds.

Annexed to this report is a statement of the money paid and received on account of the institution up to the 7th of March, 1836. In addition to the information to be found in this document, the Curators have to observe that

The total expenses of book-shelves will amount to.....	1,100	0	0
Of other furniture to.....	450	0	0
Together.....	1,550	0	0
Of which has been paid.....	1,000	0	0
(Being all which they were entitled to lay out) leaving a balance of.....	550	0	0 which they have to ask your permission to devote to the above purpose. The total amount subscribed for is.....

Proprietor's Shares of Sa. R. 300 each, of which is already paid.....	6,887	1	1
Donations.....	200	0	0

Some of the proprietors have paid up their whole shares, and the actual sum available, supposing all outlandings to be collected, is Rs 7,500, which the Curators think too small a sum to meet the expenses which it is desirable to incur immediately.

They therefore submit that you should come to a resolution calling upon the proprietors to pay their 2nd instalment forthwith; if this be done, there would be immediately available for the purposes of the library Sa. Rs. 14,200.

The Curators have taken into consideration the matters referred to them by the 5th resolution of the meeting of 31st October last, and with regard to that part of it which refers to them, the framing of rules for collecting books, they are of opinion that it would be premature now to frame such rules. They have thought it more useful to the institution to prepare a catalogue raisonne of all the works at present comprised in the library, by reference to the different departments of which the deficiencies of the collection can accurately be known; and the Curators having undertaken to prepare lists of useful works in those departments of knowledge with which they have respectively some acquaintance, they believe that from those lists compared with the present catalogue when printed, a general list may easily be made by reference to which advantage may be taken of all opportunities for acquiring books.

With regard to the other matter referred to them in the above resolution, viz., the framing rules for the circulation of the books.

Proposed Rules for the circulation of Books of the Calcutta Public Library among the Proprietors and Subscribers.

Rule 1st.—None of the books belonging to Fort William College Library shall be allowed to circulate without special leave obtained from the Curators.

Rule 2d.—The Curators shall have power to withdraw from circulation, and also to prohibit without special leave obtained from them, the circulation of any book in their discretion.

Rule 3d.—All other books in the Library shall be allowed to circulate among proprietors and 1st and 2d class subscribers.

Rule 4th.—No book shall be allowed to circulate until it shall have remained in the Library one week from the date of receipt, except novels, tales and periodicals intended for circulation. These may be put into circulation after two days from the date of receipt.

Rule 5th.—No person shall be entitled to take books out of the Library who has not deposited a sum of rupees to be applicable to the discharge of all claims against him on behalf of the Library.

Rule 6th.—No person shall be entitled to take any books out of the Library until he shall have discharged all claims against him on behalf of the Library.

Rule 7th.—No deposit shall be returnable except under an order in writing of the Curators.

Rule 8th.—The Library shall be daily open (Sundays and the space of days immediately preceding the Annual Meeting of the Proprietors and subscribers in each year, only excepted) from a.m. to p.m.

Rule 9th.—Any proprietor or 1st or 2nd class subscriber shall be entitled to have delivered to him or to his written order books from the Library if he provide a suitable bag or box for the secure conveyance of such books.

Rule 10th.—No person shall be entitled to have out of the Library at any time more than one set of works and one periodical without special leave of the Curators.

Rule 11th.—Any works comprised in one volume and in general the works of any one author or set of authors published together shall be accounted a set of works, provided that in voluminous works the Curators shall have power in their discretion to limit the number of volumes which shall be taken out at any one time.

Rule 12th.—All works as received shall be entered in the Library Catalogue, and the titles thereof shall be conspicuously notified in the Public Room.

Rule 13th.—All new works shall also as received be entered in a book to be entitled a privilege-book, and such works shall be issuable to proprietors and subscribers who put their names under the respective entries according to the order in which they put down their respective names, provided that proprietors and 1st class subscribers who put down their names within a month of the date of the receipt of such new work shall be allowed to take out such new works before any 2nd class subscriber.

Rule 14th.—The person next in succession for such new work who does not apply for it one day after it has been returned to the Library shall be considered as having lost his turn and the first applicant on the list after him shall then be entitled to take out such works.

Rule 15th.—Any person taking out books shall be entitled to keep them for the following periods exclusive of the day of delivery, viz.

Periodicals for	2 days.
New Works, vol. 8vo.	2 days.
————— vol. 4to.	1 week.
————— vol. folio.	2 weeks.

Any person shall be entitled to keep other works for double the above times, or until one day after he has received notice on the part of the Curators to return them.

Rule 16th.—Any Proprietor or subscriber taking away books without giving notice to the Librarian shall pay a fine of 5 rupees each volume for every day the same is kept out of the Library.

Rule 17th.—Any person not returning any book within the times limited by the Library Rules, shall pay a fine to be determined by the Curators not exceeding one rupee per volume for each day of such undue detention.

Rule 18th.—Any book found on return to the Library damaged shall be withdrawn from circulation until examined by the Curators, and the particular imperfection shall be notified in a conspicuous part of the book before it is re-issuable and the person in whose custody such book was when such damage occurred, shall be answerable to the Curators for such sum as they may determine to be necessary to repair the same.

Rule 19th.—When any fine has been incurred by any person who has taken out books, notice thereof shall be given to him by the Librarian, and if not paid the fine shall be deducted from his deposit and no books be issued to him until his deposit be completed.

The report of the Curators being read, it was proposed by Col. Beatson, and seconded by Col. Dunlop—

“That the appointments of a Librarian and Sub-Librarian which have been made by the Curators, be confirmed, and that the expenditure which has been incurred for book-shelves and library furniture, be sanctioned. Carried unanimously.”

* Moved by Col. Dunlop, and seconded by Baboo Russomoy Dutt—

“That the Proprietors be requested to pay up their second instalment for the purposes mentioned in the report of the Curators. Carried unanimously.”

Moved by Sir E. Ryan, and seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq.—

“That it be recommended to the Curators to lay out the sum of Sica Rupees 6,000 in the purchase of popular and entertaining works, including periodicals, from time to time, as the Funds received shall allow. Carried unanimously.”

Moved by Colonel Beatson, and seconded by Dr. Marshman—

“That the late Curators be requested to prepare the list of valuable books which they consider wanting in order to complete this library to what it ought to be, with a view to their being procured when it may be practicable, with reference to the state of the funds. Carried unanimously.”

Moved by W. P. Grant, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Marshman—

“That the catalogue prepared by the Curators be printed forth with. Carried unanimously.”

Moved by seconded and by

“That Doctor Strong be made an Honorary Member of the Society with all the privileges of a proprietor. Carried unanimously.”

Moved by Doctor Marshman and seconded by Colonel Beatson—

“That the following gentlemen be elected as Curators for the ensuing year.

Dr. Strong.	W. P. Grant, Esq.
J. Kyd, Esq.	Dr. Marshman.
Baboo Russomoy Dutt.	C. E. Trevelyan, Esq.
Col. Dunlop.

Amendment moved by Sir E. Ryan, and seconded by Mr. Dickens—

“That the number of Curators be reduced to three. Carried by a majority.”

Moved by Sir E. Ryan, and seconded by Mr. Cameron—

“That W. P. Grant, Esq., Col. Dunlop, and J. Kyd, Esq., be elected as curators for the ensuing year. Carried unanimously.”

After which the following amendments were made in the printed Rules, viz—

“Rule 5. No persons shall be entitled to take books out of the library who have not deposited the following sums. viz. Proprietors and 1st class Subscribers 20 Rs.; 2nd class Subscribers 10 Rs. Such sums to be applicable to the discharge of all claims against him on behalf of the Library.”

Rule 8. The Library shall be daily open (Sundays and the space of seven days immediately preceding the Annual Meeting of Proprietors and Subscribers in each year only excepted) from 9 a.m. till 6 p.m.

Rule 10. No proprietors or 1st class subscribers shall be entitled to have out of the Library at any one time more than two sets of works and one periodical, nor any 2d class subscriber more than one set of works and one periodical, without special leave of the Curators.

Rule 15. Any person taking out books shall be entitled to keep them for the following periods exclusive of the day of delivery.

Periodicals..	Monthly...	2 days.
	Quarterly..	4 days.
New Works	Vol. 8vo ..	2 days.
	Vol. 4to ..	1 week.
	Vol. folio..	2 weeks.

Rule 16th. Any proprietor or subscriber taking away books without giving notice to the Librarian shall pay a fine of 10 Rupees for each volume so taken."

After which the following rule was added :—

Rule 20. That the printed catalogues be sold to proprietors, subscribers, and others, at the price of one rupee per copy. Bengal Hurkaru.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of Merchants and others desirous of establishing a Steam Tug Association for running the Forbes and new vessel, upon the River Hooghly.

6th.—Expenditure by the Secretaries or by the Committee not to exceed 10,000 rupees upon any one object without special sanction of a general meeting or vote of the majority of proprietors.

7th.—All funds in hand exceeding ten thousand rupees, to be lodged in the Union Bank, or invested in Company's paper as the Committee shall think fit.

8th.—The vessels to stand in the name of two Trustees for the Association.

Resolved.—That the following gentlemen be Trustees :

C. R. PRINSEP.

J. M. DOVE.

That the following gentlemen be on the Committee for the first year :

R. H. COCKERELL,

J. DOW.

W. BRUCE.

Dwarkanath Tagore.

K. MACKENZIE.

That Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. do officiate as Secretaries, until the sense of the proprietors be taken upon the question.

That the proceedings be circulated for signature of each shareholder, with a request that he will signify against his signature the number of shares he will take.

That Captain Boothby's proposition being favourably considered by this meeting, be circulated among the proprietors generally.

That it is not considered advisable as a body to effect insurance upon the vessels against river risks.

R. H. COCKERELL, Chairman.

At a Special Meeting of Proprietors held at the Office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. on Wednesday the 2d March, 1836—

PRESENT.

Mr. McKillop, Mr. Martin, Mr. McKilligan, Mr. Crawford, Mr. W. Storm, Mr. Bruce, Mr. D. M. Gordon, Mr. Hurry, Mr. J. A. Currie, Mr. W. R. Young, Captain Sewell, Mr. James Young, Captain Boothby, Hulodhur Mullick, Bussinaut Mullick, Ram Commul Sen, Russomoy Dutt, Callehunder Rose, Rajchunder Mookerjee, Muttonauth Mullick, Mr. A. Syme.

W. Bruce, Esq., in the Chair.

With reference to the proviso no. 2 of last meeting,

Resolved, 1st.—That Mr. Currie's offer be accepted of the new vessel according to the specification and plan, with engines complete, as per Captain Forbes's report, for sicca rupees 80,000.

2d.—That the surplus capital subscribed, namely, the sum of 10,000 rupees, be held in reserve to meet the expenses of the cost and fittings of new boilers, which are agreed to be taken over from Captain Currie, upon arrival from England, at prime cost and charges.

3d.—That a deed be prepared forthwith for the signature of all concerned.

4th.—That the Committee make arrangements for binding Captain Currie to his contract before furnishing him with the advances for carrying on the work.—Calcutta Courier.

PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

The Thirteenth Annual Meeting of the members and friends of the Parental Academic Institution, was held at the School rooms, Park-street, on Tuesday evening the 1st March.

On the motion of Mr. Beardsmore, seconded by Mr. W. Byrn, Dr. Corbyn was called to the chair.

The report of the committee having been read by the Secretary, the following resolutions were unanimously passed.

On the motion of Mr. W. Kirkpatrick, seconded by Mr. J. DePenning.

1. That the report now read be approved, and published for general information.

On the motion of Mr. C. Pote, seconded by Mr. J. Graham.

2. That the results of the past year's operations appear to be highly satisfactory, and are of a nature to call for perseverance in labors attended with such public usefulness.

On the motion of Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. F. D. Kellner.

3. That this meeting joins with the report in the expression of grateful acknowledgments to Sir C. T. Metcalfe for that distinguished act of liberality which he has been pleased to exercise towards the institution.

On the motion of Mr. M. Crow, seconded by Mr. J. D. M. Sinaes,

4. That the aid and encouragement which have been extended to the institution, are circumstances which call for the acknowledgments of this meeting to its friends and supporters.

On the motion of Mr. W. Ewing, seconded by Mr. G. T. F. Speed.

5. That the following gentlemen be elected a committee of management for the ensuing year: viz. Messrs. W. Byrn, W. Dacosta, C. Francis, J. Hill, J. Jacobs, F. D. Kellner, R. Kerr, C. W. Lindstead, J. A. Lorrimer, H. Martindell, W. Stacy, W. Sturmer, J. Welsh, J. J. Wood; and that Mr. Wale Byrn be the Secretary for the ensuing year.

On the motion of Mr. H. B. Gardener, seconded by Mr. Kellner.

6. That with reference to the increased number of scholars, and the necessary additional labor imposed on the managers, the undermentioned gentlemen be added to the committee of management, viz. Messrs. J. DePenning, J. Graham, T. McDormond, P. Sutherland and S. Chill.

On the motion of Mr. Byrn.

7. That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Chairman for conducting the business of this meeting.

The Report of the Committee commenced with a grateful acknowledgment of the service rendered to the Institution by Sir Charles Metcalfe, by generously paying 5,000 rupees towards the liquidation of the debt with which it was encumbered. This topic was noticed, as it deserved, by almost every one of the speakers on the occasion. The School now numbers 200 pupils.—Englishman.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general Meeting of this Society was held in the Town Hall, this morning, Wednesday, 9th March, 1836.

Present.

THE HON'BLE SIR E. RYAN, President, in the Chair.

His Excellency General Sir H. Fane, G. C. B.; the Hon'ble Mr. Melville; Colonels Dunlop and Presgrave; Messrs. Dobbs, Kyd, Gibbon, Leach, Storm, Hare, Piddington, Grant, Masters, Bagshaw, and Bell.

Visitor, Mr. G. A. Prinsep.

T. J. Turner, Esq., Commissioner in Bundelkund, and Charles Lyall, Esq., proposed at last meeting were duly elected Members by ballot.

Proposed.

Lieut. Meik, H. M. 49th Regt.; proposed by Mr. A. Grant, seconded by Mr. Storm.

Mr. Bigge of Assam, proposed by Dr. Strong, seconded by Mr. Kyd.

The Meeting was unanimous in its desire to solicit the honor of having the Right Honorable Lord Auckland for its patron, and the President kindly undertook to convey to his Lordship the wishes of the Society.

The proceedings of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Officiating Secretary stated that he had received all the complete copies of the 2d volume of the transactions from the Serampore press.

The President read an extract of a letter to his address from the Officiating Secretary advertising to the Resolutions passed at last meeting, regarding supplies of sugar-cane from Mauritius, which Mr. Bell had since ordered, and proposing that a parcel of ground to the extent of six beegahs should be secured, fenced in, and holed after the West India method, to be in readiness for the reception of slips from Mauritius and Bombay, to form a nursery for supplying all applicants thereafter.

The President observed that the expense of renting and maintaining a spot of ground, might be considered objectionable although the necessity of having it was indisputable—and as several members suggested, with reference to the perfect willingness of Dr. Wallich expressed on some former occasion, previously to his departure for Assam, not only to spare ample room from the outskirts of the Botanical Garden, but to give any such grants the benefit of his general superintendence, it was resolved that the Officiating Secretary place himself in communication with J. W. Grant, Esq., the Acting Superintendent, and solicit a portion (six beegahs) for the special purpose of propagating canes, and that Mr. Masters, who was present and offered all the aid in his power, be requested to point out a plot, and favor the Society with an estimate of the probable cost of maintaining it in good condition.

In connection with the growing enquiry for a superior cane, Mr. Bell presented to the Society fifty copies of his pamphlet on the culture of the cane and manufacture of Sugar in the West Indies for distribution to members who felt an interest in the subject.

The following communications were then read.

No. 1.—From H. Piddington, Esq., a most valuable paper on the soils suitable for Cotton, Tobacco, Sugar and the Tea plant, accompanied by samples of each description of soil which Mr. Piddington has with great perspicuity, and care analysed.

The results given by Mr. Piddington, show the absolute necessity of attending to the description of soil, before throwing away money on fruitless experiments.

The perfect similarity evidenced between the soil of Assam which produces the wild Tea plant, and that in which the best Teas of China flourish, is strikingly illustrative of the fact that in regard to Cotton, we have been going all wrong, in seeking for returns from land which is altogether unfitted for the development and perfecting of the pod. Leaf and flower can be always commanded but not produce.

On the soils suitable for Cotton, Tobacco, Sugar, and the Tea plant, by H. Piddington.

I preface what I have to say to the Society on the soils placed on the table with a few remarks, which I trust may be thought worth placing on record. My object in doing so is again to impress upon members of what vital importance it is to the advancement of the agricultural interests of the country, and to the safety and success of every agricultural speculation, to procure samples of all soils from other countries in which valuable products grow.

The same climate and soil are, we know, in a greater or less degree, the essential requisites for obtaining the productions of one country in another; and for our present purpose we may perhaps say that plants find their food in the soil, and are enabled to digest it by the climate. They do digest we know, and this in the strictest sense of the word.

The popular ideas of climate are vague enough, but it may be roundly asserted that scarcely one who uses the word knows what is really meant by soil; or rather what is really meant by the "the same soil." This arises from our vague notion of the thing itself. The very words used to distinguish soils express, more frequently than any thing else, their appearance and some of their physical qualities; scarcely any their essential—that is, their chemical properties. We talk of light and heavy, of sandy and clayey, moist and dry soils, which are all physical properties, and two clayey or two sandy soils may be actually as different as light and darkness from each other! The words ferruginous and calcareous are, it is true, chemical terms, but such vague ones that they designate whole classes of soils, of which each sort is widely different from its neighbours. The tea soils and the Arracan tobacco soils on the table are both ferruginous soils, but differing as widely as soils can do, for the iron in the one is a carbonate of iron and in the other the red oxide of iron.

COTTON.—Nothing then but a sample of the soil and a correct analysis of it can assure the speculator that while he is trying to rear any given foreign product he is not (misled by loose names) absolutely blundering in darkness, and attempting an impossibility. I begin with Cotton as a most prominent example, though my proofs on the subject are not quite so full as I could wish; and I shall surprise the Society not a little when I say, that all the expensive efforts which have been made hitherto to obtain good cotton have probably failed from this one cause.—That we have been at work on the wrong soil! How far, with the American cottons, differences of climate may also have operated is not here the place to examine, but vegetable productions do, to a great extent, acclimate themselves; while it is probable that nothing can compensate to them the want of a principal constituent of the soil. Now I have not been able to obtain specimens of the American cotton soils, but I have good authority for stating that the soil of the Sea Islands is wholly a calcareous sand—in other words a light chalky or shelly soil; so that it may probably contain from 50 to 60 per cent. of calcareous matter (lime generally in the state of chalk) and we have been attempting to grow this cotton on a soil which barely contains a trace of it! The soil of the Botanic Garden, for instance, not containing more than 1½ or 2 per cent. Indeed we may say generally that, till we reach the kunkur districts, none of the soils of Lower Bengal, out of the reach of the inundations, contain any great portion of lime. I showed some years ago* that the inundations deposit lime, and that much of the fertilising effect they produce is due to it.

The American cotton is then, on account of differences of climate, a case not strictly in point, but the Bourbon cotton, grown both at Bourbon and the Mauritius, which sells for a shilling when the Sea Island sells for 13½d., and the Manila cotton, which sells for 11d.

when the Bourbon is worth a shilling, are both cottons of hot climates like our own; and both these are grown in highly calcareous soils. The soil on the table before you is from the Mauritius; it is sent me by M. Geneve, of La Riviere Noire, one of the finest estates on the Island, as an excellent cotton soil, and contains 32 per cent. of carbonate of lime (or in plain English one-third chalk) there is moreover phosphate and perhaps sulphate of lime; altogether perhaps not less than 40 per cent. of calcareous matter! Its iron too is in a peculiar state, that of protoxide or the black oxide of iron; and in this respect it probably resembles the black cotton soils of Southern India. No wonder that the Bourbon cotton, though it grows in many of our gardens near town, where it meets with plenty of calcareous matter amongst the lime rubbish with which most of them are filled, is said to degenerate when cultivated in the open fields which do not contain 2 per cent. of lime. I know from the experience of several years, that it does not degenerate if it is duly supplied with calcareous matter; but that it will produce most abundantly, and for years, cotton worth from 10d. to 11d. per lb. in a proper soil. If the soil does not suit it, it will produce little else than leaves and wood and the staple will deteriorate. Samples of American cotton soils are wanting now to make our theory on this head perfect; but I would advise no man to attempt foreign cottons in a soil containing less than 15 per cent. lime, and its iron mostly in the state of protoxide or black oxide.

TOBACCO.—Tobacco soils are the next, and here we are more fortunate, for there are on the table soils from Arracan (Sandoway); a soil from Singour in Burdwan, near Chandernagore, the tobacco of which, though of the same species as that of the surrounding country, sells at the price of the Arracan sort! and the soil of the best Bengal tobacco, which is grown at and about Hinglee in the Kinsgar district, near factories formerly held by me. Col. Hezeta and Dr. Casanova are our authorities for saying that the tobacco soils of the Havana are red soils and those of Manila I know are also red soils. Now the red and reddish brown soils contain most of their iron in the state of peroxide, or the reddish brown oxide of iron; while the light grey soils contain it only in the state of protoxide, or the black oxide of iron. I believe the quality of the tobacco to depend mainly on the state and quantity of the iron in the soil; while it is indifferent about the lime which we have seen is so essential to cotton. None of these tobacco soils contain any lime. Their analysis shows them to contain.

Arracan Singour Hinglee

from which it will be seen that the best tobacco soil we have hitherto found in India contains 16 per cent. or nearly one-sixth of iron, which is mostly in the state of peroxide, and that the inferior sort of tobacco grows in a soil containing only 6 per cent. or one-sixteenth of iron which is moreover mostly in the state of protoxide or black oxide.

I thought it worth examining what the quantity of iron in the different sorts of tobacco would be; and I found that, while the ashes of one ounce, or 480 grains, of Havana and Sandoway cheroots gave exactly 1.94 grains or 0.40 per cent. peroxide of iron, the ashes of the same quantity of the Hinglee or best Bengal tobacco only gave 1.50 grains or 0.32 per cent. and it appears to exist in the first

* Trans. of the Physical class As. So. Vol. I.

two in the state of peroxide, and in the last as a protoxid of iron; rendering it highly probable that the flavour of the tobacco to the smoker depends on the state and quantity of the iron it contains! for we have now, observe, traced the iron from the soil into the cheroot. Green copperas water, which is a solution of sulphate of iron, is often used by the American and English tobaccoconists and planters to colour and flavour their tobacco; and this would be decomposed by the potash of the tobacco, and sulphate of potash and carbonate of iron be formed. Carbonate of iron is of an ochre yellow colour. I took care to ascertain that this process had not been performed with the cheroots used for my experiment; and I do not believe our Bengal cheroot-makers know of this method.

SUGAR.—Sugar seems to depend both on the state of the iron and on lime in the soil. The sugar soil before you is also from the Black River. (Mr. Geneve's) an estate upon which from 3,000 to 7,000, and even on one spot, the astonishing quantity of 12,000lbs. of sugar have been obtained from an acre or from 12 to 15 bazar maunds per bigah! Captain Sleeman is my authority for these statements.

Now the peculiarity of this soil is, you will observe, that it is a red soil, i. e. that its iron is mostly in the state of peroxide; and it contains moreover about 9 per cent. of carbonate of lime, with probably some sulphate, and phosphate of lime, say perhaps altogether 10 or 12 per cent. of calcareous matter. We have in many instances endeavoured to cultivate this cane on soils destitute both of peroxide of iron and lime, and we complain that the cane has been found watery. It is clear that the cultivator who would succeed in sugar should pay attention to these peculiarities; for without doing so he may have returns but often no profits. His profits, in a word, may depend upon his canes, his cotton or his tobacco being fed with the food which they require. I use the words feed and digest because it cannot be too often repeated that plants are living beings, and that the vigour of their life depends, as with ourselves, on abundant and suitable food.

TEA SOILS.—The tea soils though I notice them last are not the least interesting. The first is a soil from Assam, for which I am indebted to Captain Jenkins, and the second is from the Bohea hill's in China sent round by Mr. Gordon, the Secretary to the Tea Committee, and obligingly given to me by Mr. Grant, of the Honorable Company's Export Warehouse. How very alike they seem you will at once have noticed, and their analysis gives as follows:—

TEA SOILS.
Ten soils of Assam.
	Surface of 2½ feet	Tea soil
	soil.	deep.	of Chi.
Water.....	2.45	2.00	3.00
Vegetable matter.....	1.00	.80	1.00
Carbonate of iron.....	7.40	6.70	9.90
Alumina.....	3.60	5.45	9.10
Silica.....	85.40	84.10	76.00
	90.75	99.05	99.00
Traces of phosphate and sulphate of lime and loss.	25	95	1.00
	100.00	100.0	100.00

There are two peculiarities in these soils, the first that they contain no carbonate of lime, and only traces of phosphate and sulphate; and the next that their iron is almost wholly in the state of carbonate of iron—a widely different compound from the simple oxides. They would be called poor yellow loams; and cotton, tobacco or sugar cane would probably starve upon them; but we find that they suit the tea plant perfectly. It is a striking coincidence that we should find our tea soils and those of China so exactly alike.

I fear to grow prolix, though I have much more to say on the subject of soils, I shall therefore break off, trusting that for the present I have amply shown the necessity of a careful examination of the soil; and that the commercial public, who can do so much for us in this way, will not neglect their own interests in procuring specimens of soils for us; for to go to work in ignorance of this great element of success is absolutely to blunder on in the dark where chemistry would lead us an unfailling light.

* No. 2.—From H. T. Prinsep, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 17th February, intimating that the Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal had been pleased to concede to the Society the privilege of despatching parcels of seed to any part of the Bengal and Agra Presidencies bearing postage.

* No. 3.—From G. J. Siddons, Esq., Post Master General, to the Officiating Secretary, dated the 26th February, specifying in reference to Mr. Secretary Prinsep's letter, the conditions under which the Society may carry their views into effect.

Note.—The attention of members and others at a distance, is requested to this notification.

Those who may desire to have regular supplies of seed transmitted direct from the Society, are invited to make known their wishes to the Officiating Secretary, who will have much pleasure in complying with them, but as the Society are liable for any postage in parcels that may not be paid for on delivery, the Officiating Secretary begs that those who do not object to the payment of carriage will be explicit in their instructions.

No. 4.—From Captain F. Jenkins to the Officiating Secretary, dated Gowhatti, 16th February, urging the claims of Assam on the attention of the Society for a share of forthcoming supplies of cotton seed.

The American seed forwarded to Assam heretofore, has been attended with great disappointment (from having lost its vegetating powers) and Captain Jenkins suggests the propriety of trying to improve the indigenous staple by dispersing the best seeds from one part of the country to another, and solicits a supply of the different sorts most esteemed, as well as hemp and grain seeds.

The Officiating Secretary, dispatched accordingly, all the Jamaica Vine Cotton seed presented to the Society last month by Mr. Hodgkinson, also the Madras seed received from the same source, together with some American Maize, Guinea grass and English Clover, &c.

No. 5.—From Captain Thomas M. Saunders to Mr. Bell, dated the 24th February, presenting an American "Squash" brought by him on the Georgia from Boston, which appears as sound as when pulled. Mr. Bell received also from Captain Saunders some American white beans, which Captain S. states, are much esteemed in the United States, but never used until perfectly ripe. This appears a desideratum in India, where for some months, we are without wholesome vegetables.

No. 6.—From Colonel L. R. Stacy to the Officiating Secretary, dated Allyghur, 1st February, (received through Colonel Dunlop) pointing out a method of securing early cauliflower, which is effected by sowing in February or March, transplanting during the hot season in small beds, raised sufficiently to admit of the rains running freely off. At the end of the wet season Colonel Stacy then re-transplants into regular plots, by which process, he obtains cauliflower,—although smaller than those planted in the usual way,—three weeks or a month sooner.

No. 7.—From Dr. Strong, forwarding an elaborate paper drawn up by Mr. D. W. H. Speed, dated on the 10th April, 1832, on the culture of Silk in Bengal.

The object which Mr. Speed had in view when he entered so fully into minute calculations, seemed to be, to point out the advantages likely to be derived, by combining the several branches, which according to the present system, although intimated, connected and dependant on each other, are carried on by jarring interests, which in Mr. Speed's opinion tend to raise the price of the raw material, and to militate against the improvement of quality.

Mr. Speed divides the labourers into three distinct classes, 1st, the cultivator of mulberry, 2nd, the farmers of cocoons, or rearsers of worms, and 3rd, the reellers of silk.

His estimates are framed from observations made on a small experimental establishment, and may prove interesting and instructive at this moment, when the Honble Company's Filatures are passing into private hands.

No. 8.—From W. Cobb Hurry, Esq., returning the Cotton Sawgin which had been lent by the Society to Mr. Crane.

Mr. Crane considers that the Sawgin is too heavy in its present shape, to be successfully worked by natives of India, but thinks that it might be modified to the scale of their strength. The gin was moreover in such an inefficient condition that he could arrive at no precise estimate of its power, contrasted with the quantity which could be cleansed in a given time by the ordinary churkee, but is inclined to think that the gin would be far more efficacious if from the model in the Society's room a less unwieldy machine could be made adapted to manual use, or some plan adopted by which the gin could be worked by cattle.

No. 9.—From J. C. Marshman, Esq., dated 16th Feb., conferring an estimate of the cost that would attend printing a second edition of the 1st volume of the Society's Transactions.

No. 10.—From the same, dated 8th March, forwarding the remainder of the 2nd vol. of the Society's Transactions, with a memorandum of the charges incurred in printing and binding, &c. which amount to Rs. 611 8 0.

No. 11.—Memorandum by the Honble W. L. Melville, suggesting that in future exhibitions of indigenous vegetables, should be held in the afternoon, to enable opulent native gentlemen to attend—and that the attention of the mallees be directed to the comparative inferiority of celery, windsor beans, coss-lettuce, mushrooms, &c., which with a little care might be materially improved.

No. 12.—From Capt. W. Sage, animadverting on the manner in which his minute had been introduced in the public prints, after the last general meeting, and requesting that his name might be withdrawn from the list of subscribers.

Capt. Sage's resignation was received, although his name does not appear on the Society's books as a subscriber.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments on the 5th March, 1836.

James Stewart, Esq., M. D., Bombay Establishment, Surgeon of His Highness the Nizam's Cavalry, was proposed as a Member of the Society by Dr. Login, seconded by Dr. Garden.

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read:—

From E. W. W. Raleigh, Esq., declining to re enter the Society unless permitted to do so without being again ballotted for.

From H. Hewith, Esq., Surgeon to the Zenobia, forwarding the works of Drs. Clarke and Forbes, which were presented to the Society.

The following works were presented for the library:—
Medical Bibliography, by Dr. Forbes, presented by the author.

Clarke on Diseases of the Chest, presented by the author. Volumes first and second of the Indian Journal of Medical Science, presented by the editor.

A very curious specimen of monstrosity, consisting of twin children, joined together by an anterior band, was presented to the Society by Dr. Garden, on behalf of Mr. Galt, Assistant-Surgeon, 26th Regiment N. I., and it was forthwith agreed to make over the preparation to the Museum of the Medical College as the fittest place for its reception.

The monster was born of a Mussulman woman at Narsingpore, on the 15th December, 1833. She had had several children before, in whom there was nothing extraordinary. The creature is stated to have lived for some hours after birth. It was formed of two children apparently of the full age, who were extensively united anteriorly by the abdomen and thorax, the connection extended from the upper part of the oternum to the umbilicus. The heads, necks, buttocks, and extremities, were perfect in each half. The external organs of generation were complete in both divisions of the monster, who was of the female sex. The circumference of each head round the fore-head and vertex 11 inches, length of the whole monstro from 15 to 16 inches, circumference of ditto 11 to 12, circumference of the connecting medium from 9 to 10 inches, weight about 5lbs.

Dr. Cantor presented an account of two snakes, the cerberus grantii and potamorphis luhintonii venomous serpents with fangs behind the maxillar teeth (a crochets en arrie of the French.)

Dr. Cantor's sketch of an undescribed species of venomous serpent belonging to the genus naja, was then read, and some exquisite drawings of the reptile executed by that gentleman in illustration of the paper, were laid on the table.

The shape of this serpent's head resembles that of the naja tripudious, (the cobra de capella) covered above with nine larger laminae in 4 ranges, the first of which contains 2 laminae frontales; the second 2 laminae nasales; third 2 laminae orbitales; fourth 2 laminae occipitales, each of the latter surrounded by 2 laminae postoccipitales, these laminae as well as the other coverings of the head are drab edged with black.

The muzzle is obtuse with a wide semi-circular opening for the tongue which organ is black, thick and bifurcated.

The mouth large, the upper jaw rather larger than the lower, 2 rows of palatal sharp, reflex distant teeth, two fangs on each side covered as usual in a duplicature of the palatal membrane, maxillar teeth none—two rows of sharp reflex teeth in the lower jaw. The nostrils lateral wide, between two laminae. The eyes large, brilliant; iris golden; pupil round. The neck dilatable though in a less degree than that of the naja tripudians.

The back of the head is covered with oval smooth scales of an olive green color, those covering the black skin with a black margin, those covering the white, without dark edges. Abdominal scuter of a reddish yellow color, between the two lowest rows appear two black spots on each side.

The body is thick, cylindrical, tapering towards the tail, covered with smooth imbricate scales of an olive green color, the interstitial skin partly white, partly black, disposed so as to form a number of bands converging to the head. The abdominal scuta are long and broad bluish grey interspersed with black as they approach the tail. The tail is cylindrical, gradually tapering to a sharp point covered above with hexagonal yellowish green scales marked with black, so that its general appearance is black divided by yellow rings. Dr. Cantor remarks upon the little coincidence which can be placed in the abdominal scuta and subcaudal scutellae in distinguishing the different species of serpents, and shews the variety in this particular, which he observed in different specimens of the snake under consideration.

The total length of these specimens of this reptile in Dr. Cantor's possession varies from 8 to 10 feet. The circumferences of the body from 6 to 8 inches. The neck from 3 to 5 inches. The natives state that individuals are found upwards of 12 feet long and at any rate the size is very extraordinary for a venomous serpent. Dr. Cantor's specimens were caught in the Sunderbunds and in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. According to the natives this serpent usually feeds upon others, and those in Dr. C.'s possession were regularly fed by giving them living snakes once a fortnight without regard to the latter being venomous or otherwise. Dr. Cantor remarks upon the error of those naturalists who say that ophidians never drink, the contrary of which is more satisfactorily shewn in this variety, they drink plentifully and moisten their tongues frequently. This snake differs from the other varieties of venomous serpents in feeding willingly of its own accord when in confinement, though no other ophidian of this class is known to do so. The latter fact in the history of poisonous serpents, stated by Dr. Russell, is fully confirmed by Dr. Cantor.

Dr. C. considering the strong resemblance between this serpent and the naja tripadians in the habitus and anatomical arrangement, though it differs from it in other respects, prefers placing it in the genus naja rather than amongst the pythons. The fresh poison of the snake is a pellucid fluid of the consistence of a solution of gum Arabic in water. It reddens litmus paper slightly. At first, when kept for some time it shews more decided acid qualities, it loses, however, a great deal of its deleterious nature by keeping.

H. H. GOODRVE,

Secretary Medical and Physical Society.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 2nd March, 1836.

W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., V. P., in the chair.

Lieut.-Col. J. Colvin, Engineers, Lieut.-Col. L. R. Stacy, John Neave, Esq., C. S., Lieut. A. Cunningham, Engineers, and Raja Vijaya Govinda Singha, Behadur, proposed at the last meeting, were ballotted for, and duly elected members of the Society.

Read a letter from Mr. Alexander Beattie, withdrawing from the Society.

Read a letter from W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Political Department, acknowledging the receipt of a copy of the communication from His Excellency Prince Esterhazy.

Read the following reply from Government to the Secretary's letter, written in pursuance of the resolution of the last meeting, in regard to the oriental manuscripts and printed volumes of the Fort William College Library.*

To JAMES PRINSEP, Esq., Secy. to the Asiatic Society.
 Gent. } Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the Dept. } receipt of your letter, dated the 6th instant, and in reply to state that the Governor of Bengal accepts the offer of the Asiatic Society to provide rooms for the accommodation of, and to hold accessible to the public, the Oriental portion of the late Library of the College of Fort William, and has ordered the books to be made over on the following conditions: The books are to be the property of the Government until the Honorable Court of Directors shall decide whether they shall be made over absolutely or not, the Society to be ruled of course by their decision. The Government to allow the Asiatic Society a monthly sum of 78 rupees, (stated by the Secretary of the College to be the minimum expense for custody of the books,) in consideration of the Society's providing for establishment and keeping the books clean and in proper repair. All other charges to be provided by the Society. The above allowance to cease, in case of the property in the books being made over to the Society.

H. T. PRINSEP, Secy. to Govt.

Fort William, the 24th Feb., 1836.

Resolved, that the Society acquiesce in the terms proposed by the Government, and that the Secretary do take measures for receiving the books and granting receipts for them to the Secretary of the College Council in the course of their daily transfer.

Museum of Antiquities, &c.

Fac-similes of inscriptions on two slabs of stone at the entrance of a very ancient temple, supposed to be Buddhist, on the Hill Fort of Gwalior, taken by Mrs. Sale, were forwarded by Major Sutherland, Resident at Gwalior.

Extract of a letter from Colonel H. Burney, dated Ava 15th January, announced the transmission via Rangoon, of a small box containing some Buddhist images found by Captain Hannay at Tagong, 100 miles above Ava on the Irrawadi.

"Captain Hannay's last letter is dated from Tsen-po, (the Semboea of the Map of the Burmese Empire compiled in the Surveyor General's Office in 1825,) three stages above Baman. He must have reached Mogoung on the 5th instant. He speaks in the highest terms of the general appearance of the country, and estimates the population particularly on the right bank of the Irrawadi, to be much more numerous than I had imagined. At Baman he was much interested by the Chinese, who were inquisitive but civil: and he estimates the breadth of the Irrawadi at Baman, to be full two miles during the rainy season! The Shweselee and other rivers falling into it are too inconsiderable to have any connexion with M. Klaproth's Tsen-po.

"I am writing to you in great haste. The cold at Ava this year is unusually great; the thermometer at this moment has fallen to 45°, and I am sitting in an open verandah without a fire, and shivering under a piercing northerly air, which seems to be coming directly from the snowy mountains."

* The resolution by inadvertence, was omitted in the printed proceedings. It was to the effect, that as Government had been pleased to transfer the European portion of the College Books to the new Public Library, the Society begged to tender accommodation in its rooms for the Oriental portion of the same, the Government agreeing to pay the establishment necessary for its due preservation while in deposit.

Extract of a letter from W. Ewer, Esq., was read on the subject of the interlined writing on the Lath at Allahabad, which he reported to be in too imperfect a state to be copied or decyphered.

Mr. Ewer reminded the Secretary that he had communicated a drawing of the trident at Barahaut and the inscriptions on it 10 years ago.

A letter from Colonel Stacy was received on the point in dispute of the relative antiquity of the striking of coin in India.

A tabular view of the statistics of Muttra was presented by Captain R. Wroughton who promised to furnish similar tables of all divisions of the country measured by himself as a part of the grand revenue survey.

An accurate meteorological register, kept in Nipál by Captain Robinson, for 1835, was received from the Resident at Katmandhu.

A register of the thermometer for the same year, from Mr. Edgeworth at Amballa.

A number of models from Nipál were presented by Dr. A. Campbell.

Also several specimens of cotton and woollen cloth manufactured at Nipál, Tibet, and Bhute, marked from No. 18 to 22.

Physical.

The Secretary presented, in the name of Mr. W. Cra-croft, a very fine collection of the fossil impressions of vegetables and fossil woods in the coal and shale of New Castle in New South Wales, just received from that place, along with a number of geological specimens and many rare shells, porcinite, &c.

Mr. C. Betts presented a piece of fossil wood from the sandstone above the coal beds of Burdwan; to which the natives give the name of asuruhár, or "giant's bone."

Three specimens of soil, and five of minerals, of Nipál, and a collection of skins of birds, presented by Dr. A. Campbell of Nipál.

A stuffed albatross, presented by J. Child, Esq., H. C. Pilot Service.

A specimen of Eurynorychus Griseus, or pigmy spoonbill, presented by—Newcombe, Esq.

This bird is one of the rarest in the world; but a single specimen having been found before: the Curator was requested to draw a description of it for publication.

A specimen of remora, presented by C. W. Smith, Esq.

A note on the Charophtherium, one of the new pachydermatous genera, discovered in the Sivalik range, by Messrs. Falconer and Cautley, was read.

The letter accompanying it notices the discovery also of the remains of birds, in the same rich fossil fields.—Journal of the Asiatic Society for February.

NATIVE MEDICAL COLLEGE—PRINCIPAL BRAMLEY'S ADDRESS.

We repaired to the Native Medical College on Thursday morning the 17th March, full half an hour before the time appointed for the commencement of the proceedings of the day, but found the Theatre already nearly filled, and eventually we learned that about 680 persons were assembled in it! We observed among the distinguished members of society present, the Members of Council, of the Law Commission, who were already in the Theatre when we entered it, the Secretaries of Government, &c. &c. &c. and the attendance of the faculty was very full. At about $\frac{1}{2}$ past 11, the Right Honourable Lord Auckland was ushered into the Theatre by Principal Bramley, attended by Professors Goodeve and O'Shaughnessy; and soon after the worthy Principal commenced his Address.

We are unable to give a full report of the lecture, but the following abstract will afford our readers some idea of the manner in which Dr. Bramley treated his subject. We cannot attempt to do justice in this notice to the eloquence of the learned lecturer; the admirable mode in which he delivered his discourse, his commanding tone and expressive gesture, cannot be conveyed upon paper.

Dr. Bramley commenced by stating his inability to express the mingled emotions of diffidence and exultation with which he reflected upon his present position. He was fortunately, however, saved from the necessity of exciting in other breasts an interest in the cause in which he was embarked by any minute expression of his own feelings, for the object now in view was not a private or personal, but a public one—all those who contemplated the noble purpose for which the building in which he was now standing was built must look upon the institution with nearly the same emotion as himself. When, therefore, he congratulated himself upon the completion of the building in which they then were and beheld so many native students upon those benches, the consciousness that the exultation he was unable to express was shared by all round him lessened his embarrassment and caused him to feel more easy and confident than he should otherwise have been. It was impossible that an introductory lecture should enter into details; all that could be done was to touch lightly on topics possessing a comprehensive interest, and even to do full justice to these requires more time than could be commanded at such an occasion. The lecturer then touched upon the great importance of the healing art and pointed out the veneration in which the physician was held in all ages. It was no wonder, he said, that the healing art should in every country of the world have been mixed up with the legends of mythology and in the traditions of poetry represented to be of divine origin, as we see amongst the Greeks and Romans and even amongst the Hindoos themselves. Dr. Bramley then briefly sketched the progress of medicine amongst the ancients from the earliest accounts of the science as professed by Æsculapius and his sons, the Asclepiads, speaking of the advancement made by the labors of Hippocrates, Celsus and Galen, shewing that in spite of the exertions of these great men, the progress of medicine to its present state of comparative advancement was slow, and that this was owing in a great measure to the numerous useless systems and hypotheses which from time to time sprung up to encumber the profession with their absurdities. Anatomy especially was impeded by this disposition to theorise and this posturing of men's minds to great names. So baneful was this influence that the science of anatomy was handed down from century to century in the same condition in which it was left by Galen, till the illustrious Vesalius arose in the 16th century, who, with the knife in his hand owned no authority but nature and appealed from the dogmatism of book to the objects demonstrated in dissection. Dr. Bramley then drew a comparison between the difficulty which surrounded the ancient fathers of physic, and the pupils whom he was addressing, and he called on them to follow the example of these worthies who finding medicine encumbered with superstitions, tedious frivolities, and mischievous anomalies, rescued it from this perilous condition and caused it to become a majestic science. He told them that a due share of this science was not to be learned by merely pouring over books or attending lectures; it can only be gained by reflection for themselves, by an examination of facts and the deduction of general principles of action, from their taking nothing for granted on mere hearsay and assertion. He said that medicine was not a fixed but a progressive science wherein he who would distinguish himself must be a student to the last. Nature has always something new and something striking to reward the labor of him who will seek for it. The lecturer continued to call the attention of the students to the vast improvements which are taking place in the native society. The changes for the better which every day witnesses should urge them on not to fall back in the race of improvement but rather to strive forward to the first rank. Not, indeed, that he had any fears for their success, for from what he had already witnessed of their zeal and attention, he was convinced that they would always continue to evince the same spirit of generous emulation. He then spoke of the importance of anatomy as the basis of all medical knowledge. An art which independent of its utility, must afford the highest gratification to the mind for the most splendid exertions of human art, fade into insignificance when contrasted with the wonderful fabric of the human frame, where the instruments are not only perfect of their kind but endowed with a self-acting, self-controlling and self-sustaining power that falters not and fails not for years and years together.

We may say that a steam engine is a stupendous product of human ingenuity, but what is it compared with the mechanism and agency of the human body, of the heart, for example, which fills and empties itself sixty times in a minute for three score years and ten without pausing for a moment.

What human contrivance could bear such wear and tear as this. It wants the vital principle which in the human machine compels and bends all the wondrous machinery to its own purposes until the appointed period when it must yield and man is delivered over to the common forces of nature and the great chemist death dissolves him in the grave.

The lecturer then spoke of the absurdity of attempting to study medicine or to practise surgery without a knowledge of anatomy; yet, said he, this absurdity we constantly see realized around us, for the love of quackery seems inherent to men every where, and many foolishly entrust their lives to the grossest and most ignorant pretenders. Dr. Bramley then alluded to the different branches of study which the pupils would have to pursue and the necessity that there would be for all parties concerned, lecturers as well as pupils, to use their utmost energy, zeal and patience to aid in the mutual task of instruction and learning. He called also upon the public to come forward and support the institution, to enter with lively interest into its welfare, and thus afford a sure incentive to exertion: in saying this he more particularly alluded to the well-informed, wealthy and influential members of the native community, entreating them to consider what lamentable consequences result to thousands of their fellow countrymen from the want of medical aid or from the mischief hourly committed by unprincipled quacks. These ill-effects are not confined, said he, to the poor, they affect all classes more or less. The lecturer then alluded to the numerous ill consequences which are constantly resulting from mismanagement of disease amongst the Native community. He entreated therefore that the respectable and wealthy Natives who had it in their power to do so much, and who in their own illnesses had recourse for assistance to European skill, would seek to extend the benefits of this aid to their poorer fellow-countrymen by encouraging in every possible way the study of medicine upon European principles, among the youth of this country who are disposed to cultivate it. He begged of them to patronize as much as lies in their power the noble institution in which he then stood and which they owed to the philanthropy of the Government. Dr. Bramley continued to say, that if there was ever a wise and liberal measure adopted by authority for the advantage of the Natives, it is that which has called into existence amongst them an institution for instruction in Medical Science. He did not wish to disparage what was really useful in the indigenous practice of the country, and no doubt there was some portion of valuable knowledge to be found in it, which would be an acquisition to the note-book of the European practitioner: on the other hand there was much which was useless, fantastic and destructive, the character of which a further advance in European science would point out. Dr. Bramley then alluded to the statement which had been made by Burke, that should the English quit India to-morrow, no lasting monument of their reign would remain behind them. This he deprecated. It might have been true in Burke's day, but it was not applicable to the present time. With whatever faults our tenure of this country may be chargeable, posterity would gratefully acknowledge the noblest of our acts. The enfranchisement of native intellect from the darkness of ignorance and the trammels of superstition, if there were no other fact to which we could appeal in contradiction of this unqualified assertion, the Hindoo and Medical Colleges would alone go far to supply an ample refutation. The lecturer then spoke of the advantages of knowledge generally, and the sure enjoyment which it affords to those who possess it. Dr. Bramley then in very delicate terms alluded to the presence of Lord Auckland which he said might justly be regarded as an indication of his recognition of the enlightened policy which had established the Institution, and as a proof of the interest he takes in the improvement of the natives, trusting that this mark of condescension on his part might prove a powerful stimulus to the exertions of the pupils.

He concluded by paying a just tribute of praise to those distinguished individuals to whom India is indebted for the foundation of the institution, to Lord William Bentinck and Sir Charles Metcalfe.

At the close of this impressive address, the speaker was greeted with loud plaudits which lasted for several seconds, and immediately afterwards Lord Auckland walked round the table and cordially shook the worthy Principal by the hand, expressed his thanks to him and intimated the deep interest he felt in the welfare of this noble institution. His Lordship then familiarly conversed with Principal Bramley for several minutes on subjects connected with the institution, and afterwards proceeded to inspect the arrangements of the building, the anatomical figures, the chemical laboratory, the room appropriated for the Library, &c. &c. and with all these his Lordship expressed himself very much pleased. In the laboratory there is a very pretty and perfect model of a Steam Engine, of about the power of three men we believe. This was very much admired. His Lordship inspected this as well as each chemical apparatus, and the interest he manifested in every thing he saw, and the urbanity and kindness of his manner, made a most favorable impression on all present. His Lordship can scarcely be aware of the good he has been doing in thus gratifying his own good feeling and good taste, but every friend to native improvement considers that his Lordship in affording such marked proofs of his approval of the objects of such an institution, such an interest in the education of the people, has given a pledge for his administration which justifies the best hopes of all who desiderate the moral and intellectual elevation of the people.

We were gratified to observe so many native gentlemen present on this occasion, not only those of the liberal party, but those whose orthodoxy is recognized by the Dhurma Shuhs. Science is of no sect and of no party, and he must be ignorant in fact, who cannot appreciate the importance of the healing art. We beg, however, to remind these gentlemen that more is required of them than to countenance such institutions as the Medical College by their presence merely. It is their duty to give them practical support by founding scholarships and by sending their children to be instructed. There are many who are blessed with wealth enough to endow such Colleges, and who yet content themselves with tacit approbation of the exertions of the Government and of many philanthropic individuals to impart knowledge to their poorer countrymen. The truth is, that with some few honorable exceptions, the wealthy Natives entirely neglect their duty to the rising generation. They ought to be reminded of this and if possible made ashamed of it. One mode of stimulating them to a better course would be to confer honorary distinctions on those who manifested their philanthropy and intellectual advancement by their liberal support of institutions for the education of the people.

No one who is in the least acquainted with the amount suffering caused by the total ignorance of surgical and medical science which prevails in the Native community, can be insensible of the vast benefit which the Medical College is likely to confer upon the people: but besides the more immediate advantage which we may anticipate from the institution, in the supply of qualified Native practitioners, we must in order fully to appreciate its importance look also to the collateral results to which it is likely to lead in emancipating the Native mind from prejudice and in the diffusion of general knowledge. It may be that all of the students may not eventually embrace of continue in the profession for which they are qualifying themselves, but even if that should be the case, those who do not, will still have overcome many prejudices and by a habit of study and investigation prepared their minds for the acquisition of any knowledge which may be essential to their pursuits in life. Again in respect to the very important science of medical jurisprudence, what an invaluable service will be rendered to the country by this College. In short in every point of view in which it can be considered, we regard the Native Medical College as an honour to its founders and a blessing to the country.

Of the gentlemen entrusted with the management of this institution, we have frequently had occasion to speak in terms of well-merited eulogy, and it is worthy of remark that eagerly as appointments are scrutinized in these days, not a voice or a pen has been raised (in so far as we recollect) against those of the Medical College. Principal Bramley, Professors Goodbye and O'Shaughnessy are all enthusiastic in the discharge of their duties and their performance of them is a labour of love to them. Their talents are highly estimated by all who have had an opportunity of appreciating them—their system is good and their pupils are making rapid progress. In short the highest credit is due to these gentlemen individually and collectively—they have proved themselves worthy of the honorable posts they fill, and under their auspices we have no doubt the College will realize the most sanguine expectations of Lord William Bentinck who founded it and of Sir Charles Metcalfe who has followed out his Lordship's views in a spirit worthy of the British Government and of the important objects to which the College is devoted.—Hurkaru.

THE BIBLE ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

The circumstance of a Lord Bishop presiding at the Bible Anniversary Meeting on Wednesday evening the 10th March, attracted, as was anticipated, an overflowing house; and we are correct in saying that so large an assembly was never convened on any former Anniversary of this Auxiliary Society. We were present during a part of the time only, and therefore cannot say how it went off as a whole; but the same subject struck us, which seems to have aroused the attention of others; and that was, the reading of certain extracts from the Madras Missionary Register, regarding the hardship of obliging native christians to drag the car of the heathen deities on their festival days.

This circumstance affected us the more forcibly as it reminded us of the great and beneficial alteration which has taken place as regards freedom of speech and printing, since we first had the conduct of a public journal. In the good old days of Toryism at Madras, some remarks on this subject which we inadvertently copied from a Calcutta paper were expunged by the censor and forbidden to see the light; but on Wednesday evening, a remonstrance of no feeble character was publicly read by a Chaplain of the Government, in the presence of the Lord Bishop of the Diocese! so great has been the progress of liberalism within the last nine years.

But it also struck us very strongly in another point of view—as regards the tenderness of the Honorable Company towards their native subjects; and the strict attention to justice which they exhibit on every practicable occasion. A correspondent, in a very recent number, brought to our notice the two facts of a covenanted servant, of high rank, having been fined ten rupees for giving a slap or so to a lazy, negligent servant, who received his pay, or as the Mussulman would say, "ate his salt"—and of a commanding officer, who, for inflicting 24 lashes of the cat on a bad character, (illegally indeed, yet under the idea of performing an act of justice) was first fined a hundred rupees, and then suspended from his command; but the extract read by the Revd. Mr. Cubitt stated that the poor christians above referred to are pressed into a hated and dangerous service, not only without payment but with the loss of their labour to themselves and families—under the active application of the rattans of the Government peons, at the imminent hazard of fractured limbs, and even suffocation, from the frequent breaking of the tow-ropes. If the company are so tender of the flesh of the worst of their subjects, how is it that they have no compassion for hundreds, perhaps thousands of the unoffending? how long shall the gain arising from heathen worship induce them to sacrifice the consciences and the services of Christians, men of their own faith, at the shrine of a detestable and demoralizing idolatry?—Madras Standard.

INVESTURE OF SIR C. T. METCALFE.

On Monday, the 14th March, being the time appointed by the Governor-General for conferring on Sir Charles Metcalfe the dignity of a Knight Grand Cross of the most honorable order of the Bath, the great public room of the Government House was crowded long before that hour. The grand entrance to the north was reserved for Sir Charles Metcalfe and from the gate to the landing place at the top of the steps, there was a line of troops on each side. About $\frac{1}{2}$ past 10 Lord Auckland, accompanied by the Misses Eden, and surrounded by this staff, entered the great room at the south door and stood in front of the Chair of State which had been placed there. Seats were arranged on either side for the numerous visitors, the middle of the room, along which Sir Charles was to advance to be invested with the insignia of the order, being of course kept clear by the Aides-de-Camp in waiting. Soon after Lord Auckland entered the room, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief went down to receive Sir Charles at the grand entrance, and soon after the band struck up the national anthem, and His Excellency returned leading in Sir Charles, preceded by Mr. William Hay McNaghten, bearing a crimson velvet cushion upon which reposed the insignia of the order. The Commander-in-Chief and the worthy Baronet advanced slowly towards Lord Auckland, followed by so numerous a staff and suite that at this point we lost entirely the view of the ceremony, and we suspect that as respected seeing the greater part of it nine-tenths of those present might as well have been in the compound. When Sir Charles Metcalfe had advanced to the head of the room, Lord Auckland addressed him in a speech of which the Courier supplies us with the following version:—

"SIR CHARLES METCALFE, —I hold in my hand the official notification of the King's commands, that I should invest you with the insignia of a Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath; and I am directed to do this in the most honorable and distinguished manner, and as shall appear to me most proper for showing respect to the King's order, and as may at the same time most publicly mark His Majesty's just sense of the zeal and abilities which you have displayed in the service of your King and country.

And the King further states to you in his own hand writing, that though he has met the advantage of your personal acquaintance, he is well informed upon your public conduct in India, that he holds your character in the highest estimation, and has great pleasure in conferring upon you this mark of distinction, a mark of distinction which will place you in the highest rank of the highest order of merit under the Crown.

I can assure you, SIR CHARLES METCALFE, that nothing more gratifying could have occurred to me upon entering on my duties in India, than to have it in my power thus to exhibit for my King, and at the same time to declare for myself, as I feel that I may declare for every man connected with public life in England, as well as in India, the high station which you hold in the opinion of your countrymen. You are known to have resided for thirty-five years in India: you were soon distinguished and at an early period were introduced to stations of high responsibility, of great political importance, and from station to station, by the same merit you rose to that which is the highest in this empire. Throughout this long period you have followed the dictates of a disposition benevolent, liberal and kind—you have exerted all the energies and all the ability of a manly and powerful mind, and indefatigably, and without remission, at once sustained the strength and confirmed the security of British India, and promoted the welfare of every class of its inhabitants; and you have proved how possible it is at once to support the power and the dignity of the British name, and to be the friend of peace, the friend of human improvement and of human happiness.

I have been commanded, Sir, to conduct this ceremony in the manner most likely to do you honor—I required the attendance of no one to assist at it; but I opened my doors, and these ample halls are filled with those who honor and regard you. That such should be the feeling of those who have lived with you, who have known you, who have watched your progress or have lived under your rule, must of itself be gratifying to you, and it must be gratifying also to all present to know that public character in India is well appreciated, and that by all up to him, who sits upon the throne and is the fountain of honor amongst Englishmen, your name is upheld and inseparably connected with the history of this country, to which so large a portion of your life, your best exertions, and your affections have been devoted.

More than this, Sir, I need not say. I beg you to accept my congratulations and the expression of a wish as warm as it is sincere, that you may wear for many years in health and in happiness this mark of distinction. For myself I can have no better object than that of endeavoring to emulate your example—no higher ambition than that when I am called upon to leave the Chair (with a slight indication of the hand to the Chair of State) which you have lately quitted, I may be followed with a share of that general respect and general regard which are the just meed of your public and private virtues."

His Lordship delivered the speech well, though with a slight tremor, and was applauded at several passages of it and concluded amidst the loud plaudits of the assembled visitors.—The following is Sir Charles's reply:

"MY LORD,—I cannot find words to express my deep sense of His Majesty's gracious goodness in conferring on me this eminent mark of his Royal favor; or of his princely condescension in adorning such tokens of personal interest and notice. It would be exceedingly presumptuous in me to imagine myself deserving of these honors; but it would be equally so to question his Majesty's judgment by dwelling on my own unworthiness. I shall therefore only say, that my heart is devoted to my King and Country; and that it shall be my study throughout life, that I may not disgrace this Most Honorable Order of the Defenders of the State, into which I have been admitted: and that the Service of which it is my pride to be a member, and to whose merits, more than to any desert on my part, I owe this high distinction, may never have reason to be ashamed of their representative. This unexpected honor will I trust be an additional inducement to me to endeavour to merit the esteem of my fellow creatures, and to perform my duties towards God and man on all occasions to the utmost of my ability.

To your Lordship I am quite at a loss for adequate means of conveying my grateful thanks for the honor that you have done me in executing His Majesty's Commands, and for the generous sentiments which you have been pleased to express. I fear that you greatly overrate my humble services and pretensions.

Permit me, my Lord, to offer my cordial wishes for the success of your Government, and my fervent hope, that the wise and beneficent measures, which may be expected from your administration, will promote the prosperity and happiness of the people of India, and tend to bind this vast portion of the British Empire in ties of sympathy and affection with the United Kingdom. That such may be the result, I most earnestly pray; and the auspicious omens, which manifestly justify this hope, are a just cause for universal congratulation.

The worthy Baronet was evidently much agitated by the imposing ceremony, and by the testimony of the estimation in which he is held, indicated in the very crowded attendance. He was greeted with loud applause, and those who were nearer to him than we were, observed that although a little nervous he never spoke with more feeling and propriety, and in our humble opinion Sir Charles always speaks well. The sentiments he expressed, were worthy of him and of the occasion, and expressed in well chosen language.

After his reply was concluded, Sir Charles Metcalfe, taking the arm of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, retired backwards of course, facing the representative of His Majesty, until he reached the door at which he entered, when His Excellency shook hands with him very cordially, congratulated him on being one of the order, and the order itself on the accession to it of so worthy a Member. Several friends of the worthy Baronet then shook hands with him, and those who were not invited to remain to breakfast retired, and thus ended the ceremony.—Hurkaru.

ADDRESS OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

TO SIR C. T. METCALFE, Bart., G. C. B. &c. &c. &c. &c.

Sir,—The order promulgated for abolishing the Inland Transit Duties, is so fraught with unmingled good to the whole country, that the Chamber of Commerce cannot suffer the opportunity to pass of conveying to you the cordial tribute of its unqualified thanks for the beneficent boon conferred, so worthy of the policy of an enlightened Statesman.

The testimony of the Chamber, is but one among multitudes; for commensurate with the wide prevalence of the grievance, will be the grateful acclamations of the population who experience the relief.

You have removed trammels, which have, in all directions, been fettering commercial intercourse, and representing the enterprise of the country, aggravated too as the vexation was, by the multiplied extortions, and the demoralising habits, which the system generated.

It will be pardoned to the Chamber, if, on the occasion of offering the acknowledgments of the mercantile body for the boon accorded, it presumes to say, that it anticipated that you would not have been slow to complete the measure of relief, by the abolition of the Town Duties.

Although the inopportune termination of your administration hath not permitted that to be added to the other laudable acts which are recorded in its annals, the Chamber indulges the expectation, that the influence which events cannot justly divest you of, will be felt in accelerating the consummation of the good works which you had so far advanced.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, for and on behalf of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce,

JOHN STEWART, President.

Calcutta, March 7, 1836.

[ANSWER.]

TO JOHN STEWART, Esq., President of the Chamber of Commerce.

Sir,—I am greatly obliged by the kind feeling which has dictated the communication, that I have had the honor to receive from your hands, on the part of the Chamber of Commerce.

It is certain, that by the abolition of the Inland Duties much vexation, detention and extortion, to which Commerce has been subject, will be removed; and I consider myself as fortunate in having been in any degree instrumental, in concert with my late colleagues in the Government, towards the accomplishment of that important object.

The measure has been long in the contemplation of the Court of Directors and the Government of India, and earnestly desired by both. It has only been retarded by the apprehension of great loss of revenue; the apparent difficulty of finding any substitute for what would be relinquished; and the impossibility of making, to any large extent, a sacrifice of the resources indispensable for the service of the state.

Lord William Bentinck, whose heart was ardently devoted to the welfare of India, longed for the accomplishment of this measure; and looked to it as one of those which would result from the labours of the Committee, assembled during his administration, for the purpose of regulating the duties on Commerce on liberal principles throughout our Indian Empire. Other authorities and individuals have been able and zealous advocates in the same cause.

It was expected on all sides, that the Committee of Customs, sitting in Calcutta, would propose this measure; but as it was also expected that their Report on that point would be accompanied by suggestions for the substitution of other sources of revenue, in lieu of that which was to be abandoned, it was intended to await the receipt of the Committee's Report on both subjects, before any resolution should be taken on either.

During this state of suspense, the Government of India learned that the abolition of the Inland Duties had been carried into effect in the Provinces of the Presidency of Agra. This proceeding placed the Government of India in the predicament of either reinstating the Custom Houses of the Agra Presidency, which would have been opposed to every one's view of what was to be done; or of inconsistently maintaining the Custom Houses of Bengal; or of abolishing the latter, without waiting, as had previously been intended, for the complete measure, which the Report of the Committee was expected to produce for the consideration of the Government. The last course was adopted, as the most advisable and least objectionable, under the circumstances above explained. At the same time instructions were issued to the Committee to submit a report of the measures which they would recommend, with a view to provide a substitute for the revenue to be lost by the abolition of Inland Duties.

I have entered into this detail, in order that I may not assume undue merit for the measure on account of which the Chamber of Commerce have honored me with their thanks, and that I may shew why it was not sooner adopted; and also in order that they may be prepared for the subsequent measure, which is to be expected, as a consequence of that which has been effected; and may not regard the boon as the measure of one Government, and what may be a less agreeable, but perhaps a necessary arrangement, as the act of another Government. It was intended, that both should issue together as concurrent parts of one comprehensive measure.

With respect to the Town Duties, the time I trust is not distant, when those also will be abolished. They are only tolerated, like all other vexatious imposts, as necessary evils, on account of the revenue which they yield, and which cannot easily be dispensed with by a Government in debt, whose expenses in all departments are generally increasing, and which has repeatedly been led by financial difficulties to have recourse to extensive reductions injurious to the State, and painful and disheartening and savouring of ingratitude to the most valuable of its Servants.

The Chamber of Commerce may, I am confident be assured, that under the administration of the Nobleman, who is now at the head of the Government of this Country, the most liberal and enlightened measures will be adopted, for the furtherance of commerce, and every other good work connected with the welfare of India.

With cordial wishes for the realization of this expectation, and for the boundless prosperity which is likely to ensue, I have the honor to be, Sir, Your most obedient Servant, 10th March, 1836.

C. T. METCALFE,

PENSION FUND FOR THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

To the Committee of the Uncovenanted Service appointed to prepare a Scheme for a Pension Fund.

GENTLEMEN,—I have seen the tables prepared by you which you intend shall, after correction, be the basis of the plan which you propose to submit to the Service, for the establishment of a Pension Fund for our wives and families; and request that you will take into early consideration the following observations.

2.—I must premise that I understand it is objected to your tables, that they are too favorable for those who are advanced in years, and, consequently, not likely to meet the approval of the younger members of the Service.

3.—I would submit that both the principles upon which it is proposed to regulate the subscriptions, and the grounds upon which amendment of the tables is considered necessary, are open to serious objection:—that instead of a "Pension Fund" what is ordinarily styled, a "Laudable" or "Provident Society," would be the result of your deliberations if those principles be followed up.

4.—It appears to be your object to establish the Fund upon the cold calculating principle of Mutual Life Assurance, which is to be procured elsewhere, (if not here, in England through the agency of a friend) upon the same terms and conditions, which it is contemplated shall be provided by the correction of the tables, viz. paying an equivalent. But I hope to see your Committee and the Service engaged in perfecting some plan, by which all will be found willing to come forward, immediately, according to their means, to provide an ample fund for the families of Uncovenanted Servants;—amongst the rest for those of the aged of our number who in the course of nature may be expected soon to need this provision;—without requiring any bonus, or any payment from such members beyond or disproportionate to their present available means, as derived from their immediate income, because those families are likely to be left, at an earlier period, dependent upon that support, which it is the main object of the establishment of the Fund, for the ease of our minds and for the credit of the Service, to provide for the family of every one of its members. It is questionable, moreover, whether the Government would give their favorable consideration to a scheme which it could easily be shewn would exclude by far the greater number of those most in need.

5.—Independent of all considerations of generosity, or of the kindly feelings which should bind us to each other upon such an occasion, it would surely be highly discreditable to the Service, as a body, that the family of any one member should, immediately upon the establishment of a fund of this nature, be cast on the benevolence of the Government, or of the public, because, from whatever circumstances;—by their small allowances; the impossibility of maintaining a family in a respectable station, on very moderate means, at the same time saving a sufficiency; education of children in England; or even habitual improvidence;—they find it impracticable to pay a large bonus upon admission; or because the younger branches of the Service will not be content to sacrifice some petty convenience or superfluity, in order that a permanent fund may be established, to the benefit of which they themselves may look up at some future period, during an interval in which, in a climate like India, they are in danger every hour,—when it may be said,—if they take credit to themselves for an undue exercise of benevolence,—that their juniors will provide for their families, those comforts and benefits which they are called upon, and I hope will, to a man, be found willing and anxious to ensure for their aged associates.

6.—If parsimony or prudence plead on such an occasion, and would induce the younger to desire exemption from the operation of such a scheme, many of their number ought in gratitude to be drawn to it, for it will be found, looking at the Service as a body, (in which light it is viewed throughout these remarks, carefully excluding all individual allusions or comparisons,) that the larger number of the younger members of it are bound to their seniors, more or less, by this tie, as having been dependent upon them for introduction to their situations.

7.—The ties of consanguinity will plead, in furtherance of such a scheme, with many of the young.

8.—The young must pay with the rest in proportion to their means, not their age and immediate expectations from the fund, or the old will be forsaken.

9.—This cannot be. I hope better of the Service.

10.—It is advisable when proposing a scheme,—and especially when it is further intended to supersede one already under consideration,—to shew how it can be accomplished. I would therefore offer the following suggestions for carrying out the plan which I contemplate.

11.—We need, in the first place, the sanction of Government to the proposed scheme. They are frequently induced to aid the distressed families of their servants, and we may look for some assistance from them in a pecuniary way for a fund which would relieve them from such calls; but we chiefly need their aid in guaranteeing the payment of the pensions, and especially countenancing the scheme, so far as to make deductions from the salaries of the Uncovenanted Servants, at the time of payment.

12.—They might, upon the petition of a very large majority, make subscription to the fund imperative upon all present incumbents; but we can hardly calculate upon this.

13.—They would, I trust, upon the memorial of a public meeting at the Presidency, where so large an assembly could be congregated, render it incumbent upon all persons, appointed after the establishment of the fund, to become subscribers.

14.—The nature of the plan to be adopted, and the manner in which the details should be drawn out, depend, therefore, mainly, upon the foregoing points; viz. whether the Government will assist and countenance the fund: principally the latter.

15.—I consider that no fund of the description which I would advocate, in preference to the one suggested by the committee, can be brought fully to bear, without ample statistical details carefully collected and collated; and without the decrement of life being ascertained and the probable demand upon the fund estimated, on those data, for the next twenty or five and twenty years. This object it would take time to accomplish, but such tables and calculations are absolutely necessary, unless the service be satisfied with a mere system of Life Assurance, and, as before observed, to forsake the aged members,—at all events the large number of them,—for few indeed could afford a bonus.

16.—Government may, before they guarantee to us their support, require us to supply the above information: this would throw us back another twelve month, and more, for a reference to England seems necessary before any thing definitive can be determined upon as to the correctness and safety of the calculations. Your Committee have received suggestions and approved a plan and tables—these are pronounced inaccurate, and you advertise for others, offering a remuneration. Others may be prepared; but what guarantee is there for the party who may submit another scheme, that it will succeed better than the first? The Committee approve, but some flaw is found in it, which, after another period of delay, throws matters back to their present footing in a country where there are no means, it is supposed, of certifying our calculations.

17.—But it occurs to me, that, if a set of principles could be resolved upon, Government might decide upon their applicability, and the degree of assistance and support with which they would countenance the scheme, leaving the detail to be wrought out upon general calculations; and I see no objection, if such principles be approved by the Service, and thus sanctioned by Government, to the fund being commenced without delay, possibly from the 1st May next, under a provisional system, taking as a guide the results shewn by a calculation of any five or six of the largest, or the whole of the Offices at the Presidency, 18.—Friends and fellow-laborers fall around us every day; we cannot be too early.

19.—It is only after some years that a pressure upon such a fund as I would propose would be felt; and, before any danger of failure could arise out of a provisional scheme of payments and advantages, the mischief of over-provision for families could be obviated, and a sounder system introduced, holding still as far as possible to the principles, but modifying the rates. We ought of course to go on the safe side, in adjusting pensions, until the final calculations can be made,—and the latter should, I think, be determined by a Committee of Actuaries in England, to avoid error, and give all the confidence possible to the Government and the supporters of the Scheme.

First Principle.—20.—I would suggest that our first principle be, to make a provision for our wives and families, which shall place them, not only beyond the evils of distress and poverty, but as far as possible in comfortable circumstances, suited to their station with reference to the emoluments enjoyed in the Service by their husbands and fathers.

Second Principle.—21.—For the above object a rateable deduction should be made according to the incomes of the subscribers and without any reference to age.

22.—As regards proportions of income to be contributed, I would observe that we have already in our Memorial regarding our loss from the change of the currency expressed our opinion that, however small a deduction may be, it is the more heavily felt the smaller the income from which it is paid. This principle I would follow out as far as practicable in regard to the fund, and take less in proportion from the junior servants, who have more straitened means.

Third Principle.—23.—That the demand upon the fund for the next 25 years be computed upon the most correct data that can be obtained with reference to the last ten years, tested by calculations of the decrement of life upon the best Tables procurable from existing Societies, and, if they will supply them, by actual results as regards those Societies. To the estimated demand of twenty-five years, I would add at least 15 per cent. in addition to any assistance from Government, in order to estimate the basis for fixing the monthly contributions.

Fourth Principle.—24.—Should Government determine that an option shall be given to the present incumbents—and they should be most earnestly solicited to render contribution a condition of holding office in future—all persons eligible for admission to the benefits of the fund should be called upon immediately to determine at once. If any individual refuse now, a heavy bonus should be levied in addition to full payment, (with interest,) of all arrears in case of his hereafter desiring the benefit of the fund.

Application of the first Principle.—25.—With reference to the first principle, I would suggest the following scale of Pensions:

TABLE No. I. OF PENSIONS.

Line.	Widows, Childless.	Widows, 1 or 2 Children.†	Widows, 3, 4 or 5 Children.†	Widows, more than 5 Children.†
1. Income above 500 pr mens.	200	225	250	270.
2. ———401 to 500	175	200	225	240
3. ———351 to 400	128	146	164	175
4. ———301 to 350	115*	131*	148*	158*
5. ———251 to 300	102	117	131	140
6. ———201 to 250	77	88	99	105
7. ———151 to 200	58	66	74	79
8. ———101 to 150	40	44	50	53
9. ———51 to 100	26	30	33	35
10. ———up to 50	13	15	17	18

† Girls to participate till married or 21 years of age.

Boys until 16 years of age.

Mothers to receive according to the number of Children admissible as above, not according to the actual number in a family.

Provision for orphans to be made according to the number of admissible ages in a family—and to be as far as (251 to 300) 5th line half the allowance for a widow and family; below that line two-thirds of the allowance of a widow and family.

* See para. 21.

Note.—Fractions are sunk in the calculations—in estimating the payments the rupee is completed, and the same in calculating the pensions.

26.—The rates assumed will be explained in the sequel after noticing the proposed deductions from salaries.

Application of the second Principle.—27.—The foregoing Table is given as a ratio, not as a fixed scale of pensions. In the present instance also the rates are open to modification. But I assume

TABLE No. II. OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

Line.	Proportions.
1. Income above 500	12 p. cent. as far as 100 pr. mth
2. ——— 401 to 500	11 " (45 to 55) "
3. ——— 351 to 400	10 " (36 to 40) "
4. ——— 301 to 350	9 " (28 to 32) "
5. ——— 251 to 300	8 " (21 to 24) "
6. ——— 201 to 250	7 " (15 to 18) "
7. ——— 151 to 200	6 " (10 to 12) "
8. ——— 101 to 150	5 " (6 to 8) "
9. ——— 51 to 100	4 " (3 to 4) "
10. ——— up to 50 2 Rs. "

On income, or such other percentage as may be found by calculation to pay in a like ratio, an equivalent to the necessary provision for lapses, adding at least 15 per cent., independent of any support which the Government may bestow, as a fund which may justify their immediate countenance to the scheme, and induce them from the general security and confidence of an ample provision against failure, to guarantee the payments.

28.—The following is the process by which these Tables have been prepared.

29.—The first line in the Table of Pensions in para. 25 I call the indeterminate line. It provides as much as I think a pension fund ought to give to any widow and family. But I do not take it as a basis of any other calculations. There are now few, there may hereafter be more Uncovenanted Servants on salaries above 500. These certainly will be taxed beyond their due proportion; but they have better means, and moreover those now in the enjoyment of such salaries are mostly perhaps, in the course of nature, likely to fall upon the fund before, even with reference to the excess,—they will have paid an equivalent. I anticipate no objection here at the present stage, and in future, successors to office, if in the enjoyment of high salaries, at an early age, would be too happy at the support provided by the State to demur.

30.—The first determinate line is the second in the Table No. I, "Income 401 to 500 per mensem, 175, 200, 225, 240." To this I applied the correspondent highest assumed rate of payment, or 55 Rs., from Table No. II. and had assigned to each succeeding grade the amount arising upon the several highest payments indicated by each line respectively. By this process I found the provision for families thus reduced by a mere nothing to the lowest grade, and it became necessary to modify in order to attain the object as regards the juniors contemplated by my first principle, (para. 20.)

31.—I found a rapid decrease which, I considered, rendered the pensions very disproportionate to income in the fourth line, and it occurred to me that all objects might be attained by the introduction of an intermediate scale which is marked by asterisks, and bringing down the calculations as they stood, attaching the fourth to the fifth line, the fifth to the sixth, and so on, thus allowing a very considerable excess, in proportion to contributions, in the provision for the families of the 32.—All therefore up to 350 per mensem would appear to benefit unduly—but there are considerations which go far if not entirely to controvert this assumption. It is to be considered on the other hand, that the juniors in service may be generally younger in age, and this will be some (perhaps more than a sufficient) make-weight, when growing payments are taken into the account. It is hoped as there are so many contingencies in favor of the fund, viz. men dying unmarried,—men surviving their wives and dying widowers,—men paying for a long time and their widows surviving but a short period, and dying before they receive an equivalent to their husbands' payments;—the growing interest upon immediate payments and upon any guarantee fund, and remarriage of widows; that I hope, as far as I can form a hasty judgment, from the inspection of the rules of other societies, a diminution may be made, rather than an increase required in the "Table of Contributions, to meet the Table of Pension." There is no other society or fund which can guide us. The Civil Fund receives one per cent. on income, but then incomes are much larger and widows who have property are excluded:—on the other hand it provides passage money for members, and large means for children: moreover its provisions have been too ample for its means. The Military Fund is also established on a somewhat similar principle to the Civil. The Pilots Fund is an Annuity as well as a Pension Fund, and the Bengal Mariners' and General Widows' Fund is a failure in toto. These funds may perhaps supply us with good statistical information, but they can furnish no guide.

33.—I have drawn out my "Table of Pensions" to provide a comfortable support for our widows and families: and should like to see that principle carried out, though payment should be higher than the guide in the "Table of Contributions" at whatever cost.

34.—If, however it be found, that the above object can be attained for less than the contributions on the contemplated scale, the difference might either be given up, or applied in aid of an Annuity Fund, on the principles of the one established in the Civil Service: I would not propose to render our fund similar to that of the Pilot Service by combining the two objects. If for no other reason, it is objectionable to do so, because the calculations and correspondence with the Court of Directors, necessary to adjust the provision which they will make in aid of such a fund, in consideration of their being relieved from superannuation pensions, would delay the accomplishment of the chief object. Let us do the one all important duty first—let us provide for our wives and families. Aged and infirm members are now allowed a pension by Government under the superannuation rules.

35.—I will again repeat, to prevent all possibility of misapprehension, that the Tables are offered only as examples and guides to the manner in which the principle should be carried out, and are not to be considered as actual scales of pensions or contributions—these can be determined only upon careful calculation of the probable demand upon the fund. If upon such calculation it be found that Table II. will not meet the demand according to Table I. we must add to the one or reduce the other, and vice versa, upon whatever may be determined by the Service to be the most equitable principle.

I remain,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

WILLIAM PETERS.

P. S. With the concurrence and advice of several of your Members, I have published this as soon as possible, in order that you may have the advantage of any discussion which it may elicit.—HURKRA.

STEAM NAVIGATION—MEETING OF THE INHABITANTS OF CALCUTTA.

A public meeting took place on Saturday morning the 6th March, called by the Sheriff, in compliance with a requisition signed by 500 inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, to take into consideration the present state of the important question of a Steam Communication with England by way of the Red Sea, and for the purpose of adopting such measures as may seem desirable under the existing circumstances of the case. At 11 o'clock, there were upwards of 250 persons assembled, and the Sheriff opened the proceedings by reading the requisition, after which, Sir Edward Ryan took the chair on the motion of Mr. Pattle, seconded by Mr. Willis.

After a few remarks from the chairman, Sir J. P. Grant rose and spoke nearly as follows.

In rising to propose the first resolution which it is meant to submit as the foundation of others, it is a great consolation to me that it is not necessary to enter into details of measures requisite to carry the object referred to into effect, because if it were, ignorant as I am of those details, I should have been under the necessity of declining the part in these proceedings with which the gentlemen of the committee have honored me. It requires, however, no knowledge of those details to be fully aware of the importance of accelerating the communication between England and this country. I believe there is not any subject which has excited so much attention,—which has drawn forth so great, so united an expression of public feeling as the one now under consideration; and I congratulate you on the numerous assemblage this-day, on the respectability of the requisition, and on the high character of the gentleman who presides, and who I have now the honor to address. I am fully persuaded,—and it is not a persuasion adopted yesterday, but one that I have felt since I first came to this country,—that there is no object of so much importance to India, of so much importance to England as dependant on her connection with India, as facilitating the communication between this and the parent country. Whatever we may have heard in our childhood with regard to the wealth of India, there is nothing that can have struck any man who has resided here so strongly as the great natural productiveness of the soil and the real poverty of the inhabitants. It requires no very great or deep knowledge of what is called political economy, or of the employment of capital, or of the cause that has produced that great change in England, which placed her first in the rank of nations.—It requires no great experience or knowledge for any man who has a correspondence with England, or who resides there on an allowance or income, to know that all that is wanting there is an outlet for capital; and it requires no greater knowledge to know that what is wanted here is the importation of capital, skill, and enterprise. (Cheers.) And what is there to prevent the importation of them all?—Distance. It is not climate, for who has heard of there being a want of British capital in the West Indies? It may be said that the peculiar nature of the government of this country has occasioned the poverty of the people, but would that circumstance have remained but for distance? and now when that circumstance is removed, what is there that remains but distance? And when we were told that this distance of half the globe from England can be put as near to her as the Cape of Good Hope, can there remain a doubt on the mind of any man of the utility,—of the importance of such an approximation? I have said more than is necessary on a subject in which I am sure, you all feel a deep interest; indeed, I might have spared the time I have occupied, and instead of dwelling on the end in view, have directed your attention, as I am now about to do, to the means of attaining it. These, it is apparent, are not within ourselves, and we must seek higher and more powerful assistance. One friend we have, I am sure, in the President of the Board of Control, and I think I may say as much for the present one; we are sure of the hearty zeal of Lord W. Bentinck, and I think I may venture to say, and with confidence, unless I have greatly erred in my estimate of his opinion and the bias of his mind, that we shall have the concurrence of the noble lord on whose recent arrival in this country I now congratulate you. Turning our attention to the means of transport we have in view; it is not of vast importance whether bulky commodities arrive in England too months sooner or later, and though the quick transport of man who, as some philosophers say, is the most difficult thing to move, is of much importance, yet the quick transmission of letters, of orders, is infinitely greater. A speedy answer to a letter is the first consideration in a political, mercantile, I may add too, in a legal point of view; and of how great an importance is it in those family relations on which so much of our happiness depends! Therefore, gentlemen, I entreat you to lay aside all other considerations, and combine your efforts, directing them to this object, and no government can be blind to its advantages or can resist your exertions. Instead of supporting various plans, promulgated at Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta, give your whole confidence to Government, leaving to them the choice of means, and as far as anything can admit of certainty, you are as likely to succeed as I can desire.

Sir JOHN GRANT then read the following resolution:—

“That a Select Committee of the House of Commons did, under date 11th July, 1834, among others, report to the house the following Resolutions:—

“That it is the opinion of this committee, that a regular and expeditious communication with India by means of Steam Vessels is an object of great importance both to Great Britain and India.

“That it is the opinion of this committee, that the experiments which have been made, have been attended with very great expense, but that from the evidence before the committee, it appears that by proper arrangements the expense may be materially reduced, and under that impression it is expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of Steam Communication from India by the Red Sea.

“That it is the opinion of this committee that it be left to His Majesty's Government in conjunction with the East India Company to consider whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee.

“That it is the opinion of this committee, that by whatever line the communication be established, the net charge of the establishment should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, including in that charge the expense of the land conveyance from the Euphrates on the one hand, and the Red Sea on the other, to the Mediterranean.”

Here, gentlemen, continued Sir John Grant, is the opinion of the House of Commons in 1834: it remains for you to follow it up, and remove the impediments which from that time may have prevented any steps having been taken to prevent what you desire being carried into effect.

Mr. HENRY TORRENS seconded the resolution. It would be a waste of words in me to detain you by speaking at any length on this subject; not that the subject does not admit of it, because, were I really an eloquent man I might expatiate on the influx of civilization following that of capital, of family ties in England, and of the anxiety you feel to hear from them, but I will not detain you, for you feel yourselves what I would say.

The resolution was then put from the chair and carried unanimously.

Mr. CAMERON.—I rise to propose for your adoption a resolution which can but be looked on as the natural consequence of the preceding one; it however affords me an opportunity of reminding those who have paid any attention to affairs in England, that when a new measure is there agitated, if those do not make themselves heard who are to derive the principal benefits from its being carried into effect, advantage is immediately taken of their silence by those who are opposed to the measure, and apathy and indifference are urged as proofs of its inexpediency. It is not possible for me to add any thing to what has already fallen from Sir John Grant on the general merits of the question, but I will avail myself of this opportunity to remark, that if the British Government has conferred any benefit on India it has been mainly attributed to public opinion in England having been directed to this country. To increase, to continue this attention, I know of no better means than by diminishing the distance, and to effect this I now propose the following resolution.

Mr ANDERSON seconded the Resolution, which was then read and carried unanimously, namely "That effectual measures not appearing to have been taken consequent on the above Resolutions, it is expedient that a petition be presented to the House of Commons, praying that such measures may be adopted as are requisite for the immediate carrying the Resolutions into effect, and that Mr. Montagu be addressed to the Right Honorable the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, and to the Honorable the Court of Directors, praying that they will unite in giving the fullest possible effect to the Resolutions."

Mr C. W. SMITH proposed the third resolution, and in the course of his address, took occasion to compliment the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, who, he said, had ever shown the utmost zeal and activity, and although their efforts had not been successful, yet had they been eminently useful in keeping alive a feeling in India, and in demonstrating to the parent country that the means in India were not sufficient to continue the communication. To judge from their past exertions, said Mr. Smith, I believe we could not place our interests in better hands, and their nomination to the charge will be a pledge that no exertion will be wanting to carry it out. The petition will be transmitted to the House of Commons, and perhaps I may be permitted to say, that should Lord William Bentinck be in Parliament, his long continued advocacy, and his lately recorded pledge, seem peculiarly to point him out as the individual to whom it ought to be intrusted.

The resolution, seconded by Mr. A. ROGERS, was then read.

"That the petition now read be adopted, and that the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, as a body already constituted for the purpose of furthering the cause of Steam Communication with England by way of the Red Sea, be requested after the same shall have been signed, to cause it to be transmitted to an influential member of the House of Commons conversant with the affairs of India, with the request of this Meeting that he will present the same to the House of Commons and support the prayer thereof."

Mr LOCKHART (CARR) — Before the resolution is put, I beg leave to offer a few remarks on the observations of the last speaker. In these I cannot concur although in the resolutions I do, and for the sake of consistency, and that I may not have sentiments attributed to me to which I have been, and still am opposed, I will now state my reason for the vote which I shall give. On the 11th of June, 1833 a public meeting was held for the same object which has now brought us together. It was then proposed to raise a subscription to forward the object of steam communication but the present chairman, Sir Edward Ryan, met this by a direct negative, which, that there may be no mistake, I will now read to you — "Resolved, that it appears to this meeting most desirable, that we should express the deepest sympathy in the public spirit manifested by the community at Bombay in their efforts to establish a communication between that presidency and ~~England~~, by steam, but in the opinion of this meeting it is not desirable that we should support their scheme by subscriptions, it being our conviction that steam communication between India and England can only be effectually promoted by the government here and at home." This resolution was supported by Mr Barker, who I now see behind the chairman, by Mr Dickens whose absence I regret, and lastly by myself will not attempt to repeat what was urged by those with whom I coincided, but I will briefly recapitulate what I then stated, for it will at once point out why I concur in the resolution, yet dissent from the sentiments of Mr. Smith. The view which I had taken of the question was, that a subscription would not only be useless but vastly mischievous, nothing good could be effected but erroneous impressions might be produced at home. No attempt could be more futile than the establishment of steam communication between England and India by the capital and funds of this community. The want of capital is notorious to all, and has been eloquently dwelt on by Sir J. Grant. The enormous capital necessary is equally notorious, and it is therefore self-evident that the making of the attempt must be attended with inevitable failure. No good could result from a measure so particularly absurd. But the mischief did not end here, it was calculated to produce a false impression at home, and to deprive us of that aid without which the scheme could not prosper. What I recommended was, to tell our fellow countrymen in Britain that India was 'the brightest gem in the crown, the most important branch in the empire.' Your interests are inseparable from ours, as the one is enhanced the other is increased. Give us the advantages of steam navigation and the prosperity of both will be immeasurably augmented. But we are without capital. We can not procure it for ourselves. It is on your wealth we must look on your support we must rely. Had such been the language of the petitioners in 1833, — but those petitions were strengthened by letters of signatures and arrived in England just at the very moment when the House of Commons were passing the resolutions which we have this day heard, how powerful would have been the effect, and what energy and spirit would have been excited, and at such a moment! (Hear, hear!) This was the view of the case taken by my friends and myself at that meeting, and the effect of the argument was to produce an immense majority against those who supported the subscription. But though defeated in argument they were obstinately wedded to their plan, the very next day a letter appeared in the newspapers under the notorious signature of Indrajit (laughter). But I will make you much more for I will read what that writer then put forth and show what he has since done. 'Let us have no more Calcutta meetings. They are a mock representation, — a rotten borough parliament of India, (laughter)' They can only lead to a partial consideration, and therefore to a false idea of her interest. The majority of such meetings only prevent a partial local interest as for instance the late majority gave us the sense of the lawyers and horse-leeches of Calcutta' (much laughter) I put the most common point in what follows. 'Let all therefore attend no meeting, and I strongly recommend that none should be held. And yet among the names attached to this requisition to call this very meeting is one, to whom public report ascribed the authorship of these letters, and thus after three years' experience we have Indrajit pursuing his views which he formerly condemned and convincing meetings which he has denounced and which he declared he would not attend (laughter) The result was a subscription was commenced and the result of that subscription I carefully followed and foretold. The first experiment has only established that by the application of it to a water, the salt became separated from the water, and that when the salt separated the water from the bottom of the boiler then by the application of heat the bottom of the boiler was burst (laughter). This problem was demonstrated at Madras and thus ended the first voyage. The second voyage established the position that a China clipper goes twice as fast as a Calcutta steamer, and by the third it was proved to the satisfaction of the public, that the owners of the Imber preferred paying £5 10s 10d penalty, to having any more experiments performed on their property. Now this is a fair statement of what has resulted from the labours of the Steam Committee. I give them every credit for zeal, activity, industry, and talent, but what are these without money? for without the necessary funds for so vast an undertaking they were without the adequate means. The error was not with them, but in their appointment, there was no fault in what they did, the fault was in giving them anything to do. I foresaw and foretold the utter failure which has ensued. I foresaw and foretold the mischief it must produce. The petition complains that the resolution of the House of Commons has not been followed up, but could anything else be expected when it was found at home that the Indian community had taken the matter in their own hands? This subscription is a direct contradiction of the proposed petitions which urge the adoption of the measure on the ground of inability, yet so far from showing any inability, they proceed to tax themselves and set about collecting the tax. I verily believe that to this alone ought to be attributed the fact of the authorities in England not having acted on the resolutions of the House of Commons, for the people at home entertain false notions of the wealth of India, and erroneously believing our means to be inexhaustible, they left us to perform the scheme which they saw us undertake. I congratulate the meeting that the community are now returning to those wise measures from which they have been diverted by the over-zeal and want of foresight of others, and notwithstanding what has passed, I will heartily contribute my best efforts to forward the success of these important objects.

Mr. GREENLAW.—I know not whether I have heard the whole of Mr. Clarke's remarks, but if I have, it appears to me, the substance is, that, at the meeting of the 14th of June, 1833, Mr. Clarke now professes to have foretold what would be the result of the exertions, then about to be made by the gentlemen who subsequently formed the Steam Committee. In fact that he then prophesied every thing that has since occurred. I have some recollection of what fell from Mr. Clarke on that occasion, but, perhaps he would prefer, that I should consult a better record of his observations. In the Hurkuru, published on the day following that on which the meeting was held, I find but one prophecy. I find it stated that Mr. Clarke, amongst other arguments against any attempt to re-open Steam Communication by a public subscription, contended that if the attempt were made, "an amount of not more than Rs. 5,000 could, under present circumstances, be reasonably expected." (Much laughter.) Now, gentlemen, let us see how far Mr. Clarke's prophecy in this case was correct. At the expiration of seven days after the subscription was commenced, or eight days after the date of that prophecy, I attended in this hall, and at this table produced a list with Rs. 38,000 subscribed (hear, hear) and as Mr. Clarke has just said, "I am sorry not to see my friend Mr. Dickens here"—so I was sorry that I did not see Mr. Clarke present on that occasion. (Laughter.) But this is not all. I admit that Mr. Clarke did on the 14th June, 1833, rigidly and successfully oppose any subscription being raised; but then again, a very short time after, he, as a member of the old Steam Committee, contemplated making over the remnant of the old fund in aid of the subscription then raising. Mr. Clarke appears to dissent. Will he allow me to refer to the proceedings of the old Committee? (Mr. Clarke assented.) Mr. Greenlaw then said,—I hold in my hand a paper circulated on the 19th of June 1833, five days after Mr. Clarke's denunciation of a subscription being raised, when I submitted the draft of a letter to the Secretary to the Bombay Committee. On that paper is a minute by Mr. Clarke. Mr. Greenlaw then read the minute; the following is the part which refers to the present subject. "Indeed it would appear that the whole question is open to us, as the funds have not been invested, and we do not know that any advertisements have been issued. If they have I am for countermanding them, and either giving the money in aid of the fund now raising in Calcutta."—Mark that, gentlemen, "giving the money in aid of the fund now raising in Calcutta!" (cheers)—"or"; but that is enough for my purpose and I will not go on unless I have Mr. Clarke's permission. [Mr. Clarke "go on, go on."] Very good,—or building a half way house in the desert, (laughter) or placing it at Mr. Crawford's disposal to procure a bill in aid of a Joint Stock Company, who should have a monopoly of letters. Any of these three definite plans are preferable to a wild advertisement for the encouragement of a wilder speculation." (Much cheering.) There then, gentlemen, is Mr. Clarke's wondrously foretelling that more than Rs. 5,000 might not be expected, and boasting of his prophetic powers, and eight days after there is a subscription of Rs. 38,000! So much for his prophetic talent! Again, on the 14th of June, he denounces a subscription, and on the 19th of the same month he contemplates adding to it the money of the Old Fund. So much for his consistency! But it is admitted that Mr. Clarke did oppose a subscription and urge petitioning. If then, in Mr. Clarke's estimation petitioning would have had a most powerful effect in 1833, how does it happen that he did not carry that object into effect? A committee was appointed at the first meeting, of which I believe Mr. Clarke was a member, why did he not procure a petition through that committee appointed for the very purpose? I was a member of that committee as well as of the subsequent one; but having been opposed to the principle on which that committee was appointed, viz. the exclusion of subscriptions, I could not be expected to place myself in the front in that committee. But in the second committee the matter was considered; for the first resolution of the meeting of the subscribers to the fund was to the effect that they would support with "unabated zeal the measures adopted at the general meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta held on the 14th instant for the purpose of petitioning the authorities," &c.—But the first committee, as far as I know, never met, and therefore the second committee could not follow up this resolution, and go into communication with the first committee to promote the petitions as they desired to do. Again; why if Mr. Clarke held petitioning to be of such paramount importance in 1833, did he not follow up the resolutions of the meeting of the 14th of June of that year?

Touching the views entertained by those who were for getting up subscriptions, I may be allowed here to correct a delusion into which, I am sorry to say, not only Mr. Clarke but several others have fallen. It would appear to have been considered that the originators of the subscription contemplated raising funds sufficient to establish and maintain a regular communication by Steam throughout,—hence to England. Such indeed would have been a wild speculation. But surely I need not again repeat that our main object was to re-open the communication and to show a strong demonstration of feeling,—to excite attention at home—and sure I am that had we not shewn the deep interest which we did, and in the manner that we did with regard to this subject, we should have had no aid from home, we should have had no declaration from the House of Commons in our favor. (Hear, hear.) Such was our object; and I ask Mr. Clarke or any one whether that object has or has not been effected? I consider that we owe our present position to our past exertions, which, aided by Lord William Bentinck, and by him urged on the late President of the Board of Control, in my opinion, led to that examination by the Committee of the House of Commons which resulted in the present resolutions, on which we now take our stand; and instead, as Mr. Clarke thinks, of the apathy shewn in following up those resolutions, arising from the failure of our attempt to re-open the communication by means of the Forbes, I attribute that nothing further has been done to the arrangements which removed Lord Clive from the Board of Control. I am clearly of opinion that had he remained there, we might have met here this-day, not to congratulate the people of this country on a declaration from the House of Commons that steam communication between England and India was practicable and an object of importance as well to England as India, and to urge the house and the authorities to follow up their resolution by reducing it to practice—but we might have met to celebrate the actual establishment of a regular steam communication between the two countries by way of the Red Sea. (Cheers.)

MR. CLARKE rose to explain.—Mr. Greenlaw has told you that he can only find one prophecy of mine in the reported speech. How far that report is either full or fair the meeting will be able to judge when I state that it is contained in ten lines, yet many will recollect that I spoke full three quarters of an hour. From this report Mr. Greenlaw informs you that I had prophesied that only Rs. 5,000 could be collected. This is a misprint. I did no such thing. What I did state was that a larger sum than Rs. 50,000 could not be reasonably expected. But it appeared that a much larger sum had been collected,—not subscribed. Now how collected? Certainly by means which I had never anticipated. By gentlemen, high in government offices, writing to every court and cutcherry recommending subscriptions. Such recommendation coming from such quarters are mandates to every sherestadah, moon-siff, amlah, and mohurrer in government employment. It was not subscription, it was extortion. But it was of subscription that I spoke when I named Rs. 50,000 as the limit likely to be obtained. The fact was notorious, and my error was in not anticipating so gross and improper a breach of their duties on the part of the government servants who so acted, and of the government who did not interfere. Mr. Greenlaw has also accused me of inconsistency. The facts are:—the remnant of the old Steam Fund was in the hands of Rickards, Mackintosh and Co. and in reply to a note as to how it should be disposed of, I stated that it ought to be immediately taken out of their hands and invested, and when secured, they might then determine as to its appropriation, but that I would not consent to continue a wild advertisement to encourage wilder projectors. I would rather give the money to the New Steam Fund, or to Mr. Waghorn to build a house in the desert or to Mr. Crawford to forward our views before parliament. This is what I stated, and on which Mr. Greenlaw has got up a charge of inconsistency. Because I had stated, amongst other suggestions, that the giving of this sum to the Fund would be preferable to advertising for projectors, at the same time promising that it would be time enough to decide when the funds were safe, I am to be charged before this meeting with gross inconsistency of conduct. I cannot but congratulate myself on the weakness of the charge, and the want of candour in the speech in which it was made.

Mr. GREENLAW.—I beg to explain that I did not use the word "propose" but "contemplate", and I used the word advisedly, having come prepared to make the statement I have made. As for the error of the press, I can only say that Mr. Clarke is reported in two papers to have said that he did not expect more than Rs. 5,000 would be subscribed.

Mr. PATTLE.—I will not detain the meeting long, but as I was one of those who advised the subscription, I cannot sit down without attempting to explain what was done, and what Mr. Clarke has found it his interest not to state. At the meeting in 1833 it was represented that the people at home would not believe we were in earnest, unless we put forth our strongest exertions. It was stated that we were bound to do all in our power, or that they might turn round to us, as Jupiter did to the Waggoner; and I believe that it was Lord W. Bentinck's opinion that if we made a strong demonstration here we should not be deserted by the authorities at home. We did make that demonstration, and government here liberally assisted us, and we have not been deserted by the people at home. Then I say, gentlemen, Mr. Clarke has no ground for saying that our efforts have been futile, for unless they had been made, the public at home might, and would have taunted us with expecting aid from them while we would do nothing for ourselves. (cheers.)

The resolution was now put and carried nem. con.

Mr. H. M. PARKER, in proposing the next resolution said, he was happy to lend his aid towards effecting this most desirable object, as he was in 1833, when he said what he now repeated, that he would never ask as a boon for that which was their right. The people of this country were sufficiently taxed to claim steam communication as a right, though he admitted the prayer of the petition ought to be couched in certain language. Believing this, he never would subscribe his money to an object which it was the duty of government to establish, and which as far as Alexandria they had already established. He trusted they would extend it to this country, for he thought that steam communication would confer greater benefits on India than the abolition of transit duties, the assimilation of the currency, or even the freedom of the press, and the meeting were quite aware how warmly he had felt on the last mentioned question.

Dwarkanauth Tagore seconded the resolution, which was put and carried as follows:—

That the Memorial to the Right Honorable the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, and that to the Court of Directors now read be adopted, and when signed by the Honorable the Chairman on behalf of the meeting, forwarded by him to the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council, with the respectful request of this Meeting that His Lordship, in Council will forward the same with such support as the important object may seem to merit.

Mr. ARBUTHNOT, after a few prefatory remarks, proposed the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. G. Bushby and carried:—

"That the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund be requested to adopt such other measures as may be considered necessary to give the fullest possible effect to the above Resolution, and generally to exert themselves to secure the great object of their original appointment."

After this resolution had been disposed of, Sir Edward Ryan rose and said,—I understand these are all the resolutions to be proposed at the present meeting, but I think it would be improper to conclude without expressing the deep debt of gratitude we all owe to Mr. Greenlaw, and I shall now move a resolution to that effect. (Cheers.) Allusions have been made to what took place at the former meeting, and certainly I successfully proposed a resolution then to which a large portion of this community dissented. To the past I have nothing to say, for the future I have every thing to hope. Whether the subscription was injudicious I know not, but of this I am certain, it has kept alive the energies at home from which much may be expected. A great deal has been said by my learned brother, Sir John Grant, regarding communication by letter, and with that I entirely agree; but there is one object which has escaped his notice, and to which your attention cannot be too strongly drawn, I mean the improvement of the condition of the natives. This will be the great result, and it will not depend on intercourse with England by private communications, but to an intercourse with the people themselves. To bring the governed nearer to the government will be a great advantage, but infinitely greater in my mind will be the advantages that must attend the introduction of your manners, your opinions, and your customs amongst the natives of this country. (Cheers.)

The resolution was put and carried by acclamation.

Mr. PATTLE proposed a resolution, conveying a vote of thanks to the Steam Committee, which met with the entire approbation of the meeting, and in conclusion Mr. C. W. Smith proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman which was carried by acclamation.—Englishman.

THE PETITION AND MEMORIAL.

THE HUMBLE PETITION, &c.

That the establishment of a Steam Communication between India and England has been for several years past the ardent desire of the whole of the British Inhabitants of this country, and that this desire has of late years extended to the natives; and that the public wish of all India has been lately expressed in the strongest manner, by the voluntary subscriptions of a sum exceeding three lacs of rupees, of which above one lac and a half were subscribed in Bengal alone, a great part thereof by natives, for the furtherance of this eagerly sought measure.

That however the subscription of such a sum, without any view to pecuniary return, may evince the anxiety of all India for the establishment of such a communication, yet your petitioners feel that it is impossible to establish it, much less to carry it on, except by means of the united powers of His Majesty's Government and the East India Company; and your petitioners learned therefore with the utmost satisfaction that a Select Committee of your Hon'ble House had resolved under date 14th July, 1834—

"That a regular and expeditious communication with India by means of steam vessels is an object of great importance both to Great Britain and to India.

"That it is expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of steam communication from India by the Red Sea.

That it be left to His Majesty's Government, in conjunction with the East India Company, to consider whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay, or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee, and that by whatever line the communication be established, the net charge should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company."

That your petitioners considered these Resolutions as a pledge that immediate measures would be taken for establishing such communication in the manner best adapted for meeting the wants and wishes of all the principal ports of India.

That it is therefore with pain, proportionate to the satisfaction which they felt in hearing of the pledge of your Hon'ble House to perfect this their anxious desire, that your petitioners find that up to the date of the last advices from England nothing had been done in redemption of that pledge; that no steps appear to have been taken for the regular Establishment of Steam Communication from India by the Red Sea; and that no effectual consideration had been given by His Majesty's Government in conjunction with the East India Company, to the only question which your petitioners understand to have been left to their decision before giving effect to the Resolutions of the Committee of your Hon'ble House—namely—whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay, or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee.

That your petitioners beg leave to submit to the consideration of your Hon'ble House the following opinion lately expressed by a late Right Hon'ble ruler of this country, regarding the importance of Steam Communication between this country and Europe, viz., "I have been a zealous supporter of the cause of Steam Communication from the strongest conviction, confirmed by every day's further reflection of its vast importance to innumerable interests, both national and commercial. I cannot command the opportunity of forwarding its future success, but if within my reach you may depend upon my most earnest efforts to promote its progress, and to obtain for India an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences, that in my opinion it would be cheaply bought at any price."

Your petitioners, fully concurring in the sentiments above expressed, humbly but earnestly pray that your Hon'ble House will graciously adopt such measures as to your wisdom may seem requisite for the immediate carrying into effect the Resolutions of the Committee of your Hon'ble House for establishing a regular, expeditious, and frequent communication between the principal Indian ports and Great Britain by means of steam vessels by way of the Red Sea.

And your petitioners will ever pray,

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS.
&c. &c. &c.

The Respectful Memorial of the Inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, duly convened in the Town Hall, on Saturday, March 5th, 1836.

Sheweth,—That Your Memorialists having the greater part of them for many years, and all latterly, felt the vast importance as well to Great Britain as to India of establishing a regular and expeditious communication with England by way of the Red Sea by means of steam vessels, received with the utmost satisfaction the announcement of the following Resolutions of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, dated the 14th July, 1834, and afterwards adopted by the Honourable House, viz.

"That it is the opinion of this Committee that a regular and expeditious communication with India, by means of steam vessels, is an object of great importance both to Great Britain and to India.

"That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the experiments which have been made have been attended with very great expense; but that from the evidence before the Committee, it appears that by proper arrangements the expense may be materially reduced: and under that impression it is expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of Steam Communication from India by the Red Sea.

"That it is the opinion of this Committee that it be left to His Majesty's Government, in conjunction with the East India Company, to consider whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay, or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee.

"That it is the opinion of this Committee, that by whatever time the communication be established, the net charge of the establishment should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, including in that charge the expense of the land conveyance from the Euphrates on the one hand, and the Red Sea on the other to the Mediterranean.

That Your Memorialists have anxiously looked for the result of the consideration thus pressed upon the notice of His Majesty's Government in conjunction with the East India Company, which they confidently expected would lead to the immediate establishment of Steam Communication with England by way of the Red Sea in the manner best adapted to meet the wants and wishes of all the principal ports in India; and that your Memorialists were the more confirmed in their hope and expectation that no delay would be allowed to take place in giving the subject that consideration which its importance demands by the publication in the papers of this Presidency of a letter addressed to the Secretary to the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund by the Secretary of your Right Honorable Board, under date the 8th November, 1834, wherein they were informed that the subject was then under the consideration of His Majesty's Government and the East India Company; and that the result would be communicated to the Government of India.

That Your Memorialists regret to find that no effectual consideration appears to have been yet given by His Majesty's Government and the East India Company to the matters pressed upon their considerate attention by the above resolutions of the House of Commons; and that the President of your Right Honorable Board is reported to have expressed himself in somewhat doubtful terms as to the certainty of that communication being established, which he admitted it was the duty of the East India Company with the aid of His Majesty's Government to take steps for effecting.

That Your Memorialists have received this intimation with a degree of pain proportionate to the pleasure with which they received what they looked on as an assurance of the House of Commons that their ardent and long entertained wish would be immediately realized.

That Your Memorialists beg respectfully to press upon the consideration of His Majesty's Government, through your Right Honorable Board, the vast importance of speedily following up the recommendation of the House of Commons; by establishing a regular and expeditious communication between this country and Great Britain by means of steam vessels by way of the Red Sea; and on this point, your Memorialists beg to be permitted to lay before your Right Honorable Board the following expression of the testimony of the Right Honourable Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, the late Governor-General of India, made on the eve of his departure for England.

I have been a zealous supporter of the cause of steam communication with Europe from the strongest conviction, confirmed by every day's further reflection of its vast importance to innumerable interests both national and commercial.

"I cannot command the opportunity of forwarding its future success, but, if within my reach, you may depend upon my most earnest efforts to promote its progress, and to train for India an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences that in my opinion it would be cheaply bought at any price."

That Your Memorialists deem it proper to bring to the notice of your Right Honourable Board that the average number of letters received from England and despatched thither in India through the Post Office annually may be taken as follows —

	Received.	Despatched
Calcutta,	89,189	72,397

late trade of the Honourable Company at Bombay, the amount of which is not known, connected with the commercial correspondence of the above places with Europe, and in addition thereto, your memorialists beg to draw to the attention of His Majesty's Government that the trade of China, with England, which amounts to the value of from £5,000,000 to £6,000,000 by the year, is dependent on India during six months out of the twelve for early communication with Great Britain.

That the average number of passengers annually arriving at and departing from the undermentioned places may be taken as follows —

Calcutta	Ass.	665	Dept	665
Madras,	"	573	"	439
Bombay,	"	287	"	316
Ceylon	"	85	"	17

And your Memorialists respectfully draw the particular attention of your Right Honourable Board to the above statement regarding passengers, because the Committee of Merchants of Calcutta who made a tender to the Government here to establish on certain terms a regular communication by way of the Red Sea with Great Britain by means of steam vessels gave in their opinion, after very full and minute investigation, that the communication must depend in a material degree upon the support of passengers for paying its expenses.

That your Right Honourable Board may in some measure judge of the probability of the steamers being constantly filled with passengers who regularly despatched from the fact, that the Hugh Lindsay's accommodations were taken up months before the time at which she was advertised to sail and that several parties travelled overland a distance of 1000 or 1200 miles only to be disappointed, though arriving two months prior to the time fixed for her departure.

That in regard to the expense which the establishment of a sufficient number of steam vessels would occasion to the East India Company, your Memorialists respectfully submit that the Resolution of the House of Commons proposing that the net charge of the establishment should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, appears to have very greatly reduced the force of the only objection raised against immediately putting these resolutions into execution namely, the state of the finances of the Honourable Company, and upon this head of expense, your Memorialists beg leave to observe that prior to the departure of the late Governor-General of India the Merchants of Calcutta after the most ample enquiry, offered to His Lordship to establish and maintain by means of vessels of the largest size and power, independent of the existing communication between Malta and India, a regular quarterly communication between England and the four ports, Bombay, Point de Galle, Madras and Calcutta including the passage across the Isthmus of Suez, provided they get three lacks of rupees by way of bonus and five lacks of rupees annually for five years from the Government, the Government retaining the postage, a calculation, which, if it all correct, your Memorialists venture to affirm would make the annual charge to be equally borne by His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, a sum so small as neither your Right Honourable Board nor the East India Company would allow to outweigh the advantages, direct and indirect, which the establishment of such a communication on an extended and liberal scale is calculated to induce.

Upon these advantages your Memorialists abstain from enlarging, satisfied that the value of such a communication must be duly appreciated by your Right Honourable Board.

That in conclusion your Memorialists respectfully and most earnestly pray that the resolutions of the House of Commons may be forthwith fully acted upon and that steps may be immediately taken by your Right Honourable Board, in conjunction with the East India Company, to establish a regular steam communication between the principal Indian ports and Great Britain by way of the Red Sea.

The memorial to the Honourable Court of Directors was, as read mutatis mutandis, the same as the above. — Hurkaru.

MADRAS STEAM MEETING.

A Meeting of the Inhabitants of Madras took place this morning, the 12th March, at the College Hall, for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of Petitioning Parliament, and pursuing such other measures as might be thought necessary for the establishment of a Steam Communication between India and Europe.

The Sheriff opened the proceedings by requesting the Meeting to appoint a Chairman; when Mr. A. D. Campbell proposed and Mr. Cator seconded the proposition, that the Hon. Mr. Sullivan should take the Chair.

The Chairman observed that it appeared to him to be of vital importance to the furtherance of the objects of the Meeting that there should be unanimity in its proceedings, and he was sorry to see from the publication of two separate sets of Resolutions, to be offered to the Meeting, that they were in the high road to collision. To avoid this it had been suggested to propose that the Meeting should be adjourned, and that the Requisitionists to the Meeting should be requested to draw up a series of Resolutions for the consideration of a Meeting to be assembled on a future day. He confessed that this suggestion met his approval; for independent of the necessity of avoiding any thing like an appearance of conflict, it appeared to him that both sets of Resolutions were defective, inasmuch that they did not go in any degree to meet the real difficulties which opposed the execution of the Resolutions of the Committee of the House of Commons, which declared it to be expedient that immediate measures should be taken for establishing a STEAM COMMUNICATION between India and England.

The difficulties were of two kinds—financial and physical; the former of which appeared to him to be of a very formidable character, and he did not believe that any thing would be gained unless they could shew plausible grounds, at least, for believing that the estimates upon which the expense of effecting the undertaking had been made were exaggerated, and that the profits to be derived from it had been underrated. It appeared to him that there were not only plausible, but solid grounds for offering both these propositions; and he had been led to this conclusion, partly from information which had recently been communicated to him that an establishment had been actually formed for regular Steam Communication between Marseilles, Genoa, Naples and Alexandria, and from the positive assertion of Mr. Waghorn that rails were in actual preparation for a road to be laid down by the Pasha of Egypt, between Suez and Cairo. If there was any truth in these reports, he could not but consider that they would very materially enhance the importance of the proposed Steam Communication, and furnish, in a certain degree, the means of meeting the charges of the establishment, for it could not be but that an active commercial intercourse would spring up between continental Europe and India, and, with such facilities, the route by Suez and the Red Sea would be much frequented by passengers. He had also heard, from the best authority, that in the essential article of fuel there had been a fall of price which could not fail materially to affect the estimates.

With respect to the physical difficulty of keeping up a communication by the Red Sea, during the whole year, he had been informed by Captain Dalrymple, who had thoroughly considered the subject, that it was beyond a doubt, that a steamer might, in every month of the year, pass from Point de Galles to Suez in less than a month.

He confessed he thought it of material consequence that these important facts, which bore so directly upon the difficulties of accomplishing the object which the Meeting had in view, should be considered in the formation of the Resolutions, and he was, therefore, disposed to acquiesce in the suggestion that had been thrown out for the adjournment of the Meeting.

(The Chairman also alluded to the Peninsular Line of Steam Packets, to run weekly from Falmouth to Gibraltar, as a strong inducement for increased exertions on the part of the Indian community in the cause of Steam Communication.)

After a few words from Mr. A. D. Campbell,

Mr. CATOR made some observations on the course which had been followed in Calcutta, where the Resolutions and Petitions were published 15 days before the public meeting.

Mr. NORTON wished to say a few words, in the way of business, and suggested that as time was slipping fast away, it was very possible that their Petition might not arrive in England before the conclusion of the present Sessions of Parliament; he therefore recommended promptitude in their proceedings, more particularly as the Petitions to Parliament must be written on parchment, and signed by every individual petitioning, which would necessarily occupy a good deal of time.

Mr. CATOR proposed that the Requisitionists for this Meeting should be requested to draw up a series of Resolutions and Petitions grounded upon those Resolutions to both Houses of Parliament, to the Indian Board, and to the Court of Directors for the purpose of effecting the establishment of a regular Steam Communication between India and England.

Mr. DARE moved as an amendment, that a Committee should be appointed by the Meeting for that purpose.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL seconded the amendment and it was carried by a very large majority.

The following Gentlemen were then unanimously appointed

ADJOURNED MADRAS STEAM MEETING.

The adjourned Meeting of the Inhabitants of Madras, to take into consideration the propriety of Petitioning Parliament, and pursuing such other measures as might be thought necessary for the attainment of Steam Communication with England, via the Red Sea, took place on Saturday, the 26th March, at the College Hall, at 11 o'clock. We were much gratified to observe among the Members the Honorable the Chief Justice, and our Venerable and excellent Diocesan.

The Honorable Mr. SULLIVAN, as Chairman, stated that the Committee had fulfilled the instructions of the former Meeting, by drawing up a series of Resolutions which would be formally submitted to the Meeting.

Sir R. COMYN in rising to move the first Resolution, said I beg to take this opportunity of expressing the regret I feel, that a notion should have been entertained in any quarter, that I was indifferent to the project of a regular Steam Communication between India and Great Britain. Now, Sir, though I am not so vain as to suppose, that my individual example could either promote or retard this great and important measure, yet I am, for my own sake, desirous of removing the impression, (if it have been entertained by any one) that I am at all blind to the immense advantages which must certainly result from its accomplishment. If I have hitherto appeared backward in taking part in the proposed measures, it is, because those measures did not seem to me, to place this Presidency in the independent position in which she ought to stand. It was in this view that I declined setting my name to the late requisition, because I understood that the proposed object was, to unite our efforts with those of the Inhabitants of Calcutta, and that we were to have a voyage from Calcutta to Great Britain, and from Great Britain direct to Calcutta, the inevitable consequence of which would be carried to the sister Presidency, and we should be dependent upon the Post Office there for the transmission of them, long after they had been carried past our own port. Now, I repeat, that this is a position in which we ought not to place ourselves; and it was to this impression alone that my hitherto apparent apathy is to be ascribed. But whether that impression were right or wrong, it is entirely dispelled by one of the Resolutions of this day, (the discussion of which it would be impertinent in me to anticipate because I think nothing can be fairer than the design of a common depôt in India, from which all the Presidencies may receive their packets, without any way interfering or clashing one with another. I have thought it necessary to say thus much, because if it were supposed by any one that I were hostile to the measure in general, I must appear guilty of something worse than inconsistency in coming forward to move a Resolution, which must be considered as the very foundation stone of the fabric about to be constructed. I do most cordially feel, that this measure of effecting a more easy, regular, and rapid communication between India and England, must be productive of the most beneficial results, not only to this, but to the mother country; and so I am convinced it will be felt at home, when our fellow countrymen shall have shaken off the lamentable indifference which seems to prevail in England, as to every thing that belongs to this great empire. I thought, perhaps, Sir, to apologize to this Meeting for thus detaining them with what concerns myself rather than the general question; upon that most important measure I apprehend no difference of opinion can prevail; and therefore without further preface, I beg leave to move the first Resolution.

I. That it is the opinion of this Meeting that nothing will so materially tend to develop the resources of India, to improve her people, to advance her general welfare, (and to maintain the integrity of the Empire,) as being brought into the closest possible contact with Britain.

Mr. CHAMIER seconded the Resolution and it was carried unanimously.

It was proposed by Colonel WAUGH, and seconded by Mr. DARE and carried unanimously.

II. That it appears no effectual measures have yet been taken for the regular establishment of steam communication to and from India by the Red Sea, notwithstanding the Resolution of the Select Committee of the House of Commons of the 14th July, 1834, viz.

"4th—That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the experiments which have been made have been attended with very great expense, but that from the evidence before the Committee, it appears that, by proper arrangements the expense may be materially reduced, and that under that impression, it is expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the regular establishment of Steam Communication from India by the Red Sea.

"5th—That it is the opinion of this Committee, that it be left to His Majesty's Government, in conjunction with the East India Company, to consider, whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee.

"6th—That it is the opinion of this Committee, that by whatever line the communication be established, the net charge of the establishment should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, including in that charge the expense of the land conveyance from the Euphrates on the one hand, and Red Sea on the other, to the Mediterranean."

Mr. W. ASHTON proposed the 3d Resolution, and said he held in his hand a statement by which it appeared that in 1834, coals had been purchased in Madras for the Forbes at Rupees 7-7-5 per ton—in April the same year 27-6-2—again 27-6-2 Company's Burdwan coal, was which hardly a fair criterion, 46 rupees—and afterwards 48-2-5. Also that English coal had been purchased in large quantities at 15 rupees, and again out of the Emmore for 12 Rs. And he was convinced that if there were a market here ships coming from England would bring coals as ballast.

III. That it is the opinion of this Meeting that the expectation expressed in the IV. Resolution of the Select Committee of the House of Commons has been justified; inasmuch as it is now ascertained that owing to the low price of coals in India, (which is likely to continue) the reduction in the expenditure of fuel, and other advantages resulting from improvements in Steam Machinery; the expenses of Steam Communication between England and India will fall far below the estimates which were framed in 1834.

Mr. BARROW seconded the resolution, and it was carried unanimously.

Mr. CARON after declaring his opinion that the Resolution was just, equitable and beneficial, and that its principle had been approved and acted upon, and was now at this moment in operation in every civilized state, as well in the old Governments in Europe, as in the new Republics of America, not omitting the United States—proceeded to explain why he thought it expedient that the Meeting should adopt it. He said it was quite clear that the obstacle that had hitherto prevented the carrying into effect the Resolutions of the House of Commons was the want of a revenue to yield a return, not only for the large first outlay, but for the large annual loss, which the Estimates before the House of Commons in 1834 exhibited. It was not enough for this Meeting or for the whole of India to be satisfied, that the Steam Communication between the two countries would yield a profit, we must adapt our course to the views, the prejudices, the errors—if you please—of those of whom we asked the boon, and who had it in their power to grant or to withhold it. The House of Commons and the East India Company had with great care, had estimates formed whereon they acted in 1834, and to those in every subsequent consideration of the same subject they would appeal. The Committee appointed the other day had accordingly applied themselves to the consideration of the estimates, and in one very considerable item, viz. that of coals, the price of them, had by return from the Merchants of Madras, shown that it was greatly overrated. Further, there had been in the consumption of fuel, a very great reduction owing to the improvements in machinery since 1834—and by the improvements, which every day presented to the public, no doubt, still greater reductions in the quantity of fuel might be effected; but still the most sanguine could not anticipate, that the Estimates would so far be cut down, as to make the return cover the expense. It was therefore necessary to consider how the remaining expense could be defrayed. It was proposed by the Committee that it should be met by the two classes of persons to be benefited by the Establishment of Steam Communication. These two classes were, the people at large, who would be benefited in the manner pointed out by the 1st Resolution which this Meeting had adopted;—and those persons of the State who engrossed the correspondence. The people at large would pay their share by having it charged upon the revenues of the State generally. The correspondents would, the Resolution in question submitted, have to pay their proportion by a direct charge upon letters, and nothing did seem more equitable or fair:—much had been said about the price of the letter postage; but as it was for the purpose of raising a revenue it was quiet clear that in order to be productive it must be at the lowest possible rate. The Calcutta return gives 3 lacs of letters annually at one rupee per letter. Taken indiscriminately at double and single, they would yield 3 lacs of Rupees. But it would not be an unfair estimate to suppose that if these 3 lacs of letters were classified, the outturn to yield 3 lacs of rupees, would give the small sum of 8 annas for every single letter, a sum which every Cadet would gladly pay; and which was so small, that it was quite clear no one would be prejudiced by the result of the Resolution if carried into effect; which would not be that the wealthy would be benefited at the expense of the poor, but that every Correspondent how low soever his means were, would participate in the most rapid conveyance at the least possible expense. To tax the ryots any more was impossible—it would be unjust to the services to impose upon them the risk of further reductions, and no one would surely wish to hazard the introduction into India of the assessed or any other direct taxes which were felt to be so odious in England, but from which the whole European population of this Empire are happily free.

IV. As resolved by the Committee that for the purpose of covering a portion of the charge of the Steam Establishment between India and England, legislative enactments ought to be passed prohibiting, subject to certain limitations for the purposes of trade, the transmission of letters and parcels below a certain weight, by any sailing vessel, so soon as monthly steam packets shall be established.

Mr. Anstonsen in seconding the Resolution said, he would, with the permission of the Meeting, shortly advert to his reasons for coming thus prominently forward in support of a measure, which had been a good deal denounced, but which he nevertheless thought to be deserving of support on the strongest of all grounds, those of substantial justice.

Having adopted as the basis of our present proceedings, that the sole obstacle to the accomplishment hitherto of a regular Steam Communication was the expense; and having undertaken to meet that difficulty, he thought it was quite incumbent on them, if they wished to render their principle of any practical value, to suggest a means to the end, and not to rest satisfied with merely pointing out possible reductions in the estimates; for however practicable such reductions might prove, it was quite certain that in the first instance, the outlay would be out of all proportion to the returns; then with regard to those general considerations of advantage adverted to in the first Resolution, it was equally clear, that however powerful such arguments might appear to the Meeting, they had not proved so convincing to the minds of the East India Directors, and there was no reason to suppose that they would prove more successful in future; if therefore the community were really in earnest in their present efforts, they must be prepared to afford proof of that earnestness by consenting to make the proposed sacrifice, little commensurate as it was to the advantages they were seeking to attain. Besides without recurring to the arguments so ably stated by his learned friend who moved the Resolution, he would merely ask whether it was just and reasonable that the British community who were to derive a direct and certain advantage from the undertaking, should wish to throw the whole expense on the Natives of this country, to whom the benefits, to say the least, must be remote.

As regards the measure itself, Mr. A. could not conceive how any valid objection could be raised against it, or how it would be possible to devise a fairer or more legitimate mode of imposing a tax for the professed object, and admitting for the sake of argument that some inconvenience would be experienced from the enactment, he would ask any gentleman present if he would not willingly submit to the inconvenience, rather than be deprived of the object. He did not however, consider that the enactment would prove an inconvenience, for he felt confident that when a regular monthly communication was established by steam, people would as a matter of course resort to that mode, of sending letters, just as much as parties, engaged in correspondence with the West Indies, adopted the regular line of monthly packets, in preference to trading ships, while the effect of the proposition would be most beneficial, in accomplishing the desired object.

The last argument he should use in support of the Resolution, was one, which ought to have more weight with those gentlemen who were not in the Company's Service, than with those who were; for while the interests of the latter only would be effected, feelings of another and better kind would be appealed to in the case of the former; he alluded to an opinion which had been expressed, and he feared with some probability of truth, that if the parties themselves were not disposed to supply the means of attaining an object they were applying for with so much earnestness, the Court of Directors would find the means by resorting anew to those measures of retrenchment which were always at their command, and he asked his commercial friends around him whether they would consent, by any hesitation in adopting the present Resolution, to expose their friends in the service of Government to risk a hazard, and this too in return for the assistance which they were affording, as much by their talents as their influence, in carrying a measure confessedly of more importance to the mercantile interests than to their own. In conclusion he would only say, that he most cordially seconded the Resolution.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL observed, that he very reluctantly rose to disturb the unanimity which had hitherto prevailed, by offering any opposition to this, the 4th Resolution. But his name having appeared in some of the newspapers without his privity along with others, as having dissented from it, in the Committee, he deemed himself bound to explain to the Inhabitants of Madras, who had placed him in the Committee, the grounds upon which he felt himself unable there to join in it; and he now rose without concert with any one, to lay before them his individual opinions on this subject. He would be the last man to advocate any transfer of the burden, which the expense of Steam Communication with the mother country would necessarily impose, from ourselves and others who more immediately would benefit by it to those whom it affected more remotely,—the over-taxed ryots of India. His object invariably had been the reverse. He heartily concurred in all that his learned friend who moved this Resolution had said on that head, but he thought that the end in view might be obtained by other means, than was contemplated in this Resolution which appeared to him unnecessary—objectionable—inconsistent—and unconstitutional.

Unnecessary, because he was strongly impressed with the conviction that the desire to promote more frequent communication with the mother country, by means of Steam navigation, was so universal, and its advantages so obvious, that the community would voluntarily give it the preference, both as to letters and passengers, over sailing vessels; the very numerous attendance that day was the best proof of the great interest taken in this object, and it would be adding to the statute books a most uncalled for law to compel, by penalties, that to which self-interest sufficiently prompted. If indeed the sums paid voluntarily, for postage and passengers, did not suffice to meet the expense, it would be time enough to consider the expediency of the measure involved in this Resolution—which in the contrary event was most unnecessary and, so far as he was aware, the impression here is universal, that whatever outlay may at first be incurred, the voluntary returns in postage and passage money is likely to render Steam navigation between India and Britain a good and profitable investment of capital instead of hazardous, and still less a losing speculation.

On the objectionable nature of the Resolution he need hardly dwell, after the eloquent illustration its mover had given of the revolting feelings of mankind against compulsory laws in general when attended by the infringement of liberty. He would on this head merely add, that when the necessity, which alone can justify them, is absent—their enactment is without excuse—and the postage established in India is an instance that self-interest alone is sufficient to induce the people voluntarily to remunerate the Government, for extra expense incurred in the improvement of communication, so long as the charge is confined to moderate bounds, and does not drive them into less advantageous channels.

But what struck him most forcibly was the inconsistency of the proposed Resolution—what, he would ask, would be thought of the public spirit, and universal interest which have been evinced in India in favour of Steam navigation with the mother country, if we tell the authorities, to whom we now propose to apply to forward it, that, except by a compulsory law, even purses shall be shut against the continuance of its support? If left perfectly unfettered, Steam navigation by its own advantages, will purchase a free and a liberal support from them whom it benefits, and the purse given will be proportioned to the benefits conferred, requiring no embargo against the conveyance of letters by sailing ships;—but rising, as it must do, with the increase of the mutual advantages it will ensure.

Finally, he would observe, that although no one would more gladly hail the day when the people of India should be allowed to propose their own taxes, the Resolution appeared to him, in the present state of our constitution in this respect, of a novel and questionable nature. If the voluntary payment for passages and postages should not cover the expense to be incurred; it would be most becoming to leave the best and just mode of realizing it to the wisdom of the legislature in India and Britain who cannot but be well aware that the European community have on every occasion been most forward in evincing their anxiety to contribute to it their full share.

Mr. NORTON rose to second the amendment, and stated that he had not communicated his ideas on the subject of the Meeting to a single individual. He thought it very desirable that there should, if possible, be unanimity in their proceedings—but it was evident by the talented observations which they had just heard that such could not be the case on the present occasion. In spite of the powerful arguments of the learned gentleman, who first addressed them, on that Resolution, he thought it was a violation of all the sound commercial principles which had been recognized during the last 150 years—they were asked to further the interests of trade by compulsory enactments on that trade itself—if the Court of Directors are opposed to Steam Communication, whether on good or bad grounds, they could not have a better argument in their favour than the fact that the community of Madras are so benighted, and ignorant of the real principles of trade, that they will not resort to Steam Communication without compulsory enactments. The learned Advocate then traced the rise of free trade, from Sir Josiah Child in 1670 to Lord Glenelg—whom they had most unhappily chosen to present their petition in the House of Lords, praying for another Legislative enactment—and illustrated his remarks by a fable of the old Fox.

[The Advocate-General not having had time to favor us with a sketch of his Speech, we are indebted for this report of it to the Madras Gazette of Saturday.]

Captain DALRYMPLE said he had listened to the speech of the learned Advocate-General with great attention, and with an anxious hope, that his learned friend would propose a substitute for the letter tax, which he condemned; but so far from pointing out any other source of revenue to meet the large outlay, whenever the learned gentleman came to that point, he went off into general declamation upon the principles of political economy and Free Trade. Now it ought to be borne in mind, that as far as the Resolutions of the House of Commons went, the House had done every thing that could be desired, still Steam came not to our shores, and those persons who had applied their minds to a consideration of this subject, were compelled to confess, that the difficulty of carrying into effect the Resolutions of the House, was a financial difficulty. In attempting to grapple with this part of the question the framers of the Resolution most carefully considered the different sources from which a return could be expected, and unwilling to go to Parliament or the Court, with a string of Resolutions merely expressive of disappointment, it became their duty to come forward with a distinct and special proposal, for the purpose of endeavouring to meet the only obstacle, which appeared to them to delay the establishment of Steam Communication with England. With this view the 4th Resolution was framed, and the learned gentleman who moved it, gave substantial reasons for its justice and expediency. Captain D. had not heard one syllable from his Honorable friend Mr. A. D. Campbell or from the learned Advocate-General which either disapproved the arguments of the learned mover, or weakened their force; and he, Capt. D., must say, that considering the talents of his learned friend, and the consideration he had given to this particular subject, he did look for some distinct proposal on his part, which would supply the place of the Resolution be opposed. If the letter tax were abandoned, this meeting would be pledged to an opinion, which they refused to be compelled to justify, and the Court of Directors would receive the memorial as a mere abstract opinion upon the Steam question, by the Inhabitants of Madras. Captain D. still hoped, that gentlemen on the opposite side would, in condemning the proposition now before the Meeting, at least come forward with a plan to overcome the difficulty which both sides agreed in deploring. Such a plan was not to be found in the speech of his Honorable friend who began with Sir Josiah Child and ended with the fable of the old Fox. The relation of this fable reminded Capt. D. of a shipmate of his who once made a venture, on one of his voyages to the Coast of Guinea, in an article but little suited to the climate, for it consisted of a bale of red night caps. In proceeding from the shore into the country the dealer in night-caps got tired, pulled out of the bale one of his caps, put it on, and went to sleep. He was soon awakened by a noise and chattering in the trees, and looking up, to his sore dismay, perceived that the monkeys had opened his bale and every one of them in imitation of him had on a cap. No inducement could prevail on the monkeys to part with their new head-dress, till in a fit of despair the sailor took off his cap and threw it at them, in an instant every monkey returned the compliment, doffed their caps and threw them at the sailor. Now, Sir, said (Capt. D. let us imitate the sailor, and if this letter-tax be our last cap let us throw it at the House of Commons, who knows what may be the result?

Mr. OUCHTERLONY briefly observed that there was one remarkable deficiency in the arguments of those who had spoken in support of this resolution. The resolution pretended to cover portion of the expenses of Steam Navigation between the two countries, but it had been entirely omitted to shew that the prohibitory enactment sought for was likely to secure that end. The only approach to it, was an assumption by the learned mover, that so low a rate might be established as 8 annas for each single letter, when correspondence would not be scared by the expense from that channel, but this was so purely speculative that it was impossible the meeting should base any proposition upon it. To shew that no calculation upon the present extent of correspondence could reasonably be taken to sanction a measure like that proposed, he would simply allude to the instance of commercial letters—he assumed them at a proportion of about one-third of the general correspondence, and pointed out that their number would undergo these considerable reductions that, whereas at present sailing vessels offered repeated opportunities of communication in the course of the month, which were regularly availed of, these multiplied letters would become condensed into the one monthly steam despatch, and, if these monthly packets became fixed, regular and sure, the considerable item of duplicates would no longer be required. He confined himself to this point, independent of other considerations, because he did not consider that a case had been made out by the supporters of this resolution, and that, without any data before them to warrant the assumption embraced by it the meeting could not consistently come to its adoption.

Mr. D. ELIOT referring to Mr. A. D. Campbell's observation, that it was needless to use compulsory means to force correspondence into the new channel, until, at least, it was found on trial, after the communication had been established, that people did not voluntarily make use of it—or something to that effect, said—“I beg the Meeting to consider what would be reasonable if instead of the Honorable Company, we were applying to a body of the Private Merchants to undertake the project now contemplated, suggesting to them that besides the direct advantage to their own concerns likely to result from it, they would be sure to obtain a great return from postage, as might be seen by estimates we had prepared from the Post Office statement. Would it not be reasonable for the merchant to say—‘Your estimate promises well—but they are estimates after all and we cannot safely reckon upon them, unless you will agree and bind yourselves to send all your letters by this channel and no other.’ Would it be reasonable for us to say, ‘Oh no, make a trial first.’”

Mr. CARON in reply stated, that the question before the meeting was—not whether the speculation would or would not be a profitable one as supposed by the Gentleman who spoke third (Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL) and therefore it would not be enough to wait to see the result before the tax was imposed, but the question was how to shew to the authorities in England that a revenue would arise. It was therefore necessary to begin by showing it, in order to get your Petition favourably entertained.

In respect to the Trade Laws quoted by his learned friend (Mr. NOTION) Mr. CARON said that they were quite beside the question before the meeting; it was not what would be most beneficial to trade but how a revenue might be obtained. The absurd trade laws were abrogated because they were found to be worthless, but the Post Office laws were preserved, because they were found essential to the revenue. He here entered into a calculation in answer to Mr. OUCHTERLONY's observation, to shew that by multiplying the communication between two places within a given time you multiplied most greatly the correspondence. Having answered the foregoing objections, he pressed upon the Meeting the propriety of adopting the Resolutions for the reasons mentioned in his opening speech and for this additional one, the importance of securing the hearty concurrence of the Court of Directors to the grand object, and for the purpose of accelerating the accomplishment of it.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL in explanation said, that his learned friend had entirely misunderstood him, perhaps from the defective manner in which he had expressed himself. He had expressly pointed out the source whence the expense was to be made good, viz. postage and prices on passages to be fixed by the Government. He differed from his learned friend, Mr. CARON, solely in regard to making it compulsory to send letters by Steamers. It was he (Mr. CAMPBELL) who advocated the cause of free trade and his opponents who did the contrary, for he wished to leave it quite optional with the parties to send their letters, as well as to convey their persons, by steam and sailing ships as each individual might find most inconvenient, and it was because those who advocated the proposed Resolution wished to revive exploded doctrines by placing restrictions upon sailing ships, and to confine the conveyance of letters to the particular channels of steamers, that the arguments used by his learned friend the Advocate-General became applicable to them, in as much as they desired by law to force, contrary to individual interests, that which is best regulated by them. When the division was about to take place Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL observed that he saw some natives who did not understand English—he did not object to any one voting who understood the question at issue, but such as really were not aware of the precise question, he submitted could not be allowed to vote.

Major CRISP rose, and in addressing the Meeting after the reply, begged to be allowed to say, that no measure in his opinion could possibly tend more to mar the prosperity and cripple the resources of the Steam Communication than the passing of the fourth Resolution. Compulsory enactments have always the effect of defeating their own ends by grasping at too much, based upon its own merits the projected Steam Establishment must commend itself for preference upon its suitableness and dispatch; and will itself compel the community to commit all its weightiest interests, political, commercial, and domestic, to its exclusive conveyance. But if it be attempted to force the whole Indian correspondence into the one expensive channel, it cannot but fail; in most cases correspondence will be abridged; in some it will be altogether suppressed. And we shall find that the few who can afford to take advantage of this mode of communication to the fullest, will not compensate for the many who are able to avail themselves of it only to a very limited extent.

It appears to me that the Resolution hits the right nail but not upon the head. It is agreed that extraordinary means are required to defray the charges to be incurred. And it is equally agreed that the chief source of their supply should be by tax. Let it be by a tax—but let it be by a free and not a forced one. Let it be as heavy as the conscience of any compulsionist can allow upon the steam line of communication. It will draw a maximum of revenue from all parties; for all are deeply interested in its steady maintenance. But at the same time leave the sea channels open to receive the tributary streams to draw in all those communications, which it matters not whether two, three, or four months be occupied in their transmission and more especially to perpetuate to all the humbler and underpaid exiles from their home the privilege of writing to their father's land. Tax this too—if steam need a protective duty for its support—but tenderly and discreetly. By this the gain is twofold. We grasp a double lever and work double tides. We have one net for the large fishes, and another for the little fry, and the proceeds of the latter are fairly taken as an offset against any deficiency of the former. For it must be borne in mind that a law which prohibits the sailing ships from carrying packets extinguishes a source of gratuitous profit to the Post Office; and effects it too without any equivalent, (right as it was) if I am correct in my presentiment that it will abridge the quantity of correspondence by leaving both lines of access to Britain open and unembarrassed, and allotting the amount of postage upon each with the discreetest legislative wisdom, both modes of communication will harmonize and concentrate their efforts. They will unite the utmost possible advantage to the public with the completest indemnity for the cost and maintenance of the Steam establishments.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL rose again merely to suggest, at the instance of a military friend near him, that if this Resolution should be carried, it would be more desirable to exempt from the operation of the measure which it contemplates, the letters of the European soldiers to their families at home, between whom it would otherwise bar all communication. To this observation it was admitted by all present, that the privilege as to soldiers' letters would not in the slightest manner be affected by the measure in contemplation. Just as the division was taking place, we overheard several gentlemen say it was not the tax that was objected to, but the prohibitory clause.

The meeting then divided.

(Amongst the minority were a great many natives, and it was stated that many of them did not fully comprehend the purport of the Division.)

[This Resolution having been rejected, the next Resolution became the IV. Resolution.]

IV. That it is the opinion of this Meeting that Point de Galle in the Island of Ceylon is the most eligible place for the arrival and departure of Steam vessels to and from the Red Sea: as independently of its central position, the voyage between that port and the Red Sea is more practicable throughout the year, than between the Red Sea and any other port in India.

Captain DALRYMPLE moved the 5th Resolution, and stated that, with the exception, all Naval men were in favour of Point de Galle.

V. That in the opinion of this Meeting the projected Establishment of a Company for carrying on a regular communication by Steam between Marseilles, Genoa, Naples and Alexandria, in conjunction with the Rail Road, which is stated to be in progress between Cairo and Suez, cannot fail to create an active commercial intercourse between continental Europe and India; and to afford a quick, easy and economical conveyance for passengers between the two countries which will enhance the importance, and eventually diminish the charge of completing the Steam Communication between Suez and India.

Mr. D. ELLIOTT seconded the Resolution.

Mr. NORTON, as to Point de Galle being the depôt, expressed himself as opposed to it, not being satisfied by sufficient information as to its being feasible or even practicable—though it might be so;—but his main objection was that it precluded unanimity with the other Presidencies, the inhabitants of which with a view to one common and united appeal from India had renounced all advocacy of local objects.

Mr. SCOTT proposed the 6th Resolution, which was seconded by Mr. ACWORTH and carried unanimously.

VI. That it is expedient to forward Petitions to both Houses of Parliament; and Memorials to the President of the India Board, and to the Honorable the Court of Directors; embodying the Resolutions of this Meeting, and praying that the Resolutions of the Select Committee of the House of Commons may be carried into effect.

THE PETITION.

To the Honorable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the several persons whose names are hereto subscribed, being Inhabitants of Madras, in the East Indies.

SHREWETH,—That the British population of this part of India, have been for a long time impressed with the conviction that nothing will tend so materially to develop the resources of India, to improve her people, to advance her general welfare, and to secure to the crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the integrity of its Empire over India, as the rapid and continued intercourse between the two countries by means of steam.

That this impression has not suddenly arisen, but has been one of gradual and steadily increasing growth, in which the native population has during these latter years participated, that the sincerity of this impression, both British and native, has been proved by the large voluntary subscriptions, which have from time to time been made, whenever a prospect of accomplishing this great object presented itself.

That the Government in India, no less than the people, have been anxiously desirous for the establishment of Steam Communication between the two countries, and that Lord William Bentinck, the Governor-General, both individually and in Council, zealously supported the project in 1833, and subsequently declared, "that its advantages were so great in all its direct and indirect consequences, that in his opinion it would be cheaply bought at any price."

That the public of this Presidency have read with feelings of unmixed satisfaction, the resolutions which were passed by the Select Committee of your Honorable House in 1834, with regard to Steam Communication between England and India, but they regret that no effectual measures have yet been taken for its regular establishment in conformity with such Resolutions.

That your Petitioners, under the impression that the delay in carrying into effect the said Resolutions, have arisen from the large outlay which the undertaking was calculated to involve, have applied themselves to an examination of the estimates which were submitted to the Committee of your Honorable House, and find that the price of coals in India therein mentioned is greatly overrated, inasmuch as they are stated to be from eighty (80) to one hundred and forty (140) shillings per ton, whereas the price of coals has been at Madras, during the past five years, upon an average less than thirty (30) shillings per ton, and this price, your Petitioners are assured is more likely to fall than to rise.

That your Petitioners submit, that owing to the reduction in the consumption of fuel and other advantages, resulting from the improvements in Steam Machinery, there are solid grounds for believing that by proper arrangements, the expense attending the establishment of periodical Steam Communication, may be reduced greatly below the estimates, with reference to which the Resolutions of the Select Committee of your Honorable House were framed.

That with a view of covering a portion of that expense, your Petitioners submit that it will be proper, so soon as the monthly Steam Packets shall be established, that Legislative enactments should be passed, prohibiting, subject to certain necessary limitations for the purposes of trade, the transmission of letters, or parcels, below a certain weight by any other conveyance than these packets.

That your Petitioners believe that Point de Galle in the Island of Ceylon is the most eligible place for the arrival and departure of Steam Vessels to and from the Red Sea, as independently of its central position, a voyage between that port and the Red Sea, is more practicable throughout the year, than between the Red Sea and any other port in India; but your Petitioners with the greatest confidence submit all details to the wisdom of your Honorable House, His Majesty's Ministers, and the East India Company, confining themselves to the humble but earnest prayer, that your Honorable House will be pleased to adopt such measures as may seem requisite for carrying into effect the said Resolutions of the Select Committee of your Honorable House.

Mr. TURNBULL proposed the 7th Resolution, which was seconded by Colonel Hanson and carried unanimously.

VII. That the Petitions* and Memorials now read be adopted, and that the Chairman be requested to forward the same: the Memorial to the Honorable Court through the Governor in Council with an earnest application that he will be pleased to recommend the same in the strongest manner to their favourable consideration.

Mr. ACWORTH proposed the 8th Resolution, which was seconded in a very neat and appropriate speech by Ragavah Charryer, and carried unanimously.

VIII. That the Chairman be requested to convey the thanks of the meeting to the Right Honorable Lord Glenelg for his powerful support of Steam Communication between England and India in 1834, with a request that his Lordship will be pleased to present and support the Petition to the House of Lords: and that the Petition to the House of Commons be transmitted to W. Crawford, Esq. M. P. for the city of London, with a similar request.

Mr. CATON proposed the 9th Resolution, which was seconded by Capt. DALRYMPLE, and carried unanimously.

IX. That Captain GRINDLAY be appointed the Agent in London, for forwarding the object of the Meeting, and that a Committee be appointed to draw up and forward the necessary instructions, for his guidance.

Captain DALRYMPLE in seconding the Resolution, that Captain Grindlay should be appointed Agent to the Meeting in London, Captain D. did so with great pleasure. He had known Captain Grindlay for a great many years, as a gentleman who from early habits, from taste, and as a matter of business took a great interest in all that related to India. He was employed by the Court of Directors on various occasions, and had charge of the Mysore Prince, who lately visited England. Captain D. mentioned a very interesting circumstance which had been communicated to him by Captain Grindlay. The King of Oude sent home a learned Native who was introduced to most of the London Savans by Captain G* and by them pronounced to be a man of excellent abilities, and possessing a very competent knowledge of astronomy. His object in visiting England was to procure instruments and assistants for an observatory to be erected at Lucknow by H. M. the King of Oude. Captain D. said his object in mentioning these particulars, was to show how completely mixed up with Indian affairs Captain Grindlay was.

Proposed by Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL, seconded by Mr. Underwood and carried unanimously.

X. That this Meeting view with much satisfaction the active exertions of Mr. Thomas Waghorn in establishing himself in Egypt for the purpose of facilitating the transit of passengers, parcels and letters between Suez and Alexandria, and earnestly recommend his establishment to the favourable consideration of the Indian public.

Proposed by Mr. McDOLLAND, seconded by Mr. CATON and carried unanimously.

XI. That a subscription be opened for the purpose of enabling those members of the community who have not already subscribed to the Steam Fund to contribute means towards furthering the objects of this Meeting—and that Messrs. Arbutnot and Co. be requested to receive donations.

These Resolutions having been put and carried, the Honorable Mr. Sullivan expressed his pain at the difficulty of his situation, in being called upon as chairman to sign the Memorial to the Court of Directors, and to the Board of Contoul—and also his inability, both individually and officially, knowing as he did the impossibility of burdening the revenue with any new or additional charge, to be a party in signing the Petition or pursuing any measure which had for its object, directly or indirectly increasing the expenses of the State, without pointing out the source from whence such additional expense could be met.

Upon which Mr. CATON moved and Sir ROBERT COMYN seconded the Resolution.

XII. That the thanks of this meeting be offered to Mr. Sullivan for his arduous and able conduct in the chair—with an expression of the extreme regret they felt at his inability to carry the Resolutions into effect.

Carried unanimously.

Mr. SULLIVAN having left the chair, it was moved by Mr. CATON and seconded by Mr. Sullivan

* With the omission of the prohibition Clause.

XIII. That the Honorable Sir ROBERT COMYN be requested to take the Chair—which he accordingly did.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL proposed and Mr. ASHTON seconded the motion.

XIV. That a Committee be appointed consisting of Mr. Cator, Captain Dalrymple and Mr. D. Elliott, to carry into effect the objects of the Meeting.

Mr UNDERWOOD moved and Mr. A. D. Campbell seconded the motion.

XV. That the thanks of this Meeting be given to Sir Robert Comyn for his conduct in the chair.—Madras Conservative.

BOMBAY STEAM MEETING.

At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Bombay, held this 16th day of March, 1836.

SIR CHARLES MALCOLM, in the chair

It was unanimously—

RESOLVED—That this meeting being deeply impressed with the importance of taking prompt measures to attract the attention of the authorities at home to the present state of the question of Steam Navigation between England and India, consider it most expedient to petition Parliament, as well as the Honorable the Court of Directors, for the adoption of further measures for the regular establishment of Steam Navigation between the two countries.

RESOLVED—That though, after the experiments made with a view to ascertain the most desirable route for the proposed communication, there can be no doubt in the opinion of this meeting as to which should be adopted, as well with regard to economy as despatch, yet to divest the question of a local character, and to unite more cordially with the sister Presidencies in the efforts they are making for the same object, it is not expedient at present to allude to that branch of the subject.

RESOLVED—That the Petition intended for the Honorable the Court of Directors be forwarded to the Right Honorable the Governor in Council, with a respectful request that he will be pleased, in transmitting it to the authorities at Home, to give it his favourable consideration, and that if possible it may be despatched by the Hugh Lindsay Steamer, which leaves on the 18th instant.

RESOLVED—That the petition of the Meeting to the House of Commons be forwarded to Sir John C. Holt, to be presented by him to that body as soon, and in such manner, either in conjunction with the Petitions from Madras and Calcutta, or otherwise, as he may deem most advisable to secure the object of the Petitioners.

THE PETITION.

To the Honorable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The Humble Petition of the undersigned Natives and European Inhabitants of Bombay SHeweth,—That four Petitioners, long and deeply impressed with the importance of establishing a rapid communication between India and England, have exerted themselves for several years past to promote what appeared to them to be the most feasible plan which has been proposed for that purpose.

That the experiments which have hitherto been made under the immediate auspices of the Bombay Government have, as your Hon'ble House must be aware, been attended with complete success, and the possibility of keeping up frequent and regular intercourse between the two countries by means of steam vessels has been fully proved.

That as no such undertaking can be expected to succeed in a country circumstanced as this is, unless the powerful support of Government be extended to it, at least for a considerable time to come, your Petitioners have been much gratified to learn that the subject had been brought under the consideration of your Hon'ble House, and that the Committee appointed to inquire into it had declared by their Report of the 14th July 1834 that it was expedient that measures should be immediately taken for the establishment of a Steam Communication by the Red Sea.

That after such a declaration your Petitioners deem it unnecessary to insist upon the importance of expediting in every possible way the accomplishment of the plans which have been suggested for the above purpose. Yet with the prospect, which becomes daily more apparent, of a vast increase in the trade between the two countries, they may be permitted briefly to advert to a few of the many great advantages which may be expected to flow from such a measure. Depending as the trade of India chiefly does on British vessels for the means of transport, the importance of early intelligence in regulating the required supply, as well as for affording information of the state of the European market, cannot, it will be obvious, be too highly estimated; and the present year in which the increase of the staple commodity—Cotton—has been so remarkable may be cited as a striking instance of the benefit which in a commercial point of view it could not fail to produce.

That the Political no less than the Commercial interests of both countries would be thereby promoted,—and above all, it would materially advance the great end, which England has in view in retaining her dominions over India, of extending the blessings of civilization among the numerous population of this great empire while it would likewise contribute in no small degree to the comfort and happiness of that large class of His Majesty's subjects, whose avocations condemn them to a long sojourn in this country, with the consequent pain of separation from their friends and connexions in England.

Under all these circumstances your Petitioners confidently trust that your Hon'ble House will not fail to give the subject all the consideration which its importance so fully merits.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that such further measures may be taken for improving and establishing the means of rapid communication between India and England by steam as to the wisdom of your Hon'ble House may seem most expedient.—Bombay Gazette.

ANNUAL DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES TO THE HINDOO COLLEGE STUDENTS.

We were highly gratified by witnessing the annual distribution of prizes to the Hindoo College students. The exhibition took place at Government House, an arrangement, we believe, which is in accordance with ancient custom, and it is one of which we highly approve; no doubt it has an extremely good effect upon the native community, marking so distinctly as it does the interest which is taken by the Government, and more especially by the new Governor-General, in the progress of education amongst them. Lord Auckland himself distributed the prizes, and expressed himself highly pleased with the whole scene,—a feeling indeed which was shared by all present, but apparently by none more completely than by the Honorable Misses Eden, who appeared much delighted with the exhibition. The progress of the boys is extremely creditable to the professor of Literature, Captain D. L. Richardson, and to the different teachers: we are happy to hear that under their admirable management, and well chosen plan of education, the number of students is daily increasing to such an extent, that there is now scarcely room for the crowd of youths who throng the building of the Hindoo College.

It is in truth a most cheering sight to witness the struggles which the natives are now making to emancipate themselves from the dark ignorance which has hitherto surrounded them, and they owe a deep debt of gratitude to the beneficence of the Government which has afforded them such ample opportunities for educating themselves.

Of the many recitations it would be very difficult to say which was the best. Some of these pieces which were delivered with most propriety of emphasis and accent were those that were heard to the least advantage. Alexander's Feast and Collins's Ode to the Passions, both extremely difficult to deliver with any effect even in a quiet room with attentive listeners, were greatly injured by the buzz of the crowd and the creaking of chairs on the marble floor. The humorous pieces were most effective, because they were the most eagerly listened to, and people employed themselves in attending to what was going on instead of in talking and moving about. The story of the Chameleon, by a little boy of the name of Govind Chunder Dutt, was the first piece in the order of time, and it was received with great applause. The audience were naturally delighted with the pure English intonation and spirited action of the little reciter. The fine lines on the burial of Sir John Moore came next, and were given by a very young boy named Muthy Lal Bysack in a way that showed that he understood what he delivered. Some laughable verses about the inappropriateness of various surnames to the men that bear them, (in Horace Smith's style,) were very waggishly recited by Cally Kisto Ghose. When he came to the line

Mr. Metcalf's would run from a cow—

there was a laugh at the introduction of that familiar name. "The map of Ross," a passage from Pope, was recited by Anund Kisan Bose in a tone of voice of great sweetness and with perfect propriety of accent, but the noise prevented him from being heard except by those immediately near him. Dick's Soliloquy was animated, and Govind Kisan Dutt's delivery of Othello's Address to the Senate, was given with truth, and accuracy of accent and feeling. Perhaps the serious piece that pleased most was a scene from Shylock. The Jew was particularly well personated. The Newcastle Apothecary, by Rajnarain Dutt, was the last of the recitation, but by no means the least in merit. It was extremely well received.

We were glad to see such a crowd of distinguished visitors, male and female, amongst whom we noticed almost all the Members of Council, the Judges of the Supreme Court and various natives of rank.—Hurharu.

DR. HENDERSON.

We grieve to have to announce the death of Dr. Henderson at Loodianah on the 12th of March. His remains were interred at that station on the evening of the following day.

The great exposure to which he had been subjected on his late journey to the confines of Chinese Tartary and to Cashmere, had laid the foundation of an illness of a very severe nature. Soon after his return to the Sutledge, fever attacked him, and though every aid was afforded to him, the hopes entertained of his ultimate recovery were far from sanguine. His sufferings from fever appear to have been latterly very severe, and even when free from febrile symptoms his nervous system was found so terribly shaken and the debility was so excessive, that nature could make no effort to rally, and exhaustion subsided into dissolution.

To those like ourselves who have in any way been connected with the subject of this sketch, in forwarding any public measure, this event will be a source of deep sorrow. The struggles and anxieties in which the prosecution of all plans of improvement are involved in a country and state of society like that of India, cannot but invest the connexion in public life with much of a feeling of private affection, and thus, we are sure, that the death of Dr. Henderson will be mourned by many as a heavy and lasting loss. The constitution may be cold, the disposition may be rendered callous or may be schooled by design, but man cannot "forget himself to stone." The feelings

"Cannot lean by themselves, cannot flourish alone"

but will cling as we advance in years to the associate in public life, with more lasting, if less intense regret, than the severing of the ties of the affections produce, at a period of more sanguine hopes, and more buoyant temperament.

Though the last hour of this able and enterprising being was cheered by the friendship and attentions of Captain Wade and other Loodianah friends, it must have been humiliating to his high spirit, to reflect, that the order for his continuance under military arrest for crossing the frontier without leave, was still in force, and as a consciousness of a probable termination of life's useful fever, stole over the mind of the suffering patient, it must have been deprived of the satisfaction of reflecting, that the fruits of his late enterprise and dangers, had not been secured to the public, for the preparation of his notes for the press had newly been commenced upon, and the state of the memoranda composed on his journey, was feelingly remarked upon by himself as such, as to be unsuceptible of publication by any hand but his own

"The journey," says Captain Wade, in a letter which we have been permitted to see, "which he had lately performed, would, had his life been spared, have enabled him to contribute a valuable store of information regarding a part of Asia almost entirely unknown to us, and when the Attock is as well known as the Ganges, it will not be forgotten; that he was the first who followed the course of that river from the confines of Yarkund to the plains of Peshawur at the sacrifice of his valuable life."

During a residence in India, which cannot have fallen much short of twenty years, his active mind seems to have been ever devoted to objects of national interest, and for many years past, to have been unremittingly employed in introducing measures of direct public utility. It was at Calpee, we believe, that Dr. Henderson, first engaged in mercantile speculations and then prosecuted them keenly till the Bhurtapore war. Investments of ghee, catching elephants, supplies of horses, and banking, all occupied his attention; but the improvement of the cotton of upper India was the more favorite scheme, and employed his pen in a correspondence with the talented Holt Mackenzie. He endeavoured too, to introduce the spinning jenny at Coel, but, without success, and was, after much unsuccessful speculation in Indigo and cotton, driven in 1828, to Van Diemen's Land, with shattered health and in embarrassed circumstances.

Since his return to India, Agra has been the chief scene of his labours. The Medical Retiring Fund, a Medical Library, the publication of an English, Persian and Hindsee newspaper, the remodelling of the Orphan School, the establishment of the Agra Bank, the attempt to cause the existence of a Branch Horticultural Society, the formation of the Agra Public Library, the erection of an extensive Corn Mill, are all schemes, which either emanated from his fertile brain, or were the objects of his anxious attention. His endeavours in 1834 to erect a new town near Landour, created much sensation, and lent additional impulse to the awakening public spirit of Upper India. His journey to Little Thibet, Cashmere and to the Indian Caucasus, would have filled up an important chasm in the geography of Central Asia, had that life been spared by disease, which had eluded the treachery of native chiefs, and the violence of highland robbers. Still he managed amid all his difficulties and dangers, to insure the introduction of the silk-worm of Little Thibet on this side of the Sutledge, and as yet with every prospect of success, by which a most important advantage will be conferred, alike on the manufactures of Lahore and Multan, which are at present supplied with silk from Bokhara, at a risk and expense of overland carriage for 700 miles.

It is gratifying to know that Baron Hugel and Mr. Vigne, with that generous feeling which always accompanies real personal merit, speak in the highest terms of Dr. Henderson's enterprise as a traveller.

Whatever were the talents of our deceased friend, and that they were of no common order all must admit, they were unremittingly devoted to the public good. His character was that of restless energy, which forms the chief element of a master mind. His thoughts flowed too quick upon him to allow him to think as soundly as rapidly. The machine of his mind might occasionally be said to want a regulator. A clog was required to retard the rapidity of movement on an inclined plain. He wanted but more caution and judgment, to have stood forth in the light of a public man of the highest character. He would not however have then sown the seeds of so much improvement; if he had perfected more, he would have laid the foundation of less, and it is after all of more lasting importance to the human race to facilitate and stimulate the progress of the mind, than to give birth to a few perfect measures of moderate utility. Whatever be the blemishes which a sterner critic may discover in

Dr. Henderson's mental confirmation, they were at least but those

"Faults which daring Genius owes Half to the ardour which its birth bestows;"

and in some measure may be viewed as the very character by which he held an existence, devoted to the good of his fellow creatures, and capable of advancing the happiness and improvement of his race.

The following extract from the last letter Dr. Henderson wrote to Agra, will be as interesting, as it is a characteristic notice of his travels,

"You would hear from—that I had again returned, or rather was on my return, to civilized society. I intended to have remained some short time and to have opened a correspondence with you from Lahore; but news having reached that I was directed to be placed in arrest on crossing the frontier, I hastened to Lodeeanah, knowing well how anxious you would be to print my court martial. Under various circumstances I was enabled to make my way to Ludak, where circumstances compelled me to intimate to the Raja my being an Englishman. Desirous of obtaining an offensive and defensive treaty with our governor, the Rajah foolishly thought that by delaying me he would effect his object. In some measure aware of his plans, I attempted to make my escape, but was overtaken 4 marches from Ludak, where refusing to surrender, I got first severely mangled, and after being disarmed I received several tulwar wounds and other injuries. I was consequently declared a prisoner for 3 months and was only set at liberty by Zerour Sing, on the Sekhs entering Ludak. After a vain attempt to make my way to Andegan, the season being far advanced and my pecuniary resources expended, I proceeded to Little Thibet, where I was received with great kindness by Amedshah. Here I was again prevented from following the direct route towards Kuskur, by the state of the countries through which I should have had to pass, while at the same time I was likely to be confined in the country during the winter also, the passes having been declared impracticable. I contrived, however, to make my way to Cashmere, where I arrived the same day and hour with Baron Hugel from Jum-moo. After seeing a little of the valley I descended the Jelim, and crossed the Attock, entering the European country with a view to penetrating into Kuskur. My assumed character of a holy Syed, enabled me to pursue that dangerous route; but unfortunately on reaching the pass, by which I was to have entered Kuskur, I found it closed, but a few days previous to my arrival. After being detained and plundered by a brother Syed, a chief in the territory of Ghuren Khan, I made my way rather miserably to Peshawur, where I was kindly received and my wants supplied by Mr. Avelable. From this, I proceeded to Lahore, conceiving my expedition terminated at Peshawur. The Maharaj shewed me great attention and appeared most anxious to detain me, but as I have said before, knowing the deep and earnest anxiety you must have felt for me, particularly for the court martial, I hastened to relieve your suspense by proceeding to Lodeeanah, where I am now under arrest. I have found things somewhat different from what I had understood. It appeared that I was merely called off by the Governor for an explanation, when the C. C. (I suspect provincial one) he being the channel of communication, likewise directed that I should be placed in arrest; notwithstanding this I felt much flattered by receiving a kindly welcome from all Lodeeanah, and you may almost fancy how much I enjoy the change from abject misery to plenty and comfort.

Yours very sincerely,

JOHN HENDERSON."

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

MRS. LEACH'S BENEFIT.

If Mrs. Leach could have any doubt as to the estimation in which the public of Calcutta hold her endeavours to please, her mind must have been completely set at ease on Tuesday night. The Theatre was crowded to excess; and all the most distinguished persons were present, with the exception of the Misses Eden, one of whom it was understood was too much indisposed to attend.

Of the performance we have not room to say all we could wish. Taken as a whole, it was, we are told, one of the most successful essays of our band of English amateurs. The representative of William Tell never, in our humble opinion, appeared to more advantage than in the hardy mountaineer, the soul-stricken Swiss. His scene with Melctal, the poor old man whose eyes had been torn out, was highly wrought and drew from the fairer portion of the audience the purest proof that the tenderest chords of sympathy had been touched. Equally affecting—because equally effective and true to nature—were the scenes with Gessler, when the monster, with a refinement of cruelty almost fabulous, imposes upon Tell the chance of killing his child, and attends and directs the cruel ordeal. But it was not only in the struggle with his feelings as a father that Proteus elicited the admiration of his auditors:—his denunciations of the tyrant—his gallant bearing when chained and surrounded by the myrmidons of the Austrian Bailiff, and his energetic apostrophes to liberty and the political charms of his native hills, were all brilliant specimens of histrionic power, and drew down, as they merited, thunders of applause.

Next to Tell, the crack character of the evening was that of the boy Albert. The little fellow seemed to be complete master not only of the letter of his part, but of the spirit which is supposed to animate the highland boy. We should be sorry, for obvious reasons, to be instrumental, by any superabundance of praise, in forcing forward talents already sufficiently precocious, but we must say that, with careful training and due attention to his "parts of speech," we think our little hero may become a great ornament to the stage. He has "a good sprag memory" as our friend Sir Hugh Evans would say, and an easy confidence.

The revolting character of Gessler was played with excellent judgment by a gentleman whose endeavours we have more than once had occasion to applaud. No amateur understands his author better, or "makes himself up" as the stage cant has it, for the character he assumes. He was well supported by a rising amateur in the character of Sarnem.

Anneli, by a debutante, was a very creditable essay. We shall be able to form a better judgment of her powers when we see her in a more important character. Mr. Hely prettily sang a very pretty serenade, and the Secretary to the Theatre, in an entire new line of character, both astonished and amused the auditory. Melctal is quite unworthy of the distinguished talents of the amateur who played Macduff; but an amateur imbued with the genuine dramatic spirit does not estimate a character by its prominence or extent. He played the part feelingly and effectively. The new scenery was beautiful, especially the Seneschal's apartment in the castle—the Lake of Lucerne and the field of Gratts.

In the after-piece, Mrs. Leach played a lively little character in the course of which she assumed three other parts. She was much applauded as a little drummer, and a great greedy-goose of a boy. The success of the farce (which by the way was not over until the "small hours ayont the twal") was mainly promoted by the Secretary, who played Old Wilton with all the humour and pliancy which were wont to characterise his earliest efforts. We hope that he intends to persevere in the new course he has evidently commenced. The time requisite for the changes of Mrs. Leach's costume gave two or three of the amateurs an opportunity of displaying their talent for gag. The delicate subjects of improvisation were the patent medicines occasionally advertised in the papers—written about in M. U. M. and copied with gusto into Mr. Tandy's Ukhar.—Englishman.

ITALIAN OPERA.

ITALIANA IN ALGERI.

The Italiana in Algeri was the first entire Italian Opera ever performed in Calcutta, and on the good old principle on revient toujours a ses premieres amours alone, we should feel bound to welcome its re-appearance; but the piece has in itself so much to recommend it in the shape of amusing incident, lively conceit, and truly graceful music, that no appeals to constancy or to the recollection of by-gone love passages, on its behalf, are necessary. This Opera is a good specimen of the genuine Italian Buffa, and has fully as much of the simplicity of the middle ages as of the gorgeous embroidery of the modern style. The two Duets Se inclinassi and Ai Supplici are such as even the admirers of those respectable perriwig-pated personages Pacini, Paesello and Cimarosa, whom we may without offence designate the ancients, might approve of, although they may exclaim against the innovations of the profane practitioners of the day, and lament the depravity of the reigning taste. The music of the Italiana abounds in highly expressive passages and melodies of a graceful and finished character—its general style is pleasing and appropriate, and its harmonies are sufficiently rich without being too elaborate. The unlearned ear is likely to carry away a greater number of impressions from this Opera, than from many others of higher pretension, and this we take to be a convincing proof of its excellence, at least if the canon of Dionysius, of Helicarnassus, that the end of every art is to please the million, be applicable to music.

In the execution, the Opera we thought rather flagged in the first Act—there was less of energy in the singers than we have been accustomed to note. This languor however disappeared in the second Act, which went off with as much spirit and success as any performance we have witnessed. The investiture of Kuimakan and Pappataci with the insignia of their respective orders created infinite merriment, and the latter after undergoing a species of confirmation very much akin to the justly celebrated swearing in at Highgate—took the oath and his seat (at a tempting looking feast, wherein oranges and Company's madeira were very conspicuous) under the salute due to his rank, consisting of a straggling volley from Isabella's marines.

This Opera afforded the public another opportunity of admiring the talent and wondering at the ability of the accomplished Amateur who has recently added so much to the attractions of the Opera here. This is the fourth Opera in which he has filled a principal part—in all of them with signal success! This indicates an extraordinary and very enviable aptitude of acquiring what to most people is passing difficult, if not impossible, of attainment. But the manner in which the undertaking is accomplished would almost lead one to suppose that this description of skill was intuitive. His opening air Languir per una bella was sung with great delicacy and tenderness—and in the Quintett in the second act, and the second Finale when he introduces the Chorus of Peppolacci—a movement equally remarkable for grace and originality—he was most successful. Schieroni was unusually nervous during the early scenes of the Opera, but she had fully recovered her self-possession in the second Act, and in her fine Rondo at the end she was entirely herself. Pizzoni was so enveloped in beard, turban, and fur, that his voice had no chance, it was lost in a wilderness of hair which every one knows is a bad conductor and suffocated under a mountain of maulin. We are really unable to say whether he sang well or ill, for the instant he turned his head his voice became inaudible. We wish he would mend his recitative, which is really a nondescript. It is neither the flesh of poetry, nor the fish of prose, nor yet the good red-herring of music—it is itself alone. Caesar is said to have expostulated with one who read something after the mode of Pizzoni's recitation—Si cantas male cantas, si legis cantas We wish our estimable basso would ponder this.

We were glad to perceive Lord Auckland and his family in the Theatre. The House was one of the best we have seen for some time.—Hurkaru.

BACCANALI DI ROMA.

We are unfortunate again in an accident which deprives us of the usual obliging and able assistance on which we have been so much accustomed to rely in Opera criticism. But as some notice of the performance will no doubt be expected by our musical readers, we proceed to report that GENERALI's serious opera the BACCANALI DI ROMA was the piece represented, and—we were sorry to observe—to a very thin house. The choice of day was doubly unfortunate, though this is not easily to be avoided, we believe during Lent. But as evil stars would have it, the day was also a Hindoo holiday—a conjunction ever ominous and of evil augury in the aspect of our theatrical houses, inasmuch as it too surely propels the jaded and centrifugal DITCHER at a tangent, off from his dull wheel's eternal orbit, into the adjacent realms of space and air. There was besides, we believe, another ill starred conjunction of the "superior houses" in the upper regions of Barrackpore, any thing but auspicious to the interests of the Opera; for not only did this hinder our poor artistes from profiting by a particular magnetic box-filling attraction which is said to be inherent in Vice Royalty, but the conjunction to which we allude further deprived the Opera of its accustomed countenance from some of its most distinguished and regular subscribers. But setting these particular causes of thin attendance aside, the artistes or managers of Opera affairs ought by this time to have learnt to take truer measures of English pretensions to musical knowledge and taste, than to venture on giving any Opera three times, however beautiful in itself, however complicated in its arrangement of parts, and difficult to be thoroughly appreciated and understood even by scientific ears. As a people it must be owned we are more nearly allied to Goths and Huns than it is always pleasant or safe to tell. The nations that are really musical come off a different tack. In England it is fashion alone that supports the Opera to this day; not one in a score of the pianco-humping Misses or flute-blowing Dandies who frequent the King's Theatre is capable of any remote approximation to understanding or even discerning the combinations of sound that vainly salute the portals of the Vandalic symposium. But to return to our own notions. Let no Opera, Oh! worthy managers! be performed thrice or even twice before our Calcutta audiences, unless your treasury is altogether independent, by means of a heavy subscription list, or receipts at the door. In India folks are to see an Opera as to see a Pantomime or Melodrama; not to hear and hear again sweet music until the stimulus and aid supplied to memory by associated dramatic action, enable one to get the melodies by heart, or even to attempt sotto voce one of Schieroni's rich low seconds to the screech of the quadrille leader's fiddle. Enough and too much of all this, as of the seven castles of Bohemia. Our say is short, for we have little to remark on the aforesaid third representation of the Baccanali except that the scant and cold audience could not fail to communicate its freezing influence to the performance, which accordingly did not go off quite so smooth as the second. The music of this Opera as given at the Chowringhee Theatre with its judicious substitutions and interpolations, we not only think extremely beautiful, but equal as a whole to any of the numerous pieces which our artistes have got up. We suppose it is fruitless to persevere in anathematizing an orchestra so perseveringly wrong as that of our Chowringhee Opera, and which never appears to become a whit better acquainted or more familiar with the music, from frequency of repetition. We shall therefore say no more on the old subjects of loudness; inattention to the singers; running of races with each other; trampling down the slow-coaches, Garate and his chorus. Knowing not what is to come next, or when! We shall not even put forth our customary good thing about panting time toiling in vain after Signors Catania and Pizzoni. All this and more we leave unsaid, and trust to the consciences of the culprit; and all that we shall say more, on the Baccanali is this, that Schieroni was in good voice and less nervous at starting than usual; that she sung her rondo in the second act with her usual taste and sweet expression, as also the entire of the music which she had to execute in duo with Ebuzio. Of the latter we must always feel that we ought to speak with reserve, as of an Amateur; although the extraordinary aptitude he has shown in this singular and difficult department of the Drama has almost deprived him of an Amateur's privilege to deprecate severity in criticism. His personation of the youthful Roman was elegantly perfect, and his execution of the music equal to the excellence of the second performance; no mean standard of praise.

We pass to a subject closely connected with the above, although having no other reference to the Baccanali in particular, than as this has served to remind us of the exceeding gratification we have derived from the performances of our estimable Italian Prima Donna and the duty we owe to her in return, of contributing our mite of Editorial persuasion to obtain for the talented Signora Schieroni a brimming benefit, on (as we understand) the 14th or 15th of April when she proposes to take her leave of us—alas that it must be so!—in the character of Ninetta in Rossini's very charming and popular Opera of the Gazza Ladra. In addition to the indispensable and always ready aid of Ebuza, we learn that Mr. Linton, Mr. Hamerton and others have pressed forward to strengthen the amateur corps, on this occasion, of which they have the success so warmly at heart—as who indeed has not, who knows the Signora? Mrs. Leach is engaged for the attractive part of Pipo, which her versatile talent will enable her to enact with very good general effect, after a little curtailment: Madame Nouveau is also engaged for the part of Lucia. Altogether the entertainment promises to be well worthy of public patronage; but were the bill of fare not half so promising, the popularity enjoyed by the much respected, the modest, and highly gifted Schieroni with the Musical World of Calcutta and all lovers of the stage, cannot fail of obtaining for her a full subscription list and an overflowing House. We subjoin an extract from the Bengal Herald, in the sentiments expressed by the writer of which we cordially agree; and we shall be truly happy if in any way our humble endeavours to promote the object we have all at heart, can be made of use to the talented lady whom we are unfortunately about to lose. Were it for nothing else but the unpretending liberality with which, as we learn, she withdrew her privilege of a benefit granted by the managing Committee in the favourable season, rather than involve her friends in disagreeable discussions with others—we must say the Signora deserves all the warmth of support which we rejoice to hear her subscription book is receiving individually and collectively from the gentlemen of the Italian Opera Committee.—Hurkatu.

THE SCHIERONI'S BENEFIT.

We refer with mournful feelings to the notification which intimates that we are soon to bid farewell, a long farewell we fear, to the most refined and delightful entertainment which this society has ever enjoyed. One more Opera of the series remains and after that our Italian Prima Donna alone, justly relying on her universal popularity, ventures on a Benefit Opera, (alas! the last that ever will be performed in Calcutta) an example which neither of her countrymen intend to imitate in consequence of the frightful expense which attends each representation of the Lyric Drama and the season of the year being so unpropitious for incurring such a risk. Our readers will naturally ask how this comes to pass, when they have seen the Opera well attended and have heard every where favorable opinions of it. The fact, however, is indisputable, as at the end of the present series, notwithstanding the liberal subscriptions thereto by almost all the elite of society, instead of having any profits to divide, the artistes find they have been exerting their talents for monthly compensation at so limited a ratio, as to be scarcely adequate to a respectable maintenance.

Under these circumstances alone we should have little doubt that such a favorite as Schieroni, whose high professional talents are associated with qualities which have won for her the esteem of all who know her, would secure her a bumper house; but on this occasion our Italian Prima Donna comes before the public with very extraordinary claims to their support. It will be in the recollection of most of our readers, that Signora Schieroni's Benefit was announced to take place several months ago, when the season and the usual fullness of the City of Palaces at that period were so auspicious to her success. The Signora in that instance generously withdrew her BENEFIT with a view to facilitate the arrangements of the Opera Committee, in a manner and under circumstances that elicited from them the warmest expressions of their approbation. Of course her subscribers on that occasion only felt themselves still more strongly bound to support her whenever the Benefit might take place, and we trust now that the opportunity offers, all those who in that instance did not happen to subscribe very liberally, will not hesitate to donate the amount of their subscriptions in favour of such an artiste, on such an occasion as that of her last benefit—and of the last Italian Opera in Calcutta. The public at large will doubtless come forward liberally; for they alone unfortunately have derived benefit from the exertions of the artistes in the creation and enjoyment of a taste for the Opera which has already produced a beneficial effect on the state of music here, that will increase and endure. Signora Schieroni, with talents which ought to have earned for her a fortune, and which have been acknowledged not only here but in some of the capitals of Europe and South America, by persons of the highest musical skill and taste, is now about to leave us, little, if at all, richer than she came here. This is melancholy enough in itself; but it would indeed be an eternal reproach to the community if her cause were made more lamentable by her failing on the occasion of her final Benefit to have a NUMBER HOUSE.

The Opera which Signora Schieroni has fixed on is the Gara Ladra, one which in itself would be most attractive, independent of her own claims to a generous support on this, her farewell performance in India. For our parts we feel that the pleasure we may derive from hearing her sing on this occasion with that expression and sweetness, which have so often enraptured us, will be damped by the consideration that we hear her probably for the last time. This will be the something bitter that will mar our perfect enjoyment of the performance.

— in medio de fonte leoporum
Surget amari aliquid. —

Still we hope a crowd will assemble in Chowringhee Theatre to manifest by their presence a generous sympathy in the approaching departure of our FAVORITE and to bid her a long farewell.—Bengal Herald.

SUPREME COURT.

STEVENS VERSUS HUME.

JUDGMENT.

SIR B. MALKIN.—This is a bill brought by the plaintiff, as sole brother and heir-at-law of Mary Hume, an Armenian Christian, inhabitant of Dacca, in respect of certain lands of which she died possessed, as it is alleged, of an estate in fee simple or other freehold estate of inheritance. The bill states that she made a will, and that will was inoperative by reason of her coverture and of no settlement having been made upon her marriage; and it further states that she devised these lands and large personal property under the will of Arratoon Michael as his executrix, devisee and residuary legatee. It also alleges that there are outstanding debts of Arratoon Michael, but to much less amount than the personal estate.

The bill is demurred to, and the demurrer would raise the general and very important question of the nature and tenure of the real estate held by Mary Hume. But there is a preliminary question which it also raises, whether, assuming the plaintiff to be right in the claim which he makes, he is also right in the remedy which he seeks; in other words, whether he shews any thing to make it necessary for him to have recourse to a Court of Equity; whether, if he is entitled to the lands, he cannot recover them at law; and whether, therefore, the bill is not a mere ejectment bill. If it be, it is unnecessary and undesirable to discuss the great question as to the property, in a case where the expression of our opinion would not really decide the rights of the parties. The preliminary question, therefore, must first be disposed of.

The only ground suggested, why the intervention of a Court of Equity is necessary, is the existence of the outstanding debts of Arratoon Michael. This is the whole obstacle to the complainant obtaining the principal relief he seeks at law: and the question, therefore, is, whether this really amounts to an obstacle. For it is clear that the minor points of relief that he seeks, the delivery up of title deeds, the appointment of a receiver, and granting of a writ of ne exeat regno, are not by themselves sufficient to support his claim in equity. To entitle himself to the first, he must recover possession at law, if there is no other obstacle to his so doing; the mere prayer for a receiver will not be granted in a conflict between the heir-at-law and devisee, (Jones v. Jones, 3 Min 161) and the application for a writ of ne exeat regno is also clearly applicable only to a case where he is otherwise entitled to equitable relief. The question, therefore, resolves itself entirely into the effect of the outstanding debts.

Now, it is plain, that the framers of this bill rest the claim of the complainant entirely on the operation of the English law, so the case was put in argument, and so it appears on the face of the bill. The estates are described in the technical terms of that law; the inability of Mary Hume to devise is put upon the footing of that law; and even the contingency peculiar to that law, of a tenancy by the writing in her husband, is carefully and expressly excluded.

Is there then by this law on which the complainant rests his case, any thing to prevent him from recovering without the aid of a Court of Equity? By the general law of England, certainly nothing: the real estate would indeed pass by devise from Arratoon Michael to Mary Hume, subject to the payment of debts of a certain nature (which nature it is not even alleged that the debts in question possessed) and would pass from her to her heir, subject to the same liberality; but this would never vest in her at all as legatee or executrix, and would not pass by any will of hers to her executor, nor if such will were valid. They might, indeed, pass by her will to her devisee, if such will were good in law; but if so, the complainant would have shewn no claim, whatever, either in law or in equity. Thus far, therefore, if the complainant has any title, his remedy would be at law.

There is nothing to vary this result in the provisions of the Charter, even if they applied to an estate in the hands of such a holder. They make real estate, indeed subject to execution for all debts: but if not taken in execution, they leave its incidents unaffected; and among these will be that of descending in the manner already stated.

The only remaining ground on which any variation from the general rule of the English law could be supposed to exist, would be the statute 9. Geo. 4. c. 33. respecting the liability of real estates as assets in the hands of executors and administrators. This statute, however, clearly applies only to the case of persons strictly and technically described as British subjects, except where the lands are situated within the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts. It does not, therefore, affect the present case of lands of an Armenian Christian at Dacca.

I am, indeed, aware, that the statute uses the word "declare," as well as the word "enact"; and that it may be said, that if it declares the English law as to one class of estates, it, at least, furnishes evidence of its construction as to another. This, however, is the most that can be said; for it does not declare the law, except in the cases to which it applies, and, therefore, does not really alter or affect it in others; but I do not feel that it even furnishes such evidence. The act is confessedly obscure and imperfect; but on the best consideration I can give it, I do not think it really purports to be declaratory. The words "declared and enacted," which are used throughout, introduce in the fifth section, a provision for the conformation of conveyances, which, if the law had been conformable to the act before, did not require to be confirmed; and in the 6th section they usher in a provision for the future construction of the act itself. They could not in this case declare the previous law on a statute which had no previous existence, and it furnishes one argument also that they could not be intended to operate as a declaration of law that the same clause contains an express provision that certain real or supposed ambiguities in the law were still to continue notwithstanding the new statute. On the whole, I should understand these words, in a very imperfectly expressed statute, to be introduced in the hope of removing a difficulty which they really rather tend to produce, and to be meant to apply, as the case might be, declaring whatever happened to be old, and enacting whatever happened to be new, in its provisions.

But, even if the act be considered strictly declaratory, there could be no reason for applying its principles to the present case. The doubts which it was passed to remove, must probably have arisen out of that provision of the charter which made real estates liable to execution for all debts and damages, and the act is carefully confined to lands belonging to persons liable to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts. There is, therefore, no reason for treating it as a declaration of the law applying to estates not within the same jurisdiction, and, therefore, not affected by the same difficulties.

But I would go farther. It might be hard to exclude a party from all relief, merely because he had made a mistake in the ground on which he placed his right; and it might, therefore, be contended, that if it appeared that the complainant was entitled, not as heir by the law of England, but as heir by some other law, and that under that claim he would be entitled to relief in equity and not otherwise, he ought not to be excluded from relief, because he had alleged his claim unskillfully. I do not, however, think that this argument can be supported in this case. The complainant expressly alleges himself to be entitled as heir; that Mary Hume, who is first stated to have taken real and personal property as executrix, devisee, and residuary legatee, held the real estate as devisee, subject to the payment of such debts of Arratoon Michael as the personal estate in her hands was unable to satisfy; that she died intestate as to the reality, being incompetent to make a will of it; and that the personalities of Arratoon Michael in her hands was more than sufficient to satisfy his debts. In no way, therefore, does he shew any legal bar to his title; if she held the lands as devisee, subject to certain debts, they would pass, subject to the same debts, to her real, not her personal, representative; and if this were not enough, he negatives the liability which he originally suggested, by an express assertion that the personal estate was enough to satisfy the debts, and that, therefore, the condition, for so he treats it, on which the liability was to attach, did not exist. On his own shewing, therefore, the liability to debts furnishes no bar, either in law or in fact, to his enforcing his right at law; and, denying Mary Hume's power to make a will of real estate at all, he rests his claim on a title paramount to that of any person claiming under her will, and asserts a right to treat any such instrument as a nullity. If a nullity, it would furnish no answer to an action at law; and in this case, therefore, as well as in the case of a claim strictly according to the law of England, the bill would be a mere ejectment bill.

It is, however, possible that the complainant may have some right to equitable relief, even assuming the will to be valid, or the executor to have the power of intermeddling with the land for the payment of debts. I do not, however, think that the Court is competent, or at all events that it is called upon, under the several words of this bill, to give him a kind of relief utterly inconsistent with his own notions of his rights, and which we have no reason to suppose he would accept or pursue. He disputes the effect of the will. I do not think we have any right to tell him you shall take the will as good, and claim rights which you never contemplated under it. In a case of slight variation from the claim set up, this might be reasonable, and it might be right to allow an amendment of the bill, if such were necessary, to enable him to succeed on the new ground, but when he rests his claim on an entirely different foundation (and that is the case here; it is not a mere mistake in some portion of the relief which he seeks), I think it is better to dismiss the bill altogether. He can then either pursue his claim on his own grounds, in an action of ejectment, or he can reconsider his case, and apply for equitable relief in a new proceeding, if he thinks that his original construction of his rights was erroneous, and that he is entitled to equitable relief upon another.

Entertaining this opinion as to the proper course to adopt, it is unnecessary for me to express any judgment on the very important and difficult questions involved in the further discussion of this case. On the point already examined, I think that the bill must be dismissed.

Mr. Justice Grant.—This case came before me upon demurrer sitting alone on the 2nd February, 1835, and was argued on the 2nd, 5th, and 6th of that month. The sittings ending ten days afterwards, and a good deal of business being before the court, I did not deliver my judgment till the 2nd March, the first day of the next term. I overruled the demurrer for reasons which I gave at some length, being of opinion that any other judgment would have been nothing else than a denial of justice to the plaintiff, who upon the facts disclosed in his bill, is in my opinion entitled to relief in equity, and who if he does not obtain it in equity, can in my opinion obtain it no where else. The question has been brought before the full Court by petition of rehearing, and as it is most fitting that it should receive the judgment of the full bench, I have attentively reconsidered it, but I am unable to form any other than my former opinion; and I am obliged to confess that I am not acquainted with any principles which govern English Courts of Equity upon which such a Court can refuse to entertain this bill. I say this advisedly, after much consideration and without the shadow of a doubt upon my mind, except that which must be raised by finding that my opinion is dissented from by persons of great authority.

The bill is very oddly framed, if I may be allowed to say so, considering that it regards immovable property situate in Bengal, belonging to a testatrix there residing, not represented to be a British subject in the sense of the acts of Parliament, which she derived from one not such British subject, and which never were, so far as appears, the property of a British subject, for there is a great deal in it about heir at law being seized in fee simple or other estate of inheritance, and of personal estate, and of a wife under coverture being more incapable of making a will of such real than of personal property, and of a husband's title as tenant by the courtesy, and many other things which I doubt not are entirely unintelligible to the lawyers of Bengal, by whose law nevertheless the right to these lands must be determined, the lands being there situate, unless it be otherwise provided by British statute. The aspect, therefore, as we term it of this bill, looks like that of a bill for the recovery of lands in Middlesex or Hertfordshire, and as if the law of England as existing in Middlesex or Hertfordshire were to govern the right in them. The specific prayer of the bill likewise has a good deal of the same complexion. But Courts of Equity are not influenced by the aspect of a bill, nor are any way hampered by its specific prayers unless it partakes of the nature of averment or admission, or so coincides with, and in some sorts forms parts of the case made by the bill.

The only parts of a bill in Equity which are essential are the stating parts, omitting every matter of law or inference, the simple prayers that the defendant may answer all matters, &c. a prayer for a subpoena, and prayer for general relief upon which this Court is bound to grant him the relief he is entitled to (11 Ves. 574). Thus a bill may have a double aspect, one of which may be entirely erroneous, and the court shall afford relief under the others (Mist. Pledg. 39.), and it is undoubted that if a party prays particular relief to which he is not entitled, he may nevertheless under the prayer for general relief have such relief as he is entitled to, upon the case alleged and proved or admitted (Wilkinson, v. Beal, 4 Mad. 408.); and a decree has been made in direct contradiction to the specific prayer of the bill where the Equity apparent on the case made by the bill required it (Duffant v. Duffant 1 Cox. 58.)

It is the Court in Equity and not the counsel who are charged with the interests of the parties before it, and not only with theirs, but with the interests of all others whose interest it is apparent upon the facts stated may be affected by its decree. The latter it is bound to protect, and on the interests before it, it is bound to decree not upon the arguments or the errors of lawyers—but secundum bonum et equum,—not according to the niceties and subtleties of pleading, but according to substantial justice and right.

In deciding this case, therefore, I threw out of view all the technicalities of language, and all the inferences and assumptions of law which figure in this bill; and considering only the facts stated in the bill and admitted by the demurrer, I set myself to determine whether the plaintiff was entitled to any relief in equity, and in so doing I believed myself to be conforming to the principles which govern the rules and proceedings of the high court of Chancery in England, to which I was bound to conform; and I was clearly of opinion that the allowing this demurrer and dismissing this bill, i. e. the refusing the plaintiff relief in equity upon the fact so alleged and admitted, would be a denial of justice, since he could not obtain adequate relief or any relief suited to his case elsewhere. It must be seen therefore what that case is.

The demurrer is a general demurrer for want of jurisdiction. The bill states that the plaintiff is a natural born Christian inhabitant of Dacca, in the province of Bengal, of the Armenian nation [or extraction], brother and heir-at-law of Mary or Mariam Hume, late of Dacca, deceased, widow of Arratoon Michael, formerly of Dacca, deceased, she and her husband being also native Christian inhabitants of Dacca of the same nation [or extraction].—That she was possessed of certain zemindaries, talooks, houses and lands situate within Dacca or elsewhere in the province of Bengal, and of a very large personal estate; all which she was possessed of under the will of the said Arratoon Michael as his executrix, devisee, and residuary legatee. That she intermarried with Edward Kent Hume, in the service of the East India Company, a native of Great Britain.—That these lands were not in any way settled on her marriage with Hume; that she possessed them till her death as such devisee in her own right, subject to, and chargeable with, the debts of Arratoon Michael, if any.—That she had no children, but died on the 20th May, 1833 without issue, being then as such executrix, &c. possessed, &c. leaving her husband, Hume, and the plaintiff, her only lawful uterine brother, her surviving. The bill then states what the plaintiff conceives to be matter of law as to her power to make a will of real estate, and the descent of the lands in question and tenancy by the courtesy. It then proceeded with the facts. That Hume produced a will of the deceased, of which he obtained probate, and as executor of the deceased in connivance and confederacy with one James Taylor, a British subject, and in the service, &c. the other executor, possessed himself of the title deeds of the said real estate and of the said estates themselves as well as the whole personal estate of the deceased as executrix of Arratoon Michael, and as her executor and legatee, and as representative in the estate of the said original testator, Arratoon Michael, has obtained himself to be registered as owner of the said real estate in the office of the collector, and has received the whole of the rents, &c.—That the plaintiff has frequently applied to the defendants as such derivative representative of Arratoon Michael and immediate representative of Mary Hume respectively, to satisfy and discharge the debts of Michael and also the debts, if any, of Mary Hume, out of the said personal estate, and to deliver to plaintiff the title deeds of the real estates (and the real estates themselves) clear of debts, and to account for the rents and to come to account of the personal estate of the said Arratoon and Mary, to apply the same to the payment of debts; and, if any deficiency, to sell so much of the real estate as may be necessary to pay debts, and to deliver the remainder to the plaintiff as such heir at law; all of which the said defendants wholly refuse,

To this bill, there is a general demurrer, which admits all the facts stated, and affirms that although they be all true, the plaintiff can have no relief in equity; not that he cannot have the precise relief prayed,—but no relief in equity. For if the plaintiff is entitled upon the case made by the facts stated in his bill to any relief, this, being a general demurrer, was properly overruled. The demurrer is general for want of equity, and the grounds are: 1st. It is an ejectment bill. 2d. No impediment to the plaintiff proceeding at law by ejectment to recover the lands—by trespass for mesne profits. 3d. A court of equity has no jurisdiction to try right of inheritance. To these grounds of demurrer another was added at the first hearing ore tunc, for want of parties in not having made the heirs or nearest of kin of Arratoon Michael parties.

Now, how this should be an ejectment bill, or how an ejectment could be brought I cannot see; for the only question to try in ejectment is the title to possession—and title to possession in executors is not disputed nor capable of dispute on facts shewn.—But to this I will return. On the first hearing, the argument turned chiefly on the questions raised by the written demurrer. On the rehearing much was argued in denial by the plaintiff to any part of the residue of the testatrix's estate; for that the whole passed by the will, and that it did not appear he was heir. To this it was answered that he was sole brother and heir at law, and so admitted by demurrer. A demurrer admits so much of the bill as the demurrer extends to. If to the whole bill, the whole is taken as true, i. e. every thing necessary to support the plaintiff's case which is well charged, — the facts, as Lord Hardwick says, which are well and materially charged (Niff. pl. 211. 1 Ves 476. 1 Ves. p. 289). It is agreed that it does not admit conclusions in law, or averments of law. Here the bill alleges the plaintiff to be sole brother and heir at law of the testatrix. The being sole brother is a fact, and this is admitted. The being heir at law may be a fact, or a conclusion in law; and if used in the sense of English law, it is a conclusion in law, and an undoubted conclusion. But it is said by the defendant that the English law is not the law by which the conclusion heir at law is to be governed, but the law of the place where the lands are situated. Now the place is within the jurisdiction of the Court, and its law is within the knowledge of the Court, being that which it administers in cases subject to its jurisdiction where that law is applicable; namely, the general law of Bengal. The words heir at law, contain sufficient averment that he is next in succession, or in the language of the civil and common law heres by whatever general law prevails in Bengal applicable to his case. But this is an averment of law if it mean that he is heir by the general law of Bengal, and an averment unnecessary to be made in this bill, the Court being bound to draw all conclusions in law from the facts stated.

The general law of Bengal where British subjects or Hindoos are not concerned is the Mahomedan law; and by that law it is undoubted that the sole brother of a woman who has deceased without children, and being married, and leaving a husband surviving, is one of her heirs, entitled to dispute her will, and to share the residue of her property, and consequently to call the executor to account and to call for production of the will. But the defendant says, that the law of Bengal is this, that the rights of succession to foreigners, or descendants of foreigners there residing, are there decided according to the particular laws and customs of the respective nations of which they are descended; and this in regard as well to moveable property as to immoveables. The defendant, therefore, if he is right in this position avers the question heir at law to be a question of fact, and this he has admitted by the demurrer, if it be well and materially alleged in the bill. But he says that it is not well alleged, for that the succession is not by the general Moosulman law, or the general law of Bengal, nor by the law of England; and therefore the law which governs it is not within the knowledge of the Court, for that it is by a particular custom, which is a material fact, and that this custom is not set forth or alleged in the bill.

I think if the law were as the defendant states it to be, this would be so. But it is to be seen whether the law be as stated. 1. It is certain that the succession to these lands must be governed by the law of Bengal. 2. The law of Bengal is the same now as it was the time of the conquest by the English; viz. the Moosulman law, unless where English Acts of Parliament may have altered it in the case of British subjects, according to the meaning of those words in those acts (Blambara v. Galby 4 Mod. 225) If Armenian Christians born in British India are British subjects under those acts, all persons born there, whether Moosulmans or Hindoos, Parsees or Christians, or any other, are so. But there is a plain distinction made in these acts, and there is nothing contained in them from which to infer that Christians or Parsees are more British subjects within their meaning than Moosulmans or Hindoos. 3. In the Moosulman law, the infidel subjects of the Moosulman Empire are called zimmes and zimmes (3. Hedys. 19. G. 7. 4. Ibid. 538. 9.) The succession among them is regulated by the Moosulman law. By this law a testator cannot leave by will more than one-third of his estate. He cannot make a will in favour of any of his heirs unless the other heirs express their consent; after his death where there are children, and no father or grand-father, of the deceased surviving, the brothers are the nearest residuaries as well as sharers (Baillie 73. 75. 81). A surviving husband is a sharer in his wife's inheritance: his share, where there have been no children, being one half. (Baillie 59, 73, 76, 81.) The persons termed sharers are those entitled by law to be provided for by certain portions assigned them out of the estate of the deceased, in the first place after payment of debts, &c. and of the bequests of the will not exceeding one-third of the estate, and not bestowed upon an heir. The persons termed residuaries are those entitled to succeed to what remains of the estate after these payments and the assignment of these portions, the nearer excluding the more remote. All these persons entitled to shares or to residue are excluded in the enumeration of those denominated by the general word heirs. Where a woman dies without children, therefore, leaving no father or grand-father, but a husband and a full brother, the estate is divided into two equal parts, one to each. It may be said that by her marriage with the defendant, the testator became an English woman, or Scotch woman, or a British subject, and that the law of inheritance of British subjects by the Acts of Parliament and by the charter of the Supreme Court, are, by the Law of England, whether they are in the Mofussil or in Calcutta. But first it may be questioned, whether inheritance to lands is thus regulated. The words of the charter are confined to the giving power and authority to the Supreme Court in granting probates and letters of administration to administer and execute the Ecclesiastical law as the same is now used and exercised in the diocese of London, which does not extend to determining rights of succession to lands.

Questions regarding the succession among British subjects to lands in Bengal, could not generally occur till now, for lands in Bengal could not be held by British subjects under the regulations till now. The act of Parliament forbade their residence in Bengal without license of the East India Company, and the Company might lawfully impose this condition—cujus est dare, ejus et disponere. And there is a second question, whether the right of succession to lands can be by a foreign law where an heiress marries a foreigner, or in any case by any law but the law of the place where they are situated.

But there is no need to discuss these questions, in order to ascertain the plaintiff's right to question the operation of this will as to the lands, in whole or in part; because if the English law is to prevail, the plaintiff has a clear right. If the law of England be introduced into Bengal, in the succession to lands held by British subjects, that succession must be regulated by the law of England—lex loci rei sitæ—without reference to the domicile of the deceased which here might perhaps be Scotland.

It only remains, as concerns the plaintiff's title, to call for an account to consider the position that by the law of Bengal as now subsisting, the rights concerning lands there situate, are decided by the law of the country, to which the possessor belongs, if not a native of Bengal, and not a Moosulman or Hindoo, and by the customs of his class or a Native and not a Moosulman or Hindoo. This, if it were so, would be contrary to the general rule of law as received in all other countries, and forming part of the law of nations by which the distribution of the moveables of an intestate is by the law of his domicile at the time of his death;—of his immoveables by the law of the country where they are situated. And so in the case of a will of lands, the law of the country where the lands are situated must govern the decision upon it. "In every disposition or contract where the subject matter relates locally to England" says Lord Mansfield, "the law of England must govern." Thus a conveyance or will of lands, the local nature of the thing requires them to be carried into execution according to the law here (2 Burr. 1679.) "Frisius habens domos, agros in provincia Graniage nisi non potest de illis testari quia lege prohibitum est ibi de bonis immobilibus testari non valente jure Frisico adferre bona qua partes alieni territorio integrantes constituunt." (Huber: Prefect. Lib. 1 Tit. 3 § 15.) And so are all the books, and this doctrine is well known and undoubted.

By an express rule of the Mahomedan law, the disposition or distribution of all goods of infidel subjects domiciled in Mahomedan countries is regulated by the Mahomedan law and their wills also, as I have said. But of immovables there situate, it must be by their law jure gentium, unless it could be shewn that there is some particular law there, controulling the doctrine of the law of nations, an institution which would be very inconsistent with the general character of the Mahomedan law.

The leaving the private right of the Hindoos, the ancient and conquered inhabitants, in matters of succession amongst themselves to remain resting upon their own laws and customs, results from a different principle in the law of the Moosulman conquerors. By their law of conquest, the Moosulman conqueror of an infidel country may either seize the lands and partition them among the conquering army, or he may leave them in the hands of the former possessor (Hed. B. 9. ch. 7. ch. 4. ch. 2.) the conquered people; and if he do so, the Imaum shall fix the jizya or capitation tax upon the inhabitants if they do not embrace the faith, and on their lands the khuraj, or land tax, whether they embrace the faith or do not, (Observations on the Law and Constitution of India, London, 1825 p. 14.) Upon their submission and payment of their imposts they become zimmes (infidel subjects) owing complete allegiance to the Moosulman government and obedience to the Moosulman laws, and entitled to the provision of that Government and those laws, in their persons and property including their lands, which remain their property as before the conquest (Hed. B. 9. ch. 7.) "They become entitled to the same protection and subject to the same rules as Moosulmans, because Ali has declared infidels agree to a capitation tax only; in order to render their blood the same as Moosulman blood, and their property the same as Moosulman property" (Hed. B. 9. ch. 2.) But by their law an infidel cannot in any case be heir to a Moosulman, nor a Moosulman to an infidel (Bail. 24.) The inheritance of Hindoos was naturally left to be settled by their own domestic tribunals according to the laws which had formerly subsisted among them, being with them founded on the precepts of their religion to which the entire tolerance of the Mahomedan Laws towards infidel subjects or zimmes (whatever may have been the individual character of particular conquerors or princes) mainly contributed, and as no Moosulman could ever be interested in the succession to a Hindoo, questions regarding Hindoo succession could seldom be brought before a Moosulman tribunal.

There is no trace that I have been able to discover of the Mahomedan Law having recognised any order of legal succession in any class of the subjects of their empire, different from that they established by the general rules of the Mahomedan Law—the law of the conquered country after the conquest, much less of so strange a rule as this:—that as many different origins or sects as there were zimmes, or domiciled infidel subjects descended from residents within their territories, there should be so many different orders of succession and inheritance recognised by their law of inheritance ab intestator. No authority to this effect has been cited from any writer upon Mahomedan Law. I have quoted sufficient authority from the Hedaya, and the books cited in Mr. Baillie's excellent Treatise to prove the direct reverse. The case of the Hindoo inhabitants of Bengal since the English conquest, whose rights may be competently decided upon in this court, has been settled by act of Parliament, all questions of succession and inheritance among them being to be decided according to their own laws and usages, and therefore does not now rest upon the Mahomedan law of Bengal. But the succession and inheritance of all other persons, proprietors of lands in Bengal, or domiciled and dying there, rests as before on the Mahomedan law of Bengal, except those of British subjects so dying domiciled. As to them, there is no doubt, but that their succession in moveables is regulated by the law of England, but whether in immovables may be somewhat more questionable, however, in immovables either by the law of England or the Mahomedan law of Bengal. In either case, the plaintiff is entitled to a share in the succession to his sister's land by the lex loci where the lands are.

The plaintiff's title being thus clear, there remain to be considered, the nature of the bill and the grounds of the demurrer, both which I have already stated. The prayer is, 1st. To be decreed entitled as sole brother and heir at law to the whole or residue of the real estate, after payment of debts out of the personality in the first instance, and if necessary in the second, by part of the real estate. 2d. To have the debts paid and the real estate or so much as remains cleared. 3d. For an account of rents and profits, and of the personal estate. There are prayers for an injunction, a writ of ne easit regno, and for a receiver. It is a bill against executors in possession of real and personal estate under a will, the title of the defendants to possession and disposal of both real and personal is not disputed so far as regards payment of debts, the residue only of the real estate being claimed after an adjustment of accounts.

This bill is not in my apprehension, an ejectment bill. It is not brought to turn the defendants out of possession of these lands, but to desire that they may execute the trust; that they may retain possession till they have so done, and till they have sold part, if necessary, and then account and deliver. An ejectment is an action possessory to try the title of possession. The title of possession is not here disputed and the plaintiff could not, therefore, bring an ejectment. The same must be said as to an action of trespass for mesne profits, i. e. for wrongfully taking these profits; but it is not here averred that their taking is wrongful. If the lands are assets and the defendants executors, how can an action of ejectment or trespass be brought? By the Mahomedan law it is quite certain that there is no distinction between succession to lands and moveables, or that moveables and immovables are equally liable to the payment of debts, and equally capable of being bequeathed by will. Even if those persons, Arratoon Michael and his widow and executrix, had been British subjects, and the succession to their lands to be determined by English Law, the lands would have been assets for the payment of debts, and would pass by will to executors. It is a general rule of English Law, in colonies of the crown of England, that "an estate in fee in the plantations is a testamentary thing and assets to pay debts," (11 Ven ab. 233. ch. ib. cit.) The words in the case cited from Vent. are "that though it be an inheritance yet being in a foreign country it is looked upon as a chattel to pay debts and a testamentary thing," (Noel v. Robinson 2 Vent. 358.)

The act 9. G. 4. c. 33, called Mr. Fergusson's act is in terminis declaratory. The words are "It is declared and enacted" and those words render an act a declaratory act,—a Parliamentary declaration of what the law was before the passing of the act. For this I need cite no other authority than my Lord Coke's, and this act only declares the law in India to be the same as in all other colonies, plantations and foreign countries subject to the crown of England. There is no doubt, therefore, that these lands, whether by the law of the country, i. e. the Mahomedan Law, or by the law of England, are a testamentary thing passed by the will of Arratoon Michael to Mary Hume; that they remained in her hands assets unadministered; and that they passed by her will to her executors as assets of Arratoon Michael with whom they now remain as assets, 1st of Arratoon Michael till his debts are paid; 2dly, of Mary Hume till her debts are paid; and that Mary Hume was devisee of the residue, or residuary legatee of Arratoon Michael, and that the executor, the defendant Hume, is residuary legatee of Mary Hume makes no difference for the possession of Mary Hume continued as executrix and could not commence as legatee till by her express or complied assent, she converted it into a possession as legatee or devisee. And so did, and yet does, the possession of Hume and still more of Taylor, who is not a legatee, as executors of Mary Hume. "But the bequest of a legacy, whether it be general or specific, transfers only an indicate property to the legatee. To render it complete and perfect the assent of the executor is requisite." "In case of a legacy bequeathed to the executor, if he take possession of it generally, he shall hold it as executor, which is his first and general authority. The union of the two characters of executor and legatee in one and the same person makes no difference. His assent is as necessary to a legacy vesting in him in the capacity of legatee as to a legacy's vesting in any other person, and that on the same principle. Till he has examined the state of the assets, he is incompetent to decide whether they will admit of his taking the thing bequeathed as a legacy, or whether it must not, of necessity, be applied in satisfaction of debt." "But till the executor has made his election, either express or implied, he shall take the legacy as executor, although all the debts have been paid independently of such bequest! Nor is the entry of an executor (as here they have entered) whether before or after probate on the term devised to him, an election to take it as legatee" (Toller pp. 306. 344. 45.)

If an ejectment be brought by the plaintiff, it appears to me that he must be turned round on production of the wills, whether under Mahomedan or English law, nor can the executors be divested till it appear on account taken that the debts are paid, which account can only be taken in equity, being in a matter of trust and confidence. The plaintiff calls for an account. The defendants deny his title to demand an account for that he has no interest. If they are trustees, and he has an interest in the residue, he is entitled to an account in equity, and courts of equity refuse relief and leave the parties to an action only where an action will better accomplish justice, or where the court is of opinion that the plaintiff is not entitled (Plummer Mast. of Rolls 2 Swans. 285 Meux. v. Maltby.) And the general rule is as laid down by Lord Hardwick even where there are matters in dispute which are not proper for a Court of Equity—"Wherever there is ground for coming into a Court of Equity, the court will go further merely upon the maxim of preventing the multiplicity of suits and make a complete decree and not oblige the party to bring an action at law as well as a bill in Equity" (Jesus College v. Bloom 3 Aik. 263.) But here the first question is a question of account with trustees regarding trust property and execution of the trust. The second question is to make partition of the residue of the unmoveable and undivided property. If as I at present apprehend these are to be decided by the Mahomedan law.—If the succession to these lands is not to be decided by the Mahomedan, but by the English law, then it is to be decided to which of the two parties trustees in the legal possession of the lands are bound to deliver the residue after payment of debts, I must say that how these questions are to be decided in an action of ejectment. I cannot, after the best consideration I have been able to give the subject, make out to my own satisfaction. I am not aware whether the demurrer ore tenus for want of parties is still insisted on, but I am of opinion as I was at the first hearing, that there is nothing in it. For the reasons I then gave I think therefore my first Judgment was right and that the demurrer must be overruled.

CHIEF JUSTICE.—In this case questions have been raised of great difficulty and vast general importance, and upon which I would not undertake to express any opinion until I had ample leisure for a full consideration of them. I am quite aware that the Court's decision on these questions is absolutely necessary for the settling the rights of the parties in this suit; but I think it would not be proper to enter upon them on a demurrer, to a bill which must on other and more simple grounds be allowed, and where in fact although opinions might be expressed, the real question in issue between the parties would not be finally decided.

I think this bill is clearly what is termed an ejectment bill. The title under which the plaintiff claims is as heir at law, and it lies upon him to show some exception in the circumstances of his case that oblige him to apply to a court of equity for relief and discovery, for so the bill is framed, and which prevent his proceeding in the ordinary course at common law.

I can find no such circumstances in the bill, and none have been suggested at the bar, that upon consideration I think tenable.

It has been argued that an application to a court of equity is necessary, because the defendant has possessed himself of the title deeds and muniments of the estate, and has procured himself to be registered in the office of the collector as the owner; in consequence of which the complainant is unable to procure the same to be registered as heir at law, pursuant to the regulations of Government.

But this statement, it is clear, is not sufficient to sustain the bill. There is no statement that such registry in the collector's books would defeat the complainant's right to recover in ejectment, and in Pemberton and Pemberton 13 Ves. 297, it is stated that the course has been to file a bill, stating the reasons why an ejectment cannot be brought; and if the bill had contained such statements, they must have been precise and positive, for in Barber and Barber, cited in 3 Merivile 161, the court stated they would not proceed on mere vague allegations, that the action may be defeated by setting up outstanding terms.

As to the claim of possession of the title deeds, on that ground it is equally clear the complainant is not entitled to relief. In Crow and Tynell 3 Moddow, Rep. 179 it is expressly laid down that a heir at law out of possession cannot file a bill for the possession of title deeds; that if he recovers the estate at law, then and not till then can he come to a court of equity for the possession of the title deeds. Lady Shaftsbury v. Arrowsmith 4 Ves. Junr. 91 is an authority to the same effect, where Lord Loughborough said, the heir must make out his title at law unless there are incumbrances standing in the way which this court would remove in order to assist him in asserting his legal right.

The principal ground, however, on which the complainant hopes to sustain this bill would seem to be, that the allegations that the defendant holds this estate as executor, responsible for the debts of Arratoon Michael deceased, whom he represents, and that his holding in this character obliges the complainant to come to a court of equity for relief and discovery.

It is clear that the plaintiff's equity must appear in the stating part of the bill, for which see Flint and Flint 2, Anstruther 543, to that then we must look, and it is sufficiently evident and certainly such was the argument of the counsel at the bar, that the complainant claims as heir at law according to the English law, and that his whole case proceeds on the ground that the law of England as to tenure, descent, and power to devise, is to govern his case. Such, in my opinion, is the mode in which the complainant shapes his case, and on which I am of opinion this court is at present to decide whether he has not his relief at law, or whether the debts of Michael Arratoon are an equitable bar to this ejectment and give the complainant a right in this way to call for an account. Now the allegations of the bill are, that Marian Hume held and enjoyed the real estate, zemindaries, talooks, houses, and land in her own right and as her own absolute estate, subject to the payment of and chargeable with the debts of Arratoon Michael, if any remained unsatisfied, and which the personal estate in her hands was unable to satisfy; it then alleges that there are some small debts of Arratoon Michael unsatisfied; but that the personal estate is amply sufficient to satisfy the whole of such outstanding debts without resorting to the real estate. The question, therefore, arises as to the right of an executor of a native Christian inhabitant of Dacca dying possessed of lands in the Mofussil, to hold them against the heir of law, when the personal estate is sufficient to discharge the debts. It is unnecessary that I should say, that according to the law of England under which this complainant, as I stated, claims as heir at law, the executor could have no right at common law to hold, and the only ground on which such a right could be supported here, would be that what is termed Mr. Fergusson's act, namely, 9 G. 4 c. 33 s. 1, gives the executor that right. The words of the first section applicable to this case are, that "whenever any British subject shall die seized of or entitled to any real estate in houses, lands, hereditaments, situate within or being under the general civil jurisdiction of His Majesty's Supreme Court of judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George and Bombay respectively, or whenever any persons (not being a Mahomedan or Gentoo) shall die seized of or entitled to any such real estate, situate within the local limits of the civil jurisdiction of the same Courts respectively, such real estate of such British subject, or other person as aforesaid (not being a Mahomedan or Gentoo) is and shall be deemed assets in the hands of his or her executor, or administrator for the payment of her debts whether by specialty or simple contract in the ordinary course of administration." Now I am free to admit that had this been alleged in the bill that Arratoon Michael was "a British subject", that it would then on the allegations in the bill have been a question of some difficulty to say, what interest the executor took in the lands, and whether, though the personal estate was sufficient to satisfy the debts, a question might not arise as to the right of the heir to discovery and relief in equity instead of resorting to his ejectment. On this point, I at present express no opinion, for upon this bill, it does not appear that Arratoon Michael was not "a British subject" within the meaning which this court and the other Supreme Courts in India have given to these words in the different states relating to India, and therefore, to him and his representatives the lands bring without the local jurisdiction of the court, the section of the statute which I have cited does not, in my opinion apply, and it follows that on these allegations of debt due from the estate of Arratoon Michael no equitable relief can arise. It might, perhaps, be contended that the same argument would apply, as to Hume being the representative to his wife and answerable for her debts, she not appearing on this bill to be a British subject. But in truth his point does not arise, for it is not alleged in the stating part of the bill, that any debts were due on Mrs. Hume's account, and therefore the right of the executor does not arise. I entirely, however, agree with Mr. Justice Malkin, that if it were necessary to go further and consider this complainant as claiming as heir by some other law than that of England, that he would not, as Mr. Justice Malkin has so distinctly pointed out, be entitled to equitable relief on the allegations in this bill. These are the principal grounds relied on in support of this bill, but other grounds are suggested. It is alleged that this complainant is entitled to relief as the bill prays for a receiver and a writ of ne exeat regno. Jones v. Jones, 3 Meriville 161, is an express authority to shew that a prayer for a receiver will not, under the circumstances of a case like the present, entitle the complainant to relief, on the allegation that defendant is about to depart from the jurisdiction can be no ground for applying to a court of equity for a writ of ne exeat regno, unless the complainant is entitled to equitable relief. I am therefore of opinion that there is no part of the bill to which complainant has shewn himself entitled to any relief, and although he might have had a right to some discovery, if he had sought for discovery only, yet it is now settled that to support a general demurrer to a bill seeking both discovery and relief, it is sufficient to shew that the complainant is not entitled to the relief which he prays.

The court are anxious to give their opinion on the very important points to which I have alluded in the commencement of this judgment, in any way that the parties can most shortly and conveniently bring them before the court, I would suggest if the facts were agreed on, whether a special case would not be the best mode of obtaining the decision of the court.

The demurrer must be allowed, and the bill dismissed

Mr. JUSTICE GRANT said, I think it my duty to say that the demurrer cannot be allowed with costs. No costs can be given against the defendant or respondent on a rehearing, nor on a bill of review or appeal. Upon the first I refer to 4 Bro. Ch. Cas. 546 and on the latter to 3 Ch. Rep. 15. The same case is in 2. Ep. Cas. ab. 174. No court of appeal of the King has ever given costs against the respondent in appeal when the judgment has been reversed.—Englishman.

TUESDAY, MARCH 1.

This being the first day of the second Term, the three judges took their seats on the bench at eleven o'clock.

His Majesty's Court of Appeal.

MAXWELL V. OUSELEY AND OTHERS.

This is a case of appeal from the decision of a Mofussil Court to the Supreme Court of Calcutta, instead of to the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, under the statute 53. G. 3. c. 165 sec. 107. The section of the act directs that in such cases of appeal, the formal proceedings in the Supreme Court shall be as nearly as possible conformable to the course of procedure of the Sudder Dewany Court, and Mr. Turtton to-day moved for time to confer with the officer of the latter Court, in order to accomplish such assimilation of practice as the act requires. The period of two months was allowed by the Court for that purpose.

IN THE MATTER OF HOLLOWAY.

This, as our readers will recollect, is a return to a writ of Habeas Corpus issued from this Court, and directed to Colonel Piper, calling upon him to bring up the body of William Holloway. The hearing of the case, upon the return to the writ was fixed for Monday next.—Hurkaru.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2.

NEWTON V. NEWTON.

Mr. Clarke moved for an order calling on the Impugnant to show cause why he should not pay the Promonent Rs. 500 per month, for support, pending the suit. The learned counsel moved on affidavits setting forth the desertion of Colonel Newton from his wife, and there were also other affidavits alleging cruelty and adultery. But in this stage of the proceedings counsel referred only to the affidavits in which the desertion was set forth, from which it appeared that in April last, Colonel Newton departed from Calcutta for Arracan, leaving only fifty rupees with Mrs. Newton, and two hundred and fifty rupees with his brother-in-law, which the latter, on his own responsibility, had applied to Mrs. Newton's support. After remaining about four months in Arracan Colonel Newton returned to Calcutta and resided with his wife: subsequently he went on the river, when

Mrs. Swain, the lady with whom Mrs. Newton was residing, being compelled to go to Serampore, Mrs. Newton was obliged to take a house in Calcutta, in which she agreed to remain for two months. On Colonel Newton's return from the river excursion, he affected to be very angry on account of his wife having taken a house, and he refused to live with her; afterwards he went without his wife to Moorshedabad, taking with him his infant child, then very ill of ophthalmia, by which it has since lost the sight of one eye. From these circumstances, the learned counsel contended, the desertion of the husband was clear; and he put in further affidavits setting forth that Mrs. Newton had no other means of support than forty pounds per annum, and that the impugnant as full colonel of a regiment, in the Company's service, was in the receipt of Rs. 1,600 per mensem. The promonent had obtained a decree for the impugnant to answer; an affidavit of service was now forthcoming; but no answer had been put in; and this application was made for a citation, that Colonel Newton should shew cause why he should not pay Rs. 500 per mensem, or such sum as the court may award, for alimony since April last. The learned counsel stated that the allegation of faculties had been filed, and cited Sir W. Scott, in Briscoe v. Briscoe, 7 Haggart's Reports, p. 199. "The allegation of faculties, as it is technically called, was given in, as the first step in a question of alimony. It is always desirable, that an allegation of this nature should be given at an early period; and that the question of alimony should be disposed of at the first stage of the proceedings to prevent the husband being unnecessarily harassed with his wife's debts." See also Robinson v. Robinson, and Goodall v. Goodall, 2 Lee's Reports.

The Court enquired what was the evidence as to the marriage?

Mr. Clarke said there were affidavits setting forth that it took place at the Cathedral in Calcutta, and the affidavit of the party that she was Colonel Newton's lawful wife.—Order Granted.—Englishman.

MONDAY, MARCH 7.

Crown side.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM HOLLOWAY.

Mr. Pearson in rising to mention this case took occasion to point out an error in the proceedings, which though it had not prevented a return being made, it was necessary to bring to the notice of the Court. The return was made upon a copy of the original writ of Habeas Corpus and not upon the writ itself. The Court declared that it could not go into that question or express an opinion upon it. The writ of the Court, together with the return thereupon, must come regularly before the Court, and when duly filed would become matter of record, which of course could not be the case with any copy put in or return thereupon. The present return was therefore not received, and Mr. Turton expressed the intention of the party to be, to obtain a fresh writ against the party under whose charge the said William Holloway at present remains in India.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9.

DHOONOO MULLICK vs. DANISH COLLEYGAR.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff Dhoonoo Mullick against Danish Colleygar for defamation of character. The plaintiff is a dyer and it appears that the defendant swore his life against plaintiff before Mr. Robison on the 30th of June last; that Mr. Robison upon that issued a summons against the plaintiff and others for an assault upon the defendant, and the conclusion was that the plaintiff was bound down to keep the peace. The defendant, Danish Colleygar, after this spread malicious reports against the plaintiff and threatened to ruin him, and the consequence was that the plaintiff was greatly injured and daily lost his customers. It appears that the defendant is now in custody of the police for receiving stolen indigo. Mr. Osborn and Mr. Clarke were the counsel for the plaintiff, and Mr. Leith for the defendant. The plaintiff was nonsuited, on the ground of the plaintiff having been wrongfully laid, although it was very clear that he had sustained great loss from the reports which the defendant had spread.

THURSDAY, MARCH 10.

CAIDER vs. HARKETT.

Mr. Turton mentioned the appeal in this case to the King in Council, in reference to the security directed by the Statute to put in by the appellant. The Chief Justice asked if this was a case which came within the provision of the Charter of Justice as respects the amount of value of the matter in dispute. Mr. Turton observed that this might have raised a question as to the right to appeal in this case, had the plaintiff recovered any thing by the award of the Court, but as such was not the case, the value of the matter in dispute was of course the amount of damages laid, which exceeded considerably the amount, which is specified by the Charter of Justice, as that for less than which an appeal is not allowed.—Hurkaru

IN THE GOODS OF NAWAB ZUFFER JUNG DECEASED.

Mr. Advocate-General moved for a rule to shew cause why the argument on the caveat entered into by the widow of the deceased should not be postponed till Monday next, on the ground that a commission, which has been sent to Moorshedabad, not having returned.

Mr. Clarke showed cause in the first instance, and put in the affidavit of one Soobhannally Khan, a mooktear, which set forth that since the death of Nawab Zuffer Jung a great part of his estate has been sold and disposed of by Moore, Hickey and Co. under the directions of Lieut. Col. Cobbe, the agent of the person representing herself to be the widow of the deceased, and to whom the proceeds to a very large amount have been paid, and further that Col. Cobbe is about to proceed to England on the ship Roberts which vessel is advertised to sail on the 11th instant. The learned counsel contended that this application for postponing the argument was for the purposes of preventing the Nawab Tower Jung administering to the estate until Colonel Cobbe had left the country, and that there had been great delay by the party styling herself the widow of the deceased, but who was in fact a slave girl, the deceased never having been married.

But the Court thought that the required postponement ought to be allowed.

SHA BEHARRY LOLL V. ANNE CELESTINA SMITH.

In this case Mr. Advocate-General on a former day obtained an order nisi to shew cause why the trial should not be postponed till the sittings.

Mr. Turton now showed cause. The grounds for putting off the trial were the absence of the defendant's son and brother, who were said to be on the road, but who, unlike Gilpin's hat and wig, had not been seen there. In fact there was nothing to show that they would arrive in Calcutta before the sittings except a broken promise that they would be here on the 6th instant.

The Court made the rule absolute, and at the same time intimated that no further delay would be allowed.

FRIDAY, MARCH 11.

BARBER V. PALMER.

This was an action brought to recover Sa. Rs. 5,296 the aggregate amount of premiums and charges on twelve policies of insurance effected by defendant, for constituents, with the Hoogly River Insurance Company.

Letters had passed between the defendant and the plaintiff's Attorney admitting the debt but seeking time to pay. Time had been given, but the payment had been still delayed. The case came on ex parte. Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant appeared for the plaintiff, and a verdict was given for the amount sought.

FRIDAY, MARCH 18.

REEKIRL EZRA V. EDWARD COOK.

The plaintiff in this case sued for Rs. 970-7, the value of six bales of gurrabs shipped on board the Corsair, Captain Cook, from hence to Singapore. The Corsair, it appeared in evidence, had arrived at Penang, and a favourable freight having offered to Calcutta, Capt. Cook transhipped the goods on board the Barque Borann, which vessel arrived at Singapore, and delivered the goods in an injured state. The plaintiff sued for a total loss; but having failed in proof, and only established a partial injury, and the amount of the injury not being stated or proved, the court nonsuited the plaintiff; but gave leave to move to set aside the nonsuit, and to enter a verdict of nominal damages, for a new trial.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM HOLLOWAY.

Mr. Turton moved for a writ of habeas corpus to be issued, directing Major Barlow to bring up Private Holloway. The statement of facts was the same as on the former occasion when the learned counsel moved for a writ to be directed to Colonel Piper. There were, however, two additional affidavits, one of which set forth that a letter had been received at the Post Office, on the 12th of August, franked by Major Hutchinson, and directed to the Adjutant of his Majesty's 38th regiment. The learned counsel reminded the court, that Major Hutchinson had sworn that he drafted a letter for Holloway to the Adjutant, and that he never saw the letter after it was drawn out by the sircar. This, Mr. Turton said, strictly speaking, could not be true; unless indeed Major Hutchinson had other business with the Adjutant at the same time that he wrote the draft for Holloway. The second additional affidavit was sworn by Holloway himself, and in which he set forth that ten years ago he enlisted in Birmingham, where a book was given him, which was afterwards kept by the sergeant of his company and, as is usual in all cases, returned to him when he received his discharge. Further, that two months pay, that is, pay for November and December, had been tendered to him by the officer of his Majesty's 38th regt. which he refused, but at the same time enquired why pay for the month of October was not tendered also. The officer replied that Holloway would not receive pay for that month because he was discharged. The learned counsel stated that Holloway had no complaint to make against the officers of the 38th regiment, or against any officer of the king's army, or against Major Barlow. It was only a restraint that Holloway was suffering, and the writ was moved against the latter officer merely as a matter of form. Writ to issue.

Mr. William Bedell, A. B. took the usual oaths, and was admitted to practise as an attorney of the court.

FRIDAY, MARCH 25.

GRAY VERSUS GONSALVES AND LEMOUSIN.

The plaintiff, Mr. John Gray, was in his youth apprenticed in the Hurkaru office. After serving his apprenticeship he was appointed foreman of the establishment, and subsequently he was entrusted with what is technically called the "setting up" of the Hurkaru under a contract. The defendant Gonsalves was a compositor of the same establishment, and in May last the plaintiff thought proper to dismiss him from his employment, whereupon Gonsalves brought an action in the Petty Court for his salary, a moiety of which he recovered without costs. Subsequently Gonsalves and the other defendant, Lemousin, were employed in the Courier office, where, as it appears from the evidence, they clandestinely printed a placard in which Mr. Gray was accused of scandalous and infamous conduct. This offence appears to have been repeated three or four times, and in one of the placards there appeared, in the hand writing of Gonsalves, an expressed intention, to paste up defamatory accusations against Mr. Gray, at several places frequented by compositors and others connected with printing offices. Mr. Turton, who appeared for the defendants, mainly relied on the insufficiency of proof as to the publication, urging with his usual ingenuity, that though this case was of little public interest, the same evidence as to publication might be applied to political cases and others of a more important description. In giving the decision of the Court, the Chief Justice said, this was certainly a case of much doubt and difficulty, and he intimated that there was a difference of opinion on the bench, but as the difference was as to fact and not as to law, he would at once pronounce a decision. The majority of the Court were of opinion that publication of the libel was proved, and that there must be a verdict against the defendant Gonsalves on the third count of the plaint, and a verdict for the other defendant. His Lordship thought that the hand writing of the first mentioned defendant, on one of the placards intimating his intention to paste it up in several public places, was sufficient evidence of the publication. Mr. Justice Grant on the contrary, as a jurymen, did not think there was sufficient evidence of the publication to satisfy his mind. Damages Rs. 100, with leave to Mr. Turton to move to set aside on two points of law.

We confess we are glad of the result, and should have been still better pleased had the evidence been clearer. The damages are sufficiently extensive to operate as a warning to compositors not to make use of the type at their command for improper purposes—a practice many are too prone to indulge in when they have hostile feelings to gratify.

MONDAY, MARCH 28.

IN THE BUSINESS OF PROVING THE WILL OF GEORGE PAGE, DECEASED.

Mr. Turton applied for an order, that the exceptive allegations to the testimony of Puddolochun Chunder, a witness produced on the part of the promovents, on the libel filed by them, be admitted. The learned counsel moved on the affidavit of Mr. Collier, proctor for Margaret Page the impugnant, which set forth, that since the publication of the depositions and evidence taken in this suit, he has discovered that the greater part of the deposition of Puddolochun Chunder is wholly untrue; and that it is necessary for the interest of the impugnant to file an allegation exceptive to that witness's testimony.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith opposed the application on two grounds. First, the application was out of time, and could not be made after publication passed. Publication was passed on the 1st inst. and an order was obtained on the 11th, that the 14th be assigned to the parties to propound all things and to conclude; and on the 17th instant, it was ordered that conclusion be decreed, and the 24th instant was assigned to hear sentence, whereupon the 25th instant was set down for hearing. Under these circumstances, counsel argued, that the impugnant was precluded from filing an exception against the depositions, and the more especially as the exceptions, though charging the witness with being a person who for gain or reward might be induced to swear falsely, did not impute to him wilful and corrupt perjury.

The allegation exceptive set forth, that, referring to the depositions on the libel, Puddolochun Chunder to the second article thereof, swore in substance as follows:—that Page after making his last will departed from Calcutta, on an excursion on the river. After remaining on the river five or six days he returned to Calcutta, and remained for a few days, and then went again on the river for a second excursion and remained absent from Calcutta about eight or nine days: whereas Page made his will in the interval between the first and the second excursion. Secondly, the witness swore that Page went on the river for the first time on the 6th of September last; whereas he went on the 29th of August. Thirdly, the witness deposed that after Page had signed the will he was sufficiently strong on the 5th of September, to walk down stairs, assisted by Mr.

Scott and Mr. Lazarus, and that he took twenty rupees out of his iron chest, and entered the amount in his chest book, telling witness to give credit to his chest book for that sum:—whereas the circumstance to which witness had spoken took place on the 29th August. Fourthly, the witness deposed that the testator was perfectly in his senses at the time of the execution of his will, and that witness was in the habit of going to him three or four times a day when he would ask questions about the business of the shop; whereas, with the exception of two occasions, witness was not permitted, and did not go up to the room of the testator.

Mr. Turton and Clarke argued that the exceptive allegation was within time, and cited Briscoe v. Briscoe. The learned counsel also contended that it was most essential to the impugnant's cause, that the allegation should be admitted to proof.

The Court took time to consider.—Englishman.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES CULLEN AND ROBERT BROWNE.

This was an order made on the 20th ultimo, by consent of parties, referring to Mr. E. Macnaghten to enquire and report on various matters touching this estate, the management of the late assignee Mr. Donald Macintyre, and as to what would be a fair remuneration to the present assignee, Mr. Thomas Holroyd, &c. &c. On the 1st instant Mr. E. Macnaghten filed the following Report:—

"Having enquired into the several matters referred to me by the order of this Honorable Court bearing date the 20th day of February last past, I have the honor to report, that since the Estate of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. was placed under the management of Mr. Macintyre, a fair proportion of the general debts have been realized; and that in this respect he appears to have made at least equal progress with the assignees of the several other Insolvent Firms. I do not however think, that Mr. Macintyre in management of the Indigo property (which forms the most valuable item in the assets of this Estate) has been either fortunate or judicious, or that he is now in a position, to ask from the Court, any remuneration for his services during the past two years.

"I do, however, believe that in all he has done, he has had in view only the interests of the estate, and I am of opinion that he ought to be relieved from all personal liability on account of the expense which have been hitherto incurred. It is true Mr. Macintyre accepted the assigneeship on the terms of the order of court, bearing date the 11th day of January, 1834, but it is also true and necessary to be considered that the question of his remuneration, was not canvassed in his presence, was not touched upon, until after he had been elected assignee, and that immediately after he had received that compliment from the creditors, he might have felt it indelicate to make any objection on the score of his own remuneration, and although had his health permitted his winding up this estate, he would in the end have received only a trifling, and in my opinion, an insufficient return for his time and trouble, yet considering himself bound by the terms of the above order, he probably would not again have mooted the question.

"Mr. Holroyd, however, is in a very different position and the secession of Mr. Macintyre under severe illness affords a fair opportunity for the re-consideration of the whole business. The commission of four per cent. allowed to Mr. Macintyre was less than has been given to any other Assignee, and in my opinion, was insufficient to provide the necessary expenses of his establishment, and to afford him an adequate remuneration for his services; and it appears to me impossible (without revising that part of the order which directs all the expenses of the establishment and the remuneration of the Assignee to be paid out of the four per cent. commission) to do what is right and fair, to all the parties before the court. I have no hesitation in saying that the expenses of the establishment appear to me to have been unnecessarily large, but it must be borne in mind, that it was the direct interest of Mr. Macintyre to bring down the expenditure to the lowest possible scale, consistent with the proper and efficient discharge of the duties of his office; and I find that the last few months Mr. M. acted as Assignee, his establishment was considerably reduced, and it is but fair to suppose, that it would have gradually become less; and I am of opinion that the future monthly expenses ought not, on an average, to amount to more than 1,000 or 1,200 rupees.

"Under all the circumstances of the case, I would suggest that the expenses of the former assignee be debited without interest to the estate, and be repaid by the present assignee, who shall be allowed a commission of five per cent. on all declared dividends, but as it would be unfair to the latter gentleman, to make him pay the whole amount before he receives any remuneration for his own services, I would recommend that whenever any dividend is declared and the commission becomes payable, that one moiety of such commission, or two and a half per cent. on the amount of declared dividends be carried to the credit of the estate in liquidation of such expenses until the whole amount (without interest) shall have been repaid. I think it probable that a dividend of 12 or 15 per cent. may be declared in February next and that within the next 3 or 4 years the estate may pay about 35 per cent. on the amount of its liabilities, which are stated to amount to Rupees 1,11,00,000, but the validity of which, or the propriety of paying dividends thereon, I have not attempted to ascertain.

"Should this expectation be realized, the sum of Rs. 38,50,000 will be divisible amongst the general creditors, the Assignees' commissions on which sum at 5 per cent., amount to Rs. 1,92,500, and after deducting from this sum, the expenses already incurred by Mr. Macintyre, which including Mr. Cullen's salary, to the close of last year, may amount to about Rs. 92,500, I am of opinion that the balance is not more than ought to be allowed to Mr. Holroyd, for the expenses of his establishment, say for the next three or four years, and for his own remuneration."

The matter came before the court this day, when

Mr. L. Clarke, who appeared for Mr. Dickens, took a preliminary objection to the report. Mr. Dickens not having been served with the order of reference, or received any order to attend before Mr. Macnaghten, notwithstanding which, the report had been made, and was ready to be filed on the 25th ultimo, on which day Mr. Macnaghten was served with a notice of Mr. Dickens's objection. The learned counsel urged that it was clearly understood by his client, that the reference was to be conducted in the usual formal manner, notices to be served and witnesses to attend. Mr. Dickens having charged Mr. Macintyre with gross mismanagement, the reference ought to have afforded him an opportunity to show whether the indigo concerns had yielded a profit,—whether the offers for purchase of them had been properly or improperly rejected,—whether certain mortgages allowed had been properly allowed, and whether the expenses had been extravagant. Subsequently Mr. Macnaghten offered to open the reference, but Mr. Dickens refused to go before a referee whose mind was made up, and determined to object to the report altogether. The reference was made upon consent no doubt, but no consent was given to such proceedings, and it was retracted the instant they were discovered. He objected to the filing of the report, and submitted that the court had no power to act upon it judicially without consent.

Mr. Leith, in support of the report, stated that notice was given to Mr. Dickens on the 26th February, to go before Mr. Macnaghten on the reference, and the report was not filed till the 1st of March. Ample opportunities had been given to make objections, and, therefore, he could not now object to the report.

Mr. Justice Malkin overruled the objection. It is not a report by which the court can be bound, but made merely to assist my own judgment and not to delegate my authority. It would have been more regular if Mr. Macnaghten had given an opportunity to the other party to go before him prior to making his report, but because he went further than was strictly judicious, I cannot suppose that he had made up his mind when he offered to open the reference. Besides much of the report must have been formed on an examination of the accounts. The questions are:—what would be a reasonable remuneration from first to last; whether Mr. Holroyd is bound by what took place on Mr. Macintyre's withdrawing. As to Mr. Macintyre's remuneration it is more properly a question between Mr. Macintyre and Mr. Holroyd; I cannot see that the former can repudiate his contract with the estate.

Mr. Clarke again urged the ground of surprise, and the manner of drawing up the order. Mr. Dickens conceived that this was an ordinary reference to be conducted like all other references. That he was correct, in this is supported by three circumstances:—first, the terms in which the order is drawn; secondly, the conduct of Mr. Macnaghten in subsequently offering to open the proceeding; and thirdly, the terms in which the report is framed. But now at turns out not to be an ordinary reference. It is a mere opinion. The reference to which Mr. Dickens consented not having been conducted in the usual manner, it is open for him to withdraw his consent, and which he now did on the grounds of surprise and ignorance.

Sir Benjamin Malkin decided that Mr. Dickens could not now withdraw his consent, but a note was taken of Mr. Clarke's objection.

Mr. Clarke then contended, first, that under the Insolvent Act the court have no power whatsoever of awarding any remuneration to an assignee; and secondly, that if they had they have no power without the consent of creditors, to alter the amount of four per cent. originally fixed by them. As to the first point; the original order of January, 1834, was made on Mr. Macintyre's own petition; and the power of the court to make it, and to order any remuneration to an assignee, a thing on which the act is totally silent, proceeds entirely on consent, express or implied, of creditors. Where the creditors consent they stop themselves; but the consent of the majority is not binding on a dissenting party. As to the second point the highest court of equity has no power to alter an agreement on the mere ground of hardship. There is no such head of equitable jurisdiction. He would offer no opposition if the court proposed to allow Mr. Holroyd four per cent. or if the court out of that ordered Mr. Holroyd to pay any thing to Mr. Macintyre, but even to this he would not be a consenting party. As to the report of Mr. Macnaghten; it was not explicit, and it was partial. It set forth that "a fair proportion of the general debts have been realized; and that in this respect he appears to have made at least equal progress with the assignees of the several other insolvent firms." Now on what grounds is this statement made? It is not set forth what proportion of debts are realized, or what in Mr. Macnaghten's opinion is a fair proportion. Again, "I do not think Mr. Macintyre's management of the Indigo property has been either fortunate or judicious." This is certainly not a ground to relieve him, for the creditors have lost by his management. Mr. Macnaghten believes that Mr. Macintyre has done all for the best, and is of opinion that he ought to be relieved from all personal liability. Here then it is admitted that the estate has suffered by his injudicious management. If Mr. Dickens had had an opportunity to go before the reporter, he would have shewn that Mr. Macintyre had refused offers for property, which two years afterwards he agreed to sell for 25 per cent. less. This paragraph was quite sufficient to throw a slight over the whole report. It alleged the bad management for which it recommended a remuneration. It contained the strongest argument to show the report was drawn up by a partizan. The report, however, contains one or two important disclosures: the first is, that the amount of expenses originally said to be Rs. 75,000, is reported to be Rs. 92,000. Mr. Macnaghten states there may be thirty-eight lakhs to distribute in six years: this, at four per cent., will give a commission of Rs. 1,52,000, how comes Mr. Macintyre to have spent in two years considerably more than half of this amount?

Mr. Justice Malkin.—A large portion of that amount was expended on the authority of the court. I allude to the salaries allowed to the insolvent partners.

Mr. Leith, for Mr. Macintyre, contended, that the contract being impossible to be performed by a circumstance over which the assignee had no controul, he ought not to be visited with the penalty of paying the expenses incurred in the management of the estate. The 50th section of the Indian Insolvent Act gives in express terms power to the court to raise funds for "the expenses attending the execution of the act." A previous section gives power to the court to delay the sale of the estates of the insolvents, and authorizes the assignee to carry them on for the benefit of the creditors. This power had been exercised in this instance, and it would have been nugatory and futile to give a power to carry on and keep up the property without giving the court the means of meeting and paying expenses necessarily incurred in so doing. The late assignee did not ask for a remuneration for lost time and lost health expended in the management for the last two years, but only that he may be allowed to charge the estate with those expenses which were incurred in realizing debts and carrying on the property which he did under an order of the court. It is said, the late assignee is to be bound by his own contract: but what was that contract? It was that he should have four per cent. commission and that he should out of that commission pay all expenses. If he had received that commission this application would not have been made; but shall it be said that after giving his labour and close attention for the benefit of the estate for two years, during which no commission was payable, that because serious illness intervenes and forces him to relinquish the assigneeship and to quit the country, that he shall not be allowed to account the sums actually expended in hard cash for the benefit of the estate? It is contrary to every principle of reason and justice; contrary to common sense and must therefore be contrary to the law which is administered by this court which is a court of equity.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26.

Sir Benjamin Malkin said, this was a question of importance but not of difficulty, and as it was likely that the party against whom he was about to decide would appeal, he would give his judgment without further consideration. He did not think the court had the power to make the order. He assumed that the court has the power to order the expenses to be paid out of the estate, but the case did not turn on that point. There was a contract to pay expenses out of the commission, and the party must take the bad with the chance of the good. This seems particularly a case of hardship, but it is not within the rule of law, urged by Mr. Leith, that the contract is dissolved by the Act of God. If the creditors consent to give Mr. Holroyd five per cent., he may give Mr. Macintyre his expenses out of it, but there is a preliminary question as to whether the court can make the order for the payment of five per cent., and of this he would take time to consider and give his decision next court day. —Englishman.

The only matter of importance in the Insolvent Court this day was the decision as to the remuneration to be allowed to Mr. T. Holroyd for his future services as assignee to the estate of Cruttenden and Co. Sir Benjamin Malkin did not decide that the court had the power to alter the terms of the original order of January, 1834, which fixed the rate of remuneration to the late assignee at a commission of four per cent. on the dividends;—he did not decide that the court had not that power; but, under the circumstances, he thought that the terms of the original contract should be continued to Mr. Holroyd, as that might afford him an opportunity, were he so inclined to enter into an arrangement with the late assignee. This being the opinion of the Court, Mr. Clarke did not enter on the question of the mismanagement of the estate and it was understood that Mr. Dickens did not make an application for the costs of this opposition, but Sir B. Malkin expressed himself in favor of giving the costs, provided the Act gave him the power to do so. The order of January, 1834, allowing Mr. Cullen and Mr. Brown Rs. 600 per mensem, for their services, was discharged. —Oriental Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA LOTTERY.—The ticket No. 1,767 was drawn the capital prize of the lakh. This ticket is divided among many individuals—Messrs. Biale and Co. hold a half share. The anticipation of the Lottery Committee that a considerable loss would result this year from the Government Lottery, have been agreeably disappointed. A net profit of thirty-six thousand rupees has been the outcome of the speculation.

POINT PALMIRAS LIGHT-HOUSE.—Captain Bell, the Superintendent of Public Buildings, has proceeded down in the Hatgrass pilot vessel, to Point Palmiras. This officer is directed to take down the Light-House on the Point, in consequence of the island of Myppurah, on which it is situated, washing away. As a substitute for the light, rockets are to be fired at stated periods. A new site for a light-house has not yet been decided on.

TRANSIT DUTIES.—All the inland transit duties have been abolished throughout the Bengal and Agra presidencies.

POLICE AND REVENUE SYSTEM.—Government have issued a circular to the Magistrates of the several zillahs, calling on them to report on the advantages of uniting revenue and judicial functions. This enquiry is instituted at the request of the Court of Directors.

BENGAL ARCHERS.—The second day of shooting for the golden arrow, by the Bengal Archers, came off on the 27th February, but as none of the competitors gained more than two consecutive ends, the contest was postponed to the 5th March when the contest was again renewed and the prize won by Mr. C. W. Smith, their Captain.

DUM-DUM STEEPLE CHASE.—The Dum-Dum Steeple Chase across two miles of country, came off on the 25th February, and was won by Mr. N—n's Cadland.

THEFTS.—On the 23d February, Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co. were landing a large quantity of indigo from their boats, a hackery containing six chests, valued at 2,700 rupees, was stolen. The loss was discovered the next morning, when a report was made to the Police. The head carter missed the indigo the evening it was stolen, but thought that it had been taken to some of the other houses, a mistake of frequent occurrence. Although the man who stole the indigo had the start of the whole night, nearly half the indigo has been recovered in different places, where it had been unpacked and concealed.

A party of ten men, the crew of a dinghy and chowkee-boat, have been committed to prison by the magistrate, for stealing saltpetre and assailing the police Naib when he attempted to capture them.

An officer of a ship on landing at one of the ghauts on the 26th March gave a box containing valuables, to a coolie to carry for him; but soon after the man contrived to give his employer the slip, and it is supposed has made off with the property.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The Jupiter with the Right Honorable Lord Auckland and family on board, arrived on the 3d March. His Lordship landed in Calcutta on the 4th at 10 p. m. and immediately assumed charge of the Supreme Government.

THE LEVEE.—The Levee at the Government-House on the 8th March was crowded to excess. Lord Auckland appeared in the Windsor uniform, wearing his star and the insignia of the grand cross of the Bath. His Lordship appeared in good health.

THE DARBAR.—Lord Auckland held his first Darbar at the Government House on the 10th March. A great number of respectable natives were present on the occasion.

SIR CHAS. METCALFE.—Sir Chas. Metcalfe has received a renewed appointment of Provisional Governor-General, to take effect in case of Lord Auckland's death, removal, or retirement.

Sir Charles has accepted the office of Lieutenant-Governor of the North Western Provinces. The Court of Directors, as a mark of their sense of his services, have sanctioned the continuance to him of the allowances of a Governor of Agra. He is to have two Secretaries and be entrusted with the guidance of our relations with the frontier states.

CAPTAIN CORDIER.—The late Governor of Chandernagore, Capt. Cordier, has proceeded to France in the ship Gabrielle.

ABOLITION OF PERSIAN.—It is stated that the question regarding the abolition of Persian is now officially before the public authorities both here and in England.

STEAMERS.—The steamers now building for the Indian Navy, are to be of 600 tons burthen, 200 horse-power, and to mount in their bows two 68-pounders, each gun carrying upwards of one thousand musket balls when loaded. They are to be manned and officered from the Indian Navy, but to be equipped for general service. They are to leave the Thames on the 1st July next, and to steam out to Bombay, which place they are expected to reach by the 1st of September.

THE JARDINE STEAMER.—It is stated that the Jardine steamer is expected shortly in Calcutta from China, and that she is likely to be employed in this river as a passage boat.

The Forbes met with an accident on the 18th March, which nearly proved fatal to her. In towing the Forth down the river, off Garden Reach she was suddenly enveloped in a fog so dense, that the steersman could not see half the ship's length. The steamer had just before steered out from the bank to avoid a river sloop, and her commander, not being certain how far the vessel had shot over, hailed the pilot of the Forth and said he would cast off, and immediately let go his warp and put the helm over to starboard. The steamer was then close to the bank, but being end on would have gone clear over, had her warp also been let go; but the pilot of the Forth, knowing that if he did so his ship must have gone on the bank, immediately let go his anchor without casting off, and the steamer's way being checked, the vessel shot right on board of her, striking her on the larboard quarter and carrying her main-mast over the side, indenting the funnel, and taking away the rail and timber-heads as far as the gang-way. It was at first apprehended that the damage was very serious and likely to keep the steamer out of employ for some time; but on a careful examination, it has been discovered to be capable of entire repairs in three days.

Letters from Culpec on the Jumna, of the 14th March, mention the safe arrival there of the Sir Charles Metcalfe, steamer, on the previous evening, having left Allanabad on the 3d. She had been aground frequently, but without sustaining any injury, and was to proceed without delay as far as her supply of fuel would admit of.

A trial of speed between the George Swinton, the William Blunt and the Hooghly, took place on the 23rd March. The steamers started from off the Mint about noon for Barrackpore, each with a bauleah in tow and reached their destination about a quarter before three, the George Swinton beating by a quarter of a mile, and the William Blunt heading the Hooghly about a cable's length. At four in the afternoon they started again for Calcutta, and the William Blunt won the race back by three-quarters of a mile, the George Swinton beating the Hooghly by a quarter of a mile. Both trips were against the tide.

The Court of Directors have expressed their high displeasure, that the river iron boats were not nominated according to their desire; and with the exception of the boat which bears the name Lord William Bentinck, all these steamers have been re-named. The passenger vessels were named according to orders.

ACCIDENT ON BOARD THE FLAT.—We copy the following, furnished by Lieutenant Marshall, from the Oriental Observer:—

"I send you an account of what took place on board the Experimental Flat, when at anchor astern of the Diana steamer, 300 yards from the shore in the river Arpungassee (Sundarbans) on the night of the 8th March.

"I turned in at 10 o'clock, and about three quarters of an hour after was awake by a disturbance on deck, which, from the men rushing backwards and forwards, appeared to me to be an attack on the vessel by dacoits. I immediately jumped out of bed, drew my sword and was rushing up the hatchway when I received a tremendous blow on the head and neck, at the same time my clothes were torn from my back, I was knocked down the hatchway, and found myself instantly covered with blood. Seeing a dark object hanging over the hatchway, and from the blow, I was confirmed in the idea that we were attacked, and the scuffle and disturbance still continuing, I thought we were in a very fair way of losing the treasure and our lives. About a minute afterwards, when I had in some measure recovered the stunning effects of the blow, I heard Capt. Lindquist, commander of the steamer, calling me as loud as he could. I then made a second rush, and on arriving on deck, saw by the assistance of the torches the men had by that time procured, the body of my unfortunate bearer lying along the starboard side of the hatchway, horribly mangled by a tiger. The animal had seized him whilst sitting smoking his hubble-bubble near two seapoys, who were fishing by the larboard after gangway. The unfortunate man was perfectly dead, having had his neck completely bit through and through, besides a severe wound on the right breast. The animal had first got on the dingy belonging to the steamer which was fastened alongside the starboard after gangway and from thence on the flat. One of the men belonging to the dingy, and who was then in her, was in such a fright that he followed the tiger up, and in passing him got a severe wound under the right arm and some scratches on the back. On examining my own hurts, I found that they were two scratches on the right side of my neck, one down the right ear, one down the head, one over the right eye, and my face terribly bruised. The animal had left the print of his right paw with the blood of the unfortunate man on the back of my shirt as he tore it off. Had I been one step higher up the hatchway I must have been killed, as he had, in making the blow, cut the top step the eighth of an inch deep, about two inches and a half from the edge, with one of his nails. Fearing that from having tasted blood it was more than probable he would pay us another visit should we remain, we weighed anchor and steamed up five miles where we anchored for the remainder of the night."

PILOT VESSELS.—Three vessels of two hundred tons burthen each, builder's measurement, are now being constructed at Bombay for the Pilot establishment of this presidency. The plans and specification of the work, were sent from hence. The reason for building at Bombay, is the cheapness of work there, and the great durability of Malabar teak.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.—An attempt was made on the 18th March, by a gang of six thieves, to rob the Salt Golahs at Howrah. The gang were perceived by a chowkedar to enter the premises of Baboo Bissonauth, adjoining the Golahs, about dusk, and he suspecting their intentions, apprised the Jemadar of the thana of the circumstance, who repaired to the spot and succeeded in apprehending three of the vagabonds, the other three escaped.

MILITARY RETIRING FUND.—The Hurkaru of the 22d March states, on the authority of a correspondent, that the Court of Directors have rejected Mr. Curmin's plan for the Army pension, but have determined in lieu, that all officers who have served twenty-three years, (twenty in this country and three on furlough) are to be entitled to retire on the pay of a Captain; if they have served twenty-eight years, (twenty-five in the country and three on furlough) they are to be entitled to retire on the pay of a Major; if thirty-three years, (thirty in the country) on that of Lieut.-Colonel. Any officer is also allowed the option of retiring on the old plan of pension, if by any chance he should find himself entitled to a larger pension on that than the new one.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.—Mr. Charles Hunter, (a son of the late Dr. Hunter) who was proceeding down the river to take charge of a silk factory, purchased in connection with the firm of Becher, Mackintosh and Co., situate at Keerpoy, in the district of Burdwan, staid to witness the ascent of Mr. Robertson in his balloon, on the 16th March; and indifferent to the remonstrances of his friends, seated himself, to be the better enabled to observe the balloon, on a chair placed on a highly polished table which was put on the poop of his boat; and he is supposed to have slipped and fallen over board and been drowned. Mr. Hunter had on his person at the time of the accident a gold watch and bank-notes to the amount of four thousand rupees.

Mr. Gardner the builder, is also supposed to have fallen off the roof of his house while looking at the balloon, as he was found the next day in the rear of the house, close to the wall, quite dead.

THE ICE HOUSE.—The Ice Committee have assured Mr. Tudor of Boston, through his agent Mr. Bacon, the exclusive use of the Ice House for three years gratis, upon the condition of his supplying it with ice, at the rate of not less than four hundred tons per annum landed in Calcutta. Mr. Tudor's ice and apples are this time yielding him a good profit, especially the latter, for which the demand is so great that about half the quantity landed has already been disposed of. The daily demand for ice at present amounts to about eleven maunds. The sales of both articles in twelve days, exceeded five thousand rupees. The loss of ice by melting, is about a ton in five days.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The Public Library, it is said, is getting on very well; subscribers now begin to drop in, and several hundred works, chiefly recently published good novels, have been purchased: a catalogue of the books is in course of preparation.

THE BORING COMMITTEE.—The Boring Committee are proceeding with their operations in the Fort. The rods have now been carried to the depth of one hundred and twenty feet, with a bore of nine inches, and the water rises in the tubes to fourteen feet six inches below the surface of the earth. No impediment of any consequence has yet occurred. Similar operations are going on at Delhi but the results have not been made known.

THE CALCUTTA HOUNDS.—The whole of the hounds in the Calcutta kennel, will be sold by public auction in May next, if not previously disposed of by private contract.

THE CURRENCY.—A great deal of inconvenience still continuing to be felt by the coalition of the banians to extort the enormous sum of from one to two annas for exchanging a Company's rupee, the Trade Association have obtained an order from the Government to be supplied with a large quantity of pice daily from the mint, and have generously determined to supply it at the rate of sixteen annas for the rupee to the public in Calcutta and in the suburbs.

CIVIL ANNUITY FUND.—At a special meeting of the Managers of the Civil Service Annuity Fund, held on the 25th March, Mr. J. P. Grant was appointed Secretary to the Fund.

IMPORTATION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS.—Lord Auckland has brought out with him from England, a large quantity of seeds and plants, amounting to upwards of three hundred species, and among them is the cactus cochiniifer with the insect upon it.

UPPER ORPHAN SCHOOL.—Lieut. Chisne's appeal against the resolution of the General Management of the 26th December, 1853, reducing the sum allowed as marriage-portion from 2,000 to 1,500 rupees, has been negatived by a majority of 435 against 342. The appeal in behalf of the six children of the late Lieut.-Col. E. G. Cooper was also negatived; their admission to the benefits of the institution being opposed by 381 and advocated by 307.

THE COLES.—It is stated that the Coles are again in a state of ferment, and that they recently attacked the mail from Calcutta to Jubbulpore and murdered one of the runners, besides wounding three others.

NORTHWESTER.—A severe northwester, accompanied by much lightning, set in about half past eight on Wednesday night, and lasted till nearly eleven o'clock. The electric fluid struck Mr. Schorn's house in Creek Row and killed one of the native servants. The extent of damage done on the river is not known, but fifteen boxes of castor-oil, marked diamond, G. C. C. Ln came ashore between the sluices of Fort William, and are under charge of the police.

THE 53D ACT GEORGE III.—At a meeting of British-born inhabitants, held at Purneah on the 2d March, it was resolved to petition the Supreme Government of India against the repeal of the 53rd of Act George III, by which all inhabitants of the Mofussil will be rendered amenable to the Mofussil Courts without the power of appeal;—and that should the Supreme Government of India not listen to their prayer, a general petition of the British inhabitants residing throughout the country, should be forwarded to the Parliament of Great Britain, praying that their constitutional rights might not be encroached on. A petition to the Governor-General in Council against the proposed repeal has also been presented in Calcutta.

ORANGE LODGES.—Sir Henry Fane has republished Lord Hill's order of the 31st August last, prohibiting the introduction of Orange Lodges into the army, and forbidding all officers and soldiers to countenance or attend them.

MILITARY ITEM.—Sir E. K. Williams and Lieut.-Col. Pardon, of H. M.'s 41st regiment, have, in consequence of the want of discipline and subordination in that regiment while under their command, been reduced by Lord Hill to the alternative of either selling their commissions and quitting the service or of retiring on half pay.

TOWN DUTIES.—A strong recommendation from the Board of Customs, for the immediate abolition of the Town Duties in Bengal, was brought under the consideration of Government on the 10th March. The Chamber of Commerce also, it is said, are about to petition Government for their abolition.

THE BALLOON.—Mr. Robertson, agreeable to advertisement, ascended in his balloon from Garden Reach, on the 16th March. He ascended rapidly to about the altitude of 3,000 feet, and was then compelled to descend, in consequence of the gas in the balloon becoming condensed by its coming in contact with a strata of wet cloud. The balloon was entirely destroyed by the branches of the trees among which it alighted. The crowd of spectators which assembled to see the aeronaut ascend was unprecedented. Every dingy and available conveyance was hired on the occasion, and pedestrians innumerable, thronged to the scene of operation. All departed seemingly well pleased.

THE LAW COMMISSION.—The Law Commissioners, attended by their Secretary, made an official visit to the Court of Requests on the 11th March for the purpose of witnessing its proceedings.

FIRE.—Three extensive fires occurred on the 15th March—one in Fenwick's Bazaar, one in Toltollah Bazaar, and one in Short's Bazaar. Two or three lives were lost by that at Toltollah Bazaar.

APPREHENSION OF BURGLARS.—The police have succeeded in apprehending a formidable gang of burglars, with their implements of house-breaking and a quantity of wearing apparel which had been stolen from a washerwoman.

PREMIUM ON LITERATURE.—A premium of 1,000 rupees has been offered anonymously, through the School Book Society, for a work which may tend to the improvement of the people of India, by showing the immense advantages to be derived from complete civilization and an advanced state of intellectual improvement.

MR. SWINHORE.—Mr. Swinhoe has been appointed to the office of Company's Solicitor, which situation was lately vacated by the death of Mr. Paulin.

SUPPOSED MURDER.—Mr. George Alexander Eaglestone, a young man of about twenty-six years of age, who was proceeding down the river in a large panchoway to the Salthouse, which vessel had passed Kedgerree, and in which he had engaged his passage to England, called at the Kedgerree Post office on his way and enquired for letters. While at Kedgerree his boatmen left the boat and went and lodged a complaint against Mr. Eaglestone to the Post Master, stating that he had fired at one of them and had threatened not to pay them, which resolution they thought he would abide by. They were persuaded to return to the boat, and Mr. Eaglestone proceeded in pursuit of the Salthouse, but has never been seen or heard of since, and it has been ascertained that he did not join any of the outward-bound ships. A chest with his name upon it, containing a fiddle-case, some articles of clothing, &c., was picked up the next day floating past Kedgerree, and it is consequently conjectured, that either he has been murdered by the boat's crew or has met his death accidentally.

ARTILLERY REVIEW.—The Artillery was inspected by Major-General Watson, on the 19th March, shortly after sunrise. The whole of the manoeuvres were admirably performed, and the Major-General warmly expressed his eulogium of the proficiency of the troops, to the Brigadier Commandant.

PETITION OF THE INHABITANTS OF HOWRAH.—Messrs. Currie and Mackenzie, both residents of Howrah, have, in an interview with the Governor-General, represented to him the inconvenience to which the inhabitants of Howrah are subject from having no magisterial protection save what is meted out to them by the authority at Allipore.

MOFUSSIL.

LOODHIANAH.—Capt. Wade, Political Agent at Loodianah, is trying the experiment of introducing the silk worm at Loodianah, Umballah and Seharunpore.

DELHI.—The heavy rains which recently fell in the neighbourhood of Delhi, broke both the bridges of boats over the Jumna.

Major Pew of the Artillery recently had a severe fall from his buggy, by which the acromion process of his left shoulder was fractured, besides several severe bruises received by him.

A tiger recently visited Horel, from whence, after wounding a man and killing a cow, it effected its escape. The man's life was preserved by a herd of buffaloes, which rushed to his rescue on the tiger's seizing him, and beat off the savage brute.

It is stated that the papers seized in the possession of Hookman Chund and Futteh Lall, implicate Chimun Singh, the Chief of Saewar, as a confederate in the Jeypore tragedy. He has been formally cited to appear at Jeypore and defend himself; but having declined to do so, a force of 5,000 Jeyporeans were about to be sent to storm his fort and capture him.

A gang of sixteen convicts, who were employed on the road leading from the Ajmere gate of Delhi to Kootub, recently effected their escape, after killing on the spot three of the burkundazes who guarded them, and have since baffled all the attempts of the magistrate to apprehend them. The prisoners effected their escape by the help of some arms which had been deposited for the purpose close at hand in a gram field by their friends, and although the burkundazes opposed a strong resistance they were overpowered by the prisoners. The convicts in their flight, dangerously wounded a traveller whom they met on the road.

A Mussulman, a short time since, in a fit of jealousy, stabbed his paramour in the side with a knife, in consequence of her incontinency. The woman almost immediately expired. The assassin fled and has hitherto eluded all attempts to apprehend him.

The chuprases who some time since attacked and wounded Mr. Louis, the Magistrate of Suhsawan, in open court, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

LANDOUR.—There has been a very severe snow storm at Landour and Mussooree, the average depth of the snow being four feet. Several men fell victims to the inclemency of the weather.

MIRZAPORE.—Mr. Woodcock, the magistrate of Mirzapore, while paying his usual visit to the jail, was assaulted by one of the prisoners, who struck him in the face.

CHUNAR.—Grain is exceedingly dear at this station. Gram sells at ten seers less for the rupee than it did formerly.

JUDBOOR.—Intelligence from Jubboor has been received, stating that the insurgents had beaten off the Local Horse. A force was to proceed from Mhow to coerce them.

SUEDUBAD.—A boy of six years of age was recently robbed at this station of a pair of silver ornaments and then thrown into a well and killed. His murderer was a lad of fourteen years old, who was detected shortly afterwards, while endeavouring to sell the ornaments.

HATRAS.—An epidemic of a very fatal character, hitherto unknown, has been raging throughout the entire cold weather at this station, and still continues. It attacks under the form of fever, which after two or three days terminates in death. So great has been the mortality, that there is scarcely a family that has not lost one or more of its members.

NEEMUTCH.—Towards the end of February last, a daring robbery was committed by a band of upwards of sixty depredators on the commissariat treasury of this station. They, in regular battle array, attacked the Main Guard, which, after standing three volleys and returning the fire, fell back, and the robbers rushed on, broke open the treasure-chest, and took away 8,000 rupees. Two of the gang were shot on their retreat and one was cut down by a chuprase; the rest effected their escape with the booty.

ALLAHABAD.—Some of the Uncovenanted Assistants at Allahabad have invited the co-operation of certain of the members of that body in Calcutta to join them in an appeal to the Supreme Government against the decision of Governor Ross, on the subject of their memorial regarding the principle involved in the case of Mr. Permien.

ALLAHABAD.—A numerously attended meeting of the uncovenanted servants of Government took place on the 7th March for the purpose of considering the reply of the Agra Government to their memorial. The letter of Government was read and its contents gave great dissatisfaction. It was resolved:—

1st. "That an appeal from the decision of the Governor of Agra, on the subject of official interference in private matters, be preferred to the Governor-General of India in Council."

2nd. "That a Committee consisting of five members be appointed to frame the appeal."

3rd. "That the committee so appointed do correspond with some influential members of the uncovenanted body under the Bengal Presidency, with a view to obtain their co-operation in the objects of this meeting."

It is stated that government have it in contemplation to appoint a civil and sessions judge to the districts of Azimgur, Boolahshahur, and Belah respectively.

Syud Tussudduck Hosein, the principal Sudder Ameen of Fattelpore, who was sometime ago charged with bribery and corruption, has been suspended from his post. The charges against the Ameen have not been substantiated, but suspicion is strongly attached to him.

Capt. Smith and Lieut. Sale, while boating on the river, were overtaken by a squall and cap-sized, and after being for half an hour in the water, were picked up by a ferry boat.

RIVER STEAMERS.—The Sir Charles Metcalfe and George Swinton steam boats, arrived at Allahabad on the 29th Feb. the former bringing the flat in tow. An attempt was made by the commander of the Sir Charles Metcalfe to find a channel for his vessel in the Ganges, but he was not able to discover one with a continuous depth sufficient for his craft. An experiment is being now made in the Jumna, and the vessel will go as high as she can find her way.

Measures have been taken to establish an asylum for the blind in this station. The first movement was made on the 12th instant, and in four days a handsome sum was subscribed.

Some investigations affecting the honesty of the amlah of the Court are now going on which have put those honest functionaries in no little flight.

BENARES.—A robbery to a large extent, which has been going on for some time in the shop of Messrs. Tuttle and Charles, merchants at Benares, has been detected and the thieves, his own domestics, placed in custody.

The Rajah of Coorg has arrived with his camp at Benares.

A school is being erected by Government, for the instruction of natives in English literature.

All descriptions of grain are very dear at Benares.

BUNDLERUND.—A daring dacoity was committed on the night of the 12th February, on the river Jumna, on a boat laden with brass utensils and iron bars, and property to the value of one hundred and fifty rupees was carried off. Two of the robbers have been apprehended with a portion of the plunder, and made over to the Sessions Judge of Bundelcund for trial.

LIEUT. COL. ALVES.—It is stated, that a rumour is in circulation that the life of Lieut. Col. Alves has again been attempted; also that the British force had marched to reduce some refractory chief, who, with about five hundred followers, declined to surrender a mud fort which he had in his possession.

HAZAREEBAUGH.—On the 16th March the European barracks at Hazareebaugh took fire, and one barrack was entirely destroyed before the flames could be extinguished. It is suspected that the conflagration was created by the thatchers who are employed to repair the barracks.

MONGHYR.—A man was murdered on the 19th March near the village of Hybutgunge, on the high road, about three coss from Monghyr. The murderer, a thug, was captured shortly after perpetrating the horrible deed, and is now imprisoned.

On the morning of the 1st March at about 6 o'clock, a smart shock of earthquake was felt at Monghyr.

NUSSEERABAD.—A court-martial has been ordered to assemble at Nusseerabad, for the trial of Lieut.-Col. Dundas, of the Artillery Regiment, on charges preferred against him by Capt. Rawlinson of the same Regiment, connected with the drawing of Mess allowance, for an Artillery Mess at Nusseerabad, where, it is stated, no Mess existed.

NATIVE STATES.

GOOMSUR.—A letter from Goomsur of the 7th February states that the young Rajah has given himself up; that he came in on the 6th February, with two of his uncles and some servants and attendants; and that the zenana of the late Rajah were on their way to the British camp, accompanied by some more chiefs. From another source we learn, that the old Rajah is no dead, as reported, but has lately obliged Mr. Russel to apply to Guttack for a reinforcement of troops.

CASHMERE.—Some congenial showers lately experienced in Cashmere have been productive of happy effects, in lowering the price of the necessaries of life, and many deserters have in consequence returned to their homes from which they were driven by the famine which has prevailed.

SCINDE.—The native Ukhbars say, that the Hukeem of Scinde, Meer Noor Mahomed Khan, has invited Sooja ool Mulk to assume the government of Shikarpore, and that he has accepted the offer.

SCIND.—This state is reported to be in a state of complete disorganization, and troops, have been sent from Saugor and Mhow to subdue the insurrection.

LAHORE.—The Mahomedan population of Lahore have recently been greatly scandalized by Monsr. Ventura having, by order of Runjeet Singh, appropriated one of their places of worship for the purpose of holding a kutchery therein.

Runjeet Sing is anxious to entertain a body of Cavalry, to be completely covered with armour.

Serious complaints have been made of the damage done by Now Nihal Singh's troops in the district of Deral Ishmael Khap.

Mr. Holland has been ordered to take charge of the Magazine and manufacture gunpowder.

Some trouble has been experienced from the chief of Cusband, Sirdar Payandah Khan.

CASUL.—A faqueer recently found five hundred gold-mahurs buried in a vessel. Dost Mahomed on being informed of the circumstance, sent for the man and questioned him regarding it, and on his confessing that he had found the money, confirmed him in the possession of it, observing at the same time, that had he equivocated at all or denied the fact, he would have deprived him of the treasure.

BOKHARA.—The King of Bokhara has passed a royal ordinance prohibiting his Hindoo subjects from burnings their dead, on the ground that such cremation is offensive, unhealthy and abhorrent to the feelings of Musulmen. The alternative offered to all recusants is removal from the city. This however the Hindoos are not likely to provoke, as they have quietly submitted to this capricious order.

ULWAR.—Dewan Jushee Ram, the Mooktear of the Ulwar Rajah, has been imprisoned in consequence of his embezzling considerable property.

GWALIOR.—Major Sutherland, the Resident, has returned to Gwalior from his interview with the Baiza Baie.

Hurree Holkar has appointed a vakeel to represent his interests at Government House, and likewise to act as a spy, as occasion may require. The country is said to be in a state of insurrection, that the villages and towns have been plundered, and that our forces have been sent to quell the disturbances.

OUDE.—Accounts received from Oude, state that his Majesty intended paying a visit to zillah Mahundee, which is represented as being in a disturbed state at present. The unfortunate Begum is still in the garden of Ilams Ali, and has employed 300 fighting men to guard her person. She has had a few interviews with her son, the results of which, however, are not distinctly known. Roshun Ood Dowlah has been forbidden to attend at Court, and it is likely that he will be a great sufferer by this evil turn of fortune. Bukhtawur Sing and Dursheru Sing, who were in confinement for some time, are now in great favor; and Dursheru Sing Koonby, who was instrumental in banishing the Padsha Begum, has been in confinement for some days.

YARKUND.—This district is being considerably improved by the Moghul Governor, Abdool Rehman Beg, who is exerting himself in eradicating the banditti that infest it, and endeavouring to extend its commerce by encouraging and protecting traders.

BUDDUKSHIAN.—This country is represented to have suffered severely from the oppression and violence of the Toorkmans and other Tartar tribes; but the interference of the Ruler of Yarkund, has in some measure restored tranquillity.

MADRAS.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—A Horticultural Society has been established at Bangalore, and Col. Cubbon has offered the gratuitous use of the Rajah's Garden to the Society.

BARK SKIMMER.—The bark Skimmer has not yet been sold and her sale depends on the way her accounts shall be settled. Capt. Gillon and his crew are all lodged in the castle, and their examination is sedulously continued. Mr. Davis, the chief mate, is in confinement for having maltreated his commander.

HAIL STORM.—A severe hail-storm occurred at Rajahmundry on the 12th February by which great devastation was created. It rained incessantly for sixteen hours, and the hail, which was of enormous size, completely destroyed whole crops of grain in the field. Many men and cattle were killed by the lightning.

MR. SULLIVAN.—Mr. Sullivan took his seat at the Council Board, in succession to Mr. Oliver, on the 7th March.

MADRAS MINT.—It is stated, that orders have been received from the Court of Directors, to re-establish the Madras Mint.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A midshipman of the Duke of Argyle, named Davis, was missed on the 3rd March. When last seen, he was attempting to catch blubber with a boat-hook, and is supposed to have fallen over board and been drowned.

CAPT. DOUGLAS.—Capt. Douglas of the 49th M. N. I., who was some time since removed by Sir Frederick Adam from the Residency at Tanjore, has been appointed Paymaster at Vellore.

DR. WIGHT.—Dr. Wight, Surgeon of 23rd Regt. M. N. I., a gentleman of scientific acquirements, has been appointed by the Government to enquire and report on the cultivation of cotton, tobacco, and generally of all Indian products.

THE BREAK-WATER.—The Break-water Committee met on the 5th March at the Adyar, for the purpose of entering into a thorough examination of the progress of the works there, and have expressed themselves highly satisfied with what has been already done, and are fully confident of being able to carry the work into execution.

It has been ascertained, that the stones thrown in at the site of the Break-water, have not sunk, as was erroneously stated, below the bottom of the sea.

A report of progress has been published by the Committee, from which it appears that of the amount of subscriptions realized, Rs. 14,500 have been expended, and but little more done than the providing for the accommodation of the convicts, building a few huts, and making sundry purchases of working materials.

HURRICANE.—On the 16th and 17th of Feb. in Lat. 14° South and Long. 62° East, the Ganges, Captain Burgess, experienced a severe hurricane from N. W.; on the 21st of the same month, she fell in with the Sir Herbert Taylor of Calcutta from Mauritius, with the loss of all her three topmasts and quarter-boats.

BOMBAY.

COMPANY'S COTTON SCREWS.—The Company's Cotton Screws were sold to the Appolo Cotton Screw Company on the 13th February for two lakhs and eighty-one thousand rupees.

COTTON CULTIVATION.—The Government have authorized the grant of farms on favorable terms to all persons willing to engage in the cultivation of cotton; and it is also prepared to sanction allowances of cash in certain cases, to individuals on their giving security.

THE OVER-LAND MAILS.—The H. C. cruiser Shannon, has been detained in the Red Sea to bring on the January and February mails.

ENTERTAINMENT TO SIR R. GRANT.—On the 16th February, a splendid entertainment was given by Aga Mahammud Rahim Sherazee, to Sir R. Grant and a large party of ladies and gentlemen.

NEW ROAD.—The road between Tanna and Panwell, has been commenced upon, and operations are carried on actively.

MARRIAGE OF THE RAJAH OF AKULCOTE.—The marriage of the young Rajah of Akulcote, with the daughter of Luxoomun Rao Sinday, of Torgul, took place at Torgul on the 7th March.

PARGUD.—The Gudkurees of Pargud, being dissatisfied with the conduct of the Carcoon placed over them, and being unable to obtain redress after repeatedly petitioning Government, sent their families to places of security and revolted. Troops were immediately sent against them, and Pargud was conquered without a single shot being fired, the people readily giving up their arms to the English.

SUPPOSED MURDER.—A short time since the body of a weaver woman was found on the border of a deserted well at Belgaum. It is supposed the unfortunate creature was murdered on account of the ornaments on the person by a young goldsmith who had purchased a piece of cloth from her the day before and had taken her home on a plea of paying for the same.

THE SENAI BRAHMIN.—A great deal of commotion has been created in the village of Soda, by a Byraghee having been mistaken by the Senai Brahmins there for one of their caste who had absconded from his home some time previously. The man was admitted into several of the families on this supposition, but after remaining with them for some time he again deserted, and it has since been discovered that he was not of their sect. The people of the villages which had given their consent to receive the man, and those who had come in contact with the families which had received him, have been pronounced polluted by their Swamy, to whose notice the affair has been brought.

ATTACK ON THE LADY GRANT.—The following is an account of the attack of the pirates on the Lady Grant, opium runner:—

It appears that the Lady Grant was attacked on the 2nd February by no less than five Malay praos off Pulo Jarra. The praos were observed standing out from the Sambelange, and as the wind fell light, they lowered their sails and pulled towards the Lady Grant. On observing their approach, Captain Jeffrey fired at them, when they hoisted the black flag and redoubled their exertions to get at the schooner. She, however, taking advantage of a light breeze that then sprung up, did not await their onset, but glided away and left them, in the darkness of the evening, out of sight. The moon soon thereafter rose, when the wind died away, and left the clipper again to the mercy of the pirates, or rather to the defensive resources of her crew. Happid for the opium under-writers, these were not found wanting and her able Commander most judiciously determined on coming to an anchor with a spring on his cable. About ten o'clock the praos were observed right a-head, pulling quietly but eagerly for the schooner. A small piece on the fore-castle was immediately fired at them on which they yelled, beat their tom-toms, and continued pulling towards the schooner. Captain Jeffrey in the meantime, by the assistance of the spring on his cable, had brought the Lady Grant's broadside to bear on them, and kept up a constant, and from the result, evidently a well directed fire, the guns being ably served by the officers and six or seven British seamen shipped as Seacunnies. The largest prao came on in advance; this vessel, Captain Jeffrey says, was nearly as large as the Lady Grant, and so full of men that it is supposed it was the intention of the pirates to carry the clipper by a coup de main on boarding from her. They had in this instance miscalculated, for being now within pistol shot the rounds of grape and cannon from the Lady Grant drove them from their sweeps to take shelter below, and their vessel was allowed to drift away with the tide. Before daylight the Lady Grant had weighed and made sail to an increasing breeze, and nothing more was seen of the pirates.

CUSTOM DUTIES.—The merchants at Singapore called upon the Resident to explain the nature of the rumoured intention of the Supreme Government to impose customs' duties upon the trade of Singapore, and received from him a letter in reply, stating that he had been directed to submit a scheme to that effect in order to cover the expenses of a flotilla and custom house, and that it was therefore proposed to suggest a tax of 2½ per cent. upon certain articles of export and import of which he annexed a list. In consequence they held a public meeting on the 4th ultimo, at which it was agreed to petition both Houses of Parliament and the Supreme Government of India against a measure which would be most impolitic with reference to the particular circumstances of Singapore.

RACE OF THE CLIPPERS.—The Clippers had all arrived at Singapore. The Syed Khan has won the race, beating the Red Rover by one day, the Cowajee Family two days and Water Witch three days.

The following is the order of their departures from Calcutta and arrivals at Singapore.

Syed Khan ,.....	8 Jan.	20 Jan.	12 days
Red Rover ,.....	11 Jan.	24 Jan.	13 days
Water Witch ,.....	12 Jan.	27 Jan.	15 days
Cowajee Family ,.....	14 Jan.	28 Jan.	14 days

The Syed Khan after passing Singapore, sprung her mainmast and was obliged to put back. The damage was, however, soon repaired and she sailed again on the evening of the 24th of January.

BURMAH.

DISTURBANCES IN ABRAKAN.—Letters from Arrakan, dated as late as the 23rd ultimo, represent the state of the interior as still disturbed by banditti. One letter of the 21st states, that the detachment sent out from Akyab were still in pursuit of the "Rob Roy" of Arrakan, but as he was too cowardly to come to "open fight," they were obliged to follow him as he retreated into the interior. The last intelligence which had been received from the detachment previously to the above date, was accompanied by two prisoners, and purported that the people in the hills had come forward to assist in the discovery of the haunts of the marauders. Several persons had been arrested in Akyab on suspicion of being in alliance with the robber-chief, and witnesses had come forward offering to depose against them. Another letter of the 23rd mentions, that a detachment of two companies with three officers from Kyauk-Phyoo were at Ayab, for the purpose of rendering any assistance which might become necessary, and it is further added—"we have no news from the jungles this-morning, and we think the detachment may have come up with Keechyung and his gang, and, consequently, have no time for writing." The small military force at Akyab has been repeatedly called upon to perform similar excursions in the interior, and although they have been as often successful in breaking up the robber-bands, they have not yet succeeded in crushing their disorderly spirit.

Letters recently received from Akyab contain further information respecting the insurrection that has broken out in those parts. The leaders of the insurgent robbers, it seems, are the principal Mugh residents of the country, who having secretly collected a quantity of muskets and ammunition and sent them into the interior, and got a desperate character to head them, collected a large body of men and commenced their work of indiscriminate plunder and rapine. On the first intimation of the insurrection reaching Akyab, two Lieutenants with a party of Mugh sepoy, were sent against the rebels, but they were over-powered by numbers and forced to retreat. Fresh troops were, however, speedily sent to reinforce the discomfited party, and the rebels were soon defeated and dispersed, and the ringleaders of the insurrection captured and lodged in prison. One of the chiefs is a descendant of the Arracan King, and as such was in the enjoyment of a pension from the British Government, and several others held respectable situations under it. Suspicion also attaches to the Moorogree of the Court.

A letter from Rangoon of a recent date, states, that the amount of duties and customs in kind, which had been collected during the preceding year (October 1834 to October 1835) exceeded what had ever before been realized. The customs in kind exceeded 34,000 pieces and the duties in cash amounted to 45,000 rupees. This increase is attributed to the experiment which the late Woonghee adopted of lowering the port charges or a time; and the Resident has been endeavouring to persuade the Court of Ava to adhere to these reduced rates, but has hitherto been unsuccessful.

Capt. Hannay arrived at Mogaung on the 6th of January and had proceeded towards Assam on the 22nd of that month.

ARABIA.

The following items of intelligence have been received from Arabia:—

The Immaum of Senna is dead, and has been succeeded by his son Ally-bin-Abdoolla Munsoor, who is about twenty-five years of age; the people of Senna give out that their new Prince is about to set out on an expedition to recover his country from the Turks.

The communication between Mocha and Senna is completely interrupted,—the Immaum having established posts where troops are stationed to prevent any one from passing into the interior. Mohamed Ally Pasha's attempt to establish a monopoly for the purchase of coffee at Mocha and the other ports in his possession is said to have been foiled by the merchants threatening to have recourse to other ports not under his influence:—a compromise is said to have been effected, by which half of the coffee produce is to be taken by the Pasha, and half by the merchants.

Owing to the failure of the rains this year a great scarcity prevails throughout Yemen and the greater part of Arabia. In the country of the powerful tribe of the Beni Aseer, hundreds are dying of actual starvation, and at Senna the people are said to be suffering much from the same cause: the coffee crop also had very generally failed.

It is said to be His Highness the Pasha's intention to send another expedition of forty thousand men into the Aseer country to endeavour to conquer that very powerful tribe.

The general scarcity of grain it is expected will occasion a considerable demand for that produce in India.

SIAM.

Advices from Bangkok up to the 22d Jan. have been received. The insurrection in Coch in China, and consequent disturbances which have prevailed there for the last three or four years, are now quelled. The country is quiet and in a good state of defence. A rumour is now current at Bangkok that the King of Siam is about to give his favorite daughter in marriage to CHAN-FAH, and elevate him to the rank of second King or Premier, in which case nothing but death probably will prevent his succeeding to the throne.

CHINA.

The second officer of the Fairy Queen, who was unjustly seized and imprisoned for the purpose of extorting a squeeze, has been released from confinement. A party of Englishmen, headed by Mr. Gibb, penetrated within the walls of the city with a petition to the Fooyuen, demanding his release, which after a great deal of riot and fighting with cudgels, they succeeded in delivering, and shortly after he was given up.

The steamer Jardine seems to create a considerable sensation among the Chinese, and is regarded by them with great suspicion. Having been ordered away from the Chinese waters by the Howqua, and failed to comply with his mandate, she was, while passing the Bogue, fired on from every fort on both sides. The Jardine backed out of the fire, and on her commander demanding an explanation from the admiral, he was informed that the admiral was positively ordered by the authorities not to let the vessel pass. The operations of the Jardine has been therefore put a stop to for some time, as the representations of the merchants to Howqua in her favor have been unattended to.

A Moorman, who asserts that he was shipwrecked on the coast of Fukkeen and the only one escaped, has been forwarded overland to Canton. It is thought his story is false, and that he is a deserter from some of the coasters. He states that he has been well treated by the Chinese during his journey.

Kidnapping has been carried on very briskly in the city. Some of the offenders have been captured. Many executions of robbers have taken place.

FIRE AT CANTON.—Another great fire broke out in Canton on the 24th January, which lasted for six hours and consumed a very great number of houses. The conflagration of November 1835 is computed to have destroyed no less than 1,400 houses.

TEA PLANT.—The Canton Register mentions, that a letter from Manila of the 21st December last, states that the tea plant has just been discovered to grow very plentifully in that country, and that the Government has granted to one person the right of exporting or selling it for ten years.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kuhn's Monthly Price Current, March 31, 1836.)

The Governments of Agra and Bengal have since our last number rescinded the regulations imposed on internal transit duties, accordingly all goods and merchandize may after the 1st April next, pass to and from the territories under the said Government free of permits, rowanahs, &c. but the town duties are still continued. A strong recommendation from the Board of Customs for the immediate abolition of the town duties has however been brought under the consideration of Government, and we understand a plan is laid before the Chamber of Commerce for raising an increased revenue from the Sea Customs in Bengal sufficient to compensate Government for the loss of the internal transit and town duties, for which it is said a sum of thirteen lacks net would be sufficient.

INDIGO.—Freights, which receded during the middle of the month, have again advanced, and may probably rule high during the remainder of the season, and very likely also during the next, if there be no addition to the tonnage usually available at this port.

Several parcels have changed hands with an advance of 10 to 15 Rs.

Importation up to this day amounts to

Very little is remaining in the market which will probably be held for advices of the January sales. The holders are expecting some further advance on prices.

Accounts from the interior state in general that the sowing is going on very favourably. Some factories complain however of injury to the plant of early sowing from continued dry weather.

OPIMUM.—The market was rather inactive during the whole month and only a few parcels changed hands. The 3d sale of the Honourable Company's was held on the 20th. There was a numerous attendance, the first 4 lots were bought at 1340, but prices receded immediately afterwards.

The following is an abstract of the result of this sale.

The recent advices from China, per Red Rover, and Cowarjes Family, arrived on the 29th instant, appear to be not so favourable as was expected, the stock is becoming heavy, and the Chinese decline to buy at the present high prices.

RAW SILK.—The advices from home continue to influence favourably upon the prices, and supplies from the interior are insufficient to satisfy the demand. The March band which is now arriving is reported large and good.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—Continue in active demand for shipment to England and the United States; prices without alteration

COTTON.—Transactions have been on a limited scale during the whole month; the few sales reported are intended for China and France. Shipments to England are suspended.

SALTPETRE.—This article has been well sustained by the demand for England, France and the United States. The prices of the assortments are reported as in our last.

SUGAR.—The sugar market continues to improve, some demand has been felt for shipments to Europe, and business has been rather active during the last week.

LAC.—Lac Dye.—Without alteration in regard to prices.

Shell Lac.—Prices steady

Stick Lac.—In limited inquiry, at steady prices.

RICE.—There has been an active demand of Munghy and Bellam Rice, for shipments to Bourbon and the Mauritius, and prices of these qualities remain steady as quoted in our last. Should tonnage become more available, the prices of Cargo Rice are likely to have some improvement.

WHEAT.—Shipments for Bourbon, the Mauritius and for Sydney continue. The tonnage available in this port is insufficient for the demand which exists for Exportation to these places.

HIDES.—Are in limited inquiry for the American markets.

LINSEED.—Remains as reported in our last. No sales have come to our notice

SPICES, DRUGS, &c.—Business to some extent have been done in these articles.

METALS.—The Copper market appears to be disposed to improvement and holders are firm, expecting a further advance in prices. The stock in the bazar is reported to be small. Peruvian Slab has further advanced.

Spelter.—Importation having been moderate during the month, the price of this article obtained some improvement. —The Mirzapore Price Current is however somewhat below the Calcutta valuation, giving the price of this produce as Sonat Rupees 64 which is equal to Current Rupees 6 15 p. fy. md.

Lead.—We have only one sale to report; prices are quoted without alteration since our last.

Iron.—The assortments are reported as in our last; the market is firm at our quotations.

Steel.—Very little doing; no sales of importance to report.

Tin Plates.—Continue dull of sales, without variation in our quotations.

Quicksilver.—No sales to report and the price remains as in our last number.

TWIST.—Prices of the assortments have declined since our last and the market bears rather an unfavourable aspect. Transactions have been on a limited scale during the greater part of the month, sales to some importance have however been effected within these last few days. The following importations have occurred since our last: 22 bales, 22 trusses, and 4 boxes per Mary Dugdale. 19 bales per Coromandel. 32 bales and 13 trusses per Sterlingshire. 8 bales per Argyle. 286 packages, 144 Cotton Yarn and Twist per Jupiter. 1 bale, 42 bales Cotton Yarn per Donna Carmelita. 265 bales and trusses per Comala. 5 bales per Futish Salem. 100 per Mona.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.—The market has been rather active during the month, owing to the late arrivals. Prices are steady, and demand continues firm.

WOOLLENS.—Market inactive as usually at this season.

PUBLIC MEETING AT THE TOWN HALL.

12TH APRIL, 1836.

Pursuant to the requisition made to the Sheriff, a public Meeting took place at the Town Hall on Tuesday, which was very respectfully attended, for the purpose of taking into consideration certain measures, internally affecting the good Government of Calcutta.

At a quarter past ten o'clock, the Sheriff was unanimously called to the chair.

The chairman commenced the proceedings, by reading the requisition, which has already appeared before our readers. He said that upon two of the objects embraced in this requisition, the introduction of trial by jury, and the proper constitution of the Court of Quarter Sessions, it would be unnecessary for him to dwell at any length, as they comprised measures, which had been frequently discussed in that Hall. Respecting the third object, the adoption of which would form the subject of the discussion of the present Meeting, he meant the extension of the local limits of the Town of Calcutta, he believed it had never yet been asked for, or as far as his knowledge went, been taken into consideration, as a measure to be requested at the hands of the Government. It would form one of the chief objects of the present Meeting to determine upon the propriety of doing so now.

Mr. CLARKE in moving the first resolution begged to be permitted to say a few words on his own account, and as explanatory of the position in which he stood in relation to the resolutions about to be proposed. It might perhaps happen that, those who were not aware of that position, might raise objections to his taking so prominent a part in these proceedings on the score of his profession. But whether or no, any objection were raised to the man, there could be none to the measure. But the truth was, that although he should always be ready to suggest and promote every measure calculated for the public good, he was in the present instance but the instrument of third parties. He had long been connected with a most respectable body, forming part of this community—he meant the Trade Association, whose counsel he had the honor to be, and in supporting one of the present measures, he was advocating an improvement the suggestion of which had emanated from that body. But all three of the measures were in their objects and consequences so intimately connected together, that he was of opinion they ought all to be simultaneously asked for and obtained. Upon the subject of the extension of trial by Jury enough has already been said, upon the many occasions in which it has been discussed. It will suffice to say, that, the Judges of the Court, the practitioners of the court, and the suitors of the court, were unanimous in calling for its introduction. It has been petitioned for again and again, both here and at home, and no reason on earth exists why, when the inhabitants of a British City call for participation in that which is regarded as a Briton's birth-right, it should be refused to them. The present Chief Justice in 1829, expressed his decided opinion in favour of its introduction, and Sir John P. Grant, both when at the Bar and since his elevation to the Bench, has spoken in equally decided and equally favorable terms of the measure. In confirmation of this Mr. Clarke read a letter from Sir J. P. Grant to the following effect:—

Calcutta, 8th July, 1835.

Dear Sir,—I have had the honour to receive from you a copy of the resolution passed at a Meeting of the Committee for promoting trial by Jury in Civil causes held on the 4th July instant. I observe that these resolutions conclude by one "that the preceding resolutions be communicated to the Judges of the Supreme Court and that they be respectfully solicited to favour the Committee with any suggestions to which the proposed measure may give rise."

My opinion of the convenience and expediency of introducing Jury Trial in Civil causes in the Supreme Courts of the King in India are already known to the public of Calcutta, and my experience as a Judge of the Supreme Court at Calcutta has only strengthened and confirmed them.

I should have great pleasure in offering to the committee such suggestions as might occur to me, and which I might think useful upon this important subject if I did not think from the situation that I hold I shall more contribute to the success of the measure by abstaining from entering upon a consideration of its practical details till it shall be ripened and put into form as I hope and trust it may be at no distant period.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,

(Signed) J. P. GRANT,

LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Esq., Chairman of the Committee for promoting Trial by Jury in Civil Causes.

This letter he had read to the meeting, in order to shew what was the opinion upon this subject, of one of our learned bench, who was himself a Scotchman and had witnessed the beneficial effects of the introduction of trial by Jury in Scotland; and whose experience at Bombay and subsequently here, had fully enabled him to form a correct judgment as to the eligibility of the introduction of juries here.

With respect to the petition that we have already submitted to our local Government, it has received no reply whatsoever; but whatever be the fate of that, he would recommend the inhabitants of Calcutta to apply over and over again, and in short never to cease in their efforts in this matter till those efforts were crowned with success.

To advert to another object of our present meeting, it will greatly facilitate their adoption of juries and lighten the burthen of jurymen, if we extend at the same time our jury list. This we may calculate upon effecting to a very considerable extent, by enlarging the limits of the Town so as to comprehend the populous suburbs, which have grown up around it since the ancient boundary was established. By this means instead of a Jury list, comprising only from 800 to a thousand, we should have one containing from two to three thousand; and thus, although the number of trials would necessarily be increased, with extent of jurisdiction, yet the jury list would be far more than proportionately increased, to meet them. The adoption of the measure of extension of the limits of Calcutta at the present day, will be perfectly consistent with the reasons upon which they were established as they now subsist, for when first defined they were made to comprise all the inhabited portions of the town, and the adjusting the present boundaries to the present inhabitancy, will be acting on the same principle as that upon which the limits of Calcutta were originally established. Either it is wise and politic to establish certain and distinct limits, or it is not. If the latter, abolish them altogether; if the former, let them be established according to the true and real state of the town, and do not leave them in this present anomalous state, calling them the boundaries of Calcutta, when in fact they exclude a very large portion of the town. The consequence of this state of things is that you have persons of the same religion, the same birth and country, residing in the same street, who are severally subject to two totally different codes of Law; those living on one side of the street shall be subject to English Law, and those on the other to Mahomedan Law, the latter exposed to the additional inconvenience or rather absurdity of having their case made and stated in Persian according to Mahomedan practice, by some Moonshee who might write down, either what he chose or, what he might be paid to write. Is not this an evil, and an evil calling loudly for remedy? (Cheers.)

There is another strong reason, urged Mr. Clarke, that the present limits of Calcutta should be extended to its actual boundaries. The present state of things keeps open a door to the most extensive fraud. It occurred to him to see the letter of a debtor of one of his clients, the former an East Indian by birth and a resident in the Mofussil. The proposal that he submitted was to this effect, "I owe you 6,000 rupees, I will give you 2,000 if you chuse to take it; if not, I am not subject to your law and you may sue me in the Mofussil court and by appealing again and again, I will contrive to keep you out of the money for 12 years." Under these circumstances he recommended his client to chuse the least of two great evils. But it is too bad that a man who comes every day into Calcutta, gets his livelihood here, and his credit here, and yet is amenable to no jurisdiction here; but to that law only which, as we have seen, gives the prospect of a decision after a period of 12 years.

Gentlemen, said Mr. Clarke, on the subject of the court of Quarter Sessions, which forms one ground of our application to Government, I cannot, but say, that the non-existence of such a court is a disgrace to the Town of Calcutta. It was in consequence of your own complaints of the defects of your criminal code, that the 9th of Geo. 4, the Indian criminal act, was passed, but through the supineness of those for whose benefit that act was passed, and from the neglect of Government, the virtue of the act has been in a great degree nullified. I do not ask you to take my own bare assertion, I will read to you what was said by Mr. Justice Ryan in his charge to the Grand Jury on the occasion of introducing the Act into Calcutta:—

"I know that it has been considered a question of some doubt and difficulty, whether any of the Statutes enable Justices of the Peace under commissions of this court to hold a Quarter Sessions, for any other purpose than those of making an assessment. I will not now enter into the difficulties to which the various Statutes relating to this subject give rise.

"I can only say that whatever may be the inconvenience (which I should have thought would have been present to those who assisted in the framing of this Act) it will be absolutely necessary that a Court of General or Quarter Sessions should be held, in order that the directions of this Statute may be complied with. This necessity is the more apparent from the provisions of the 48th and 49th sections.

"The 48th section provides that in all cases (not limited to conviction under this Act,) where the sum adjudged to be paid on any summary conviction shall exceed fifty sicca rupees; or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one calendar month; or conviction shall take place before one justice only; any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such conviction, may appeal to the next Court of General Quarter Sessions. The clause goes on to direct the notices, &c. which the party appealing shall give, and provides for his discharge, if in prison, under the conviction on his giving sureties to try the appeal. The Court at such Sessions is to hear and determine the matter of the appeal.

By this act, the convictions before a Magistrate are appealable to a Court of Quarter Sessions—you have no such Court, and the consequence is that an individual who from ignorance of Law, from prejudice or other cause, suffers injustice at the hands of a convicting magistrate, has no remedy, owing to the supineness which has suffered the Court of Quarter Sessions to become extinct. In reference to the other powers which ought to be vested in a Court of Quarter Sessions, and the subjects that ought to be cognizable by them, I need hardly enlarge upon the state of our police, the state of our conservancy establishment, the state of our public streets and ways and the nuisances by which they are disgraced and rendered offensive. The reason of all this is plain enough, and may be plainly stated—the head of that conservancy department is a civil servant of the Company, and as human nature is human nature, in whatever service employed, we cannot expect that he will do other than what he considers will be grateful to his employers. We cannot expect him to look after our affairs with the same sincerity and zeal, that he attends to their wishes or commands. In the hands of the Government are placed almost all the funds of the Town, but I should wish them to be placed under the control and management of an able and intelligent body of men sitting as an efficient Court of Quarter Sessions, and till we have them, we must not expect the good Government of Calcutta in its Conservancy Department.

Mr. CLARKE then moved the following resolutions, and was seconded by Mr. Bagshaw:—

RESOLVED,—That the solicitations of the Inhabitants of Calcutta for the extension of trial by jury to civil cases, not having been complied with, another petition be presented to the Right Honorable the Governor-General in Council praying for the immediate adoption of the measure.

RESOLVED,—That the petition also pray for the establishment in Calcutta of a Court of General and Quarter Sessions in which His Majesty's Justices of the Peace may be vested with the same powers and jurisdiction as are exercised by the Magistracy in England.

RESOLVED,—That the petition pray that a new proclamation be issued extending the local limits of Calcutta so that the Inhabitants of the populous suburbs may be subject to the same Code of Law and Courts of Justice as the residents of the city.

Mr. WYBURN rose and said that according to the speech of Mr. Clarke he was led to infer the adoption of the trial by Jury in civil cases, was intended as a measure of reform in the judicial system of the Supreme Court, of Calcutta. "I consider it, Sir, to be my duty to point out that unless something more is stated explanatory of the nature and operation of trial by jury in civil cases, the inhabitants of Calcutta might perhaps be induced to adopt a measure which would perhaps turn out far less beneficial to this community than they apprehended. That trial by jury in criminal cases was an inestimable good, could not be denied, but for the very reason, that it was good, was the trial by jury in civil cases to be considered otherwise. If a man were tried for a crime, he was either acquitted or convicted; and if acquitted, it was not in the power of the Judge to send him back to another jury to be tried over again. But it was far otherwise as regarded the verdicts of civil juries, for in these, if the judge felt himself dissatisfied with the verdict as found by the jury, it was a matter of course to grant a new trial, toties quoties, till the judge was satisfied with the verdict found. He would instance the question of libel, in which he would cite the case of one Levi, which is reported in the books, when a jury said it was no libel, the judge said it was; upon which there was a new trial; a second jury confirmed the verdict of the former; and then it was sent to a third. Such being the case he was of opinion that it would be wise in the inhabitants of Calcutta, instead of adopting trial by jury in civil cases, without qualification or restriction, to accompany the demand, with a suggestion of some provision by which the verdicts of Juries should be rendered final and conclusive. It is a frequent cause of motion for new trial, that the verdict has been given against evidence; but as the Supreme Court is at present constituted this is an evil which is not to be apprehended. Another difficulty that was peculiar to the present state of the community here, was the difficulty that would be found in obtaining an impartial trial." The learned gentleman instanced a case, where a cause had been removed out of Cornwall to Devonshire, on the ground that an impartial jury, could not be had in the former county; for the same reason it was successively removed from Devonshire to Somersetshire, and finally was brought up to be tried at Westminster as the only place where an impartial jury could be got. Was not the community here too limited and too biassed to be impartial? "Sometimes too, juries were found to be obstinate and perverse, and insisted upon deciding on the Law as well as the fact, and that sometimes after a most ludicrous manner." In proof of this assertion the learned gentleman instanced the case of one jury, which deducted from the amount of damages they awarded the plaintiff, the amount of the damages which another jury had awarded to the defendant, in an action brought by the latter, against the Plaintiff, for a black eye. "It is such circumstances as these that give the Courts an absolute power to send back a case for a new trial." The learned gentleman concluded by recommending the inhabitants of Calcutta to pause before they adopted a measure, which would leave them just as much as ever at the mercy of the Court, with this additional evil, that it would compel them to pay for new trials.

Mr. W. P. GRANT rose and expressed his distinct and unequivocal denial of the legal position upon which the gentleman who spoke last, had founded his argument. He denied, that a new trial in civil cases was, by the Law of England, to be had in the Courts where that law was administered, as a matter of course. Such was not a principle that was either recognised or acted upon, in our Courts, and if some few instances could be adduced, of new trials granted upon slight or even improper grounds, such instances could weigh nothing against the preponderating advantages of the introduction of the trial by jury in all cases when it was practicable. He regarded it as likely to be productive of peculiar advantages to this country at the present moment, a country which may be regarded as now on the eve, or rather in the early dawning of a new and brighter era. He considered that whatever operated as a means of bringing a knowledge of the laws, and the best institutions of Law, home to the feelings and bosoms of the great mass of the people; whatever tended to familiarize them with habits and notions of administrative justice, subjects towards which they had never hitherto been taught to elevate their thoughts, must be of the most salutary consequences, to the improvement and civilization of India. It would tend to engender proper sentiments in every man, in respect to his rights and to induce him fearlessly to avow and maintain them. It had been said that the people of this country are not yet fit for this mode of trial; but if we look back to the history of our own country we shall find, that when juries were first established in England, the people were in a condition little differing from that of the people of this country.

It was the institution of trial by jury that did so much to make them what they now are; and the same results may be anticipated from its introduction here. A disregard to truth is the common vice of slaves, and was so proverbially so among the ancients, that with the comedians of Rome a slave was always the representative of a consummate liar. Give the inhabitants of this country, the institutions of a free country, and they will soon learn to value truth, which can only co-exist with freedom.

The example of Ceylon furnishes the most irresistible evidence of the benefits to be expected from the introduction of this mode of trial. In Ceylon so late as 1810 domestic slavery was common; but subsequently to the introduction of jury trial, that community petitioned the Government to do away with slavery. Here too every successive Governor we have had has expressed the same opinion, that till you can get the people themselves to administer justice, you must not expect to see justice done.

Mr. LEITH said that it was not his intention to address the present meeting, nor should he have done so but to express his astonishment at the statement that in civil cases, after a verdict duly found, a new trial was to be had as a matter of course. Such was not the case; and as to sending a case for a new trial, there would indeed be good ground of complaint, if the Judge or the Court, attempted to decide differently from the jury; but what did they? why where a decision appeared to be dubious, for some good and sufficient cause, they sent it to another jury, that all doubt might be cleared away.

Mr. WYBURN begged to explain that he did not object to the introduction of trial by jury, but merely intended to suggest its modification, so that it might not give rise to an interminable series of new trials.

Mr. DICKENS said that he had not intended to have spoken upon this occasion, and he was only induced to do so in order to express his astonishment that a British Lawyer should be found to advance so extraordinary a ground of complaint, as that a party to a suit, should possess the right of appeal from a first decision.

Here Mr. WYBURN rose for the purpose of explanation but after some noisy discussion as to order, he sat down again.

Mr. DICKENS proceeded. The object attained by the adoption of the practice of new trials, was, that instead of bringing a writ of attainder of false verdict, against the jury who tried the cause, first, it was sent to another jury to see if they would come to a similar conclusion. In addition to what had been said in favor of the introduction of trials by jury he would furnish the meeting with an example which would tend much to establish its value. The American States contained a population of 12 millions, and in each of these states it was customary to hold periodical meetings of the people, at which to revise, and if possible to improve, the judicial system then prevailing; and yet it has never occurred that a variation has been proposed from the former mode of holding juries.

After some remarks by Mr. Wyburn, much interrupted on the score of order, the first resolution was put and carried unanimously.

The second resolution now coming to be discussed. Mr. Wyburn rose to say that it was superfluous, inasmuch as the Magistracy could be compelled by mandamus, issuing out of the Supreme Court, to hold a Court of General Quarter Sessions, for the purpose of hearing any appeal which an aggrieved party might think fit to call for.

Mr. CLARKE maintained that the resolution so far from being superfluous was absolutely necessary. That in order to constitute a Court of Quarter Sessions, competent to the trials of Appeal, it was necessary that the commission under which the Magistrate was appointed, should contain certain words conveying such authority as should constitute him one of those before whom such appeals could be heard. These words were not contained in the commission under which Magistrates have been appointed here.

After some objections on the part of Mr. Wyburn, the resolution was carried unanimously.

In the third resolution, Mr. Wyburn expressed his full concurrence, and it was passed without a voice being raised against it.

Mr. C. PRINSEP said that in anticipation of that unanimity which he was happy to find prevail, he had prepared and would, with the permission of the meeting, read a petition which he had drawn up, expressing the objects which the present meeting were desirous, as had been former meetings, of obtaining. He had hoped that the same hand, from which they had received the liberty of the press would have bestowed these benefits also, and thus have added another leaf to that wreath which justly encircles his brow; but he congratulated the meeting that we had now to make our applications for improvement and reform to a British Lawyer, who might be presumed to regard British rights, and British institutions, with all the respect they deserve. He concluded by recommending the meeting, never to desist from their application till their object was achieved.

Mr. PRINSEP then read the Petition which was approved and adopted by the Meeting—in the following form.

Resolved.—That the Petition now read be adopted and presented to the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council. Carried unanimously.

Mr. SMITH then stated that with a view to carrying into effect, the resolutions passed at the meeting, it was advisable that a Committee be appointed, and he proposed the following resolution.

Resolved.—That the following Gentlemen be appointed a Committee for the purpose of forwarding the Petition to the Right Honorable the Governor-General, and also to adopt such measures as may be necessary to further the proposed objects. Messrs. Longueville Clarke, J. R. Bagshaw, F. H. Burkinyoung, Dwarkanath Tagore, Théodore Dickens, David Hare, J. Kyd, H. M. Parker, C. R. Prinsep, Prosonnocomar Tagore, A. Rogers, H. W. Torrens, T. E. M. Turton, Captain Vint, James Young, W. R. Young, W. P. Grant, and J. F. Leath. Carried unanimously.

It was also resolved that the Petition be presented to the Governor-General by the Sheriff, attended by the Committee as a Deputation.

After which, the usual vote of thanks to the Chairman was carried unanimously, and the Meeting broke up.

The Resolutions in a separate and official form, and the Petition, will be found in a preceding page.

THE PETITION.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE LORD AUCKLAND, GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

(The Petition of the Inhabitants of Calcutta, and its Neighbourhood.)

HUMBLY SHewETH,—That the Government and Legislature of Great Britain on the late renewal of the Territorial Grant to the Honorable East India Company expressed their full conviction of the imperfect state of the legal institutions of the British dominions in India by not only adding to the Supreme Council a Legislative member, whose duty was limited exclusively to sitting and voting at meetings for the making of Laws and Regulations, but by likewise constituting a Law Commission for the purpose of enquiring into and reporting upon the existing judicial establishments and suggesting alterations therein.

That your Petitioners although well disposed to rely on the Council and Commission so constituted for the remedy of the manifold and manifest defects and vices of the existing Judicial system, see little chance of any relief until those who are to abide the result shall voluntarily come forward with such suggestions as their peculiar experience may have supplied to them.

That your Petitioners as a part of the public of India, beg leave to bring to the notice of your Lordship in Council some particulars in which the administration of Justice may be essentially improved, and in which your Petitioners feel themselves more immediately interested and most competent to express an opinion.

That your Petitioners in the first place again crave attention to the important object of extending the principle of Jury-Trial to Civil as well as Criminal Cases, and that not only in the Supreme Court of this Presidency but in all His Majesty's Courts within the British territories in India, if not in the Company's Courts also. That such extension has long been desired by this community is too well known to admit of question.

So soon after the establishment of the Supreme Court in Bengal in the year 1779, it was claimed as matter of right by the inhabitants of Calcutta, but denied by the Supreme Court, as not warranted by the terms of the Charter of Justice. It was, however, even then, and has since continually been, declared from the Bench to be a measure as desirable to the Judges as to the public. In April, 1832, a Petition for that object to the British Legislature was resolved upon unanimously at a General Meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta convened by the Sheriff and held at the Town Hall. A committee was then appointed, and a Petition drawn up and signed, which was accordingly transmitted to England and presented to His Majesty and both Houses of Parliament. A copy of that Petition is annexed, and we crave reference to it as expressing the general wish of the community of that period. The British Legislature being already occupied in framing a new Constitutional Act for India, the Petitioners by letter from the Right Honourable Charles Grant, then Chairman of the Board of Control, addressed to the Chairman of the Committee, were referred to the Legislative Council about to be established, as the proper authority to whom the applications should be made. In consequence of that communication, a second General Meeting was, on the requisition of the former Committee, convened by the Sheriff and held at the Town Hall on the 8th of July 1835, when another Petition to the Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council was voted, and a Committee appointed to present and to forward the object of it. To that Petition, a copy of which is also annexed, we crave the earnest attention of your Lordship, that although the Petition last mentioned was duly presented, and the Committee, in compliance with the instructions of the General Meeting, respectfully tendered their services in supplying materials for the better effecting of the object in view, your Petitioners regret to say, that nothing appears to have been done in the matter, nor has any answer yet been given to the prayer of that Petition.

Your Petitioners, therefore, beg leave to renew the application and to recommend it so immediate notice as an object that may presently and safely be effected without interfering with any scheme of general codification, of which (should any such be actually in progress or in contemplation,) it will necessarily form a prominent feature.

Your Petitioners also beg to draw attention to an object of great local interest, and which has often been agitated that is to say, the revival of the Old Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace for the trial of minor offences and misdemeanours committed within the limits of Calcutta. The discontinuance of that court has long been felt as a local grievance. The time of the Superior court has been occupied with matters greatly beneath its dignity : and the partial remedy attempted by vesting increased power in the Magistracy, without the aid of either Jury or professional skill has, not only been unsatisfactory in the result, but is moreover a dangerous encroachment on that principle of English Jurisprudence which awards to every one the right of trial by his equals.

Your Petitioners have yet another matter to bring to the notice of your Lordship in Council, and one that has intimate relation to the two other objects abovementioned, namely, the extension of the limits of the Local Jurisdiction of Calcutta over its populous Suburbs and dependencies. The present limits were defined by Proclamation, as long ago as the year 1794, since which time large Suburbs have grown up, wherein the whole of the business of shipbuilding, and many other branches of manufacture are carried on with capital and skill supplied from the Town itself. Within these Suburbs not only is the Law administered by different Courts, from those exercising jurisdiction over the Town itself, but the process and even the principles of Law are widely different. Thus traders and others, whose whole dealings and occupations are transacted within the Town, and with its inhabitants, are not subjected to the jurisdiction—or amenable to the Laws—there prevalent. Even if the prospect held out to our hopes of a general uniformity in the Law, and in the process by which it will be administered were less uncertain, and less remote than to us it appears to be—still must it be a manifest advantage, on grounds as well of economy to the Government as of simplification and consistency, that, for all local transactions and rights, not only the Law should be one and the same, but that it should be administered by one and the same tribunal.

Your Petitioners are well aware that objections may be urged against such extension on the score of difference in the expenses of suit ; but the powers of reform and retrenchment now vested in your Lordship in Council are so ample, as to render any such objection very easily removable.

For all these several purposes of general and of local interest, your Petitioners humbly pray, that your Lordship in Council will take into your earliest consideration the matter of the former Petition for the extension of Jury Trial to Civil Cases,—and will also direct that early measures may be taken for the revival of the court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta. Moreover that, with a view to economy and uniformity in the local administration of Justice, your Lordship will be pleased in execution of the powers vested in you by the 1st Section of Statute 55th Geo. III. C. 84 to extend the limits of the Town of Calcutta so as to comprise the whole of its populous Suburbs and dependencies.

And your Petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

THE AUTHENTICATED RESOLUTIONS.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, was held this day at the Town Hall, pursuant to a requisition addressed to the Sheriff, Richard Howe Cockrell, Esq. the Sheriff was placed in the chair.

Moved by Mr. Longueville Clarke, seconded by Mr. Bagshaw :—

RESOLVED.—“ That the solicitations of the inhabitants of Calcutta for the extension of trial by jury to civil cases, not having been complied with, another petition be presented to the Right Honorable the Governor-General in Council, praying for the immediate adoption of the measure.”

RESOLVED.—“ That the petition also pray for the establishment in Calcutta of a Court of General and Quarter Sessions in which His Majesty's Justices of the Peace may be vested with the same powers and jurisdiction as are exercised by the Magistracy in England.”

RESOLVED.—“ That the petition pray that a new proclamation be issued extending the local limits of Calcutta so that the inhabitants of the populous suburbs may be subject to the same Code of Law and Courts of Justice as the residents of the city.” Carried unanimously.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general Meeting of this Society was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 13th April, 1836.

THE HON'BLE SIR E. RYAN, President, in the Chair.

Members Present.

General Sir H. Fane, the Hon'ble W. H. L. Melville, Major Honeywood, Dr. Marshman, Messrs. Leach, Syers, Grant, Storm, Piddington, Trebeck, Hare, Allan, Earle, J. Watson, Bagshaw, Kyd, Hammetton and Bell.

The proceedings of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

New Members Elected.

Lieut. Meik of H. M. 49th Regt., and Lieut. Bigge, of Assam, proposed at last meeting, were duly elected by ballot.

New Members Proposed.

The President intimated to the meeting, that the Right Honourable Lord Auckland had kindly consented to become the Society's Patron.

1.—R. N. C. Hamilton, Esq., officiating Magistrate and Collector at Meerut, proposed by Sir E. Ryan, seconded by the Hon'ble Mr. Melville

2.—The Hon'ble Col. Rehling, Governor of Serampore, proposed by Dr. Marshman, seconded by Sir E. Ryan.

3.—J. O. Voight, Esq., of Serampore, proposed by Dr. Marshman, seconded by Mr. Bell.

4.—Major Smyth, Commanding 4th Local Horse, proposed by Major Honeywood, seconded by the Hon. Mr. Melville.

5.—E. A. Samuels, Esq., officiating Magistrate of Hoogly, proposed by Mr. Piddington.

6.—Capt. J. Mathie, European Regiment Assam, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm.

7.—Lieut. T. Brodie, 10th Regt. Assam, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm.

8.—James Crooke, Esq., proposed by W. Storm, Esq., seconded by John Allan, Esq.

9.—J. Mackay, Esq., on his quick departure for N. Holland, proposed by Mr. Bell as an Honorary Member, seconded by Dr. Marshman

The President, in reference to the suggestions offered at last meeting by the Hon'ble Mr. Melville, read to the meeting, the Resolution of a Committee, appointed to revise the Rules, &c. regarding medals and prizes, distributable to mallies, which Resolutions were ordered to be adopted, and printed in the 1st No. of the Society's transactions, now in the press.

The chief points to which the Committee had devoted attention here, to the encouragement of Vegetables out of season, by withdrawing premiums, from such as have been brought to perfection in season, and to divide the exhibitions, so as to afford mallies an opportunity of competing for some articles, heretofore excluded from the Annual Exhibition by reason of being wholly out of season that time.

The Committee had also proposed a Resolution which was passed on a suggestion offered some time ago by Sir H. Fane, to give ample encouragement for the production of strawberries in large quantities.

The following communications were read, and donations presented.

Nos. 1 and 2, letters from the Right Honourable Lord Auckland to the officiating Secretary, dated the 16th and 29th March.

The first enclosing copy of a report by Mr. Masters, of the Botanical Garden, upon the state of preservation, in which he found a variety of plants brought to India by the Governor-General.

In directing attention to the mode of distribution proposed by Mr. Masters, Lord Auckland's offers for the acceptance of the society, such as are noted, desiring the officiating Secretary to name any others, that he might consider useful.

The assortment of seeds and plants presented, comprehends, kitchen garden seeds, 13 varieties of oats, 11 ditto of Barley, 61 ditto of wheat, 6 ditto of millet, 1 ditto of rye, 2 ditto of tobacco, 2 ditto of Brazilian cotton, seven species of figs, 2 ditto of vanilla aramaticum 1 ditto of frasinus ornus, 1 ditto adonia Sp., 1 metrosiderous, Sp., 10 grape vines, to which Mr. Bell proposed to add the cactus cochinellifer, maranta arundinacea, and a few others.

The second, presenting a box of kitchen garden seeds, in addition to the above, which includes, hemlock, henbane, and foxglove, put up at the suggestion of Dr. Royle.

The Secretary had collected the opinions of four medical members, viz. Drs. Bramely, Jackson, Strong and Egerton, which were favorable to experiments being made at the Botanic Garden, Russapugla, Saharunpore and Assam.

No. 3.—From Mr. Masters, dated the 19th March, forwarding to the Secretary by order of Lord Auckland, a "memorandum as to the introduction of useful plants to India," by John Forbes Royle, Esq., together with the grain and garden seeds referred to in His Lordship's letter No. 1.

Doctor Royle's paper abounds in suggestions at once interesting and of great importance. He shows, that by attention to soil, climate and season, there are very few plants, or trees, indigenous to Europe, Africa and America, that may not be successfully introduced throughout India, and enumerates many which would be both useful and ornamental.

Doctor Royle, in recommending attention to the improvement of rice cultivation in India, relates an anecdote of a Liverpool merchant sending to his correspondent in Calcutta some bags of American rice, which in cleaning had been deprived of the embryo as well as the husk and again that a quantity of kiln-dried hops had been actually sent to Calcutta for cultivation.

Doctor Royle's observations, concise, and to the point, will, no doubt, lead to further and more general enquiry.

No. 4.—From E. A. Samuells, Esq., Officiating Magistrate at Hooghly, to the Secretary, dated 21st March, presenting a small box of West India seeds, received from a relative resident in Jamaica, and requesting to be favored with any seeds, of East Indian plants, which may not be common to the west (including the lichee and mango-teen) which Mr. S. states would be most acceptable to his correspondent, who is devoted to Horticultural pursuits. The contents of this box are as follows. 1, the "broad leaf," a valuable forest tree; 2, the star apple; 3, the neesberry; 4, the bilberry; 5, the red sorrel; 6, the pimento; 7, the fiddle wood; 8, guinea grass; 9, pimento grass; 10, bahama grass.

No. 5.—From Dr. Wise, Civil Surgeon at Hooghly, dated 27th March, in reply to Mr. Bell's letter, intimates Mr. Samuells's polite offer to write to Jamaica, for any seeds or plants the society may desire.

Mr. 6.—From John Vaupell, Esq., seeds to the Bombay Agricultural and Horticultural Society, dated 9th March, acknowledging receipt of Mr. Bell's letter of the 11th February, on the subject of obtaining a supply of Egyptian cotton seed, and acclimated Otaheite sugarcane.

Mr. V. advises the shipment of a small quantity of the former, which had been just brought round on the steamer, by a Mr. Mayo, passenger from Egypt, who intends engaging in the culture of cotton on that side of India. This seed was a donation from Mr. Mayo, to the Bombay Society, and very kindly transferred by that body to meet the objects of the Calcutta institution.

A cask of Mauritius (originally Otaheite) sugar-cane, has also been sent in the name of the Framjee Cowasjee Shaw, the Bombay Society's native President, the produce of his state in Salsette.

No. 7.—From J. Vaupeli, Esq., in continuation dated the 18th March, replying fully to Mr. Bell's letters of the 11th and 20th February, and 1st March, intimating the conviction of the Society at Bombay, as to the necessity of maintaining a more intimate and regular correspondence with that of Calcutta for the furtherance of the objects of both.

Mr. V. gives hopes that ere long the transactions of his society will be published, and encloses a valuable paper on the mode successfully adopted at Bombay, in cultivating the Mauritius cane. He also mentions having received and forwarded by the steamer, Mr. Bell's letter to Mr. Waghorn, requesting a supply of Egyptian cotton seed.

No. 8.—From Captain Perry, commanding the American ship Esclipse, presenting some maize, American potatoes, and squash.

No. 9.—From W. H. S. Rainey, Esq., of Jessore, presenting a bottle of Persian tobacco seed, and asking for more guinea grass.

No. 10.—From W. Cobb Hurry, Esq., dated the 24th March, strongly recommending to the attention of Planters and gentlemen in the interior, the cultivation of guinea grass, in which he had been most successful.

Mr. Hurry has had as much as forty tons from a single beegah, and four or five cuttings in a season.

Mr. Hurry recommends its propagation from cuttings, rather than seed.

No. 11.—From Mr. Bell, in reply to Mr. Hurry, stating his conviction that with proper care seed may be successfully cultivated and pointing out the advantage of being able, by means of seed, to disperse this grass to the utmost limits. Mr. B. has kept up a continual succession of crops from seed for many years, and finds that it does not deteriorate.

No. 12.—From Mr. Hurry, explaining that his objection to seed was mainly based on the probable disappointment that would be experienced from sowing in the usual manner.

No. 13.—From Mr. Masters, forwarding for the use of the Society a copy of Dr. Roxburgh's observations on substitutes for hemp and flax, and stating that the species of hemp referred to by Colonel Burney, in a letter, submitted on the 10th February last, is the "Urtica tenacissima" therein referred to.

No. 14.—From Dr. Strong, forwarding a paper on the hemp of New Zealand, and Mr. Stevenson's analysis of a sample of cochineal (grana sylvestra), taken from the prickly cactus, in the grounds of the Insane Hospital.

Mr. Stevenson after putting the colouring properties of the insect to the test by eight different processes, winds up his remarks by stating that "enough has been done to prove the substance (if not cochineal) equal to that valuable dye, for all purposes to which it is applied in the arts."

No. 15.—From J. W. Grant, Esq., Officiating Superintendent of the Botanical Garden, in reply to a letter from the Officiating Secretary dated 9th ultimo, soliciting on behalf of the Society, the use of a few beegahs of ground, within the limits of the garden, to be applied as a nursery for the reception and propagation of sugar-cane ordered from the Mauritius.

Mr. Grant promptly meets the Society with by a reference to Mr. Masters.

Mr. Bell informed the Meeting that he had accordingly met Mr. Masters, and that an eligible spot of ground measuring more or less six beegahs, had been fixed upon for the nursery, which Mr. Masters had promised to have dug up at the Society's expense.

No. 16.—From Mr. R. Smith presenting some seeds of the "Calendula striata" or African Marigold, with drawings of the varieties which produced this seed.

No. 17.—From H. Piddington, Esq., presenting a sample of tobacco and cheroots made from it, the produce of Cabul Seed, with a pint of seed for distribution.

No. 18.—From Mr. Bell, a small supply of seeds from his garden.

No. 19.—From Dr. Burke dated 11th April, presenting in the name of Lieutenant-Colonel Stacy of Allyghur, a bottle containing varieties of the olemaria.

No. 20.—Extract of a letter from J. M. Mackie, Esq., of Dinspore, dated the 5th April, "sending by banghy, a Bombay mangoe, the produce of a tree which blossomed in December, the fruit from which was all destroyed by a severe frost save two, which were blown down on the 4th instant, by a N. wester. In February, although the fruit was on the tree, it again threw out a luxuriant blossom and is now covered with a second crop of fruit.

(N. B. The mangoe had not arrived when the meeting took place.)

No. 21.—Extract of a letter from Mr. H. Inglis of Sylhet to James Kyd, Esq., dated 21st March, on the subject of Mr. Kyd's proposal to cultivate potatoes in the hills, for the Calcutta Market, for which end Mr. Inglis very kindly offers his best assistance, and Mr. Kyd has undertaken to procure, through a friend at Dacca, a supply to be sent direct thence to Cherra Poonjee.

No. 22.—From Dr. Strong to the Secretary, (this date) presenting a quantity of coffee grown in his garden at Russapugla for distribution to members, accompanied by printed rules for preparing it, also a specimen of the cochineal insect on the prickly cactus.

No. 23.—Mr. Piddington produced an apicot (ripe) from a tree in the garden of Mr. Perrier at Chandernagore, the flavor of which was reported by competent Judges, to be equal to any grown in France.

The thanks of the meeting were directed to be offered to the Right Honorable Lord Auckland, for the fine assortments of seeds and plants, presented to the society, and to all other contributors.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, on the 2d April, 1836

Dr. Stewart of the Bombay service, proposed at the last Meeting, was elected a Member of the Society.

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read :

From Dr. Kinns of Ceylon acknowledging the receipt of the publications, presented by the Society to the Military Medical Library of that Island.

From Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. of Madras, forwarding the Society's Account Current with the firm closed on the 31st December last, shewing a balance in their hands of Rs. 251-4-6.

From Principal Bramley, acknowledging with thanks the receipt of the preparation of the double fetus, presented to the Medical College by the Society, at their last Meeting.

From Mr. Mackinnon, of Tirhoot, addressed to Superintending Surgeon Marshall, forwarding two specimens of urinary calculi lately extracted by Dr. Mackinnon, from native patients.

From T. Chapman, Esq., of Purneah, enclosing an account of a case of injured spleen, which was excised by Dr. Macdonald of that Station, and accompanied by a portion of spleen which had been removed and which was presented for the Museum.

The subject of the case was a native about 30 years of age, who was gored in the abdomen by a buffalo : through the wound, which was about 3 inches in length, protruded a portion of the spleen six days afterwards : the man sought Medical advice from Dr. Macdonald, who at first tied a ligature round the mass with a view of interrupting the circulation, and thus causing it to slough off ; on further consideration however he determined to remove it with a knife which was accordingly done, and the patient rapidly recovered.

A communication from Mr. Masters, of the Botanical Garden, was then laid before the Meeting. Mr. Masters stated that he had been directed by the Right Honble Lord Auckland to inform the Society that His Lordship had brought out with him in the Jupiter a number of plants of different kinds, amongst the rest several of a Medicinal nature, and he requested the Society to inform him whether any of these were likely to flourish in India ; what would be the best method of disposing of them, and whether any members of their body resided in situations favourable to the cultivation of the different specimens, so that they might be made over to their charge. Among the list were—Smilax asperiparilla, guaiacum officinale, pastinaca opoponax, dorstenia, contrayerva, quassia amara, pistacia lentiscus, juniperus sabinus, atropa belladonna, &c.

By Dr. Bramley, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, proposed that a sub committee be appointed to inquire into the matter in order that a suitable reply to the queries of Mr. Masters, might through that gentleman be communicated to the Right Honble the Governor-General.

The Members of the Committee to the Messrs. Corbyn, Stewart and O'Shaughnessy.

This was unanimously agreed to.

The following communications were then presented :

An account of an examination of the double fetus presented to the Medical College, at the last meeting, drawn up by Dr. Goodeve.

Cases of diseased eye by Mr. W. O. Green, Assistant-Surgeon, presented by the Medical Board.

A paper upon mortification, by Dr. Wise, of Hooghly, accompanied by drawings, and a preparation of a diseased hand for the museum, presented by the Medical Board.

It was then proposed by Dr. Corbyn, seconded by Dr. Stewart. That the preparations of the Society's museum be made over to the charge of the Medical College.

This resolution was carried unanimously.

A Paper upon some of the consequences arising from the use of lead for various purposes on boardship, by the late W. Twining, Esq., was then read, and discussed.

• This paper was an unfinished one which was in progress of preparation at the time of Dr. Twining's lamented decease, and was consequently in many respects imperfect. The paper was written in consequence of several cases of lead poisoning having occurred on board the ships Broadbentbury and Othello, many of which were brought to Mr. Twining's notice. The Ship Broadbentbury, sailed from England in the spring of 1834, and arrived in the Hooghly on the 23d September, having touched at Madras and remained there several days.

While the ship was at Madras a supply of arrack was taken on board for the use of the ship's crew. Soon after their arrival at the Sand Heads the men began to suffer from colic, and in 6 or 7 weeks from the date of the arrival of the arrack on board, a large proportion of the crew were more or less affected with the symptoms of colica pictonum—of these twenty-two came under Dr. Twining's care. On representing to the Captain that these diseases must have been produced by the use of lead amongst the crew of his ship, he appeared incredulous, as he could not attribute it to any cause of the kind. The only purpose for which lead had been employed on board were the lining large harness, each with two divisions, in which the contents of a cask of beef and another of pork were deposited for daily use, and a leaden pipe through which spirits were pumped up from the casks in the spirit room. It became necessary therefore to ascertain to what extent lead was soluble in the brine of salted meat, or in the brandy which had been used during the voyage to Madras, or in the arrack which had been served out from the date of the ships arrival at that port. For that purpose several experiments, upon these fluids were made.

Experiment I.—A portion of the brandy was taken; its specific gravity was 932 and with tests it indicated an acid reaction. Two rods of polished lead, weighing grs. 342 $\frac{2}{3}$ were put into a phial containing 10 ozs. of this brandy, which was covered loosely. At the end of 6 days the surfaces of the leaden rods were considerably tarnished. At the end of 15 days a dense cloud had collected round the rods, the lead had become of a dark brown color, and the brandy in which they were immersed was of a much paler color than at first. At the end of 40 days there was a large quantity of this colored precipitate found at the bottom of the phial. The rods were removed from the brandy and found to have lost grs. 5 $\frac{1}{10}$. The brandy was observed to have lost much of its original color, and its specific gravity was 792.

Experiment II.—The Madras arrack was clear and transparent, its specific gravity was 933, and with tests it afforded a strong acid reaction. Two rods of polished lead, weighing grs. 330 $\frac{2}{3}$, were put into a vial containing 10 ounces of this arrack, which was loosely covered in the same manner as the brandy. In the course of 24 hours the surfaces of the rods were in a remarkable degree tarnished, showing a prompt and strong action of the liquid on the lead. At the end of 5 days the surface of the rods had acquired a brownish or tan color, and their surfaces appeared to have become rough. The discoloration of the surface of the lead gradually increased until they became of a deep brown colour, and a small quantity of grey precipitate was observed at the bottom of the vial, the arrack remaining transparent. At the end 40 days the rods were removed from the arrack and allowed to dry; they were then weighed and found to have lost grains 7 $\frac{2}{3}$. At the conclusion of this experiment the arrack was of sp. gravity, 972, and was strongly impregnated with lead.

Experiment III.—Two rods of polished lead, weighing grains 335 $\frac{2}{3}$ were put into a vial containing 10 ounces of brine in which pork had been pickled and brought from Europe. This liquid was turbid and so much coloured that the appearance of the rods during the time they were immersed in the brine could not be distinctly seen. At the end of 40 days the rods when taken from the brine, were not perceptibly tarnished, and they were precisely of the same weight as when first put into the brine.

Experiment IV.—A portion of distilled water was then subjected to a similar experiment. At the end of 40 days the rods were covered with a slight discoloration and were found to have gained $\frac{1}{10}$ of a grain owing to a minute coating of carbonate of lead on their surfaces.

Experiment V.—The semi-fluid grease in which the pork had been boiled was then made the subject of experiment, but no trace of lead was discoverable in it. Hence it appeared that the meat had not acquired any noxious properties from the leaden cask in which it had been contained.

The Ship Othello sailed from Liverpool on the 3d November, 1826, having taken on board water for the voyage, contained in two large tanks lined with lead. On the 1st April, the ship arrived at Calcutta. During the voyage 18 of the crew suffered from colica pictorum. The first man was attacked on the 1st December, from that time forward the disease continued to spread among the crew, several of them suffering from relapses,—some had the disease as many as 4 and even 6 times during the voyage, the symptoms being very severe and distressing. From these circumstances Dr. Twining concludes that the cause which produced the disease must have existed throughout the whole voyage. Two of the men died at sea, one of these after he was convalescent, while walking on the ship's deck was suddenly attacked with apoplexy and expired. This man's death is attributed by Mr. Twining to exposure to the sun. The other died of cholera after his arrival in Calcutta. At the commencement of the voyage, before any of the people were taken ill, there was heavy rain and the water which could be collected from a canvass awning, was collected and used for cooking and drinking by the crew. When the ship arrived in Calcutta, Mr. Twining was requested by the Captain of the Othello to examine the water tanks. He found two large tanks of 3 inch plank, lined with thick lead, each of them 13 ft. long, 4 ft. broad, and 5 ft. 3 inches deep.

The water in the starboard tank was about 2 ft. in depth clear and apparently in good condition. A bottle was first filled from this tank and the water was then completely agitated from the bottom, several bottles were then filled from this water which was somewhat turbid. From the results of the experiments made upon this water it would appear to have contained lead in considerable quantities, but the paper here ends abruptly in the middle of one of the experiments.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 6th April, 1836.

G. J. Gordon, Esq., Senior Member present, in the chair.

Lieut.-Colonel Caulfield, was proposed as a Member of the Society by Mr. James Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Piddington.

Mr. J. Stopford requested that his name might be withdrawn from the Society. Mr. Stopford had deposited 80 rupees with the Secretary, to cover the cost of four volumes unfortunately lost by the wreck of his pinnace, until they shall be replaced from England.

Read letters from Lieut. A. Cunningham, Engrs., and Raja Vijaya-Govinda Singha, acknowledging their election as Members.

Also from Professor T. Rosen, acknowledging his election as an Honorary Member.

A private letter from M. Eug. Burnouf, Secretary to the Asiatic Society of Paris, noted the arrival of the 100 vols. of the Tibetan Cahgyur, and of the other despatches sent by General Allard.

Read letters from the Secretaries to the British Museum, and the Royal Asiatic Society, returning thanks for the Tibetan Dictionary and other works.

Extract of a letter from Professor Wilson, intimated the distribution of the Tibetan works sent home for the various continental learned Societies. It also reported that a portion of the Moorcroft papers had been finally placed with Murray and Co., for commencement of publication.

Professor Wilson estimates that the whole will occupy, when re-written, and shorn of repetitions and redundancies, two octavo volumes. The terms agreed upon are, that 50 copies are to be at the Society's disposal. Any final loss on the publication to be made good by the Society: and the relations of the author to participate in any success.

Read a letter from M. Cosma de Keros, saying that although the fac-simile from Iskardo, taken by Mr. Vigne was evidently Tibetan, it was in too imperfect a condition to be decyphered.

Library.

The following books were presented to the Society.

A copy of the Appendix of the third volume of the Transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society—by the Society.

The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, No. 4—by the Society.

A children's map of the world in Bengali—Raj Kulkarni.

A daily register of the tide in the harbour of Singapore, from 1st Sept. 1834, to 31st Aug. 1835—by the Government.

Meteorological Register for the months of January and February, 1836—by the Surveyor General.

The India Journal of Medical Science—by the Editor.

The following received from the book-sellers:—

The Political and Statistical History of Guzerat, translated from the Persian by James Bird, Esq., and published by the Oriental Translation Fund.

Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopaedia—Literary Men, vol. 2nd.

The following letter from the Minister of Public Instruction in France, addressed to the President, was read:

“Paris, le 24 Juillet, 1835.

“Monsieur le Président La Société Asiatique de Calcutta, en mettant à la disposition de feu M. Victor Jacquemont, tous les matériaux scientifiques qu'elle possédait, lui a donné les moyens de rassembler des documents d'un haut intérêt sur les Indes Orientales.

En témoignage des services rendus à notre compatriote, je vous prie, Monsieur le Président, de vouloir bien faire agréer à la Société de Calcutta un exemplaire de l'ouvrage qui se publie en son nom, par les soins de sa famille et sous les auspices du Gouvernement Français.

Je tiens à votre disposition, Monsieur le Président, les livraisons qui ont déjà paru: Vous pourrez les faire retirer du Dépôt des Livres de Souscription au Ministère de l'Instruction publique par tel moyen que vous jugerez convenable.

Agréés, Monsieur le Président l'assurance de ma haute considération.

Le Ministre de l'Instruction publique,

Guizot.”

Resolved, that the President be requested to return thanks for this mark of consideration in the French Government, and that the Secretary take immediate steps to obtain possession of the work in question.

The Secretary announced the transfer and deposit in the Society's rooms of the Sanscrit, Persian, Arabic, and Hindul Manuscripts from the College of Fort William.

The number of the Sanscrit works is 1,130 volumes: of the Arabic and Persian 2,676 volumes. A catalogue raisonné of the whole had long since been prepared by the College officers, of which the meeting resolved it should be recommended to the Committee of Papers to undertake the immediate publication, adding to it such other original works as the Society might possess on its own shelves.

The Secretary apprized the Meeting of the completion of the Second volume of the Mahábháratá, copies of which ready for distribution to the subscribers.

Museum of Antiquities.

Read a Note on an Inscription at Bamyán, by M. C. Masson.

The two Buddhist Images, with Deva-nágari inscriptions, mentioned in a letter from Colonel H. Burney, Resident at Ava, read at the last Meeting, were received, and a paper was read on Tagoung, the place of their discovery, an ancient capital of the Burmese empire.

A drawing of the full size of the sculptured impression of Guadama's foot in Ava, was presented by Ensign Phayre, with a description of the contents of the several compartments.

The image brought to the notice of the Society by Lieutenant Kittoe, in January 1835, sought out by Mr. Dean and transmitted for the Museum, had arrived with Col. Colvin's dispatch.

This image does not seem to possess any characteristic difference from the ordinary sculpture of the Hindus, as had been imagined. The dress and attitude are of common occurrence; the feet rest on the lotus plant. The head has been struck off doubtless in the period of the earlier Muhammedan incursions.

Specimens of spears and other warlike instruments from New Zealand were presented by C. K. Robison, Esq.

Physical.

The Secretary announced the arrival of the second dispatch of the Colonel Colvin's donation of Sub-Himalayan fossils, which were placed in the Museum, and lighted up for inspection of the Members present.

The catalogue of this splendid collection, drawn up by Lieutenants Durand and Baker, is printed in the present number. The meeting resolved that the special thanks of the Society should be presented to Colonel Colvin, and that suitable cabinets should be constructed for containing and preserving his donation.

With the foregoing were received the remains of the fossil elk and fossil buffalo, presented by Conductor Dawe, and alluded to in his letter read at the Meeting of the 6th May 1835.

The following acquisitions to the Museum of natural history were made:

A live specimen of Histrix Cristata, common porcupine, presented by Mr. James Prinsep, to whom it was given by Mr. Stephenson, who found it in the Bakra mound in Tirhut.

A specimen of Cercoconus Sabæus, presented by C. C. Egerton, Esq.

Specimens of the skulls and horns of Cervus Muntjak, Antelope Cervicapra, Antelope Chikara, Antelope Thar, and Capra Jemlahica, horns of the Antelope Hodgsonii, and Cervus Aristotelis, the skull of species of Sciuropterus, and the head and bills of Buceros Malabaricus and Platanus Leucorodta, presented by Lieutenant Vicary.

A specimen of Cerinaeus Auritus, and one of the Nilgherri Woodcock, presented by W. H. Smoult, Esq., Specimens of Pitta Brachyurus, Picus Tigris (?) and Pterocles Quadricinctus presented by Lieutenant Vicary.

A specimen of Stris Flammæa, presented by P. Homfray, Esq.

Specimens of the nest of Hirundo Esculenta, the Euculent Swallow, in several stages of preparation, by Esq. A. P. Phayre.

Seeds of the cane tree, from the Straights, presented by Dr. Vos.

Mr. Hodgson transmitted an account of a new genus of Carnivora, to which he proposes to assign the name of Ursitarsus. The skull of the animal was intrusted by him to the Secretary for the inspection of Members.

On the motion of the Secretary, it was resolved, that the Right Honorable Lord Auckland be solicited to accept the office of Patron of the Society; and that the President be requested to communicate with His Lordship on the subject.—Journal of the Asiatic Society for March.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Bombay Branch Royal Geographical Society, 10th March, 1836.

Agreeably to a resolution passed at the last meeting, the Society met at 3 P. M. instead of 12 o'clock, the former hour being found more convenient for the majority of members.

Mr. Wedderburn, in giving his vote for Dr. Lush, explained that at the time the institution of this Society was first proposed, he (Mr. W.) handed to the officiating Secretary a list of gentlemen who were willing to aid in forming the Society. Among these was Dr. Lush, but by some mistake of the copyist no doubt, instead of Dr. Lush, the name of another gentleman was inserted into the Society's books; and the original list being mistaid, this error had not been corrected.

The meeting desired the Secretary to express their regret, that such a mistake should have occurred, and to request Dr. Lush to allow his name to be inserted among the founders of the institution.

Read a letter from the Secretary of the Royal Geographical Society, (received per Steamer,) addressed to the Secretary, as follows:

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.
Regent Street, December 1, 1835.

Sir,—I had the honor to receive your letter of the 6th June last but only the other day, although it came by way of Egypt. No papers either of any kind accompanied it; and it came by post, though indorsed "Honored by Dr. Kemball."

Whenever any papers are received, it will give us great pleasure to publish them soon; and you will observe that the notice regarding the Maldiva Atolls, forwarded by you last, has appeared in our new number:—The same attention will be paid to your next communications whenever they may arrive.

In your present letter, you also express a wish that the copies of the Journal destined for you should be forwarded without delay, but you only promise to communicate the name of the Society's agent in a future letter; till that arrives, then, I am uncertain by what means to convey them to you, but will make inquiry.

I am sorry to say that at present our second volume is entirely out of print, and I shall be unable, consequently, to supply them immediately. A proposal is however, now before the council, and likely to be entertained, to reprint it.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your very obedt. servt.

(Signed) A. MACNOCHIE.

The Secretary explained, that the papers alluded to in the above letter were dispatched under the charge of Dr. Kemball, but the letter which was to have accompanied them missed that gentleman, and was sent via the Red Sea. Intelligence of Dr. Kemball's arrival has been received, so that the papers must have reached their destination.

Read Report of the Sub-Committee appointed to provide a room for the Society. (To be printed with the annual report.)

Read correspondence with Government, relative to the donation of rupees 500, and monthly allowance of rupees 50, granted by the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council to this Society. This correspondence will be printed with the Annual Report.

Proposed and carried, that Mr. Wedderburn be requested to become Vice Patron of the Society; and that Mr. Wathen, be requested to accept the office of Vice-President.

Proposed, and carried, that each member of the Society shall have the privilege of introducing at the general meetings one visitor, who may be desirous to hear read the papers presented to the Society: such visitors to be introduced at each meeting, after the Society's private business is transacted.

Proposed, and carried, that reports of the Society be printed from time to time at the discretion of the committee. These reports to contain accounts of proceedings, analysis of papers presented to the society, the publication, entire, of such papers as may appear to the committee to be particularly interesting to the community here, and lists of desiderata relative to the Geography of this part of Asia, and the adjacent countries.

The following papers were then laid before the meeting and the Secretary was requested to convey to the authors, the best thanks of the Society for their several communications.

1. Memoir on the Southern Coast of Arabia by Lieutenant Wellsted, I. N. Communicated by the President.

In this communication, the author describes that portion of the Arabian Coast which extends between the Port of Aden (in latitude 12° 43' N.) and the town of Shaer, (in latitude 14° 33' N. and longitude 49° 29' E) This space has an extent of about 300 miles, and a direction N. N. E. Its general features present nothing very novel compared to other, better known, parts of the coast, but this paper is valuable, as it fills up a blank in the geography of a part of the Arabian Peninsula, of which no detailed account has yet been laid before the public.

Mr. Wellsted visited this coast on board the H. C. Surveying Vessel Palmyra, and was occasionally dispatched by the Commander, Captain Haines, to collect information regarding the geography of the interior of the country, while the other officers were engaged in carrying on the survey of the coast.

On one occasion the author penetrated to the distance of 70 miles from the coast, to Nukub ul Hadjer, where he was rewarded by the discovery of ruins of considerable extent and of several inscriptions, which have been copied and described in a separate paper, communicated to the Royal Asiatic Society.

* This has since been communicated.

This paper when copied will be forwarded to the London Branch of this Society, for publication in the Journal of that institution.

II. Notes on the Empire of Tombuctoo. Communicated by a Native Shaik, to Doctor Pruner, at Cairo.

For this communication the Society is indebted to Mr. Hylop, of the H. C. S. of War Clive, who procured the paper from Dr. Pruner, and forwarded it to Sir Charles Malcolm, by whom it was communicated to the Society.

Dr. Pruner is a German medical officer, in the service of the Pasha of Egypt, and, while at Cairo, occasionally met the native, at the house of the Austrian Consul, who communicated the information which forms the subject of this paper. Many of the statements appear rather to be opinions than facts, for the Shaik does not pretend to have seen many of the parts, regarding the geography of which his information would tend to overturn the notions generally received at present. The Shaik states himself to be a native of the state of Tombuctoo, and that he has twice visited Egypt. Once by the route that conducts to Tunis, across the desert, whence he reached Egypt by sea. On the second occasion, he travelled from his country, eastward, until he reached Sennar, then, passing through Abyssinia, he reached Arabia. This latter journey was performed, the Shaik asserts, by water, from Tombuctoo as far as Sennar.

He states also, that no European traveller has been allowed to approach nearer to the capital of Tombuctoo than seven days' journey. If his assertions are to be credited, "works of the same style of sculpture and architecture as are now remaining in Upper Egypt and Meroe, are to be observed on the river between Tombuctoo and Sennar; and even a few miles outside the capital, there are islands in the river, full of those gigantic works of the old world."

"The inhabitants of Tombuctoo are a black race; their faces are not like the common negro, but rather approach the conformation of skull which we observe in the Egyptian mummies, and somewhat resemble the black tribes still inhabiting the western shores of the Red Sea (Suakin). They are governed by a Sooltan, rather in a patriarchal, than in a tyrannical manner; he does not make like others, the personal liberty of his subjects an article of commerce, but still you meet, between Arabia and Egypt, a few Tombuctoo slaves in private houses. They lose their liberty during wars, or incursions of the neighbouring negroes. The inhabitants of Tombuctoo live upon the produce of their fields and cattle; and our Shaik pretended that there was not a spot in his country where man's life was so miserable, as in Egypt; every man has sufficient for his own and his family's subsistence. Trade is carried on by barter and the nearest approach to any thing like money is a small shell. Every year a caravan arrives from Tunis, for the exchange of goods, but I could not learn what the articles of that commerce consist of. Neither gold nor precious stones are found at Tombuctoo. The capital is much larger than Cairo."

The correctness of the Shaik's statements requires some corroboration before this paper can be published.

III. Abstract of Reports of the Resources, Population, &c. &c. of Gadjundurgugh. By Captain Holland.

The territory to which the above Report refers, is situated to the S. E. of Kallidjee, and belongs to a Maratta Jageerdar, under the protection of the British Government, named Bhojung Rao, one of the Ghorpuray. a family of great influence and antiquity in the Dekhun. This paper is forwarded by Captain Holland with the view of illustrating some observations which he has communicated in a letter to the Secretary, regarding the great utility and importance of directing attention to statistical inquiries, and particularly to the subject of "comparative statistics." Captain H. thinks that the Society would render essential service in promoting researches of this kind, by the publication of such documents as that which he has communicated, furnishing useful data for comparing, not only the statistical relations of different districts with each other, but the changes which these statistical relations undergo, in the same districts, in a series of years; thus exhibiting the movements, progressive or retrogressive, which may take place in the social condition of these communities in a given time.

Along with the above "Abstract," Captain Holland forwarded several important suggestions, relative to the future plans of the Society, which were referred to the committee. Among the suggestions alluded to, Captain Holland refers to the military operation, now (or lately) in progress, against the Bheels and Coolies of Guzerat, which may afford excellent opportunities of acquiring information regarding both the people and the wild country which they occupy, if sufficient interest and attention be directed to the subject.

IV. Journal of a Mission to Sinde, with a Memoir on that country. By Lieutenant Del'Hoste, &c. &c.

Lieutenant Del'Hoste, as Surveyor, accompanied Colonel Pottinger's mission, which proceeded to Sinde in 1833, for the purpose of concluding a treaty between the British Government and the Ameers, by which the navigation of the Indus was thrown open to commerce. In presenting his papers to the Society, the author has conferred a great obligation, as no detailed narrative of this important mission was before accessible to the public.

The papers are accompanied by a series of sketches, illustrative of the occupation, customs, personal appearance, and costumes of the various classes of inhabitants; also drawings of the craft employed in navigating the river, and of the scenery along the banks. A map also accompanies the Memoir, in which the route of the mission is laid down, and which, besides, contains much information collected by the author from the natives. The state of the river, at the period of Lieutenant Del'Hoste's visit is minutely described. He also enumerates and describes the various large branches, which the main stream gives off, below the junction of the Rannab rivers, the nature of the soil, and the natural productions of Sinde. The question of the facilities which the Indus affords for navigation, is also discussed.

A copy of these papers, with the illustrative sketches, will be forwarded to the Royal Geographical Society by an early opportunity.

The following communication is printed entire to accompany this Report.

LIEUTENANT BURNES ON SINDE.

Much has been said upon Sinde; and I have perused most of that which has been published, as well as written. I purpose, therefore, to state, concisely, the result of my reading and observations. I do not record my authorities, and I leave others to find out the points on which I differ from preceding writers. It is, however, due to Mr. Nathan Crow, of the Bombay Civil Service, to state that his "Account of the country of Sinde" appears, as far as I can judge, to have been the text book of all succeeding writers. It is a finished essay; and, though written so far back as the year 1800, remains to this day a model which, I think, will seldom be surpassed.* It may then be asked what leads me to write on Sinde? I do so because we have had many, and late, opportunities of increasing our information. In my printed work too, I have rather confined myself to the river Indus than the country through which it flows. It must be borne in mind, however, by all who peruse this paper, that it is one of results.

The country watered by the Indus is called Sinde. This is also the name given to that river itself by the inhabitants. The designation is ancient, since Arrian mentions Sindomana. To speak generally, that country, from the ocean to the confluence of the Punjab rivers with the Indus, bears the name of Sinde. That is from the latitude of about 23° to 29° N. and from 67° to 71° E. longitude. The banks of the Indus, however, as high as Sunpur, which is in about 31° North, are sometimes called Sinde. Without this addition, the area of the country includes about 100,000 square miles. On the South it has for its boundaries the province of Cutch and the Ocean. On the East it has Rajwara, or the country of the Rajpoots, as also the Daoodpootras. On the North it has the Punjab and Cutch Gundava. On the West lies Beloochistan, from which it is separated by the lofty mountains of Hala.

The great feature of Sind is the Indus. It traverses the country diagonally in one trunk to the Latitude of 25° 30' when it begins to throw off branches. Its Delta, however, commences below Tatta in the latitude of 24° 40', after which it enters the sea by eleven mouths, and presents a face of 125 British miles to the ocean. The sources of this great river are hidden. It is certain that it rises in the mountains of Himalaya near Thibet. It is probable that the Shyook from Karakorum and the river of Ladak, from near Lake Munsurour, are its principal feeders. From Cashmeer the Indus is separated by a snowy range. It then receives the Abba Seen and passes on to Attok, where it is joined by the Lundye, or river of Cabool. One of the sources of this tributary descends from Pamere, and is nearly as remote as the principal branch. From Attok to the sea, the Indus is familiarly known by the name of "Sinde," or "Attok," Mehran is a name known to foreigners. Attok signifies "forbidden," and it is said to be so called, because the Hindoos are forbidden to cross it. Below the Punjab rivers, it takes the name of "Sira" down to Sehwan, and from thence to the sea that of "Lar." These are two Belooche words for north and south. The local names for different parts of the Indus are various. Those of the branches in the Delta shall be afterwards enumerated.

The face of Sind is uninteresting. Eastward of the Indus there is not a rising ground or a stone in the country, excepting the hillocks of Bukkur and Hyderabad. It is flat and covered with bushes, till it at last joins the desert of sand hills which separates Sind from India. Westward of the river, as low down as Sehwan, the same flatness prevails to the base of the Belooche mountains. From that town to the sea, the land is rocky and barren. The Delta, of the Indus does not differ from that of other rivers. It is rich, but it is poorly cultivated. Ten miles from the sea, it is frequently an impervious thicket. Higher up, it is overgrown with tamarisk shrubs which also thread into each other. The rest presents a naked plain of hard, baked clay. Much of the land that is adopted for agriculture is only used for pasture. Much of it also lies neglected; yet the crop of rice is extensive, and far exceeds the consumption of the country. It is the staple of Sind; the inhabitants live on it, the merchants export it. It is more abundantly produced towards the sea; higher up, the other grains—wheat, barley, juwabee, &c are cultivated; also indigo, sugar-cane, tobacco, and hemp: both the latter are used as narcotics. There are but few trees in Sind.

Sind owes its fertility entirely to the Indus, and more particularly to the annual or periodical swell of the river. The return of the waters is regular—they rise in March, and subside in September. The melting of the snow in the Himalaya, is the cause of this phenomenon. The waters are courted by the inhabitants and distributed by canals far away from the river. The actual swell seldom extends half a mile on either bank. The immediate banks of the Indus are but partially cultivated. The soil is saline and unfavourable to tillage, as is proved by all its spontaneous productions. Without the Indus, the whole of Sind would become as perfect a desert, as the country lying eastward of it. Encrustations of salt and salt-petre are to be seen every where. The latter is exported. Many of the shrubs yield alkalis, which are used in manufactures. With all these natural disadvantages, the revenue of the country in these days sometimes reaches 40 lakhs of rupees, (£400,000). In the government of the dynasty that preceded the present, it yielded 80 Lacs, (£800,000). The depreciation arises partly from political causes. The treasure possessed by the rulers is considerable.* In the strict sense of the word, Sind cannot be considered rich: possessing a resemblance to both Egypt and Bengal, it has not the richness of either. The crops, however, are reaped without labour; the seed is scattered after the inundation, and the harvest is certain.

The history of Sind is clearer than most Asiatic Chronology; the marked feature of the Indus running through it, has contributed to preserve it. Herodotus says, that Darius Hystaspes sent an expedition to explore the Indus which sailed out of the river. Alexander the Great turned this information to account. He found the country inhabited by Hindoos, and ruled by Brahmins. It was made subject to the ephemeral it preserved till the rise of Islam, when, after various struggles, it became Mahomedan. In the first century of the Hijra, or the 7th of the Christian era, the caliphs overturned the Brahminical dynasty, and ruled by deputies from Bagdad. Duhribin Chuch was the name of the deposed Raja, and Alore, the modern Bukkur, was his capital. Sooltan Mahmood of Ghuzni, conquered it in the 11th century. Altimush, the Ghorian Sooltan of Delhi, made it a fief of his crown, which it continued till the 14th century, when the native Rajas recovered their ascendancy. The successful tribe was the Soomra, which was settled in the confines of Mukran at the Mahomedan invasion. They did not long retain their power, and were displaced by the Sama, another great and ancient native tribe, which yet exists in the country. They took the title of Jam. The Raja of Cutch and the Jarajah Rajpoots are descendants from these Sumas. There are both Hindoo and Mahomedan Sumas. They held it till it was again subdued, after some difficulty, by the Tartar conquerors of Delhi; who, for a time, used the Sumas to govern it. Nadir Shah annexed it to his crown, and it formed a portion of the kingdom of Cabool, raised up by Ahmed Shah, one of his generals, to which it is nominally subject at this day. In the time of Nadir the country was granted to the Caloras, a religious family from Beloochistan. In the reign of Timor Shah of Cabool, it was conferred on the Talpoor family also of Belooche origin, who now hold it.

The inhabitants of Sind are much scattered, but the country is not populous. In traditional poesy, it is said to be "now lakhi Sind," that is nine lakh Sind. The meaning of this is obscure, but I do not discard it; for the same rhyming statistics assign "Choud Charee," (or 14 times 40—560) to Cutch. Though in excess of its number of inhabited places, this is sufficiently near to be understood. Sind is said to have a lakh of peers or Saints' tombs in it. To quite legends, Sind has a vast number of villages, most of which are moveable. In the desert they are called "Wand near the river Raj" and "Tunda." The temporary villages of Sind are distinctly mentioned by the Greeks. It is difficult, in consequence, to fix the population of Sind, it is difficult even to fix the number of inhabited places. A village is often changed, and, if stationary, it even changes its name with its owner. This is but a remnant of the pastoral life of the aborigines. No two maps of Sind can resemble one another. The provinces or subdivisions of it even change names. I find no less than fifty names of this in one author and he says that their limits run into each other. Even in Alexander's times, we have the names of so many kingdoms on the Indus, that we can only account for them by exaggeration, to enhance the conquest of the Greeks. The whole population may amount to a million. The greater portion of it is moveable. The large places are not numerous. Shikarpoor is the first in importance, and has a population of about 25,000, which surpasses that of the modern capital Hyderabad. Tatta, the ancient metropolis, has about 15,000 souls. The only other places of note are Subjul. Khaypoor, Ladhane, Bukkur (with Roree and Sukker), Sehwan, Hala, and Churachee, which latter is a sea port, and the only one accessible to ships in the country.

The inhabitants of Sind are chiefly Mahomedan. A fourth of the population may be Hindoo. There are no people of other tribes or creeds, if we except a few sais of the Punjab, called sais Lobanee. The Mahomedans are tall and well proportioned; very dark in complexion. All other Mahomedans share the hair of the head, but the Sindians preserve it, which gives them a look very different from other Asiatics. They also wear caps instead of turbands. Sind is a term generally used for those who live in temporary villages. They are mostly the original inhabitants converted to Islam, who have intermarried with the conquerors. They are Mahomedans in Sind, and Hindoos in Cutch, who claim one lineage. The Hindoos do not differ from those in India. They are fairer than the Mahomedans. The Loharu and Bhatera tribes prevail: they are purely commercial. They are not oppressed more than in other Mahomedan countries. They are often employed in places of confidence. They amass wealth, but they conceal it, and wish to appear poor.

The subjugation of Sind has been always facilitated by the Indus. India escaped in many places the inroads from the West, but Sind was one of the earliest conquests of every invader. It is easily accessible from the Punjab, but it is separated from India by a desert. Sind has very little resemblance to India on that account. The people have not the effeminacy of the Indian, nor have they polish of the Persian. They are less civilized than either: ignorant and very bigoted. This arises from the nature of their government. It continues from the limited connexion with other countries. The Mahomedan invasion involved a change of creed among the people, and the impression has never been effaced. The dynasty of the Caloras was religious and the effect of it is apparent every where. It has been well said, that in Sind "there is no spirit, but in celebrating the Fed, no liberality, but in feeding lazy Syuds, and no taste but in ornamenting old tombs." The desire to propagate the faith does not now interfere with a certain degree of toleration towards the Hindoos. That tribe is not respected, but it is not degraded. An unclean idolator is a common term of reproach, but has much the same acceptation in Sind as heretic has among Protestants and Roman Catholics. Justice is meted out to both, if it cannot be claimed it is not refused. There are no great Hindoo buildings in Sind, but there are at the same time, no grand Mahomedan ones, except a mosque and some tombs at Tatta.

The Government of Sind may be called despotic. Its rulers, the Amcers, are restrained by no laws, though they pretend to abide by the dicta of the Koran in their administration of justice. There are no officers such as Cazoes or Moollahs, who exercise, independent, their functions, or receive their patronage and encouragement. Syuds and Fakeers are however, respected to veneration, the one as being descended from the line of the Prophet, the other as following, or pretending to follow, a life of great austerity. Many of the fakeers are, without doubt, virtuous men, but the great bulk are hypocritical fanatics. The universal respect shown to them seems to have corrupted the land. The mendicants in Sind are more numerous than in any other country in Asia. They can scarcely be called beggars, for they levy tribute in crowds, and, by treats, with great arrogance.

Many of the common people take to this profitable vocation, which only requires some show of sanctity. This is exhibited in various ways; one of the most common is to sit all night on the house-top, and repeat the sacred name of "Ullah" (or God) as many thousand times as the tongue can utter it. In Sind, religion takes the worst possible turn. It does not soften the disposition of the rulers or the asperities of the people; it becomes a trade, and its worthless professors degrade it and themselves. To this there is no counteracting effect in the government, which, besides encouraging these worthies, is, in itself, politically oppressive. Trade and agriculture languish under it. The people have no stimulus to moral rectitude, and yet they are less degraded than might be looked for. They are passionate, as well as proud. They have much sycophantic flattery, but this does not deceive in Sind. If treated, the Sindian is honest; if believed he is not, false; if kindly treated, he is grateful. I repeat, that in oppression, the Mahomedan and the Hindoo appear to be pretty equal sharers.

Without political freedom, and with misdirected religious zeal, Sind cannot boast of the condition of its population. There is no intermediate class between the rulers, their favoured Syuds, and the common people. Some Hindoo are rich, but the mass of the people are poor. Their dress, subdued manners and fith, all more than another attest it. They have no education; few of them can read; very few write. In physical form they seem adapted for activity, the reverse is their character. Their faculties appear benumbed. Both sexes, Hindoo and Mahomedan, are addicted to "Bang," an intoxicating drug made from hemp. They also drink a spirit distilled from rice and dates. Debauchery is universal, and the powers of man are often impaired in early life. They do not seek for other than gross and sensual amusements. People only congregate to visit the tombs of worthies or saints, who are deemed capable of repairing the wasted and diseased body, as well as the soul. They have few social qualifications, and even in common life keep up much formal ceremony. There are no healthful exercises among the peasantry, who as well as the grandees of the land, lead a life of sloth. To be fat is a distinction. A better government would ameliorate the condition of this people; without it the Sindian and his country will continue in the hopeless and cheerless state here represented. I venture to reverse the observation of Montesquieu, and say that the mediocrity of their abilities and fortunes is fatal to their private happiness. The effect is also fatal to the public prosperity. It is unnecessary to state that the sciences are not cultivated in Sind. The arts, however, exhibit some taste and ingenuity. Leather is better prepared than in any part of India; and their "longees," or silk cotton cloths are rich and beautiful. The artisan receives no encouragement; the peasant has no reward for his toil.

The language of Sind is of Hindoo origin. The upper classes speak corrupted Persian, the lower orders a jargon of Sind and Panjabee. Sind is a written language.

A despotic government is necessarily upheld by force. The citizen is lost in the soldier. The great portion of the land in Sind, is held on the tenure of affording military service. External enemies are not now to be much dreaded, so that the fetters of the people are forged for themselves. They furnish their rulers with the means to oppress. They never knew a citizen's rights, and they are as ignorant of their own strength as of their rulers' weakness. Most of the chiefs in Sind are Belooches. In their relative position to the people they in some degree, resemble the Mamlukes of Egypt. They are not, however, recruited (as was that body) from abroad, though they keep up a connexion with their native country. They are the last invaders of Sind. The time of their inroad, I cannot fix, but it was probably a succession of inroads. It is now difficult to distinguish a Belooche from any other Sindian, for they have intermarried with the people. They preserve, however, with care, their lineage, and name their tribes with honor. The Sindians complain of the oppression of the Belooches, but habit has subdued their energies to resist. The military power of Sind is considerable. For an Asiatic state it is respectable though without discipline. The force consists of infantry; the arms are a matchlock and sword. The former is of a description peculiar to Sind. There are few horses, so that there is a want of cavalry. There are guns in Sind, but their artillery is always ill-served and neglected. On a foreign inroad the country would rise in arms, and the three different Talpoor chiefs would contribute their contingents to meet the enemy. From an European force, I believe they would shrink without resistance; without any persevering opposition. As a soldier, the Sindian is considered brave; at least he is respected by his neighbours, and often hired by them as a mercenary. He does not lose his reputation by being forced to yield to disciplined valour, which is an exotic.

The productions, both vegetable and animal, in Sind, differ but little from other parts of India. Most of the former have been already mentioned. Many of the European vegetables that are now so common in India, have not been introduced. Apples are however, found even so low as Tatta. The climate of Sind is variable. In the winter the cold is great; ice is common. In summer the heat is most oppressive, and rain is almost unknown. The dust is intolerable. The clayey nature of the soil admits of all moisture being soon exhaled, and the least wind raises clouds of impalpable powder. The houses require ventilators in the roof; and the windows and doors are made of the smallest dimensions to exclude the dust. Altogether the climate of Sindé is sultry and disagreeable, and very trying to the constitution. The only remarkable tenant of the Indus is the sable fish (pulla), which enters the rivers four months during the year. This fish is not found in any other of the rivers of Western India, it is highly flavored. Game of all kinds is abundant in Sindé; but the country is thick, and it is difficult to kill it. The camels and buffaloes of Sindé are superior and very numerous. The horned cattle and sheep are in general larger than those of India. Of all these, there are vast herds. They are to be found both near the river, and away from it. All that tract between Sindé and India, and North of the Run of Cutch, is frequented by herdsmen and shepherds, who find water in wells and tanks. They live in "wands," and are erratic in their habits. The tract is much more frequented than its appearance in the map (where it is described as a desert) would suggest. There is pasture between the sand hills and they themselves are not destitute of verdure. The peloo (salvadora persica), khureel (capparis), bahool (mimosa Arabica), and phoke, are its principal productions, with the thorny milk bush and swallow wort (asclepias gigantia). The geological features of Sindé need not detain me. I found fossil shells at Jurk and Lucput. At the latter place some of these weighed 12 and 16 lbs. English! and were in a perfect state of preservation. They were imbedded in limestone. Westward of the Indus various kinds of marble are found. Limestone indeed appears to be the principal formation. Sandstone also exists; I found a small piece of it about forty miles North of Lucput, imbedded in the soil, which, for the first foot, was mixed with fresh water shells. There are many mineral springs in the Hala mountains.

It has been already observed that the most striking geographical feature of Sindé is the Indus.

Its length of course, and the body of water discharged by this river, prove it to be one of the largest in the old world. Its tributaries even are rivers of some magnitude. The Hydaspes, Hydraotes and Hesudrus, are superior to the Rhone. The course of the Hyphasis is forty miles longer than that of the Elbe, and only sixty less than that of the Rhine. Yet the channel of the Indus seldom exceeds the width of half a mile. In the water it is even narrower. During the season of inundation, the different branches which it throws off are filled. By October they become unnavigable and stagnant. The Indus is a foul river and very muddy, with numerous shoals and sand banks. Though there is generally a depth of 11 feet in the shallowest parts, flat bottomed boats can only navigate it. The reason of this is, that vessels, with a keel, get fixed on the banks, and would be destroyed. The Indus is navigable for about 1,200 miles from the sea. Boats may drop down it from within fifty miles of Cabool. Above its junction with the river of Cabool, the Indus is navigable.

After the Indus has fairly entered Sindé, it throws off its branches. At Bukkur, which is an insulated fortress of flint on the Indus, below the latitude of 25°, the superfluous waters of the inundation are sometimes drained off by a channel. In two years out of three it is dry; but when this channel is filled, the water passes the ancient city of Alora (4 miles from Bukkur,) and through the desert near Omercote, to the Eastern mouth or Korea. Some authors suppose this to have been once the course of the great river. The reasons are more specious than probable. The first permanent off-set of the Indus is the Fulalee, which passes eastward of the capital, Hyderabad. It successively takes the name of Goonee, Phurraur, and Korea, and separates Cutch from Sindé in the lower part of its course. The next off-set takes its departure near Jurk and is named Pinyaree. It afterwards is called Goongra, and where it enters the sea, Seer: Both these branches, the Fulalee and Pinyaree, have been closed by "bunds" or dams, for the purpose of irrigation. At their estuaries, therefore, they are but creeks of the sea, and have salt, instead of fresh water, if the inundation does not make them fresh by its excess. Some remarkable changes were brought about in the Eastern mouth from an earthquake, in 1819, by which a large tract of land was, and still continues, submerged.

About five miles below Tatta, the Indus forms its Delta by dividing into two branches. These bear the names of Baggaar and Sata. The first runs off at right angles Westward; the other flows Southward. The Baggaar passes Peer Putta, Darajee, and Lahory Bunders, and enters the sea by two subdivisions, the Pittee and Peeteecanee. The Satta subdivides into seven streams, and reaches the sea by the mouths of Joos, Reechel, Injmaree, Khedywaree Gora, and Mull. There are even other subdivisions, but it would only confuse to name them. All these mouths have communication with each other, so that the internal navigation of the Delta is extensive. The course of the waters of the Indus is most capricious and inconstant. One year the Baggaar is dry, and in another the Satta shares a like fate. In 1809 the principal portion of the waters were disembogued by the Baggaar.—In 1831 their channel of egress was confined to the Sata. The seven mouths of the Sata even vary in their supply of water, but one branch of the Indus is always accessible to country boats. The great mouth at present is the Gora, but, from sandbanks, it is not accessible to ships. Those mouths which discharge least water are most accessible.

MADRAS LITERARY SOCIETY.

A report of the proceedings of the last General Meeting of the Madras Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society on the 30th January last, we have been favored with and publish. Their importance rivals the number of attendants, but the contributions make a lengthened display. We understand that Mr. I. C. Morris has resigned the post of Secretary to the Asiatic Department, in which capacity the task fell upon that gentleman of editing the quarterly journal. The multifarious and arduous duties of his public situation must indeed have long made this additional labour rather irksome to him. Dr. Cole has been appointed his successor to the post, and, as he brings a quantity of good inclination backed by some leisure time to his literary task, we hope to see it abundant in rich and valuable fruits. The Society are much indebted to his able and diligent predecessor in the same department, and we confidently expect that the new occupant will conduct its duties to the advantage and honor of the Society.

From the "Journal of Science and Literature" just published.

At a general Meeting of the Madras Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society, held at the College, on Saturday, the 30th January, 1836.

PRESENT.

The Honorable Sir ROBERT COMYN, President, in the Chair.

The Honorable WILLIAM OLIVER, Esq., Vice President.

The Ven. Archdeacon H. HARPER, A. M.

J. ANNESLEY, Esq.

W. LAVIE, Esq.

R. COLE, Esq.

J. OUCHTERLONY, Esq. and

Captain KOEHLER,

Rev. F. SPINNO, A. M.

The Meeting having been opened by the Honorable the President, the Rev. Mr. Spring, for the Secretary, read before them a statement of the Funds of the Society, in both its branches.

The following donations having been made to the Society since the last Annual General Meeting the thanks of the Meeting were unanimously voted to the donors.

FOR THE MUSEUM.

A bow and four arrows taken from one of the rebels of the Kimeedy country.....	W. Gilchrist, Esq.
A collection of Geological specimens, chiefly from the Northern parts of India, being duplicates from the Bengal Society's Museum, presented through Dr. Benza, by....	The Asiatic Society of Bengal.
A series of Mineral specimens, one hundred and four in number, illustrative of the Geology of the Neilgherry Hills, by.....	Dr. Benza.

These specimens illustrate the very able and interesting paper by Dr. Benza, on the Geology of the Neilgheries, contained in the Bengal Journal of Literature and Science, for August 1835. It is to be regretted, however, that the specimens presented to the Madras Museum, are not numbered according to the references contained in that paper; a classification which would very much enhance their value, in the eyes of the geological student, who may hereafter wish to refer to them. A member of the society having engaged, in communication with Dr. Benza, to arrange the specimens in the order in which they are described in the paper above alluded to there is no doubt but that this desirable end will be attained.*

A collection of Geological specimens from the Northern Circars, by.... Dr. Benza.

The formations in the district whence the above were taken, are described by Dr. Benza in an appendix to the paper cited above.

A number of most beautiful specimens of the Trap formation near Poonah, presented by..... J. G. Malcolmson, Esq.

These consist of vesicular Trap, or Amygdaloid, of a dull reddish brown colour, containing embedded crystals of fibrous Zeolite, Cubicite, Green earth, Rock Crystal and Chalcedony.

* The Neilgheries being located within the limits of our own province, we propose hereafter to give an abstract of Dr. Benza's paper, or to transfer it entire to the pages of our Journal. As the Doctor is again on the hills, perhaps he may have something to add to his former observations.—Editor.

The following notice, from a paper by Mr. James Bird, in the 3d number of the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, will afford an idea of the formations whence these specimens are derived.

"The elevated table-land of the Dekhan is exclusively composed of rocks belonging to the floetz-trap formation. The hills which rise on the western ghâts as a base have conical or tabular forms, and are sometimes distributed in long ridges or terraces which run east-north-east.

"At the openings in the hills west of Punah, known by the name of the ghâts, and which are the passages from the lower land of the Konkan into the higher land of the Dekkan, these tabular rocks are grand and beautiful. They are generally triangular shaped, and insulated from each other by broad and deep ravines, of which the perpendicular descent cannot be less than twelve or thirteen hundred feet.

"The rock composing these tables is compact basalt of a black colour, in which hornblend predominates.

"About Punah, and further south-eastwards, the rocks are generally amygdaloidal, and become lighter in colour the farther they are removed from the western entrance. This amygdaloid is in no respect different from the load-stone of extra tropical climates. It shews embedded masses of calcedony, zeolites and green earth; and in the neighbourhood of water courses, at the depth of five-and-twenty or thirty feet below the surface, contains drusy cavities of crystallized quartz, the appearance of which, in digging wells, indicates that water is near."

A collection of Mineral specimens from various parts of the Peninsula of India, by..... Captain Boileau.

A figure of a Burmese Deity..... Hon. Sir R. Palmer.

The sumpitan, or blowpipe, and a quiver of poisoned arrows used by the Jacoons, a savage race inhabiting the mountains and forests of the Southern parts of the Malay Peninsula, once the property of one of their Batins or chiefs, by whom they were presented to the donor..... Lieutenant Newbold.

A specimen of the rude cloth worn by them round the loins, made from the fibrous bark of the Terap tree.. Do.

A hunting basket worn across the shoulders..... Do.

A rude call or whistle used by the Malays..... Do.

A Malayan Bush-rage, or foot-ball. D9.

A Malayan spear used by the Malayan Chiefs..... Do.

A common Malay kris..... Lieut. Newbold
A common Malay fishing line..... Do.

A bow obtained from a native of the Celebes..... Do.

A bundle of arrows from do. do.... Do.

A Malay sling made of human hair Do.

Specimen of tin of Salangore..... Do.

Specimen of stream ore..... Do.

A Chinese Abacus, or calculating board with apparatus for writing.. Do.

A Chinese opium pipe..... Do.

A packet ofupas poison..... Do.

A small Cobra de Capello, about 1½ feet long, in the act of swallowing a smaller snake of another species, of which it has effected the deglutition of about one-third..... Revd. Mr. Spring, in the name of Captain Bernard.

The following gentlemen have been elected members since the last general meeting:—

C. R. Baynes, Esq.	H. Morris, Esq.
T. Jarrett, Esq.	A. H. Harris, Esq.
N. B. Acworth, Esq.

The following vacancies have occurred by death or retirement since the last general meeting.

J. G. Malcolinson, Esq.,	gone home.
Ven. Arch. T. Robinson, A. M.,	do.
W. A. Richards, Esq.,	do.
Captain Boileau,	do.
Colonel Pearse,	do.
Captain Lane,	do.
W. F. Underwood, Esq.,	Retired.
T. H. Davidsen, Esq.,	do.
Captain Alexander,	do.
C. A. Kerr, Esq.,	Dead.

Resolved,—that an early meeting of the Committee of Management be called, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of effecting an improvement in the selection of books from England, and the expediency of disposing of any useless works which may now form part of the Library.

The meeting proceeded to elect three members of the Committee of Management for the ensuing year, in succession to Lieutenant Colonel Cullen, A. Robertson Esq., and Captain Rowlandson—when the Venerable Archdeacon H. Harper, A. M., and James Minchin, Esq., were duly elected and Captain Rowlandson re-elected.

The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Honorable the President, for his able conduct in the chair.—Madras Herald.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DHURMA SUBHA.

The Secretary to this Society has favoured the public in his journal of Thursday last with a report of the proceedings of the body during the past year; of which we now present our readers with a translation.

Annual Report for the year 1757.

7th Vysak, Sunday. Kales Kantu Vidyavagees was appointed one of the pundits of the society.

Geerbanath, a pundit, passed a creditable examination in the Law Shastras before the Committee for examining pundits, and a reward and a certificate were bestowed on him.

4th Jyestee, Sunday. Ramtonoo, Bramhun, was upon his own prayer, forgiven for having associated with Roy Kaleenath Chowdree.

Krishnomohun Ghose, who had been suspended for visiting the house of Singa Baboo, was received back into the Society after the performance of an atonement.

8th Asudr. It was resolved that no business should be transacted at the meeting unless when five of the Governors were present.

4th Shrabun. At the request of Kalee Kanta Vidyavagees, a poem in honour of the Dhurma Subha was brought forward, and a part of it having been read, the work was accepted by the Society.

8th Bhaddra. On the proposal of Raja Kalee Kis-sen, Kasheenath Turkalunkar was added to the number of those who examine learned candidates and settle disputes; and Roy Madhublochan Mittre was appointed one of the Governors of the Society.

On the 23d of the same month the Board of Examiners held their second meeting when Madhub Chunder, a student residing at Koomera, passed a successful examination in the Nyaya Shastras and received a reward and a certificate.

On the 5th of Assin, there being only some pundits present, and it being necessary to discuss several secular subjects, the pundits suggested that these ought to be referred to the secular Governors of the Society: the discussion of those matters was therefore postponed.

On the 8th of Aughraun, an address from the Hindoos residing at Burdwan was presented, on which a petition was sent to the Sudder Dewannee Adawlut; with this the Society was well pleased. Gokoolchunder Bose residing at Khanakool having been forgiven his transgression, was received back by the head of his party, Baboo Asootose Deb. A letter on this subject was read to the Society.

6th Pous. The business before the meeting was postponed to a future meeting.

12th Maugh. Rajah Kalee Kissen Bahadoor wrote to the Society, to say that he had expelled from his party six Bramhuns for having gone to an assembly at the house of Baboo Sumbhoochunder Mittre and received gifts, Sumbhoochunder being at the time excommunicated for having associated with those who have transgressed the rules of the Society.

In consequence of a letter from Raja Kalee Kissen, an address from Hurreemohun Hosoo was read, and the invitation sent to him by the Singh Baboo, which was inclosed in his address, having been also read he was declared innocent.

A letter was read from Baboo Asootose Deb, stating that he had expelled from his party Dhurmadass Scro-munee for having received a gift from Baboo Sumbhoochunder Mittre, a transgressor.

Kalee Koomar residing in the Sohha Bazar, who belongs to the party of Byhoo Seebnarain Ghose, wrote to the meeting to say that he had forsaken that party, and to entreat that he might be received into the Society. The Society praised him greatly, and cleared him from all guilt.

At the request of Baboo Ram Comul Sen, Pundits were appointed Presidents of the Society, and it was determined that when any one of the Pundit Governors was present, he should be President of the meeting, and that the eldest pundit should always take the Chair. If it appeared necessary to appoint a secular Governor, it should be done with the consent of the Pundits.

At the request of that Baboo also, the Secretary was directed to make enquiries regarding the caste, and to report to the Society.

After much discussion in consequence of Oomachurn Baboo of Bayal having asked for a precept regarding the atonement necessary to deliver him from hell, it was determined that the seal of the Society and the signature of the Secretary should be affixed to it.

On the 10th of Falgoon, Baboo Asootose Deb informed the Society, that he had expelled from his party Modhoo Sedun and Ramdass, two pundits, who had been guilty of going to a religious festival at the house of Govinchunder Ghose, who is under the ban of Society; but that he had restored them on their performing a proper atonement.

Baboo Bhuguvutee Churn Gangolee informed the Society that he had expelled from his party certain pundits for having received gifts of Baboo Sumbhoochunder, who is under an interdict, but that he had restored them on their performing an atonement.

At the request of Ramchunder and Nubkrishuno Ghutuks, a letter was written to Huruchunder and Ramial, also Ghattuks, to enquire why they associated with the guilty, to which they replied that they had no connection with the transgressors, and the Society was pleased to declare them free from stain.

At the request of Raja Kalee Kissen, a letter was read from Krishnopersaud of Belhuria, and the Raja was praised for adhering to the Society, while Krishno-persaud was forgiven for having accepted an invitation from Baboo Sumbhoochunder Mittre.

At the desire of Raja Kalee Kissen, Bholanath Mittre, of Penetty was forgiven for having accepted an invitation from Singh Baboo. This is a report of the proceedings of last year.

The proceedings of the last meeting of the last day of Choitru, we proceed to give.

A letter was received from Baboo Seebnarain Ghose, when it was determined that a second letter should be written to him, and that when a reply to it was received, the affair should be made public.

A letter was read, addressed by Mr. James Mackillop to Neelmohee Dutt saying, that if the Dhurma Subha had any address to send to England, he was ready to take charge of it. This proposal was referred to Baboo Radhakaut Deb.

After this sundry letters were read from various individuals, chiefly poor pundits, requesting forgiveness for having associated with those who are under the interdict of the Society.

This is a full statement of the proceedings of this Society, the defence and support of Hindooism in Calcutta, for the past twelve months, as reported by their own Secretary. Considering the great zeal professed by many of the leading members of the Society, the wealth of the secular, and the learning of the religious characters of whom it is composed, and the dangers which threaten the Hindoo religion from the progress of light and knowledge, the Society may be said to have done nothing during the last year. They have confirmed the expulsion by Raja Raj Krishun and of a few others needy men who had gone for gifts to the houses of some of the wealthy Hindoos who are under the ban of the Society; they have on the motion of Dewan Ramkomul Sen, determined that a priest shall take the chair at their meetings; and have received a proposal from Mr. James Mac-killop to take charge of any (conservative?) petition which they might have occasion to send to England.
And this is the sum total of their exertions. One of our contemporaries, we believe the Reformer, recently hinted that Government should look to the movements of this Society. Surely the perusal of this report, which we have translated for the amusement of our readers, will be sufficient to convince any man that the Society is too feeble to excite any alarm. Any notice which the State might bestow on it, especially if unctur-ed with hostility, would impart fresh life to it. If Government were to forbid its sittings, the Society might expire; but we should be very loth indeed to see it conducted to the tomb with the honours of martyrdom.
Let it die of its own insignificance. It was shrewdly marked when the Society was first set up with so much blazing zeal, that every Society established up to that period in Calcutta among the Natives had gradually languished and died ; and that this Dharma Sabha would probably follow the same course. Considering that it was a society composed of Hindoo materials, it has enjoyed a rather unusual length of days ; but this may be ascribed rather to the small under-current of private interest, which those who look beneath the surface can easily perceive, than to the steady stream of religious fervour. We should be doing great injustice to Baboo Bhuvaneeshurn Banerjee, if we were to overlook that he is the life and soul of it. It may possibly last his time, but no longer, unless there should be any injudicious interference with it.

We cannot close this brief notice without remarking the inconsistency which is so apparent in the conduct of many of its Governors. During the last year, the most active in bringing up delinquents, was Raja Kalee Kissen Buhadoor. The Society indeed has publicly thanked him for his zeal in the cause of Hindooism ; yet we find that he visits the Christian Churches in Calcutta, and covers his tables at the Doorga pooja with articles of food and drink, which are abhorrent to every notion of Hindoo purity. Between his professions and his practice, where is the consistency ? Which according to Hindoo notions is the greater crime ; to receive a gift from a wealthy and strict Hindoo who happens to have associated with some friend who had given his assent to the abolition of female immolation ;—or to invite Meelias to the worship of the gods, and gorge them with beef and champagne ?—Friend of India. •

CALCUTTA SCHOOL BOOK SOCIETY.

The Meeting of the School Book Society on the morning of 30th April, at the Town Hall, attracted an unusually large attendance. Sir Edward Ryan took the chair at ten o'clock, and commenced the Proceedings by reading the Report prepared by the Committee. We have not time to set up the whole of this interesting document in type, and it will doubtless be published in a separate form. We may, however, extract the opening remarks and the abstract of the Committee's labours in a pecuniary point of view :

" The Committee of the Calcutta School Book Society, in meeting their friends on the present occasion, are happy in being able to use the language of congratulation. Recognizing as they do the importance of the objects they are united to promote, they have reason to rejoice, and amidst the vicissitudes and fluctuations of an Indian community, this Institution has not been permitted to decline through the want either of pecuniary support or literary exertion. Some advance has been made towards the consummation of their wishes, and some obstacles have been removed out of their way ; while wide and extensive fields of usefulness continue to open before them and invite cultivation.

" This language of congratulation, however, is much chastened and subdued by the recollection, that their progress, when compared with the magnitude of their object and the extent of the claims made upon them, is very insignificant. The outline of their plan has not yet been completed and many years must elapse after its completion before the different provinces of India can be supplied with all the books that are requisite for imparting a liberal education. Had they the wants of only one large province to supply, and books in only one language to provide, their progress would not have been thought extraordinary ; but how much less so must it appear, when it is remembered, that instead of one, they have several provinces, as large as, or even larger than, England, to supply ; and that instead of our language, they have several to provide with books of every description, down to the very first elements of instruction.

" Pleasure for the progress that has been made, and regret that it has been no greater, though considerations of a very different nature, are calculated to produce one and the same effect ;—to animate all the friends of the institution to renewed efforts in their work. The success they have attained is sufficient to satisfy them that they have not hitherto laboured in vain ; and that further efforts are full of promise : while the work that remains to be done, may convince them, that in carrying forward their designs, there is no time to be lost, nor any means to be neglected. The experience of ages has proved, that no nation has ever risen to honour and happiness without the means of instruction ; in supplying these, therefore, the supporters of this, and kindred Societies, have the satisfaction to know that they are laying a foundation, however humble, yet absolutely necessary, for the prosperity of British India.

" In detailing the operations of this Society, it has been usual to commence with the Indian languages, and then proceed to the English ; but owing to the increased demand for books in the latter, it has now become proper to invert that order ; a subject which so deeply affects the interests of the community, and the expenditure and usefulness of this institution, your Committee cannot allow to pass without particular notice.

" It may be gratifying to many to know the extent to which the Society is now called upon to supply English books. Our language has taken deep root in the seats of the four Presidencies, Calcutta, Allahabad, Madras, Bombay ; and in the following places in Hindustan, viz. Ludiana, Meerut, Agra, Delhi, Kotah, Futtehpur, Lukhnow, Gorukhpur, Benaras, Patna, Berhampur, Banleah, Chhota Nagpur, Dhaka, Chitragong, Munipur, and several other stations. It is now also beginning to spread in some parts of Ceylon, Orissa, Burmah, and Assam. In all these places, English books, to a greater or less extent, are now required, and in all probability, the demand for them will continue to increase ; so that, as the great object of the Society is to aid the efforts of the Friends of Education, a greater portion of its funds will be devoted to the supplying of books in English than in any other language.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE SOCIETY'S PUBLICATIONS.

With regard to the distribution of the Society's works, it will be as gratifying to the Friends of Education to learn, as it is satisfactory to your Committee to report, that the issues from the Depository have been much greater, during the two years embraced by the present report, than at any previous period of equal extent. This desirable result has been secured partly by the increased sales effected at the depositories in Calcutta, Cawnpore, &c., previously established, and partly by the establishment of new depositories, (chiefly through the generous exertions of Mr. Trevelyan, at Lukhnow, Agra, Ludiana, &c.) As the result of the whole, your Committee are happy to state, that from January, 1834, to December, 1835, books in different languages, as by the following list, were issued from the depository :

English.....	31,649
Anglo-Asiatic.....	4,525
Sanskrit.....	16
Bengali.....	5,754
Hindui.....	4,171
Uriya.....	834
Arabic.....	36
Persian.....	1,464
Hindustani.....	3,384
Reports.....	420

Making a grand total of 52,423

nearly double the circulation of any preceding two years of the Society's existence.

It is satisfactory to add, that this is not a mere nominal issue—the amount received from the sales of books is nearly in the same proportion;—the total sum realized from this source, during the four years preceding January 1834, having been but Sa. Rs. 21,800; while the amount within the two years since that period, (not including instruments and books procured by Government through the medium of the Society,) has been Sa. Rs. 18,287."

This leads your Committee to the state of

We insert also another announcement which does much honour to the gentleman concerned, whom we heard named as Mr. Muir, of the Civil Service, and who has since increased his munificent offer to 1,600 rupees.

"By the liberality of a gentleman in the Upper Provinces, your Committee have it in their power to make a further trial of the latter plan. This noble minded individual, who wishes to do good in secret, has offered 1,000 rupees; 700 for the production of a book of not less than 200 pages in English, and 300 for the translation of it into Hindui; the book to consist, 1st, of a brief and simple account of the Earth; 2ndly, of Commerce, its extent and advantages; 3rdly, of the Manufactures of England; 4thly, of the Agriculture of England and India contrasted; 5thly, of the Enterprise constantly at work in the best countries of Europe; and 6thly, of the frequent elevation in society of meritorious individuals of obscure origin. Should this offer elicit a suitable and acceptable work, it may lead to other offers, and the Society may be able, by the aid of a liberal expenditure, to procure a supply for their wants. Should it fail, it may then appear desirable to seek a competent person, who can give his whole time and strength to the preparation of such books as the Committee should direct; and by his labours, together with the additional contributions of friends, they might hope, in some period, to complete what they originally contemplated. The increasing demands for books may in time justify the Society in adopting both the means above specified, for the purpose of multiplying their publications. At present your Committee are satisfied, that neither of them can be entered into and carried on without an augmentation of funds. The plan at present pursuing, is that which has been pursued for the last ten years, and for which their resources have been barely adequate. They are, however, unwilling to believe, or their prospects of usefulness are so much enlarged, that the assistance necessary to supply them, will be withheld."

The Report concludes in the following words:

"As before intimated, the amount realized from sales of books has formed the principal item in the receipts. This is so far highly satisfactory; and it is hoped, that this feature will every successive year more strikingly distinguish the operations of the Society. But it must however be recollected, that almost the whole of the Society's publications which are sold at all, are disposed of to conductors of Schools and Booksellers, and that to such persons they are supplied at price merely covering the original cost; so that, however large the amount of sales, it is the cause of education, and not the School Book Society, which derives the advantage."

Mr. W. Adam rose to move the first Resolution: namely—

1.—That the report now read be adopted, and published under the direction of the Committee.

After expatiating upon the pleasing and encouraging progress it brought to notice, he dwelt upon the really tiding effect as yet realized upon the country at large. In the course of his late journey, he had not found one of the Society's publications used or even known in any of the numerous indigenous schools he had visited:—where even they did exist, they were not used, but regarded rather as objects of curiosity. Some measure was required for bringing the Committee into immediate communication with these village seminaries, and by degrees providing them with better materials of education than they now possessed.

He thought the Society did not make the most of native talent in compiling class-books in their own languages—he had met with many Pundits in charge of schools, who had compiled works of considerable merit and labour—one indeed had composed some 40,000 slokas of moral and grammatical education for his pupils—with a little encouragement and a new direction to their labours, the Pundits would be found most useful auxiliaries to the Society.

Mr. Harf seconded the first proposition, when Mr. James Prinsep hoped he should not alarm the Meeting by rising to propose what might be called an amendment on the Report before it should be finally adopted: but the President would agree with him in regarding the operations of the past two years and the Report itself as incomplete, unless it recorded another act of liberality similar to that of Mr. Muir, which he was happy to have been made the channel of communicating thus opportunely. It came from a gentleman distinguished for his exertions in the advancement of knowledge in every department, who, seated as it were upon a pinnacle of the mountains bounding our dominions on the north, looked down with intense interest upon all that was doing in the cause of education, and if not personally, yet in spirit engaged in all the discussions which divided the friends of native instruction here below—to whom the world was indebted for disclosing stores of ancient literature that had long lain hid in the mountainous recesses of Nipal, unknown alike to the European student and the pundit of the plains—and whose name as a Naturalist would be immortalized by his discoveries of new productions of the forest and the cliff. He need hardly mention the name of Mr. B. H. Hodgson, Resident at Nipal, from whom he had just received the following letter:

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Sir,—With reference to the premium offered by Mr. Muir for a work calculated to give stimulus and sound direction to the native mind, (according to the advertisement printed in your Journal for February) I request you will tender to the Committee of Public Instruction 500 rupees in my name, in augmentation of Mr. Muir's donation.

The proposal in an excellent one: but the premium is, at present, too low.

A second rate work would do more harm than good; and a first rate one cannot, I conceive, be hoped for, unless the remuneration be greatly increased. Mr. Muir's laudable example will, I trust, be not lost on us: nor will he, I am sure, object to others coming forward to effectuate his views.

But, if nothing more be subscribed, and my tender be accepted, I would suggest that the original donation be awarded to the English work; and mine to the translation. A translation into the Hindee language and Nagri character, is what I understand to be required; and is certainly that which would most effectually tend to the wide diffusion of the information conveyed by the English work. Nor will talent inferior to that requisite for the English compilation suffice to do justice to such a mass of novel ideas in the language of the Hindoos.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

B. H. HODGSON.

Nipal, April 2, 1836.

The amendment or rather addition to the Report which he proposed, should bring in the substance of Mr. Hodgson's generous offer; and he suggested that the disposition of the fund should be entrusted to the Committee who had kindly undertaken the arrangement of the other donation.

Mr. Hare seconded this proposal, and the Report was adopted with the addition.

Sir Benjamin Malkin, followed by Mr. Cameron, introduced the 2d Resolution, with a complimentary testimony of the interest Lord Auckland had constantly taken in institution, for promoting education in England:

2.—That the Right Honorable the Governor-General be respectfully solicited to accept the office of Patron of the Society.

Mr. Lacroix, in moving the 3d Resolution, drew the Society's attention to the primary object of encouraging the study of the vernacular languages. He had had frequent opportunity of remarking that the students of our English Colleges were ill-versed in or wholly ignorant of their own tongue, and consequently unfitted for the transfer of any of the knowledge they had acquired to their countrymen—(whenever allusion was made to vernacular instruction, we remarked the assent of the meeting betokened by knocking the table, &c.)

Baboo Ram Comul Sen seconded the 3d resolution:—

3.—That the cordial thanks of this Meeting be presented to the President, Vice-Presidents and Committee of the Society, for their past services; and that the following Gentlemen be requested to act as officers of the Institution till the next Meeting:

Colonel Beaton, referring to a passage in Mr. Hodgson's letter, said that he wished that those Members of the School Book Society whose experience and local knowledge enabled them to form a sound judgment on the subject, would fully consider the question whether, in translations made or works prepared by the Society, for the native population of the north western Provinces, a preference should be shewn to the Hindi or to the Hindustani dialect. With regard to the proposed prize essay this matter had been settled by the gentleman who gave the premium and who desired that the translation should be into Hindi; and Mr. Hodgson has distinctly expressed his opinion, "a translation into the Hindi language and Nagri character would tend best to a wide diffusion of the information conveyed by the English work." On this point Col. B. had great doubts; and was rather inclined to think, that such a book would be read by a greater number of persons if translated into the Hindustani (or Oordoo) and printed in the Persian character. The Hindi might be more extensively spoken; but such books as this essay, and the last volumes of the English reader, which the Report which has been read notices as desiderata in Hindi and Hindustani, are not intended for ploughmen, and if we take into account the population of the larger cities (Dehli, Lucknow, Agra, &c. &c.) where Hindustani is spoken and recollect that this dialect is spoken by every Native gentleman in the north western Provinces, he was disposed to think that works composed in it would be best suited, if not to majority of the population, yet to a great majority of that class in the Upper Provinces who were likely to read them at all. Such was his own opinion; and he knew it as that of some others who were well acquainted with those Provinces. He now mentioned it in the hope that the question would be well considered, in order that in future translations made under the influence of the School Book Society, a decided preference might be given to that dialect which should, after inquiry, appear to deserve it. Having said thus much upon this incidental subject, to which he was anxious to direct the attention of those Members of the Society who were best able to judge of it, some of whom he perceived present, he should now proceed to move the 4th Resolution which had been introduced to him.

4.—That the best acknowledgments of the Meeting be presented to the Chairman, for his valuable services on the present occasion.

Mr. James Prinsep had on the contrary heard (from Allahabad especially,) a want expressed for books in Hindi of which the supply was now so small. He most cordially concurred with Colonel Beaton in the resolution assigned to him.

"I beg to second that motion—and I do so with the more pleasure, because it affords me an opportunity of adding my humble testimony to the valuable aid, the unrelaxing zeal of Sir Edward Ryan in promoting the objects of the Society. But more particularly the strict impartiality he has always shewn in dividing the efforts of the Society between publications in the English and the vernacular languages of India.

To some gentlemen present, who are doubtless aware that it was my misfortune to be obliged to retire from an institution closely connected with the School Book Society, (the Education Committee), at the very moment of Sir Edward Ryan's joining it, there may appear an inconsistency in my supporting his measures here, while I opposed them, or rather opposed the system of his party there. But the circumstances are totally different. Sir Edward, if I mistake not, entered the Education Committee pledged to the reform which a late Right Honorable Governor-General had suddenly conceived it advisable to introduce in the education of the Natives of India, counter to the opinion of the majority of the then Committee. Neither he nor any other of the half dozen new Members introduced by Lord William Bentinck, took part in the discussions which at that moment divided us—but their votes necessarily bore us down and rendered any continuance of our opposition to what has been termed the Anglomaniac system of giving instruction to the Natives of this country exclusively in English—altogether useless, and injurious to the cause of education by its interruption of the business of the Committee. We therefore retired—I say we, for I am proud to think that my companion on that occasion was one conspicuous for his sound judgment and his extensive acquaintance with the habits and feelings of the natives

—Mr. W. H. Macnaghten. We retired, anticipating a return to our seats on some future day, when the views of the English party should be modified by the experience of a few years longer residence in the country, when it should be found that the attempt to educate millions in a foreign tongue at an expense vastly enhanced, was preposterous; and when the encouragement of the vernacular and the classical languages of India should gradually win back a portion of the attention of the Committee. Already we see symptoms of such a wholesome reformation of opinion: one of the principal leaders of the English faction has in another place recorded that the attempt to wheedle the infant mind to study English in Calcutta—the place where of all places in India, the knowledge of English was likely to be desirable and profitable—had failed—the parents took their children away, saying they had no want of English—and already their English masters have been set to work to study Bengalee!

Gentlemen, I trust nothing I have said will lead you to suppose that I underrate English instruction, or that I would thwart the progress of the student in the vast field, which his knowledge of our language throws open to him. On the contrary, the efforts of the old committee originated these very studies in our Indian Colleges; while at the same time they fostered and encouraged the indigenous literature, in hopes of engraving on it, gradually a portion of the rich fruits of our own advanced knowledge, which are more sure of being reared and preserved by amalgamation with the deep-rooted, healthy plants of the country, than by wholesale transplantation into a foreign and uncongenial soil.

But I must beg pardon for this long digression. The report just read will show that the attention of the School Book Society has not been biased by any exclusive views. It has been ever anxious to provide books for the scholar in every tongue—and for this impartiality our President has ever been distinguished in the minutes of our Secretary's circulars. On this ground, and for his personal labour in the detail of the Society, in the selection of fit works for the press, I most heartily concur in the vote of thanks to Sir Edward Ryan."

Sir Benjamin Malkin and Mr. Cameron defended the views of the Education Committee, and avowed themselves supporters of the system of imparting scientific knowledge in English;—the Natives had always been indebted for such knowledge to a foreign medium, Sanscrit, Arabic, or Persian, and surely if such were still to be the case, English challenged the preference on every account. The vernacular had always been a primary object with the committee, but the connection of the learned Eastern languages therewith seemed unnecessary, and he thought with them that Sanscrit and Arabic should be left to shift for themselves.

• The Recording Secretary, Mr. Yates, having put the vote of thanks to the chair—

Sir Edward Ryan in returning thanks, said that some had doubted the utility of holding these biennial meetings—he was convinced however from the numerous attendance he now saw, that they did good service to the cause. Without them should we have had Mr. Adam's valuable observations as to the state of indigenous schools? or Mr. Lacroix's practical experience of the neglect of a material study in our English students? The public were now to be made acquainted with what had transpired in the Education Committee—although Mr. Prinsep's remarks on the discussion that had there taken place, were hardly relevant to the subject of the present meeting. He must explain that the question before that body, which had always advocated vernacular tuition had been, not whether English should be exclusively taught, but how the extremely limited funds at their disposal could be turned to the best purpose. The objects of the School Book Society were totally distinct; its duty and rule were to supply books in all languages for which there might be demand; and in this view he trusted unanimity would always prevail in this valuable institution. Before sitting down, he must move that the best thanks of the Society be given to Mr. Hodgson for his munificent donation, which was carried by acclamation.—Calcutta Courier.

THE CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

Extract from the proceedings of the Managers of the Civil Annuity Fund, held on the 25th March, 1836.

Read the following protest signed by four of the Managers, viz.

"As Managers of the Annuity Fund we desire to enter our protest against the position assumed at the Special Meeting of the 19th instant, that a decision of a majority of the Managers in regard to any act performed by them in conformity with the rules of the Fund is not valid, unless confirmed by a majority of $\frac{3}{4}$ of the subscribers voting at a General Meeting on the subject of such act of the Managers.

"Because if this position be maintained, it will be in the power of any number, however small, in excess of $\frac{1}{4}$ of those voting on the question, to reverse any act, however legal, of the Managers, notwithstanding that they are the confidential Agents and Trustees of the whole service in respect to the management of the Fund; whereas the obvious tendency of the rule is to discourage any departure from the system prescribed by them, by requiring a majority of at least $\frac{3}{4}$ of the voters in regard to any deviation from their system."

(Signed) J. A. DORR,
" C. TROWER,
" C. MORLEY,
" W. H. OAKES.

Upon which the following gentlemen recorded their sentiments, as follows:

"The undersigned declare that in their opinion the position stated in the above protest, viz. that any act of the Managers is not valid unless confirmed by a majority of $\frac{3}{4}$ at a General Meeting, was not established by the result of the proceedings of the General Meeting on the 19th instant, that Meeting having merely decided in the first instance, upon a question referred especially to it by the Managers themselves, and the act or resolution by which the appointment made by the managers was declared vacant having been duly passed by a majority of three-fourths of those present or who voted thereat by proxy."

(Signed) J. PATTLE,
" T. FLOWDEN,
" RICHARD WALKER,
" H. T. PRINSEP.

The managers who subscribed the above protest declare that they are satisfied with the above explanation; and, without entering into the question of the legality of the general proxies admitted at the Meeting, are content that the result of the Proceedings of the 19th, should be understood as not maintaining the position objected to.

(A true extract.)

At a Quarterly General Meeting of the Subscribers to the Civil Fund held at the Town Hall, on Monday the 25th day of April, 1836—

Mr. H. T. PRINSEP was requested to take the Chair.

Read and approved the proceedings of the Meeting of the 25th January last.

Moved by Mr. D. C. Smyth seconded by Mr. C. Morley—That the Proceedings of the last Meeting be confirmed which being carried, the Secretary was directed to record upon the Proceedings' Book, the following minute by Mr. Rattray, Mr. French and Mr. Houston in reference to the above Resolution.

"In subscribing to the confirmation of the proceedings of the last Meeting (of the 25th January), the undersigned desire that it may be distinctly understood, that in the case of Mr. Sutherland they confirm the resolution of the Meeting to communicate to that gentleman the result of the reference made to the service at large on the question of his admission to, or rejection from the list, of Subscribers to the fund—upon the propriety or otherwise of that reference, they desire it may be understood, that on this occasion no opinion is intended to be expressed."

The thanks of the Meeting were voted to the Chairman, and the Meeting adjourned.

The purpose for which the Subscribers had met was then brought forward; viz. the appropriation of the 10,000 rupees, set apart at a former Meeting, to be disposed off on the present occasion, and various suggestions were made; when—to a proposition from the chair

* Voted for the Resolution.

"That the 10,000 rupees should be rateably returned to such of the subscribers as may require its return within a given period; after which, the amount not applied for to be made over to the new subscription—

Mr. ARBUTHNOT moved as an amendment—"That the 10,000 rupees should be made over to the new subscription which had been opened for the purpose of forwarding the objects of the public meeting—and this was subsequently modified, to meet the views of such of the meeting as considered it should be left with each of the subscribers to give or not, a portion or the whole of their respective subscriptions, as they should feel disposed to the new fund.

Mr. CATOR contended that the meeting had not the power to apply it to any other purpose than that of advancing Steam Communication, and argued that it would be an imposition upon the public to apply it to any other purpose; for which, and similar expressions in which he was indulging, he was called to order, by Mr. NORTON—Who submitted, that applying to the meeting the terms practising deceit and imposing upon the public were not expressions which ought to be indulged in.

It appearing to be the wish of the majority that it should be left with each subscriber to apply his portion of the fund as he should feel disposed.

The following resolution was moved by Mr. Smollett and seconded by Mr. Dare.

"That with the exception of the sum of rupees 7,000 which it has been determined to present to Mr. Waghorn as a remuneration for his services in the cause of Steam Navigation, the remainder of the Steam Fund be returned to the original Subscribers, leaving it to the discretion of each gentleman to devote such a portion of his former donation as he may think fit for the furtherance of the Petition agreed to at the Meeting held on the 26th ultimo, or any other object he may feel disposed."

To which Mr. Arbuthnot moved an amendment, but it not being seconded, the sense of the Meeting was taken on Mr. SMOLLETT's motion, which was carried by a majority.

PROCEEDINGS of a Meeting of the Subscribers to the Steam Fund of 1828, held at the College on Saturday the 2d of April, pursuant to Advertisement.

Present,—Mr. CATOR,
" Mr. BARROW,
" Mr. ARBUTHNOT,

Mr. CARON was requested to take the chair.

Mr. ARBUTHNOT informed the Meeting that the sum collected by the subscription was rupees 4,800, which was remitted in pursuance of the orders of the Committee, to Messrs. Rickards, Mackintosh and Co. of London, in terms of the following letter.

Messrs. Rickards, Mackintosh and Co. London.

Madras, 10th July, 1829.

GENTLEMEN,—A sum of Rs. 4,800 having been collected at this presidency, in aid of the funds for promoting a communication by steam navigation between this country and England, it has been determined by the Committee of Subscribers to remit the amount to you, for the purposes of being added to the funds collected in Bengal for the same object.

I have accordingly the pleasure to enclose the first of a set of bills, granted by this Government on the Court of Directors of the Honourable East India Company, at forty-two days sight in my favour, and by me endorsed to you for £445, 14s 3d., which sum I have to request you will do us the favor to appropriate towards the above object, under the same guarantee injunctions, and conditions as have been established by the committee of subscribers in Bengal, and which have reference principally to the scheme of Mr. Waghorn, who, it is hoped, will succeed in establishing his claim to the funds in question.

I shall be obliged by your favouring me with an acknowledgment of the receipt of this remittance, and by your informing me of the steps that may be taken to give effect to the wishes of the subscribers.

I remain, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) J. A. A.

No claim having been established to the fund, the money remaining in the hands of Messrs. Rickards and Co. became involved in their failure in 1833—Dividends to the amount of about £ 180 have been received by Mr. Arbuthnot's Agents in London, and invested in Exchequer bills, and Mr. A. lately directed the amount to be remitted to the treasurers in this country.

Resolved.—That when the remittance shall be received, a statement be published in the Fort St. George Gazette, shewing the proportion of each subscriber's original subscription which may be realized, and that the same be returned to those subscribers who shall require it, provided, their application be received by the treasurer, within a period of three months from the date of the publication of such statement.

Resolved 2d.—That the amount of the uncalled for subscriptions at the expiration of the three months, be paid over by the Treasurer to the Friend in Need Society. —Madras Courier.

STEAM COMMITTEE.

At a Meeting of the Steam Committee held on the 5th April 1836.

Mr. A. D. CAMPBELL in the Chair.

Read the Draft of Memorials to the Court of Directors and to the India Board, which were unanimously approved of.

Resolved that the Chairman of this Committee be requested to transmit the fair copy of the same to the Chairman of the General Meeting, for his signature and transmission by him to these authorities respectively.

A. D. CAMPBELL, Chairman.

MEMORIAL.

To the Honorable the Court of Directors, of the East India Company.

The respectful Memorial of the inhabitants of Madras assembled at a Meeting held on the 26th March 1836.

Your Memorialist being very thoroughly impressed with the important advantages which would result to the state, to the Mercantile Community, and to the Public at large, from the Establishment of a regular and speedy communication between Britain and India, by means of Steam Navigation, have seen with much satisfaction, that your Honorable Court have expressed an opinion that such Communication would open the way to other improvements, and would ultimately redound to the benefit of both Countries," and have stated that, if the finances of India were in a flourishing condition, you might consider it a duty to incur even the enormous outlay which you calculated would be necessary for its accomplishment; and that while you hesitated on account of the magnitude of the estimated Cost, to engage immediately in any project of this Character, you directed enquiries to be carried on to ascertain the practicability of effecting the end in view at a reasonable expense.

To Bombay Govt. 14th March, 832.

Since your Honorable Court expressed the above sentiments, the Select Committee appointed by the House of Commons to inquire into the means of promoting Communication with India by Steam, have submitted to the House resolutions declaring the opinion of the Committee, that the net Charge of effecting this object which is recognized as of great importance both to Great Britain and to India, should be divided equally between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, and that by proper arrangements the expense which has attended the experiments hitherto made, may be materially reduced.

Your Memorialist have therefore been encouraged to make enquiries into the practicability of establishing Steam Communication at a more reasonable expense than was calculated by your Honorable Court upon the estimates you had before you in 1832; and, having compared those estimates with the probable cost at present, and calculated the probable returns from Postage and Passengers, the results, as exhibited in the Appendix to this Memorial are so favorable, that they are induced to submit them to your Honorable Court with a confident expectation that they will satisfy you, that the net expense of the establishment of Steam Communication, divided between H. M.'s Government and the East India Company, will impose a burden upon the finances of India far less than you anticipated, and inconsiderable when compared with the advantages which it is calculated to produce, advantages which the late Governor General thought "would be cheaply bought at any price."

In this expectation your Memorialists earnestly pray that your Honorable Court will in concert with His Majesty's Government take efficient measures for the complete establishment of Steam Communication between Britain and India by monthly Packets to and from the Red Sea to be in connection with the line of Packets between Falmouth and Alexandria. And your Memorialists venture to suggest that from its central position, and other circumstances the Port of Galle in the Island of Ceylon is the fittest place to be fixed as the point of arrival and departure for the Steam Packets in India, and that Suez is the fittest place in the Red Sea.

APPENDIX TO MEMORIAL.

In the despatch from the Honorable Court of Directors to the Bombay Government dated 14th March 1832, the annual expense of one Steam Vessel, including the Capital Sunk, is estimated at £26,800, and supposing the employment of 4 Steam Vessels, to be necessary to keep up a monthly communication the total cost per annum is estimated at £1,07,200. This estimate was framed with reference to the cost of the Hugh Lindsay and the heavy expenses incurred in her voyages to and from the Red Sea.

On examining the estimate it appears, First, that a Vessel in every way better fitted for the Service can be procured now at a much less cost. Secondly, that the charge for fuel is greatly beyond the cost at which it may now be obtained in India, and at which it is reasonable to suppose it may be supplied in the Red Sea when the demand becomes certain. Thirdly, that as it will not be necessary to keep more than three Steamers employed at any time and probably not more than two during six months of the year, although it may be expedient to keep up four Steam Vessels to guard against accidents, the estimate is needlessly increased by providing for them all as if in actual employment.

First, with respect to the cost of the Vessel.

The Hugh Lindsay is a Vessel of 411 Tons with engines of 160 horse power. Sir

* Evidence before Select Committee fol: 158 and 159.

The estimate by Mr. Morgan given in by Sir P. Malcolm is as follows.

A Vessel of 435 tons cost 8,500
2 Engines 50 Horse Power 4,400
Copper Boilers 4,200

17,100

+ Evidence fol: 71.

suitable for this Service fitted with engines of 180 horse power to be £18,700. There can be no doubt therefore that Vessels well adapted for the Service can be procured at the cost of 20,000£ each.

The following statement shows the annual charge of maintaining a Vessel purchased at that cost compared with the Estimate of the Court of Directors.

	Cost of a Vessel of 450 tons and 180 H. P. £20,000	Cost of Hugh Lindsay 411 tons and 160 H. P. £35,600.
Capital sunk annually on Vessel and boiler for 15 years	£ 1333	£ 2369
Interest on Capital at 4 per Cent. the rate of the loan now open	800	2012 at 6 per ct.
Insurance at £7 10s. per Cent. on half the Capital	750	1335
	2883	5716
		2833

It thus appears that the annual charge of maintaining a vessel of great size and with engines of greater power than the Hugh Lindsay will be £2,333 less than the Estimate of the Court of Directors.

It is supposed to be unnecessary to make any allowance for the cost of bringing the vessel to India, as it will of course be used for the conveyance of Troops or Stores the freight of which will most probably cover the charge.

Secondly, as to the cost of fuel.

The estimate of the Court of Directors amounts to £13,684 (exclusive of £2312 calculated as the expense Evidence before Select Committee.	of landing, ware-housing and re-shipping on the Red Sea)

Mr. Field fol: 82 Q. 831.	for 2628 tons being at the rate of 5 £4s. 1d. per ton on the average. The calculation is for 182½ days consumption at 24 hours to the day and 84lb. per hour for every 10 horse power. But it would appear that 80lb. per hour is a sufficient allowance for this power: at this rate the daily consumption with engines of 180 horse power will be about 15½ tons, which at 8 days consumption per mensem or 216 per annum amounts to 3348 tons. Of this it may be assumed according to the estimate of the Court of Directors that ½ or 837 tons is the proportion to be supplied in India and ¼ or 2511 tons the proportion to be supplied in the Red Sea.

From statements of actual transactions furnished by the Mercantile Houses here, it appears that we are warranted in taking 30s. as a fair price for coals in India at present.

The general opinion of the Merchants here is that it is likely rather to fall than to rise since, when there is a certain demand, every vessel coming to India, without a full cargo, will bring coals for ballast in the expectation of a very small advance upon the cost in London. Assuming then 30s. to be the price in India, there seems to be no reason to doubt that an increase of 100 per cent., raising the price to 60s., on the average, will be sufficient Estimate of Court of Directors, £13,684 to ensure a supply equal to the demand in the Red Sea. The cost of 837 tons in India will be £1256, and the cost of 2511 tons in the Red Sea £7533, total £8789, or £4895 less than the estimate of the Court of Directors.

The estimate of £2312 for landing ware-housing and re-shipping coals in the Red Sea, appears to be larger than is likely to be necessary under a methodical arrangement—it is probable that 15s. per ton, would be an ample allowance—at this rate for 2511 tons the charge will be £1884 or £428 less than the estimate.

In the annual expenses of maintaining the vessel including capital sunk, £ 2833 Thus under the particular heads above noticed, leaving all the other charges In the cost of Fuel, . . . 4895

In the charges on the Red Sea,.....	428	in the Estimate of the Court of Directors. untouched, it appears that a saving may be made of £8156, reducing the estimate of the annual expense of every vessel that may be kept in employment from £26,800 to £18,644.

Thirdly, as to the number of vessels required to keep up a monthly Communication. It appears that the average of 7 voyages of the Hugh Lindsay was 20 days

Evidence p. 85 21 hours straining, at the average rate of 6 miles per hour — while the average rate of the Mediterranean packets is 7½ miles—and the difference is attributed to the unfitness of the Hugh Lindsay. With a fit vessel therefore we may calculate upon a saving in time of about 1-6th, or say that the voyage is reduced on the average to eighteen days.

The stoppages amounted on the average to 9 days 21 hours; but with good arrangements there can be no doubt that these may be reduced one half, say to 5 days. The voyage then, including stoppages, will be made in 23 days, and there will be 7 days to prepare for return. In the favourable season therefore 2 Steamers will probably be sufficient—in the unfavourable season 3 will probably be necessary: but the expenses of the 3d as a sea going vessel will continue for 6 months only.

It may be expedient to have a 4th in reserve to supply the place of any of the others that may be disabled.

The estimate will then stand as follows.

Total expense of one Sea going Vessel, £18,644	4 Steam Vessels—Cost of keeping them up exclusive of sea going expenses.....	£ 2,883 per An.

	£ 56,265

It is now to be considered what return there will be from postage and passengers as a set off against the expense.

Taking the number of letters to and from Britain which annually pass through the Post Offices of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Galle in Ceylon, to be 300,000 as stated in the Memorial of the Inhabitants of Calcutta, and supposing that only two-thirds or 2,00,000 will be sent by the Steam packet when a regular monthly communication is established, which, if the postage is fixed at a moderate rate, say 12 As. or 1s. 6d. a letter seems to be a fair expectation, the return even at that low rate will be £15,000 per annum.

Next as to passengers.

The number annually arriving at, and departing from Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Ceylon, from and to Britain, is stated in the Calcutta Memorial to be 3160.

Now supposing only 1-5 or 632 per annum to prefer a passage by the steam packets, this would give for every trip 26 passengers, but say only 20. As the moderate charge of 400 Rupees, or 40 £, the receipt will be 800 £ allowing 300 £ or 3 for the cost of providing for the passengers the net profit will be 500 £ per voyage or per 24 voyages 12000 £. That 480 passengers out of 3160 will prefer this route, when the communication is regularly established, and every necessary arrangement is made for

The above return from passengers may therefore be safely reckoned upon as the minimum.

Revised estimate of charge,	£50,935	It appears then that there will be a return of 28,000 £ per annum from postage and passenger to be set against the expense of the Steam Vessels; the net charges will therefore be only £22,935; which, divided between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company according to the resolution of the Select Committee, will make the charge upon the Finances of India, scarce more than 11,000 £ per annum.— Madras Courier .

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE MANAGERS OF THE MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Soon after the Quarterly General Meeting held on the 11th of January last the Committee of Managers submitted a circular letter to subscribers, soliciting their votes for the election of three Managers for the present year, two in the room of Surgeons, J. Grant and A. Garden, the senior and junior Members, who in accordance with the regulations of the Fund vacate in rotation, and one in succession to the late Dr. Spens. Seventy-four Gentlemen have replied to the circular, and upon a scrutiny of their votes, it is found, that Mr. Surgeon Garden stands re-elected, and Dr. J. Swinney, 2nd Member of the Medical Board, and S. Ludlow, Esq., superintending Surgeon are appointed Managers.

The Committee regret, that they are still unable to communicate to the Meeting, the orders of the Honorable the Court of Directors on the subject of their application, submitted to the Court in January 1835, for being allowed to pay off three additional annuities, or bonuses; but they indulge the hope, that it will be soon in their power to convey to the service the court's approval, and thereby remove the suspense which its members have been placed under for more than three years; the period that has already elapsed since the projection of the Fund.

In proof of the desire which continues to be manifested for the establishment of the Institution, it may be observed, that notwithstanding the recommendation of the Management to the subscribers in general, in June 1835, to suspend from the preceding month all payments until the pleasure of the Hon'ble Court was made known, a number still continue to pay their subscriptions. In the last Quarter two statements of subscriptions credited in the Civil Department of the Bengal Presidency have been received from the Accountant-General, one for the 4th Quarter of the year 1834

1835, for sicca rupees 1505, 8, 11, the other for the 1st Quarter of 1835-36 for sicca rupees 1501 4. 2. total sicca rupees 3006. 13. The disbursements for the Quarter amount to sicca rupees 79. 11.

The Committee have had many difficulties to contend with in placing the Fund in its present position, but notwithstanding the discouraging circumstances which have concurred to protract the establishment of the Institution, their experience of the support which the Members of the service generally are disposed to afford to it, encourages them confidently to predict its complete success eventually. Some few Members have withdrawn in disappointment, but others have enrolled their names in our list—that of Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. Bowron has been recently added, and the fund now embraces 2 Members of the Medical Board, 4 superintending Surgeons, 59 Surgeons and 108 Assistant Surgeons—total 176.

ADDRESS TO SIR CHARLES METCALFE.

About two hundred Native gentlemen assembled yesterday afternoon at the Town Hall, and by arrangement among them a deputation proceeded to Garden Reach, to deliver the Address to Sir Charles Metcalfe, a copy of which will be found below. The answer was deferred with a promise to send it; this we hope to be able to publish on Monday. The Address was read by Rajah Rajnarain Roy. The number of signatures upon it, we are told, was about two thousand four hundred:

To the Hon'ble SIR CHARLES THEOPHILUS METCALFE, Bart. G. C. B. &c. &c. &c.

HONORABLE SIR,—Little more than a year has passed away since a large body of the Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood presented their respectful and affectionate farewell on the occasion of your departure to assume the Government of Agra. The sense of your great public services, and the happy fortune of Hindoosthan, have since called you for a few short months to the higher station, from which you have just descended; yet has that brief period been marked by acts that will carry down your name to our children's children for many generations. By one signal deed of necessary justice you have made the whole of India to know, and feel, that henceforth all men stand equal before the Law, and that wealth and rank will afford no protection to crime and no immunity from its heaviest penalty. By the issue of a uniform money for all the Presidencies, a great step has been made towards the improvement of our commercial relations, both external and internal. By the abolition of the Chowkies in Bengal, the fatal blow has been given to the vexatious system of Inland Duties, which has too long been allowed to harass the industry of the country; and though the Salt Monopoly still exists, and may for some time longer be found indispensable to supply the demands of the public service, the jobbing of public sales, and the exactions of monopoly at second-hand, have been effectually done away by the adoption of a fixed rate of delivery. But the grand measure of your administration,—that on which will rest its fame in after ages—is the freedom of the Press, which you have been the first to place on a sound and permanent basis, and have thereby opened to our desires a boundless field of enterprize in every branch of human knowledge. There have been the public acts of your brief term of Rule; they call for gratitude from every class, but most from us, whose all of present fortune and of future hope is riveted to the soil of Hindoosthan. We should indeed be unworthy of such benefits, were we insensible either of the wisdom that planned, or of the public spirit and benevolence that suggested them. But when moreover we recollect, that throughout a long and active life which you have passed amongst us, you have lived as if you looked to no other home; that you have dealt out the emoluments of office with as unreserving a hand, as if they had been a mere trust for the gratification, and relief, and comfort of those around you; that our customs have ever been treated by you with a delicacy, which could only have been found in one that identified himself with the country which he was sent to govern, the fulness of our hearts can find no adequate expression of the interest we shall continue to feel, whatever be the course of your future life. If it be abandoned to the enjoyments of a private station, our prayers for your happiness will hover over your retreat. If again involved in the cares of Government, the experience of the past will fill us with the brightest anticipations. In either event, accept, Honored Sir, the assurance of the affectionate gratitude and high admiration with which you will not cease to be regarded by the millions of whom we are the feeble representatives.

We have the honour to be, Honorable Sir, with the highest respect of veneration, your most obedient servants and well wishers,

(A large body of the Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood.)

To *Rajah Rajnarain Roy Bahadur, and the other Native
Gentlemen who signed the Address to Sir Charles Metcalfe, Baronet, &c. &c. &c.*

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed to transmit to you the enclosed reply to your address and I have the honor to be, your most obedient Servant,

J. M. HICINSON.

On the River, Comercolly, April 7, 1836.

Reply to the Address of Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and the Neighbourhood.

DEAR FRIENDS,—I am grateful for the kind feeling which has dictated your Address. I cannot pretend to merit the high praises which you bestow : but nothing can deprive me of the heartfelt gratification, which I derive from this cordial manifestation of confidence and affection, at a time when a lasting separation was expected.

Without further reference to myself, I may venture to express my satisfaction at your appreciation of the value of those measures, which have been deemed worthy of your marked applause. You will see from them, and I trust from the whole course of Legislation now in progress, that the British Nation is anxious to govern India for the welfare and happiness of its inhabitants. There was a time when it could do little more than protect your lives and properties from foreign enemies threatening devastation and destruction, and try to introduce an improved system of internal administration in the most indispensable essentials ; and when all the revenue that could be obtained was necessary for those purposes.

Nor is the Government yet in a condition to forego great sources of revenue, the loss of which might endanger the safety of you all ; but you will, I trust, perceive as the means or prospects of the State improve, that nothing oppressive or vexatious will be retained, and that the efforts of the Government will be unremitted to ameliorate the condition of the people, and to render India a prosperous, happy and enlightened country.

Possessing incalculable resources for extension of commerce and increase of riches : united, I will hope, by common interests and paternal government, with Great Britain and Ireland, in mutual sympathy and affection :
giving and receiving wealth by that union : freed from all undue exaction : enjoying all the rights of person and property, with equal laws for all classes of subjects : all shackles being removed from the spread of knowledge by the Liberty of the Press, and all trammels from Commerce by the abolition of unfair duties : every restriction and impediment demolished that can obstruct industry and enterprise : general education promoted :
intercourse, external and internal accelerated and multiplied by Steam Communication, and the other improvements of enlightened Nations : it is impossible to set any limit to the pitch of prosperity, which India may attain under British protection.

Accept my fervent prayers that this brilliant prospect may be realized.

Accept also my affectionate wishes for the welfare and happiness of each and all of you. My destiny still keeps me in India, and my further labours in the Government to which I am proceeding, will be cheered by the recollection of the kindness which has been evinced, under a expectation of my departure for Europe, by so numerous a body of Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and the Neighbourhood.

I have the honor to be, dear Friends, your faithful servant and sincere well-wisher

C. T. METCALFE.

KORAN-I-KAHY'E, OR THE KORAN OF COFFEE, BY IBN BEN SHUKUR.

To the learned and far-sighted Effendi the Editor of the Bengal Herald Greeting.

I have received, O Effendi ! the book you have sent and your note inquiring "how good coffee can be obtained in India" and I quite agree with you when you say that, in about ninety-nine houses out of a hundred, no coffee fit for a believer to drink is to be obtained ; and, though I grieve to say it, it is certain that the Giaours of Englishmen do not know what good coffee is, and their Pezavents of Kansamahs,—who all derive a profit from making their masters drink the water of charcoal and bitterness which they now serve up to them,—take care that they shall not do so. If the master did know, and if he knew moreover how little either in money or trouble good coffee costs, Kan-samah-jer would lose one of his old-established rents.
If you will then listen to me, smoking the pipe of attention on the carpet of patience, Inshallah ! you shall learn how good coffee can be obtained from the swine kansamahs. I mean good French coffee : either per se or as café au lait ; for our Turkish coffee you know is a different beverage, and I am not certain that it is allowable to inform you how it is made. The Imaum of our mosque says that the faithful should teach nothing to infidels, which does not tend to convert or destroy them : and I think he may be right.

Let us begin at the beginning. Your book is a learned one and your Professor Donevan is no doubt right enough in all he says. There are others of your books too—Gray's Operative Chemist amongst the rest—which contain very good directions for making coffee ;
but they have all the small fault of being impracticable for any purpose of comfort. The plague thereof, like that of some of the precious contrivances called patent ones, exceedeth infinitely the profit, and a testy old Englishman used in former times to tell me, "never have any thing to do with a patent contrivance unless you can buy the patentee with it." Well, for all practical purposes here, the book directions are "patent contrivances," and unless you fancy you have the patience to "sit in dherma" like a Mahatta Bramin, at the door of your kitchen—in which case you are fit for Paradise at once—eschew all books and attend to the words of instruction of Ibn ben Shukur.

SURA. I. You must buy your coffee, and what is more essential you must pick it. Almost all the coffee sold for domestic use in Calcutta, contains from one to five, or even seven per cent of a small, round, black bean like seed. This is coffee, but not drinkable coffee. It is the seed of the wild Sylhet coffee* which is collected and sold here for the purpose of adulterating all the coffee sold in the bazars. If you pick these grains out, have them roasted, and coffee made from them you will have an exact idea of the coffee, which unbelievers are to be allowed with the red-hot pipes in which they are to smoke camels dung in Jehannum. La Illah, &c. &c. I always give this coffee to tiresome friends. You can't think how they like it! They all say it is excellent. The French insist that it is the true café des visites. Observe then that it is all the black, and dirty-brownish looking grains that are to be picked out. The broken ones, if of a good colour, are of no consequence.

SURA. II. You must roast—I mean your kansamah must roast—your coffee; and I beseech you as a friend not to confound the two cases. I know that your law—may their fathers be burnt! I say that “what a manne doethe by the ministry of another that he doethe by himselfe,” but in roasting coffee and eggs, we use reason: and by careful experiment I doubt not you will find, as I have done, that ye twain—self and kansamah—are not one flesh. Well, the kansamah is to roast your coffee, and when you give it him tell him as he values his future perquisites not to put any butter or ghee to it when he roasts it. He will of course swear that he never does, to which answer mellifluously that you know he never does, but that there is a Company ka hookum against it for the future; so you mentioned the circumstance to put him on his guard; several worthy gentlemen having been lately obliged to neglect the Company's business and go to England in consequence of drinking coffee roasted with ghee.

By your beard, Effendi, I am not joking! about one half of the Calcutta kansamahs do put ghee or butter to coffee when they roast it! and moreover it is an English custom, for in England they sell roasted coffee and the roasting houses to please some freak or fancy of their own or their customers, absolutely defile the berry of delight with the fat of swine and they have told me to my beard that they mixed hog's-lard while roasting to improve the flavour and appearance of the coffee! The English nation are such obstinate infidels that to this day many believe, and some have taught the kansamahs, that coffee should always be roasted with butter.

Your coffee is then to be roasted without butter, and it must be roasted in an open iron pan; not because this is the best way but because it is done by a kansamah. I mean supposed to be done by a kansamah for kansamah-jee smokes his hookah and makes the cook's mate's boy's younger brother—who is, always in the babachee-kanah on coffee-roasting days—do it; your really respectable kansamah has the law-maxim quoted above always present to his mind. It is his namas and he cannot forget it. The French plan of roasting it in a close shut, iron cylinder through which is a long handle to turn it, is the best, but after several trials I found that unless I myself got into the cylinder and took kansamah-jee with me—and I find this inconvenient in the hot-weather—it was hopeless to get coffee roasted properly, because the cylinder must be turned constantly, and care must be taken to examine the coffee from time to time that it may not be burnt. Now, the cook's mate's boy's younger brother may keep stirring the coffee in an open pan, because he can listen to the talk going on; and kansamah-jee himself can without quitting his hookah, smell if the coffee is burning, so you must eschew all contrivances and hold fast to an open iron pan, not a frying pan—which is another Calcutta abomination in common practice,—but an iron pan of the sort called koray, which is hemispherical with a handle on each side. It should be kept for the sole purpose of roasting coffee, but I know of no contrivance to insure that it be not defiled by being put to other uses. Gentlemen who are particular may however employ a chowkedar to watch it and a man to watch the chowkydar—or lock it up in their writing desks with other valuable trinkets.

Your coffee then must be roasted; keeping it constantly stirred and tossing it over from time to time. It must be roasted till it is of a mahogany colour—rather a dark mahogany colour but not more. Nothing like a smell of burning must be allowed with it. The coffee drank by the infidels in Calcutta is generally too much roasted; most of it burned, and therefore half charcoal; some of their learned doctors have I am told demonstrated that charcoal is not coffee, but I have not seen the perspicuous book in which this is written. Surely, if the prophet pleased, charcoal might be coffee?

SURA. III. The coffee-pot. The Ingliz have a substance called tin, of which they make many domestic utensils when they cannot afford copper or silver; and it is certain that good coffee is best made in a vessel of this same tin. It may be put into a hot silver vessel afterwards if you like. There are many contrivances sold in your bazars, some of them I dare say patent ones, but as you were told in the beginning, unless you can buy the patent-man with it, &c. Well the best coffee-pots are the commonest sort with a single little strainer at the top for the coffee. Do not let this strainer have too many small holes; a few holes of the size of a large pin's head in three or four circles and at moderate distances are all that is required. The strainers which are pierced full of small pin-point holes are useless. Your coffee-pot must not be too large. Better to have two, a small and a large one, than one too large. I know that I shall be told by the scoffers that this is like the learned Ali-ul-Mikattam making a large hole for his large cat, &c. but that which is to come to pass will happen; and if your Gisors will make coffee in a large pot for a small number of visitors, upon their heads be it! If the prophet hath given you wealth enough to have a silver vase, make it hot with boiling water before you put your coffee into it. Every thing about coffee must be not remember; but the best plan is to keep your silver coffee-pot for show like the droll cut dresses which you Franks call coats; using your tin coffee-pot like your jackets for every-day work.

SURA. IV. Grinding or pounding the coffee. All true believers pound their coffee; but the infidels have mills for every thing; moreover if the slaves of the believers pound any thing else, such as pepper or chillies, in the same mortar as the coffee, the master cuts off their ears—which the infidels think hasty. You may therefore use a mill, and a mortar when the mill is out of order. Do not grind your coffee too fine for it will be turbid; nor too coarse, for it will waste too much. Something about the size of fine musket powder is what is required, but the proper size depends on that of the holes. If you have a mill you must regulate it yourself. The English are all born mill-menders and the kansamahs mill-destroyers. Bismillah!

SURA. V. Making the coffee. Your coffee should be fresh roasted and ground at least every two or three days; and Allah having endowed you English with the faculty of making all things in glass, it should be kept in one of your glass vases with a ground glass stopper. Have boiling-water ready, for no good coffee is to be made without boiling water, and having scalded your coffee-pot put in a table spoonful of ground coffee for every cup of coffee you wish to have; press it down into the strainer moderately hard with the glass stopper, and pour over it one cup of boiling water to moisten it : after which pour, little by little a cup full, for every spoonful of coffee you have put in. Observe that all this must be done slowly and by measure ; good coffee is never made by guess—and above all be sure that your water boils. Set your coffee pot in a bowl and pour boiling water round it, to keep it hot and Inshallah ! you will have the father and mother of good coffee for your pains. It may be made stronger by pouring the first cup or two out and pouring them again into the strainer if it should run too fast. All the plans for “fining” coffee, as it is called, are the notions of poor benighted infidels, who, not having the light of the true faith, first spoil their coffee and then defile it to mend their blunderings, blusterings with isinglass, white of eggs and other abominations. If you want more coffee you may add a spoonful or two of the powder and water for it—but not if your pot has got cold.

SURA. VI. Of things to be remembered. That no good coffee can be made weak. If you want weak coffee add water to your cup, but never admit any coffee to “the presence” which does not stain and adhere to the spoon and sides of the cup.

Show kansamah-jee five times how to make good coffee according to these directions ; and then never upon any account drink it bad. Throw it all away and make it over and over again till it is good. You Franks get into a passion on these occasions ; we do better, we put our slaves into a passion by dint of renewing their trouble. A man who has to do a thing six times over finds out that there is less trouble in doing it well at once.

The pilfering of your servants is one of the reasons why you get bad coffee. When they find you drink any dirt under the name of coffee, they only add a little fresh powder to the dregs of the last week—it is true this may be good enough for swine and dogs like you infidels—and they steal the coffee for themselves. Never then drink bad coffee—it costs you more than good—for when your servants know that you are aware of what is required to make good coffee they will no longer all steal ; it will only be kansamah-jee taking a little for himself.

Any measure of good Mocha or Bourbon coffee raw should give twice its bulk of ground coffee : but inferior coffees only gives once and a half the bulk.

SURA. VII.—The French, who make the best coffee which I have found amongst the Frank nations, have a mixture which they call café au lait, or milk coffee, and this is easiest made by having, first good coffee ready and at the same time milk which has been boiled down to half its bulk, both should be boiling hot, and when their maidens mix it and add sugar—Barikillah, but some of them have bright eyes and sweet voices—I think the drink is not bad. I wanted indeed when in France to purchase one of the maidens from the keeper of a coffee shop to prepare it for me, but the owner laughed at my beard, and I eat the dirt of humiliation before dogs of unbelievers.

SURA VIII. Conclusion. The above is written by Ibn ben Shukur, a pilgrim in the land, to teach the unbelievers, from the taste of good coffee, what would be their advantage in being converted to the true faith, and consequently partakers of the pipes and coffee and sherbet which the Houris are constantly preparing for the faithful in paradise. May his pen not have been worn in vain.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

TIMOUR THE TARTAR.

Timour is a tyrant of the first water, of humble birth, a truant from his father's house. By a series of enormities he has raised himself to the proud rank of Tartar Chief, which he maintains with becoming ferocity ; one of his latest acts having been the murder of his sovereign, whose son, Agib, the young Prince of Mingrelia, he now holds in captivity, while he usurps his throne. But Timour is a great hero and conqueror, pulling down kingdoms in this quarter, and building up others in that ! deluging scaffolds, burning towns, and oppressing his slaves till he has hardly left them spirit enough to groan. Having covered himself with glory, his filial tenderness vouchsafes some portion to his family—his father, no longer a shepherd, is governor of a fortress ; and his sister, “whose destiny” designed her to be a great woman, is to be married to the very first king his highness can catch. He has a scheme on foot for his own aggrandisement—his union with a Georgian bride, the warrior princess, a young lady whom fame reports to be a downright Amazon—heading armies, riding the high horse, and fighting battles, her lighter amusements being swimming rivers and shooting flying. Her serene highness is hourly expected ; and Timour, whose transports are not those of love, but ambition, burns for her arrival, which will place not only the diadems of Georgia and Mingrelia in his grasp, but of Tartary, China, India. Timour the Tartar is a truly ferocious relative : his father, Oglou, never stands in the presence of his dear terrible son without experiencing a fit of the ague, nor leaves it without shaking his head, to be quite certain that it sits tight between his shoulders. He had accepted the governorship of the fortress in which young Agib is confined, that he might be enabled to lighten his prisoner's chains ; and duly at midnight, when the guards are sleeping, the door of the cell is opened, and the princely captive enjoys for a few moments the pleasant air. The greatest blessing, however, that Oglou confers on Agib is to forward a correspondence with his widowed mother—an unhappy fugitive whose friends must remain inactive, while her child is in the usurper's power. The bugle sounds, the trampling of horses is heard, and a troop of Tartars, escorting an Amazon holding an arrow and wearing a quiver, mounted on a fiery courser richly caparisoned, enters, to the great surprise and admiration of Timour, who takes it for some vision, some enchantment, and kneels to the sovereign beauty of Georgia's heiress. Her highness is short and explicit ; she observes that an union formed like theirs, admits no flattery—little love is expected in regal marriage—she states her conditions—Agib must be the Prince of Georgia's captive, or never shall Timour be the Prince of Georgia's son—“So peremptory”—Timour hesitates—he has been used to command, not to obey—he just drops a hint that her royal highness is in his power—this draws forth her ire and arrow—she dares him to repeat the threat, and she will that instant strike the arrow through his heart. Where is his pride ! his storm of fury. Never till then was Timour vanquished. He consents ; and with to-morrow's dawn the boy departs for Teflis.

Oglou had been impatient, more, we suspect, from curiosity than love, to be introduced to his illustrious daughter-in-law, the fighting princess. He ventures into her august presence—what does he behold ? Both parties exhibit mutual wonder, and by significant signs and expressions contrive to understand each other. The suspicion of Timour is raised, but soon dissipated ; for the princess, recovering her self-possession, mounts her charger, her haughty lover walking in attendance, holding the rein.

To account for this surprise, it is necessary to remark that, in the person of the Georgian bride, Oglou beheld Zorilda, the Princess of Mingrelia; and in the usurper's father, the Princess recognised the grateful peasant to whose cottage she had once brought health and succour. When Timour's ambassadors arrived at Teflis, the proud and generous Almeyda would instantly have spurned his insolent addresses; but their acceptance opening to Zorilda the chance of saving her son and placing him on his father's throne, she resolved to assume the disguise; to recover him, or perish in the attempt. None of the ambassadors or Tartar guards, save Abdallac and Octar, have ever seen Almeyda or herself—the first is in her interest, the latter is a prisoner in the dungeons of Teflis: let Oglou but keep her secret, and success is certain.

To give éclat to the approaching nuptials, Kerim and Sanballat, two desperate rivals for Selima, a beautiful Circassian captive, try a tilt together. The scene is savage and imposing; the combatants on horseback charge with lances—Kerim's horse becomes marvellously belligerent; first seizing Sanballat and dragging him to the ground; next interposing between his rider and his assailant, and lastly getting stabbed, and dying with as much discretion as the best Maribeth or Richard of our time. In the end, Kerim is declared victor, sacrificing his rival to the manes of his murdered steed, and winning the lady.

The plot now takes a strange turn. Oglou, in agitation and haste, reveals to his son the secret of Zorilda's disguise; Octar follows quickly after and confirms the story; while Timour, bewildered, confused—rage, love, disappointment, burning in his bosom, commands the beautiful impostor to be imprisoned in the fortress. Thither Oglou secretly repairs, and explains to the princess, who at first recoils from him with horror, the reason of his extraordinary disclosure. Octar had escaped, and was at hand—would he have kept her secret better? By this stroke of art he has preserved his own neck, his son's confidence, and the keys of the fortress. He unlocks her prison doors, and lest the hours till midnight (the time appointed for escape) should prove tedious, behold, muffled in a cloak, her captive son!—The sudden approach of Timour, who comes to demand the instant celebration of their nuptials, produce fresh terror and perplexity. The altars blaze, the priest is waiting—this night must make her his bride. She implores a short respite from the dreaded rites—a few hours—tis granted—hark! the fortress bell, the signal of Oglou's approach to bring them liberty, Agib, unobserved, steals away from the couch (his place of concealment when Timour entered) to the alcove—now, then, Princess, cries the Tartar, I will leave you to your thoughts, and while they employ you, I will recline on your couch and gaze on your charms. Hold! exclaims the frantic mother, not there! not there!—Ha! exclaimed the Tartar, some spy! some traitor lurks there! and plunges his dagger through the cloak, that but a moment before had concealed Agib from his sight. Zorilda utters a shriek of terror, but is relieved by a whisper from Selima that her son is safe in the alcove. A succession of incidents follow—the entry of Oglou, his affright and confusion, the story of the carrier dove and the letter, the perilous escape of Agib from the window, the rising of the Georgians, the storming of the fortress, the rage and desperation of Timour, his attempt to stab the Princess, her leap from the tower upon the terrace beneath, followed by the infuriated Tartar, her plunging into the sea to avoid his grasp, the grand equestrian exploit of the Standard Bearer who leaps his horse over the parapet, and rescues the Princess, the gallant steed rising out of the water bearing him and Zorilda, the fierce combat between the Tartars and Georgians, in which the former are defeated, the restoration of the young Prince to his throne, the joy of Oglou, and the despair of Timour.—Cal. Cour.

THE ROMP AND THE BLIND BOY.

The Theatre during the hot season is the cradle of dramatic talent. Freed from the oppressive weight of mere pretension, which, like a huge nightmare, sits upon genuine ability and represses its ardent aspirations, those amateurs who during the cold months, modestly and kindly consent to fill the humble, we will not say degrading offices of banner bearers, senators and ruffians, now assert the dignity of their nature and stretching their pinions, soar to a towering height and exhibit to an admiring community the true extent of their histrionic capacity. Their last opportunity in this way was afforded them when the lively farce of THE ROMP, and the pathetic melo drama of THE BLIND BOY, brought out the whole of the auxiliaries in great strength.

Our space does not permit of our entering as fully into particulars as we could wish, considering the merits and peculiarity of the performance; but there were some points which we can on no account omit to notice. Mr. Hely—we speak of him by name, because he has not the same singular scruples with other amateurs, and is moreover desirous of being known as a professor,—Mr. Hely, we say, in his representation of the gallant Captain Lightly of his Britanic Majesty's service, in THE ROMP, and the dark, deep designing, detestable Prince Radolph in THE BLIND BOY, exhibited a degree of grace and dramatic power for which we were entirely unprepared to give him credit. His countenance is of the order saturnine, and capable of great flexibility; his figure though somewhat petite, is graceful and well proportioned, and his action though rather pantomimic, may, on the whole, be denominated expressive. In the portrayal of the exultations of triumphant villainy, and in the delineation of the remorse consequent upon subsequent discovery and disgrace, Mr. Hely displayed so much skill that we must honestly pronounce him inferior to none on the Chowringhee boards, expecting perhaps the acknowledged "Kean." The managers will do well, in future, to avail themselves of his services in such parts as Murduff, Falconbridge, Ferraro, Gonsago, &c. instead of suffering his sweetness to "waste" itself—but we will not pursue a trite metaphor.

In the part of Starow and Kalig, Mr. Hely received powerful support from two amateurs who appear to possess many requisites for the heroes of melo drama. There is a depth in the voice of the former, and an energy in the action of the latter, which would fit them for some of those theatres in our own noble metropolis where the crimes and follies of mankind are nightly held up to execration and avoidance through the instructive medium of burletta and spectacle. Starow has often played on our Chowringhee boards, in characters beneath his talent,* and Kalig was introduced to us as The Monster in Frankenstein.

Of the rest of the characters we shall only say, that we rejoice to bear testimony to the very great improvement perceptible on each succeeding appearance of the young gentleman who played Molin and Young Cockney. He will in time prove a formidable rival to "our Bob." The veterans who represented Othello and King Stanislaus of Sarmatin, played, as they always do, feelingly, earnestly and respectably;—the latter, in order to impart the greatest vraisemblance to the character, painted his face and made up his head, so as to resemble, as closely as possible, the fac simile of the Sovereign to be found on the Sarmatian coins. He looked, in fact, like an animated florin. Mrs. Leach—in her excellent performance of Priscilla Torboy—vindicated the reputation and upheld the character of the winter corps. Mr. Francis was quite at home, though the house was indifferently attended.—Oriental Observer.

* One of the best pieces of pantomime we ever saw was this gentleman's dumb butcher in the Sleeping Draught.

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3.

FLETCHER, ALEXANDER AND CO., v. AGA KURBOLI MAHOMED.

In this case the plaintiffs are merchants in London and the defendant is a very respectable Mogul residing in this place. The action was brought on a bill of exchange for twelve hundred pounds sterling, at sixty days' sight, in favour of the defendant, drawn by Captain Peter Butler, upon the houses of Gledstones and Co.

The bill was endorsed over by the defendant to Rajkissen Nundy, from whom it was purchased by Alexander and Co., and by them paid over to the plaintiffs.

Several witnesses were examined who proved the handwriting of the plaintiffs and of Alexander and Co., and the protest was put in evidence. It was also proved that a notice of the bill having been dishonoured had been sent to defendant by plaintiffs' agent here and that the latter from a conversation had with the Aga ten days after he had sent the notice of dishonor, was impressed with the opinion that the Aga had received it. But the Court held this not to be sufficient, and that in the absence of an admission of the receipt of the notice, there ought to have been a notice to produce.—Nonsuit.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6.

CHARLES POPE WILTSHIRE, AND OTHERS INFANTS, v. PETER FORSTER, SURVIVING EXECUTOR OF THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF C. B. WILTSHIRE, DECEASED.

The bill is filed by Charles Pope Wiltshire of Howrah, a British subject, and by Anne Martha Wiltshire, of Secapore Oude, and Flora Selina Adelaide Wiltshire of Howrah, infants, going by the first mentioned complainant their guardian and next friend. The Bill states that Charles Wiltshire died in 1825, leaving him surviving a widow, one son, and three daughters. The eldest daughter, Susannah Elizabeth, was then thirteen years or thereabouts, and has since married to Lieutenant H. Palmer, of the 48th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry. In 1822, Charles Wiltshire made a will, in which, after desiring that all just debts should be paid, he bequeathed to his wife all his household property, plate, &c. and all the cash that he might then or thereafter possess, to be appropriated for her maintenance, and for the maintenance of his children during her life time, unless she should marry again, in which case his children were to enjoy the interest until they were twenty-one years, when the whole of the principal was to be divided and shared amongst the surviving children. Of this will, the testator's cousin, Mr. Peter Forster, is the surviving executor. The residue of the estate amounted to Sa. Rs. 18,630 the interest of which was paid to the widow up to the time of her death in November 1825 and afterwards the interest of the residuary estate was applied by the executors towards the education and maintenance of the four children, and the estate has remained in the hands of the surviving executor with the exception of the share paid to the eldest daughter on her arriving at the age of twenty-one years. The remaining residuary estate, amounting to the sum of Sa. Rs. 13,897, was placed by the surviving executor in the hands of Crutenden, Mackillop and Co. as a mere cash balance, running at interest, without any security whatever, and so it continued until the insolvency of that firm in 1834. The bill prays that defendant may be decreed to pay and bring into court the sum of Sa. Rs. 13,637 and all such interest as may appear to be due thereon, and that the shares of the infants may be secured and invested under the direction of the court.

To this bill defendant has filed a demurrer for want of parties. First, that the legal personal representative of the widow of the testator, who, as he is advised, is entitled and interested to contest the payment of the residue of the estate, ought to be made a party to the bill of complaint. Also that Lieutenant Palmer and his wife are necessary parties to the bill, in as much as the will directed that should any of the children die before they came of age, his share should be divided amongst the surviving children.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Leith were heard in support of the demurrer, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke were for the complainants. The court took time to consider.—Englishman.

THURSDAY APRIL 7.

THE KING v. JOYNAKEE DOSS.

The defendant in the year 1829 had been tried with others for a conspiracy, and convicted thereupon; but an appeal was allowed by the Court to the King in Council, on a point of law, involving the question of jurisdiction. It appears that the defendant resided at Benares, and had never been in any manner resident in Calcutta; but that the conspiracy with which he was charged, although concerted and entered into at Benares, embraced objects, the perpetration of which fell within the limits of Calcutta. Whether or no this was sufficient to render Joynahee Doss liable to the criminal jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, was the subject matter of the ground of appeal. The petition of appeal had been duly forwarded to England, but no information having been obtained as to its result, application had been made to the Court to respite the defendants' recognisances, to a further period, in order to allow time to receive the decision of the Privy Council. The Advocate-General opposed any allowance of further time in this case, alleging the great delay that had already taken place in the matter, and the absence of any thing to prove that the defendant had used any endeavours to forward the decision upon the appeal.

The Court however decided that as the petition had been duly forwarded, and entrusted to the management of Messrs. Tenant and Harrison solicitors of London, and as it did not appear that the defendant had done any thing to retard the progress of the appeal, the Court would give till the last day of the second term of 1837 and respite the recognisances accordingly; with this condition however, that the defendant should then come fully prepared to satisfy the Court that he had used his best endeavours to carry the petition to a final decision.—Hurkaru.

MONDAY, APRIL 18.

PERJURY.

Re, on the prosecution of Hurloll Tagore v. Ashootas Day.

Before the Chief Justice, and the following special Jury:—

James Lamb, John Porteous, Christopher Fagan, Jonathan D. Dow, James Cullen, William Limond, Mathew Dove, H. J. Leighton, W. T. Fraser, R. C. Paton, William Maclean, and E. Mackintosh, Esquires.

Mr. Advocate General, with whom was Mr. Prinsap, stated the case to the jury. The mere circumstance of a special jury being summoned was of itself enough to show the importance of this case, and he trusted that would be considered a sufficient excuse for his entering at some length into details. With this short preliminary observation he would at once proceed to the case. In 1833 Laldymohun Tagore, who, as many of the jury were doubtless aware, was an opulent Hindoo, died, leaving behind him two sons, Shamlohl and Hurllohl, heirs and executors. He the Advocate General, had said Laldymohun was a man of considerable wealth, but in the course of a long life, he had occasion to owe considerable sums, and to have considerable sums owing to him, and at his death his creditors became rather troublesome to his successors. Shamlohl was at that time engaged as dewan to the salt agency at Tumlook. His brother, Hurllohl, was for a considerable time afflicted with illness, in consequence of which he never applied himself to business, was ignorant of the ways of the world, and more easily guided than he should have been by the advice of others. Shortly after the death of Laldymohun, Shamlohl had occasion to go to Tumlook, but before he went, being aware how little Hurllohl was fitted to struggle with the difficulties of life, he introduced him to Mr. Swinhoe, whom he recommended as a gentleman well qualified to give advice. In the course of events, Mr. Swinhoe had given advice to Hurllohl—no doubt properly meant, but still unfortunately given—and so he, the Advocate-General, thought the jury would think when they heard that Mr. Swinhoe cautioned Hurllohl against his own relations, and the more so when they heard that those relations were Dwarkanauth and Prosonocoomar Tagore. Being thus put upon his guard, Hurllohl sought other friends, and became acquainted with a person named Mudden Bysack; this man had been a long time in the employ of Mr. Swinhoe, was the head native assistant in the office of that gentleman; in addition to which employment he took upon himself to be the adviser of Hurllohl in all cases and in all difficulties in which he was placed. This man, the jury would find, was a most important person, in all transactions connected with this trial: he was present on every occasion of moment; but the jury would be surprised to learn that he would not be called on this day. Endeavours had been made to procure his attendance, but somehow or other it had so happened that on the very day on which a subpoena had been taken out, he had contrived to disappear, and no effort to serve him had succeeded from that day to this. One important thing this man did was to introduce Hurllohl to Radakissen Mitter, a brother-in-law of the defendant at the bar, a confidant of him in all passages of this business, and present on all occasions when Ashootas Day was present himself. Sometime after this, Shamlohl returned from Tumlook, and the two brothers agreed to sell half of a talook, together with three indigo factories, to Prosonocoomar Tagore, a relation descended from another branch of the family, and at that time in possession of the other half of the talook. Prosonocoomar agreed to purchase for Rs. 2,50,000, and he, the Advocate-General, requested the jury's particular attention to that sum. The arrangements for the bargain were completed, but Hurllohl having communicated with Mudden Bysack and Radakissen Mitter, they advised him not to ratify it, or if it was ratified, to get it dissolved. Hurllohl fell into the snare: he went to Prosonocoomar and requested the bargain might be annulled; the latter complied and the contract was dissolved. The next step Hurllohl was induced to adopt, was to entertain some suspicions of the intentions of his brother Shamlohl, and subsequently he applied to him for a partition of the father's property; this was also complied with, and the half talook, the three indigo factories, and a garden at Chittpore fell to the share of Hurllohl. He then applied to Dwarkanauth Tagore who agreed to lend him Rs. 3,00,000, on the whole property, including the jury would observe, the garden at Chittpore, in order that the debts of the father might be liquidated, and the estate put on a proper footing. The terms of this mortgage were again communicated to Mudden Bysack and Radakissen Mitter: they again advised Hurllohl to rescind the agreement, and he consequently applied to Dwarkanauth, who agreed to cancel the mortgage, and enter up satisfaction on the judgment bond. The jury would observe that he, the Advocate-General, was now advancing to times in which circumstances occurred of great importance. They would have the goodness to remember that Prosonocoomar Tagore offered Rs. 2,50,000 for the property without the Chittpore garden, and that Dwarkanauth Tagore agreed to lend three lakhs of rupees on the whole property. The last mentioned offer was communicated to Radakissen Mitter, and Mudden Bysack, and the latter was consulted by Hurllohl, who looked upon him as his particular friend. Well, the jury had heard the result of this advice. These two men saw the importance of immediately acting in the business and on the 21st of July,—the jury would have the goodness to remember the date,—they introduced Hurllohl to the defendant and his brother, at the house of the Days. At what hour Hurllohl went to this house, he, the Advocate-General knew not, but certain it was, that he staid there till a very late hour, and on the occasion it was suggested by Radakissen Mitter that he should make a Benami sale of his property to be held by the Days, and to be restored to him after his father's debts were paid. No man felt more strongly than he, the Advocate-General, did, the impropriety of this measure; no justification could be offered for it, but it might be some palliation for Hurllohl's conduct, that he was ignorant of business, unaccustomed to the ways of the world; as the jury must now be aware, he was a person easily to be persuaded and perhaps it might be taken into consideration, that his intent was not to wrong his father's creditors, but merely to delay the payment of their debts. Hurllohl knew there were large sums due to his father's estate,—he knew that these debts would be sufficient to pay all he owed, in which case he considered he should have his estate to himself—that estate which had fallen to him from his ancestors. But by whatever object Hurllohl had been influenced the jury must bear in mind, that it was not the character of this young man which constituted the issue in this case. They were not there to try his character, nor would this issue rest alone on his testimony, but on testimony of different kinds, circumstantial and documentary. It was not whether Hurllohl had acted well or ill, but whether all the circumstances are sufficient to show the guilt of the defendant. After some time various circumstances occurred which excited apprehensions in the mind of Hurllohl; he began to fear it was the intention of the Days to detain his estate from him, and accordingly, he filed a bill in equity to obtain its restoration. To this bill no answer was put in, a compromise took place, and the Days restored the estate, but they kept the garden at Chittpore. Subsequently he was told that he had parted with his garden without any consideration, and that by the laws of every civilized part of the world, it might be set aside in a court of justice. Hurllohl again filed a bill, and in the answer to that bill, the defendant alleged those facts which constitute the perjury with which he is now charged. [Reads from the answer.]

“That he, the said Ashootas Day, denied that the recitals in the last mentioned indenture were altogether or at all false, or that no contract or agreement for the absolute sale or purchase of the said two parcels of land estate, for the price in the said mentioned, was ever made between the said complainant and these defendants.”

“That he, the said Ashootas Day, denied that the said bill of sale or transfer in the said indenture of sale recited was benami or in trust for the said complainant.

"That he, the said Ashootas Day, denied that no part of the said price had ever been paid to the said complainants."

"That the said complainant, on the 22d of July 1833, received from one Rammohun Mookerjee in the presence of Tarrakinker Chatterjee and others the sum of 11,346 old gold mohurs, and nine rupees and two annas in cash."

Now we came to another part.

"That the said complainant then paid over to these defendants, and placed in deposit with them, 11,262 old gold mohurs, part of the sum paid to the complainant, amounting to Sa. Rs. 1,98,492-12, and received the balance, being gold mohurs eighty-five and Rs. 92, taking from these defendants a certain acknowledgment as follow:—

SRI SRI DOORAN.

"To the high in dignity Sijet Baboo Hurry Loll Tagore of mighty expectations. We Sri Ashootas Daib and Sri Promothanath Daib, execute this instrument purporting as follows:

"Your own share within the zillah of Rungpore, consisting of the purgunnah of Putilodoho and the kismur of Putilodoho and the Indigo Factories of Muluchut and so forth together with their requisites, and the garden that once appertained to the late George Podge, in the Mouzah of Chitpore in Dhee Panchanograh you have sold unto us for the consideration of Sicca 2,00,000 two lacks of rupees, have received on account of the said consideration money 11,347, eleven thousand and three hundred and forty-seven old Gold Mohurs, at the rate of 17-10 each, make sicca 1,99,990 rupees 74 annas, and in each sicca rupees 9-2, in all Sicca 2,00,000, two lacks of rupees in full, and executed and delivered to us bills of sale, et cetera, for the same. For your emergent expenses you have taken out of the said amount of the consideration money (85) eighty-five old gold mohurs, at the rate of 17-10, being rupees 1,468-2, and in each sicca rupees 9-2, in all 1,507-4, fifteen hundred and seven rupees four annas, the remaining 11,262, eleven thousand two hundred and sixty-two old gold mohurs, making at the rate of 17-10 sicca rupees, 1,98,492-12, one lack ninety-eight thousand, four hundred and ninety-two rupees, twelve annas, you have for our assurance left in deposit with us under the following stipulations; that upon your giving us possession of our abovementioned talooks, etcetera, and causing our names to be used on the records of the collectorship, we will pay you the said sum to you, and whatever delay intervenes in giving possession and causing abstraction and entry to be made there, we will pay you mohasoyi interest for that period quarterly, that is at the end of every three months, at the rate of (6) five Rs. per cent. per annum."

"To this purport we execute and deliver this receipt only, year 1240, date 8th Srabun, English 1833, 22d July."

This, it would be remembered, was their own statement of their own conduct. Conduct, indeed very becoming in men of fortune! What! Here is a man who they knew to be involved in difficulties, they, men of wealth, take advantage of this poor, unfortunate, young man to strip him,—to rob him, he is going to say, and say this he would, that a man of the kind had but one step to take to commit the crime with which he is charged in the indictment. Let the jury look at the probabilities and improbabilities of this statement. It is said that Hurloll took eighty-five old gold mohurs to pay some pressing debts. That assertion it would be proved was untrue. But let them go on a little further. Let them consider how it came to be paid in old gold mohurs. The jury knew sufficient of the manner in which business was conducted in Calcutta to know that when a sale not bond fide takes place, it is usual to make up the sum in gold mohurs or rupees. Why? Because the transaction could not be traced, as it could be, were the amount stated to have been paid in Company's paper or Bank-notes. It was rather singular how any man in this country, particularly a native merchant, should keep so large a sum by him in gold mohurs, when, had the amount been in Company's paper, it would have been accumulating a large interest. But they said, they had received the gold mohurs from their mother. Perhaps they had preserved them from a feeling of filial piety, but if so, how came it that they parted with them to a stranger? This, however, was not all. This transaction was said to have taken place on the third floor of the house of the Days;—that they gave Hurloll a check on their cashier;—that he went to the cashier below and returned with the coin; and he, the Advocate-General, supposed, that some information would be given to-day as to how the whole sum was carried up stairs. Let the jury also look to the amount, two lacs; was not here another mark of a mere nominal sale? Prosonocoomar, a relative, offered Rs. 2,50,000 for the half talook, without the garden; Dwarkanauth, another relative, was willing to lend three lakhs on the whole property, and yet here, they were told that Hurloll agreed to sell for two lakhs to a perfect stranger. He, the Advocate-General, was glad that he was addressing gentlemen acquainted with business, and he would ask them, referring to the statement just read, of the transactions said to have taken place up-stairs, when they made a transfer, whether they were accustomed to have the symbol of property paraded before them, bag after bag, brought up-stairs, and put into the hands of the person who deals, who puts it back into their hands, and if by them it is returned to the cashier? He, the Advocate-General, would now go back a little way. On the night of the 21st of July or rather at two o'clock in the morning a curious transaction took place:—a bill of sale was signed, and at eight o'clock in the morning, Hurloll again presented an agreement or undertaking to sell was executed, but this, in order to give a colouring to the transaction, was antedated, to the 19th of July. Now what was the use of this so long as the bill of sale was obligatory and binding? They were both signed by the same persons. However to continue the deception, Hurloll, being at the house of the Days, was sent down to the boitanah, accompanied by the defendant's brother, where he was directed to take some boxes, which it will be proved were empty, in order to give a colouring to this transaction of the gold mohurs, for at that time the idea of a deposit had never entered the minds of the defendant. These boxes were placed in Hurloll's carriage, and Hurloll returned them to the Days when he arrived at home. Now this transaction soon became talked of, but the creditors of Ladlymohun were not to be so easily satisfied, and on the 31d of August, Juggomohun Mookerjee filed a bill in equity to set aside the agreement or sale, and in three days afterwards Bustomdoss Mullick filed a similar bill, in which he made not only this young man a party, but the two Days also. What was to be done on this occasion? It was suggested that there would be a difficulty in satisfying the world as to what had become of so large a sum as two lakhs; it was supposed that his father's creditors would have gone to Hurloll, and said "you had two lakhs of rupees, show how you have disposed of it, or go to prison." "It will be seen," said his advisers, "that there is a benami sale, if you do not account for this money; therefore, as in the joint books there is a benami entry, stating you are indebted to your mother Rs. 1,50,000,—say you have paid her that sum and the remaining Rs. 50,000 will be easily accounted for. Well, Hurloll did as he was directed: he instructed Mr. Wordworth, the attorney, to draw up a release for that sum, and to attend him at the signature, and a receipt for the sum in old gold mohurs was drawn up to give the affair a still greater plausibility. The receipt was drawn up by a confidential servant of the defendant at the bar, it was witnessed by Harrachand Chatterjee, who, it will be seen, was in a situation of great confidence under the defendant. Now these transactions would shew beyond a doubt that there had been no deposit, for the mother as she did not receive the money would not part with the receipt, but kept it. It was impossible that the thought of a deposit at this time ever entered the mind of the parties, but it was thought fit to state a receipt was given for the whole money at the time. That receipt he, the Advocate-General denied, and there was one thing of great moment connected with this receipt to which he begged the jury's attention, namely, that though it purports to have been given at the time the other papers were tested, the witnesses were entirely different. Here then there were three points:—first, if the transaction was benami; secondly, if deposit was not made; and thirdly, if a consideration was not given,—if the jury believed any one of these three points, he, the Advocate-General, with due submission would ask for a verdict. They had heard that two bills in equity were filed to prevent the sale being carried into execution, and in the mean time an injunction was applied for to stop the sale. On that occasion Mr. Swinhoe wrote to Hurloll, saying that if he did not put in his answer, it would seem as if the sale to the Days was not all right; so then it appeared Mr. Swinhoe had been somewhat influenced by what had gone abroad. Mr. Swinhoe at the same time pressed for an advice. Now what did Hurloll do. He sent to the Days; they then and not till then lend him eighty-five gold mohurs, so the former receipt is a forgery, for it is dated 22nd July, whereas the date of Mr. Swinhoe's letter is the 13th August. According to the defendant's statement, Hurloll wanted this to meet small demands, for which creditors were pressing him, yet he does not use a gold mohur of the money up to the 13th of August when he sent fifty-seven gold mohurs to Mr. Swinhoe, in reply to that gentleman's letter requesting an advance. Would they believe that after Hurloll had sent a letter to the Days requesting the loan of money, he kept it for nearly one month, and then applied it to a purpose entirely different from that for which it was obtained? But the letter of Hurloll would speak for itself:—

"In reply to your note of yesterday I am sorry to say that I will be quite unable to attend you personally to give you any information or instruction on my behalf that should be required by you in the above causes, the cause of which you are fully aware more I can say is my illness, therefore my friend and manager on my behalf Baboo Ramchund Mookerjee, the bearer herof, will attend you to give you any information and instructions that you should require about the causes to which I am concerned and a party, and you will be pleased to do the necessary things first advising with him. And about the advance you wrote you know my present circumstances and I have no other money in my hand at present but the remaining part of the gold mohurs the proceeds of the sale of the Zemindary and garden which I got back from my mother after satisfying her demand, and which I determined to appropriate towards my father's creditors. However now I can only pay you out of the said gold mohurs Sixty Rupees one thousand in gold mohurs at the rate of 17 10 per gold mohur on account of the above two several suits as an advance, and I hope you will not press me for further advance until after answers put in by me. If you agree to this then let me know either by writing or through my manager Baboo Ramchund Mookerjee I will send you the gold mohurs for 1,000 rupees at the rate aforesaid; and I am further to say that the suit which I intended to commence for my infant son need not to proceed, now, therefore you will be pleased to cancel and return the warrant to sue signed by the mother of the infant to me, through Ramchund Mookerjee, and you will favor me to expedite to oppose the rule nisi if you think advisable to do so on Friday next.

I am yours, &c.

*(Signed) HURLOLL TAGOOR.

14th August, 1833.

In this letter Hurloll introduced Ramchund Mookerjee as his manager; this man, the servant of the Days, dictated the letter, so that it is clear, at this time Mr. Swinhoe, the Days, or Hurloll himself had not the slightest idea of a deposit. A deposit indeed! There was no deposit ever made, or if made, was it likely that the man who dictated this letter, the servant of the Days, would not have communicated the fact to Mr. Swinhoe? On the 13th August Hurloll writes that he has no money after paying his mother. Mark that. It shows clearly that up to that time there was no idea of a deposit. If any thing is as clear as day, it is that Mr. Swinhoe knew nothing of a deposit, and that the Days had never thought of it; here is a letter dictated by their servant, giving the idea a direct contradiction. Now, he asked, was it possible that Hurloll's mother could have been paid and the money remain in deposit with the Days? To show Mr. Swinhoe's ignorance of a deposit, he would refer to a letter written by that gentleman to Mr. Higgins, the attorney for Bustomloss Mullick, in which he stated that the money had actually been paid to Hurloll's mother,—a statement which he, the Advocate-General, need hardly say he was sure that Mr. Swinhoe would never have made, if a doubt of its truth had suggested itself to his mind. Well, during this time the suit of Bustomloss Mullick was proceeding, and an order nisi for an injunction having been obtained, it became necessary, that an affidavit should be prepared for Hurloll, to prevent the order nisi being made absolute. The affidavit was of course prepared but to it Hurloll would not swear, for what reason it was not for him, the Advocate-General, to say. Hurloll might fear that in taking a false oath he incurred a serious responsibility, but be that as it may, swear he would not, and the injunction was made to prevent the sale of Hurloll's property to the Days. Now the Days were a party to this suit of Bustomloss Mullick's; they were enjoined by the injunction not to complete the purchase. Now he, the Advocate-General, would ask any man if the Days' statements were true,—if they had lent their money, would they not have protected their property, and come in and oppose this injunction? Would they not have shown cause why they should not have been deprived of their property? Why not? Because they had not then set up that the sale by Hurloll was in good faith and the property was really their own. Well, the injunction having been obtained, some time elapsed, and a very curious affair took place. Hurloll applied for the restoration of his property, or rather, on the 1st of September last he employed Mr. Judge to write to the Days for that purpose, and to this on the 7th of that month, the Days replied by referring Mr. Judge to their attorney, Mr. Swinhoe. Now one would think, if the Days had made a bona fide purchase of his property that their answer to the letter from Mr. Judge would have contained some expressions of surprise at the demand for its restoration. But no, they simply write two days afterwards, referring to their attorney. Why they had taken two days to consider, he, the Advocate-General, could well understand. He could well imagine the answer he would have made to a similar demand for a part of his property, and if he knew anything of the character of mankind, he could very well imagine that there should have been an immediate answer, and what that answer would have been. But this was not the only delay; Mr. Judge writes to Mr. Swinhoe on the same day—he receives no answer, writes again on the 9th of the same month, but still no answer. At length, on the 16th of can't tell you without looking at the accounts. I can't tell you what proportion the revenue bears to the rent. On the Friday satisfaction was entered, and on the day after I went to the Days. I might have gone in my infancy, but not after I came to man's estate. I am quite sure I did not go there on the 15th; I have received since the profits of the talook as it is mine. I cannot say how much indigo has been made, grain and other 'entables have been sent to me and I cannot say what these may have come to. Taking the average of 2 or 3 years' income we calculate the profits. I know Nilmony Dabee; she is my sister. She has filed a bill against me. I do not recollect if I have given any account for the profits of that talook to that bill. I may not have set it forth in my answer. My father left her a legacy, and I am in possession of the estate. First there was a partial partition when we were to pay the debts jointly; a second partition was that Shamloll was to pay them. This has been carried into execution. I have paid Bustomdoss Mullick; I think Samasoodary Dabee has been partially paid and some moytic made her. If this matter was not benami, why am I in this prosecution? The government made a claim, but whether just or not I can't say. There was an advertisement to sell that property for Government revenue. No person on behalf of Government applied to me for Government revenue. A small matter like this I cannot swear to. Govmchunder Sircar or Tusseeldar I do not recollect having seen. I really cannot say whether I have paid any Government revenue for this garden since my father's death. My aircars pay these things. They do shew us the paper of whatever is necessary to be paid. If I happen to be out of the way, and it is a proper expense, and in case of emergency they will pay it without applying to me. They would not have paid anything without my leave, if it was a benami transaction. There was a running account between me and the Days, and the whole of my property was in their hands. After the death of my father, I was in the habit of going to Swinhoe's office, and was in the habit of seeing Radakissen Mitter there. After that gwala (bill of sale) to Prosoonocoomar, I became better acquainted with Radakissen. I was not on terms of intimacy with the Days. I think we were not on speaking terms in consequence of a Dhurmah Shubba matter between them and us. I had confidence because Radakissen Mitter and Mudden By-sack were good men. There was that running account, and the understanding that whatever money I was to receive I was to pay 10 per cent, and they were to pay 8 per cent. for money of mine. I don't know whether Kalicinker Chatterjee was the servant or friend of the Days; they used to give him money; he was a ruined man; he went about skulking from place to place; he had a mortgage to Laddymohun; he never was a servant of Laddymohun. In consequence of that mortgage, he used to come to Laddymohun's house: he did not leave in L.'s house; he ~~was~~ whenever he had occasion. I believe his father's house was in Simlah. I don't know whether he used to live in the homestead of the Days, but he was a dependant upon them; he used to entreat and flatter the Days; he was our enemy in consequence of our complaining about him regarding that property of his. The Days' people and ours were considered to be one, and he was sent to us, and I had confidence in him. The Days had sent him, and I was so situated that I was obliged to do what they wished; it was not in consideration of him, but on account of the Days that he identified the female of the family. I have heard that Kalikissen is dead. Ramchund Mokerjee is a bad man, and well acquainted with law affairs. A crafty man. I don't recollect my going with this man to the office of Swinhoe; he used to live in the town, and I had seen him before the day he brought the draft of the letter. As the Day's man he conducted my suits before them. On the 22d of April—I can't say, unless I know the Bengalee date, if I knew him then. I can't recollect if Ramchund was a writer in Mr. Wordsworth's office; I do not recollect if he was in my employment on the 11th By-sack 1240. Because the Days sent him to me, I used to give out that he was in my employ. The day following the sale to Prosoonocoomar was the first that I spoke to Radakissen Mitter. Ramchund Mokerjee is a man that sings songs at our feasts, and therefore I knew him. An affidavit was prepared, but I did not swear to it—it was prepared by Swinhoe (Exhibit R.) I am not able at English, but I can read it. This was the affidavit; was I to swear to what was not true? I know this paper. (Exhibit S.) this a receipt I received from my mother to make it appear that she had received the gold-mohurs on account of an entry in my father's books. This was the resolution come to at the time of the boynaputta; it was on the 8th Shrabun and before, at Mr. Swinhoe's office. I got Wordsworth to witness the receipt. Kalicinker Chatterjee, who is a servant of the Days, is a witness to it. The defendant sent him for the purpose of his becoming a witness to the receipt; he did not witness anything more. Soorupchunder Day, another witness on it, was a man of Wordsworth's. I did file a bill against the Days. Within 2 months after the execution of the bill of sale, I demanded it from the Days. I first begged of Swinhoe and other persons to use their influence, and I afterwards had recourse to Judge in his official capacity to demand it. About 12 or 13 months after the occurrence a compromise was effected, deeds executed in Swinhoe's office. (Exhibit T. and U.) Lease and release shown. These are the deeds that were then executed. On the day of the execution of these deeds Thompson was present. I changed from Judge; I don't think he knew anything of it before that day. Thomson, Swinhoe, Hurrischunder Tagore, Gopenauth Roy, Aushotosh, Promothonauth, and Radakissen Mitter were present on that occasion; there may have been sircars and such like people of Thompson, but I don't recollect. The profits of my pergunnah were all stopped in the hands of Prosoonocoomar Tagore, and I had nothing to pay my expenses, and I was helpless; this was the reason that I gave up my garden in this compromise. The Days said they would give up the pergunnah and garden, and all after a settlement was come to with my creditors; they put me off from time to time, and at last said they would not give anything unless they had the garden. The creditors were Bustom Doss, Juggomohun, and Obhoy Dabee. Samasoodary Dabee, wife of Juggomohun, is a cousin's daughter of mine. Obhoy Dabee is the daughter of Soojocoomar Takoor, the mother of Prosoonocoomar. They made me give a note for 85 gold mohurs, 9 rupees, 2 annas. This is it (Exhibit V.) and I executed a note for the expenses of making the benami. The recitals in deeds of compromise are all the same. I was straightened in circumstances and did what they told me. I did not know at time of my father's death but I knew afterwards that I would have to take an oath of the administration of my father's estate. I took out probate, and swore that I would faithfully render an account of my father's estate, and file inventory within six months. I was not bent on defrauding my aunt, my brother, my cousin, or Bustom Doss Mullick. From the result I suppose that the Days object in entering into this conspiracy to defraud my father's creditors and legatees was to get all the property into their possession. Radakissen Mitter asked me to lend him 10,000 rupees, and he said he would protect my property. States that he had been with Swinhoe, Judge, Thomas, Marnell, Oclime as attorneys. I did not mention this request of Radakissen to any of my attorneys. There was a great deal of botheration about this affidavit, and therefore I remember the contests. Swinhoe first told me to give him instructions about it, and he came to my house with this paper, (Exhibit 12,) and I gave him instructions on a Sunday. I don't recollect if Ramchund Mokerjee was present, but this was done by the advice of Radakissen Mitter. It was by his advice that I gave instructions for this affidavit. I don't recollect if I gave him instructions before this. I made a statement to him about the note to my mother, and he took a note of it in English, and afterwards it was explained to me in Bengalee; this I gave him instructions to insert, and it was false also. I do not recollect whether I told Swinhoe that this was false before I settled with Shamlohl. (Exhibit No. 2 shewn)—This is my answer and sworn to by me. It was not before the letter, Exhibit N. from Mr. Swinhoe received that I told him that this affidavit was false as stated in my answer. I do not recollect that I told him the Sunday he came to my house with the affidavit; I cannot fix the time when I told him it was false. I do not recollect if Mr. Thompson was at Swinhoe's before writing those deeds with me. On the days the deeds were executed I brought Thompson to his office, but I don't recollect if I brought him previously. I saw Mr. Swinhoe before the mention about the compromise. Swinhoe said it would not appear well if I did not bring Thompson. I don't know whether I went for him or how he came, but he did come to Swinhoe's office. The deeds were prepared previous to the day of execution, and not upon it. Swinhoe had prepared the deeds. I do not recollect whether I took Mr. Thompson there previously. There was no discussion about the manner of drawing the deeds but only about the costs; before the day of the execution there was no discussion about the mode of preparing the deeds. I do not recollect any discussion, or that Swinhoe told me that Thompson should prepare the deeds. On 7th Shraboon I first went to the house of the Days, that was the first time, and I do not recollect how many times I was subsequently there. I never went to the Days on business until this day of the execution. The Days purchased the stamp paper in the name of Gopenauth Roy. I purchased that on which the bill of sale was executed, and they purchased the others. On the first occasion I went up to the third story and Aushotosh, Promothonauth and Radakissen and I, and Kalikissen and Gopenauth sircar were all present; Tarakinker did not go with me. There were others but not of my acquaintance. I went to Allipore and directed the Moonshue to get it registered but I was not present at the time. I was out. Muddenmohun Bysack first came to me and suggested a compromise. I did not make the proposal to give up the garden if they gave up the talook. The Days made this proposal to me.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—When I swore to the answer to the cross bill and what has been now read, the chittee or what was written on it was not before me nor had I any copy of it. The garden was my in possession about a month after the partition between me and Shamlohl. The annual Government rent is 50 or 60 rupees—I mean to include all the land in this? The Days did not get any thing of the profits from the talook, from the execution of the benami sale to the compromise, but they attached I would not swear to that affidavit, the Days wanted me to swear to it. The part of the affidavit of my mother was struck out without any instruction from me.

Gopenauth Roy.—I am in the service of Hurloll Tagore, was in his father's service for one year, and have been ever since in Hurloll's. I know of the mortgage by Hurloll to Dwarkanauth and of its being broken off; he sent me after it was set aside to Radakissen Mitter to the homestead of Aushotosh Baboo I saw him on the 3d story of Aushotosh Baboo's house, and the latter and Promothonauth were present. I speak not with a lively recollection of the latter being present. I entered into a conversation with Radakissen. He sent for the defendants, they came, Aushotosh came, Radakissen said, "the understanding that has been had with Hurloll has been terminated and let it be put into writing. Hurloll Baboo intends to place his estate and effects in your hands benami and of the talooks, garden, and so forth, to be placed in your hands benami on the money you will give him." At this conversation all three were present.

Promothonauth said, bring Hurloll and all the papers to-morrow evening. I then went down to the 2d story. During the interview Muddenmohun Bysack was sent for and he came; he was present while all this was said; he was present all the time and the three other persons. All went down stairs. Radakissen, Aushotosh, and Promothonauth said be quick and get the papers prepared. On the following day Hurloll and I went there together. Radakissen, Aushotosh, and Promothonauth said the reason why he was to be quick, was that a judgment had been obtained by Bustomdoss Mullick, and a decree would be obtained. On the following day Hurloll, a hurkaru, I and the coachman and syce went. I don't recollect hurkaru's name; no other person went with us. After the close of day; we took with us a bill of sale that was cancelled and other papers. Promothonauth and Radakissen were there and Aushotosh was sent for. I knew Tarakinker Chatterjee I saw him that evening on the third story in the same apartment. It was only a little time before Aushotosh came. Radakissen said in the manner of the understanding which I have come to with you, get the writings made ready. Hurloll said very well; and the letters were got ready. They were prepared by a moonshue of the Baboo's, his name was Commol I think. Tarakinker Chatterjee was there. One of the signatures to the bill of sale was affixed by Hurloll Baboo; it was after 2 and before 3. It was not witnessed that night; it was arranged that we should go next morning and get the papers witnessed. I don't know whether the hurkaru was in the carriage. We went next morning about 8 o'clock. We found Radakissen, Promothonauth and Aushotosh Day; Hurloll, a moonshue, a hurkaru, and myself went up stairs. It was Hurloll's moonshue, it was not the same hurkaru as went the first night. The name of this one was Guddah, he is now in Hurloll's service, the first is not now. They said "whatever is to be written and signed let it be done." An echrah was written, and an instrument of boynaputta, and other papers. I believe I was a witness to some papers. (Exhibit I shewn.) On the following morning I put my name to this. I see Hurloll Tagore's name, he put his name to the receipt, the signature to the bill of sale was put in the night time. Tarakinker Chatterjee, Hurrischunder Mitter, Nobinkistoo Bose, Rampersaud Mullick, and no others were witnesses. Yes there is one below. Bholanauth Doss. I did not know all of them. Those who wrote their names in my presence I can say, they are Tarakinker, Hurrischunder, and Nobinkistoo. I know Nobinkistoo, he happened to be sitting there at that time. He is an inhabitant of Molesapore, Tarakinker Chatterjee lived at Kidderpore. Hurrischunder I did not know before, I suppose he must have been a relative of the Days. No Company's paper was received or anything else by Hurloll on the first night, a boynaputta was next morning executed, upon which a Company's paper was put into Hurloll's hand, and he wrote something upon it and returned it immediately (Exhibit I shewn). This is the boynaputta. In the morning following this was drawn up and signed. I see my name as a witness, my own name, and that of Tarakinker Chatterjee. I signed this in the morning, the same morning as the receipt was signed. (Exhibit A shewn.) Speaks of the witnesses. I saw Tarakinker, Hurrischunder, and Nobinkistoo subscribe this paper. (Book M. Entry. No. 1, shewn.) I never saw the original of this before, the Days never gave such a receipt as is mentioned in this, (read, the names of the witnesses to this,) some of these persons are subscribing witnesses to the other papers. I know Radhohone Sain, he used to live in the homestead of the Day's but whether a mohurrer or cashkeeper I do not know. Hurloll put his name on the back of the chittee to the cashier. (Exhibit I shewn.) He wrote this name (points to the signature of Hurloll) he brought this down in his hand, and Radakissen and Promothonauth went down to the 2d story. I remained sitting above and they went down. I remained for half an hour or three-quarters of an hour. Bhoyrub moonshee called me and I went down. Hurloll did not go up again after they went down. I did not see any gold mohurs; I did see about 100 gold mohurs in the hands of Promothonauth who asked the people whether they were new or old. Hurloll did not come back with any gold mohurs, no one bought any up while I was there, when we first went there these gold mohurs were shown. When I went down I saw Hurloll sitting in his carriage, and he said "come along." Bhoyrub moonshee had first come up with us, when Hurloll went down to the 2d story, Bhoyrub went with him. When I got into the carriage I saw three boxes; on seeing them I asked Hurloll about them, he went away home with the boxes. No money was paid on that occasion to Hurloll by the Days or any other persons. Ramchund Mookerjee was there, he was intimate with the Days, he used to come seldom to Hurloll's. On the occasion that Hurloll wrote a letter to Swinhoe about his costs; that was within 15 days of the time of the sale. I saw the letter. I cannot write English. I was sent to Swinhoe with Hurloll's letter to the Days. I saw Radakissen Mitter and Promothonauth. I saw them on the 3d story, they came down to the 2d story. They said "sit down, Ramchund, will be here presently and he will go with you. 85 gold mohurs were given me by Promothonauth. Radakissen said to Ramchund Mitter, "I will tell you what to say that you may take it down in writing to send to Mr. Swinhoe." The draft was made by Ramchund Mookerjee; Radakissen and Promothonauth were present. I went to Hurloll with that draft, he saw it, and a fair copy was made of it. Hurloll put his signature to it; he was then living in a house belonging to the Days, which he rented from them. As this property was made benami he left his family house where he would constantly see the members of his family. The 85 gold mohurs which I brought, I put into the hands of Ramchund Mullick in the presence of Hurloll. He bade Ramchund give 57 gold mohurs to Swinhoe and 21 to Wordsworth. I went from time to time to the house of the Days. I went once with Hurloll there. I was present when he asked the Days to give him a writing to say that it was benami. He said all these matters are mine, and are in your hands benami. Radakissen and Promothonauth said, to give a writing of this kind will not be well, if the creditors hear of it all these papers will be useless. Bustoindoss Mullick and Juggomohun both complained against Hurloll in court against the Days at the same time. The Days at one time agreed to give up the property; this was before the settlement with the creditors. They said they would not keep the property of a Brahmin, and would give it up, when the settlement with creditors took place. Radakissen said to Hurloll, you have settled with all your creditors, and Promothonauth was sent for, he came, and Aushotosh, Promothonauth and Radakissen said "you have settled with your creditors and we will give up all but the garden." I said, why will you not give up this; they said we have laboured and been at great pains about this, and therefore we will not give up the garden. Tell your bahoo to give the garden, and we will give up the talook. Hurloll at this time had no income to live upon save what he got here and there from Poonocomar Tagore and others. I was present at deeds of compromise, but did not witness them. Upon that occasion when the papers were preparing in Mr. Swinhoe's office, Radakissen called Hurloll aside to conceal what was said. Hurloll got up and Promothonauth went with him. Radakissen, and Promothonauth, said to him where is the receipt we gave you? Hurloll said, I never gave you one, how can I give it up? they said if that be the case, how can a settlement take place? upon which Radakissen said there is one expedient; but I don't recollect the word used, as I don't understand English. You can say it is lost. Promothonauth said if you can give a writing that it is lost, this settlement can be done. Hurloll said a writing must be given, but he said, if there is truth above, I will get back my property. Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke.—I was a mohurrer in Ladlymohun's service of 10 rupees a month. On his death the sons quarreled and I attached myself to Hurloll. I never left him. My house is at a distance from this place and I used to stay longer than my leave, and he discharged me for a few days. I was sick and took physic. Fuckerchaund was taken in my place: the money that I took from Hurloll I used for repairs. He never charged me with taking any money. I repaired the house I believe in 1240. The house was in Ram-bagaun; this was previous to the settlement. After the repairs were completed I was taken ill, and went home. I don't recollect how long; about a month. I returned before the benami settlement. I returned, I believe, in Assur 1240. It was 1240 or 1241, it might have been at the beginning or the end of the month. I arrived here previously to that settlement in Swinhoe's office. The conversation behind the screen in Swinhoe's office about the receipt was not in the English language; I said I did not know the purport of the English writing. I did not say they were sitting on chairs; they got up and went to a little distance; they were standing during the conversation and I was standing. Hurrishunder Tagore heard it, Promothonauth and Radakissen both together said, one spoke, before the other; Radakissen spoke first and Promothonauth followed saying, what is to become of the receipt we gave you? After they had both spoken, Messrs. Thompson and Swinhoe said that owing to the delay they must go to the Court. There was a talk among them, but the attorneys did not know what they were talking about, but said they must go away. I don't know whether either of them heard Hurloll say he had never got a receipt from the Days. I know very well Hurloll said he never had got a receipt from them; I don't recollect when he said so to the attorney. Hurloll said that if his property was sold it would go for nothing, but if he got it preserved he could pay his creditors by degrees. Radakissen said on the first occasion that if the property was kept in their, the Days, name, the property would be preserved. Muddenmohun Bysack was there who knew me. This conversation took place on the second story. I first went to the 3d story and afterwards came down to the 2d, where a conversation took place between the Days, Radakissen and Muddenmohun Bysack. The conversation took place on the 3d story and again on the 2d story. I did not see Muddenmohun Bysack on the 3d story; this conversation took place before I saw Muddenmohun Bysack. The conversation about the sale being benami took place both on the 3d story, and again when we came down on the 2d story. I do not recollect the name of the hurkaru who went first. I don't see him, he is not now with Hurloll. On the signing of the bill of sale we went away before 3 in the morning. Promothonauth and Aushotosh were then there. I knew Nubokistno Bose; he was never in the service of Hurloll. I had known him 5 years before, he never was in the service of Ladlymohun. I never saw him while I was in his service. I never heard of his being naib of his talook Pattleshado. I never heard that he was in Ladlymohun's service, I did not see him at his house. I have no recollection that I ever saw him there. Occasionally I went in the carriage with Hurloll; it was a great carriage; a Doctor's carriage; it was in this that I went with Hurloll to the Days. The boxes were put where your feet are placed. Boyrub carried two boxes and Guddah burkaru carried one; they were not heavy; they were locked; they had fixed locks not padlocks. I don't know who had the key. Boyrub and Guddah burkaru carried the boxes that same evening; the three boxes at Hurloll's were put in the frosakanah; that room was not locked; the servants were constantly there. I was told in the evening how they were disposed of. When I went to Swinhoe's office with the gold mohurs, I saw Ranchund Mookerjee. I don't recollect if he was sent for, or was walking up and down; he was not there immediately when I went in; I had known him for 4 or 5 years previous to that. I did not purchase any stamp any where that I am quite certain about.

Bhojrubchunder Moonshie, examined by Prinsep.—I am in the service of Hurloll. I have been for 10 or 12 years, and was in that of Laddymohun. I did go to the house of the Days with him, on 8th Shrabun 1241—it was a Monday, early in the morning. Gopenauth Roy and Gudha, hurkaru, went with us, we went up-stairs, I saw papers executed, a receipt to a bill, of sale a bognaputta and an ekrah. (Exhibit K. shewn). This is my signature, I was there all the time. After the papers had been executed Promothonauth desired Hurloll to go below with him, as they were going down, Hurloll called me to accompany him, from the 3d story we came to the 2d story, we three came and the hurkaru with us, we went into a room on that floor. Promothonauth shut the door, and he and Promothonauth walked to and fro, the latter addressing me said, take these three boxes away with you. They were hand boxes; I put one upon the other, and lifted them up for the purpose of carrying them away, Promothonauth said, do you take two, and the hurkaru take one, the door was then opened, and we all came away, we replaced them in the carriage, the boxes were shut, they were light. I went up again after taking the boxes, Hurloll said, Gopenauth Roy is up-stairs, call him down. I did so, I did not go up for any other purpose. When we got down Gopenauth went to the carriage with Hurloll and I went on the coach box, on reaching the house, Hurloll alighted and told me to place them in my dufferkanah, and in the evening to give them to the Days. I placed them in my dufferkanah, and in the evening took them to the Days. I saw Promothonauth there, I said Hurloll has sent the boxes; he said, leave them and go; no receipt was given. I was up-stairs when the papers were executed, money was paid, I saw some gold mohurs about 100 or 150, within 200. They were in a bag, Promothonauth took 5 or 6 in his hands and shewed them to the people and said, are they old or new? None taken at that time by Hurloll. (Exhibit J. shewn.) This is the banaputta which I have spoken of. No receipt was given by the Days to Hurloll. (Exhibit M. entry,) no, this was not given. I know Tarakinker Chatterjee, he is dead.

Cross examined by Mr. Leith.—I both heard from Hurloll and Gopenauth that they had been at the Day's the night before. I cannot say whether I was at Hurloll's the night before I went to the Days. I lived there, and may have been. Hurloll did not say any thing to me at the time of going on the morning of the 8th. I accompanied Hurloll as his servant, and in consequence followed him up-stairs as his servant. The conclusion of what was going forward when I was called upon to witness a paper the ekrah. I asked Hurloll why he was giving that agreement, in answer to which he said he was placing the talook and garden to benami to the Days. Gopenauth was in the same room, but not near, he did not go to the 2d story, he was up-stairs when the boxes were removed, he did not see me remove the boxes. How can I recollect the size of the room? If I had been in the habit of going there, I could describe. I don't recollect what place of the room, whether at the centre or at either of the ends, the boxes were. No one mentioned to me any particulars about the boxes. Gopenauth was not exactly near me, he was in the room during the conversation, he was nearer the baboo than me. I did not think that the boxes contained gold, they were too light. Promothonauth did not explain to me, why I carried the three boxes they would not appear to be gold mohurs; Gopenauth did. After placing the boxes in the carriage, I went up-stairs to call Gopenauth, I told him that I had got three boxes in the middle story and had placed them in the carriage.

Gudha, hurkaru, examined by Mr. Pearson.—I am Hurloll's hurkaru. I did accompany him in the year 1241, on the 8th Shrabun. Gopenauth Roy, Bhojrub Moonshie, and the baboo went with me. Hurloll went up to the 3d story Gopenauth and Bhojrub and I went with him. I remained standing in the veranda in front of the boytakannah, Hurloll remained there till 8 or 9 o'clock, he then came back to the 2nd story. I accompanied him. Bhojrub Suttoo is Baboo Suttoo's brother. Gopenauth remained on the 3d story, we afterwards went down, in the 2nd story we went into the boytakannah a long room. Bhojrub and Promothonauth went into the room. I remained out, Bhojrub called me in, Promothonauth said, take these boxes, Bhojrub was taking them up, Promothonauth said take two yourself, give the hurkaru one, also what will people say? I carried down one and Bhojrub carried two and placed them in the baboo's carriage. I and Bhojrub baboo went into the carriage. The baboo said where is Gopenauth, he was called by Bhojrub, they were placed in the carriage, and then in the house they were placed in the toysakanah or dufferkanah where the baboos sit. In the evening I carried one and Bhojrub carried two to the Day's by Hurloll's orders.

Cross examined by Mr. Clarke.—This is Bysack and may be the 5th or 7th I cannot say which, we are illiterate people and cannot speak of these months. I know it was 8th Shrabun this transaction took place. The mohurrs and people write down dates, and we come to hear them, no one told me it was 8th Shrabun, I can neither read nor write. I stood upon the door frame inside. I saw the Baboos walking to and fro, I stood within the door frame when the door was shut, Promothonauth shut it, I moved a little aside when he shut it, before shutting it they were walking up and down, they were talking among themselves. I don't know of what. A little after they talked they shut the door, and after shutting it they did not talk long before we took the boxes away. I don't know what passed between them but when Bhojrub took up three boxes Promothonauth said 'what are you doing, what are you doing?' I don't recollect where the door of the boytakannah was. Promothonauth said to Bhojrub "don't carry three boxes people will say you are carrying empty boxes, and they don't contain money." I heard this said to Bhojrub.

Shamloll Tagore in reply to Mr. Clarke.—I was not in Court, during any part of the trial nor during the Advocate-General's speech, I heard no part of it.

Examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I am a son of Laddymohun. I cannot say what his estate was worth, I can't state unless the estate was wound up. There were debts upon the estate, I have had the principal arrangement of the estate. The claims of Juggomohun and Bustomdoss Mullick were settled. I and Hurloll did come to a partition. (Exhibit H. shewn.) This is that agreement signed by him. To the best of my judgment the present value of that talook outstanding balances are worth 3 lakhs of rupees and the garden at Calcutta, worth 50,000 or 60,000. The Swinhoes were my father's attorneys. I know Mudden Bysack, Mr. Swinhoe's head writer. John Swinhoe I employ to take out probate. I remember going to Tumlook, I left Hurloll manager. I desired Mudden, whenever any business occurred, which required Mr. Swinhoe's attention, to attend Hurloll, was constantly quarrelling with me and threatening to apply to the Court, unless I came to a partition with him. I think previous to this the talook was sold to Prosoonocoomar, this sale was cancelled (To a Jurymen.) I cannot say what was the amount of Laddymohun's debts, the principal creditors were Juggomohun Mookerjee, Mackintosh and Co. Dia Dabee and Bustomdoss Mullick. There is an account of Dwarkanath Tagore which is not yet settled.

We have paid a part of Mackintosh's claim, and have confessed judgment. I don't know what the date of the arrangement with Dwarkanauth. I don't know what the money to be got from Dwarkanauth on mortgage was to be done with. I am not acquainted with the arrangement with Dwarkanauth, I have only heard of it.

George Higgins, examined by Mr. Pearson.—I was attorney of Bustamondoss Mullick. (Exhibit W. X. Y.) Mudden Bysack was head native to Swinhoe, they cannot be found.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. It was sometime after Mr. Pearson had begun to speak that I saw Shamloll in the court, Mr. Hedger sent him out, he must have been in for a quarter of an hour or 10 minutes.

A. D. Kemp, examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I believe Wodsworth to be dead. (Exhibit —) I am a witness to this, I was then in Wodsworth's office. I received the instructions from Ramchundur Mookerjee who always attended at that time as Hurloll's agent. At that time I believe he was very far from being connected with the Days. I saw Tarakinker Chatterjee at the house of Hurloll, and he pointed out the mother of Hurloll on that occasion; he appeared to be intimate with Hurloll. Hurloll said, that the receipt was to shew to the creditors that he had not possession of the money which his mother had detained out of a sum of money he had received from Aushotash Day. I believe Ramchundur was present. I had nothing to do with Wodsworth's receipts of money. Wodsworth attended on behalf of Hurloll.

Cross examined by Mr. Clarke.—Hurloll stated to me that it was an absolute sale to the Days, and that it was a great hardship on him that his money had been detained by his mother. I had not a doubt, but that it was an absolute sale. Tarakinker appeared to be on very intimate terms with Hurloll, he introduced him to me. Ramchundur Mookerjee always attended the office of Wodsworth, and he brought me cases and papers to settle for Hurloll, and I should say from all the correspondence I know in that office that Ramchundur was Hurloll's manager.

Joseph Spencer Judge, Examined by Mr. Pearson.—I was attorney for Hurloll Tagore, in consequence of instructions from Hurloll, I wrote a letter to the Days. (Exhibit Z, shewn) This is a copy of a letter I sent to the Days. In the month of June 1833, Hurloll required pecuniary assistance; and a mortgage bond and warrant of attorney were executed to Dwarkanauth. I believe Dwarkanauth was to advance 2 lacs and fifty thousand. I received on the 7th a letter from the Days referring me to Swinhoe. I have not that letter. I sent all Hurloll's papers to Thompson.

Cross-examined by Mr. Turton.—I understood that the money was to be advanced by Dwarkanauth to the creditors or to Ladlymohun by drafts on him. The mortgage was executed and the bond and warrant. (Exhibit No. 15 the bond. Exhibit 16 and 17. Lease and Release by way of mortgage, shewn) in July Hurloll called on me and told me that judgment was entered up, I called on Dwarkanauth, and satisfaction was entered up the same day. I understood on 18th July both from Hurloll and Dwarkanauth that Hurloll wanted the money himself into his possession, and that therefore the mortgage broke off. I heard there was some negotiation about the Days.

Hurrochunder Tagore.—I am in the light of a brother of Hurloll. One occasion I was in the office of Swinhoe with Hurloll, Radakissen Mitter, the defendants, Muddenmohun Bysack, and Mr. Thompson, and Mr. Swinhoe were present, papers were preparing; English papers. There was a screen near the door near which they went and spoke. Muddenmohun Bysack was with them. Hurloll called me to him. Hurloll said to me, they want a receipt from me alleging that the receipt has been mislaid, I never received such a receipt, how can I grant a receipt? I think Radakissen and the Days heard this. I said to Hurloll there is no objection to grant such a receipt, Hurloll said will I give it? The Days said unless such a receipt be given we cannot settle. Radakissen said this. Mr. Thompson and Mr. Swinhoe said, while you are discussing these matters we will go to the Court and come back. The conversation was in Bengalee. (Exhibit V. shewn.) This was filled up by me Hurloll having taken 85 gold mohurs, and there was some rupees more as a balance about which Hurloll made objection to pay the balance. Radakissen said this sum is mentioned in the answer, and this is to correspond with it, another note was given at the same time on a stamp paper like that for 400 and odd rupees. Radakissen had produced a list which I saw, in which was mentioned stamped papers and other small expenses.

Cross examined by Mr. Turton.—I know Dwarkanauth. I had an affair of indigo with Shamloll. My indigo was mixed with his. Shamloll's indigo came down in my name, he had taken some money from me, but not on that indigo. It came down in my name, but in the very packages in which it was shipped; there was no dispute with me it was with Shamloll. I never heard of any body making claim that the Indigo was mine. I never told Dwarkanauth so, either in writing; or by word of mouth. At Swinhoe's office those whom I named were there. Mr. Thompson's man I know I cannot speak with certainty, but he may have been there. Certainly if I heard what was said others must have heard. How could Thompson and Swinhoe have heard when they went out? Thompson was there at first and afterwards when Hurloll executed the receipt. I don't believe Hurloll made any objections at the time of mentioning it when Mr. Thompson was present. Sucham property of Ladlymohun was sold to me for 2,000 it was 4 or 5 coss out of Calcutta. On account of property sold by Jenkins, Low and Co. I received 3,119 rupees, I certainly gave it to Shamloll, within a few days after the account sales came in. At that time Hurloll and Shamloll were in dispute with each other, but I don't think Shamloll came to the knowledge of it in consequence of the dispute. I cannot speak with certainty as to whom I paid over the money, and therefore I cannot say whether that passage (part of answer of Hurloll and Shamloll to Nobonmoney's bill) is true or not. Mr. Thompson wrote me as attorney for Hurloll, and I answered him. As his attorney wrote me, Hurloll must have been aware of the subject. I did not see the jewels or ornaments of Ladlymohun's private estate nor were they appraised before me.

Dwarkanauth Tagore examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I am acquainted with Ladlymohun's estate. I know this talook; when the division took place between Gopeemohun and Ladlymohun, it was valued at 3 lacs of rupees. Landed property in 1833 had fallen very much; the garden in Chitpore road would have then sold for 20 or 30,000 rupees. (Exhibits 15, 16, and 17 shewn.) These were the bond and mortgage deeds; they were executed and afterwards cancelled. The agreement was to pay Ladlymohun's debts. I was to advance the money on the security of this mortgage for that purpose. One morning a few days after the execution of the mortgage, Hurloll came to me and said he would not take the money to pay the creditors, but take it for himself. I refused to keep it on his account or to pay himself, but I offered to pay the same to the creditors: he then asked me to cancel the mortgage, and I consented. There were debts of Ladlymohun, there were outstandings due to the estate, a mortgage due from the Ghosauls; with the exception of one or two, all the debts were secured. There was an open account with me. An old gold mohur weighs an anna more than the rupee.

Cross examined by Mr. Turton.—I know Hurrochund Tagore; he did claim indigo of Shamloil. Last year our house advanced money to Shamloil and the superintendent of the factory consigned indigo to us. Hurrochunder took it to his own factory, altered the packages, and sent it to Calcutta, I claimed it through my attorney, and threatened a bill in equity. In 1833 money was very scarce. Being pressed for money on Mackintosh's failure, I got a loan on mortgage from my personal friends, but there was a great want of confidence and difficulty to get loans of money. I am trustee for property of Prawnkissen Holdar. I could not then get purchasers for that property. Hurloll is my relation, I heard his examination in Greyabhsom Mookerjee's case. It is a difficult answer to say that I don't believe Hurloll on his oath. If I knew what he said was true I would believe him. I am not intimate now with Hurloll or Aushotosh, I was on good terms with both 3 years ago. Aushotosh Day has always borne a very excellent character since I have known him.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—The indigo was shipped to Carr, Tagore and Co. We received the invoice, and were in daily expectation of receiving the indigo. It was taken to Hurrochunder Tagore's factory; he acknowledged that he had advanced money on the indigo. Sometimes he said he had made advances, and sometimes that he had purchased the indigo. I never saw Hurrochunder on the subject, it was through Gopelaul, a cousin of mine, that the communication was made.

Personocomar Tagore examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I am a relation of Hurloll. The average income of the half of the Talook was about 25,000 Sa. Rs. I therefore calculate the value about 2 lacs and a half or 3 lacs of Rs. I am now mortgagee of Hurloll's share. I know Tarakinkar Chatterjee he was some way related to the Ghosals, this is the family you have heard of as mortgagees of Ladlymohun. Tarakinkar Chatterjee called on me on the evening of the day on which the trial of Juggomohun Mookerjee and Sadmundoomy Dabee had taken place, he said he had been sent by Aushotosh Day, he said that he had purchased the property from Hurloll and that at the request of Hurloll the purchase money was to be paid in gold mohurs.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith.—On the Mortgage of the moiety there is about 8,000 due to me.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—The talook is in my possession and I am manager, on Ladlymohun's death in consequence of a notice and pending the matter with Aushotosh, I held the rents in deposit. (To a Jurymen) I believe I was to pay in cash about one lac. The sale to me was both by Hurloll and Shamloil, and I would have paid the money to both. I went to Tumlook, in consequence of the sale on the 21st May, by orders of Government. I said to Tarakinkar Chatterjee when he came to me that I would give no answer as there was no authority from Hurloll.

John Baptiste examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I am writer of Mr. Hedger, I know Muddenmohun Bysack the writer of Mr. Swinhoe, I went to serve him with a subpoena—I tried to serve the subpoena on him in his dwelling house and in his office, Swinhoe's office. He could not be found.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clarke.—I know nothing of Mr. Swinhoe offering 300 Rs. to serve Muddenmohun Bysack. I did not hear this from Mr. Hedger nor in the office.

John Henry Swinhoe, examined by Mr. Prinsep.—These deeds, (exhibits S. and U.) I saw executed in my office by Aushotosh and Promothonauth Day and Hurloll Tagore.

Cross-examined by Mr. Turton.—On the 30th July Hurloll and Radakissen Mitter called and stated that they had made up their differences and were to compromise.

They began on the subject of the settlement. I stopped them, saying it ought professionally speaking to be drawn by Thompson as attorney for Hurloll and afterwards sent in to me for my approvakon behalf of the Days. Hurloll entreated me to draw the deeds as I had been his father's attorney. I insisted on the presence of Thompson before I heard of the terms of compromise. Hurloll went and brought Thompson, and he and I in presence of Hurloll and Radakissen discussed the terms of the compromise. Thompson said it was hard that Hurloll should pay costs between attorney and client. It was afterwards determined in presence of Hurloll who was beside my desk (he knows English perfectly and must have heard) it was agreed that the deed should be drawn as Mr. Turton should advise. This is the draft deed as settled by Mr. Turton. (Exhibit) Hurloll was very anxious to have the matter completed, he called upon me and asked me to send the draft to him, and not to Mr. Thompson as he would go to him and get him to look over it at once. I did send it to Hurloll when I got it from Mr. Turton: he kept it a whole day and a half and brought it back to me. The deed was then engrossed. Hurloll and Radakissen called on me again, they then fixed the following Monday which was the 11th, to execute the deeds. They are dated the 8th and 9th, Sunday was the 10th, and I said I would prefer having the deeds drawn on Saturday and Friday. Thompson said it made no difference being dated Sunday, I referred to Newland on Contract and found it so; but the deeds in the mean time had been ante-dated and this was the sole reason of ante-dating. On the 10th, Thompson, his writer, Hurloll, and Radakissen, came to my office. On the deeds being about to be executed one of the Days, or Radakissen, asked for a receipt. There was a great discussion, Radakissen wanting a regular legal indemnity bond against effecting of the receipt. It was not until then that a discussion took place between the parties and then Thompson and myself having business in court, came to the Court house. When we returned we found them still discussing the same matter. Thompson was the first who said your client should be satisfied with a common receipt and draw it out himself, I made some alterations in the draft and he fair copied it. (Exhibit No. 6.) This is that receipt. Certainly not, Hurloll never disputed that he had never received that receipt: had he even disputed in Bengales I would have known it. This receipt is all in Mr. Thompson's hand; the receipt is dated 11th August. This was signed by Hurloll in my presence and in that of the others, from what he has sworn to and his answer to the Day's bill, and his evidence in Rabutty's case, in my opinion he has sworn to the most abominable falsehoods. As to matters which I knew could not have occurred, he swore positively that they had. I would not believe him on his oath forming my opinion from in what I have before said. Ladlymohun's will was proved on the 8th. I did refer to this book (No. 18) when the matters in the entries were fresh in my memory. I have assuredly a knowledge of the facts contained in this book independent of looking at it. Hurloll was not in my office on the 1st June, he was not there on the 2d; it was Sunday; nor on the 3d. I had a head writer in my office, Mudden Bysack. I have most certainly not been accessory in keeping him away, so anxious was I to serve him that I offered a reward of 300 rupees before I received the notice from Mr. Hedger. I believe he never was sworn and his present objection is to take an oath: I know he will not take an oath on any account. Delay occurred in replying to Mr. Judge's note, my illness was the cause. Dr. Twining attended me, my life was despaired of—I was not quite recovered when I answered Mr. Judge's letter of the 17th. Hurloll called at my office on the 22d August, and said he and his brother had made up their differences—he never called out me from that to the 26th, when on that day to my utter astonishment he stated that this was a bona fide transaction. This was the first time he told me this; he did not tell me at the time of saying the differences with his brother were made up. On the 26th, he called on me with Dwarkanauth Tagore, and I told him he must have another attorney, I would have nothing to do with him, he entreated me to remain his attorney. I recommended Dwarkanauth Tagore to get the injunction orders postponed for a few days until the change of attorney could be effected. I received my instructions to prepare the affidavit to oppose the injunction, (Exhibit 19.) This is the draft affidavit of Hurloll in the suit of Bustomdoss Mullick. Hurloll came to my office with Ramchurn Mookerjee, who I believed to be his manager. He was never in Day's service to my knowledge. I had drafted the affidavit in Bustomdoss Mullick's case first, and sent it for Mr. Prinsep's approval who was counsel for Hurloll. That draft was returned to me by Mr. P. on the 17th August. I then drafted the other affidavit, and on the following day I went to Hurloll Tagore's house. The alteration in the affidavit as to the receipt by Hurloll's mother was made by Mr. Prinsep, in the draft I had originally inserted it. Two notes were given, one for 85 gold mohurs he received and the other was for the Government revenue due before the Days got possession of the garden; this has not been paid, the others have.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—The deeds will show what the consideration was, there was no real money given, from the date of the bill of sale they were entitled to the profits. I have no more doubt of the first sale being an absolute sale than I have of my existence. This note was for Government revenue alleged to be due; it has never been paid, but I have been often instructed to bring an action upon it and I have dissuaded my clients from "bringing an action pending the equity suit." I know that was somewhere about the Government revenue due. Mr. Thompson on the first occasion spoke generally of the matter of the compromise. I believe that Hurloll was acting under the advice of Mr. Hedger. The equity suits were then settled, and Shamlohl, not Hurloll, paid the costs as between party and party. The 26th August was the first day I heard of this being benami, the Days never opened their case to me until after the papers came from Mr. Blacquiere. I only knew that the sale was bona fide, that it was alleged to be benami. Until the 26th I did not know that there was a difference between the case of Hurloll and that of the Days as to the injunctions further than that the Days were out of possession. By the expression "contending parties" in (Exhibit—letter to Hurloll.) I meant that the vendor and purchaser were contending parties and could not have joined in one answer. Radakissen Mitter is the manager of the Days in legal and commercial matters; he is a very intelligent man. I understand the native language; I do understand a conversation in Bengallee if in the same room with me, and I hear it if spoken slowly. I could not have been absent more than half an hour in the Court and when Thompson came back with me, they were still discussing. Muddenmohun was present as my writer as it was his duty; he went off on the 1st of this March, and I wrote him a very severe letter. Muddenmohun Bysack does not attend the Days more than my other clients.

solemnly and most deliberately swear that Mr. Thompson attended twice, once at the compromise and on the 30th July he must have come on the part of Hurloll as he was his attorney. A plea or alibi in Hurloll's service has also absconded, although I have taken a subpoena out against him. I went to the Days about a month ago and saw the identical gold-mohurs at least what they alleged to be them, and I saw them weighed.

This was the case for the prosecution. The jury retired to take some refreshment, and on re-entering the court, their foreman addressed the Chief Justice, stating that they were unanimously of opinion that any further proceedings would be a waste of time,—that they did not believe the case for the prosecution. The jury were then called over in the usual manner by the clerk of the crown and a verdict of not guilty was recorded.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7.

Mr. Advocate-General showed cause against a rule nisi obtained by Mr. Turton on a former day, having for its object to delay the passing of the sentence of the court on Jonooky Doss, a wealthy resident of Benares, convicted of conspiracy in 1829. The conspiracy of which the defendant was found guilty, had been concocted by him at Benares but matured and carried on by others in Calcutta where the defendant himself had never been. At the trial an objection was taken to the jurisdiction of the court, but this was overruled and a verdict of guilty was returned. The court subsequently decided after a solemn argument that it had a constructive jurisdiction over the defendant, but, this being a criminal case, leave was prayed that judgment might be suspended until the result should be known of an appeal to the King in Council. Further time was granted at various periods by the court, and now, though Sir Herbert Compton had taken the petition of appeal home so far back as 1831, it did not appear that any satisfactory measures had been adopted to bring the appeal before the Privy Council. The learned counsel argued that there had been a want of diligence, and a culpable neglect in this case which ought to prevent the court granting further time.

But the court, though they were not satisfied that the attorneys in London, employed to conduct the defendant's case and to bring it before the Privy Council, had used due diligence, from anything now produced in argument, could not infer that the defendant had influenced the delay. Under the circumstances, the appeal being on a question of the greatest importance, they were willing to grant a further delay until the last day of the second term 1837, with an understanding that defendant should then be brought up for judgment, unless, indeed, something much more satisfactory was brought before the Court than the documents on which the rule nisi was obtained. If defendant's counsel had any objections to urge to this arrangement, the court were willing to hear him.

Mr. Turton was perfectly satisfied with the course the court intended to adopt, but he took this opportunity to explain the cause of the delay, which was mainly in consequence of the failure of Rickards, Mackintosh and Co. who were defendant's agents in London, and whose attorneys had been engaged to conduct the appeal in compliance with the wishes of Sir Herbert Compton.—Englishman.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9.

Charles Gibson Marcus, William Bennett, George Henry Hollingberry, Mirza Mahomed Addy, and John Addy, were brought up, several of them in forma pauperis, and heard on their petitions and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF GEORGE JAMES GORDON.

This was an order obtained by Mr. W. Thompson, attorney for Mr. J. W. Sutherland, that the insolvent do attend to be examined on his oath on such matters as to the court may seem fit.

Mr. Gordon, examined by Mr. Priasep, exhibit produced, I have no doubt but that I must have received this document. These are the initials of Charles Morgan who has gone home, his duty was to register all documents of this description. I believe the document was received, as marked, on the 27th of October 1832. My memory has been refreshed as to this transaction by reading Mr. Storm's evidence given during my absence, but of myself, I have no recollection of the document. It relates to a sum of money belonging to Miss Hessing who was married to Colonel Geddes. The letter and power of attorney were not acted upon by me: they were acted upon by the other partners. They relate to a sale of government paper for Sa. Rs. 1,86,600, for Mrs. Geddes, and likewise to a cash balance in her favor. I have no knowledge how they were acted upon excepting so far as the books will shew and I have not referred to the books of the house. I am not aware that I was referred to during the progress, of this business. (Refers to letter.) From the letter I find, we were to remit immediately the full amount, but it could not be done in the terms of the letter, there not being any government bills at that time in the market. I see from the Exchange Gazette, now produced, that bills were advertised on London, drawn in Canton, for £14,000, but I am not sure that those bills were not bid for. It is not customary to enquire for government bills, because the brokers come to you and inquire if you want them. I cannot say if any trouble was taken to inquire for government bills, but to the best of my recollection no part of this money was remitted in them. £5,000 was remitted in bills of Dent and Co. on Richards, Mackintosh and Co. in London; the remainder in our own bills on the same firm. The date of the last remittance, for £12,000, was the 26th of December 1832, at which time we did not consider our affairs as utterly desperate. We failed on the 4th of the following January. I cannot say if the bills were despatched before the failure, but they were put in course of being sent as soon as they were signed. I cannot say by what ship they were despatched. All the bills but those for £12,000 were accepted by Richards, Mackintosh and Co. We were in course of making large remittances, per James Sibbald, but to what extent I cannot say. The vessel was wrecked, and the remittances never arrived except by way of insurance. I cannot say how much of those remittances had been taken up by government, but I have no doubt some part was. My department in the firm was the correspondence, insurance offices, and occasional business besides. Mr. Storm managed the whole of the business of finance generally: the ways and means were his particular department, but not exclusively so. I cannot say to what extent remittances were made from the 1st November to the time of failure. We were very largely indebted to the house at home, but we contemplated making large consignments upon which we expected large profits. The profits were very large—fifty per cent.—on what was sent home. I cannot say to what amount the remittances were, but certainly not one-fifth of what they would have been had the firm gone on without interruption in December and January. We were drawing largely in comparison to the consignments. As exhibited by our books, the debt to Richards, Mackintosh and Co. was at the beginning of season 1832, about £200,000. We had not received strong remonstrances on this subject: it was a large balance but we were as delicately told of it as one house could tell another. In fact we were desired not to remit home unless we could do so without loss on the transaction. (Letter produced, part written in cypher. When Mr. Roberts first went home he found he had often occasion to write to us on subjects which it would be improper or indelicate to expose to the clerks in the office. I have not the key to the cypher now: I had it but it has been mislaid. I have now before me Mr. Browne Robert's "statement" It purports to contain a copy of this letter; it is not an exact copy, some words are omitted; the meaning of the letter and copy are the same, at least I will not undertake to say they are essentially different. It was not our practice to make enquiries for bills: our course was to follow our instructions, these were, in Mrs. Geddes' case, to remit in government bills, or if not procurable in good private bills. The sale of Company's paper took place on the 31st October, four days after the receipt of the letter, and the date of last remittance is the 26th December. I knew of no inquiries made by the firm for government bills between those dates, and I presume none were made. I did not write to Mr. B. Roberts in England in 1827 that the house must fail. Mr. Roberts at that time was at my elbow which made it impossible that I should have written to him. In 1827 nothing was farther from my mind than that it would be expedient for the house to stop payment. I certainly did not make such a proposal to any of my partners, nor was such a proposal at all agitated at that time. About a week before we did fail, I wrote home to say that we were very hard pressed, but that our principal apprehensions arose from the difficulty we should have in providing for Rickards and Co.'s bills, drawn through China and falling due in February or March. I was one of the executors of Mrs. Hessing, the mother of Mrs. Geddes, and had been her agent many years before the making of her will. She gave instructions herself to Mr. Turnbull in writing. It was dictated to Mr. Turnbull by Mrs. Hessing. The draft has been searched for at the office of the assignees but not found. I suggested that the original instructions should be sent to Stacy and Baillie, where I have also made enquiries for it. The original was in Mr. Turnbull's hand writing. Mrs. Hessing was a native of Hindostan: she was fair, and I believe of European parentage. I saw her on the subject of this will, and was present at the execution of it. There were three gentlemen and myself present. Mr. Hornett and Mr. Thompson witnessed it after it was explained. She had been bedridden for years. I have no doubt this passage was in the original draft, "Concerning my person estate and effects upon trust, that they, the said George James Gordon and Peter Turnbull, shall as soon as conveniently may be after my decease, call in such parts thereof as shall consist of money out upon security at interest or other wise (except only money at my credit with the said firm of Mackintosh and Co.) and convert into money such parts thereof as may not consist of cash at the time of my death." I have not the slightest doubt that there was no material variation between the will as it stood, and the draft written out by Mr. Turnbull, and which I sent to our attorney's Messrs. Stacy and Baillie to send us instructions for preparing a formal will, and therefore if the words pointed out had any peculiar legal effect they must have been taken from that draft of Mr. Turnbull. They certainly were not inserted at my suggestion. Mrs. Hessing had been a good deal in the hands of a native moonshoe, of Colonel Hessing's, and had been persuaded to give him a bond for Sa. Rs. 20,000 at six per cent. I did not clear off this debt having heard from various quarters that he had robbed her to a great extent. It is an omission that it is not in her account as a doubtful debt. I believe Mr. Turnbull did not act as executor in any one instance. There is a large balance against me in the books of the firm. It was in consequence of no dividends having been carried to our credit for several years. (In reply to Mr. Turton). For several years after joining the firm of Mackintosh and Co. I thought it the most flourishing and safest house in India. At the time we made the remittance for £12,000, I had no reason to believe the bills would not be honoured. At the time of drawing those bills, I had no doubt that they would be paid by Rickards and Co. who did in fact continue to accept every bill we drew on them up to the time of their failure.

IN THE MATTER OF J. YOUNG AND J. C. C. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. Turton applied for the final discharge of the insolvents. The learned counsel moved on a petition and affidavits setting forth that fourteen months had expired since the date of the application, and that notices had been given in compliance with the terms of the order made at time of the first application.

Mr. Justice Malkin, after some consideration, thought it would be desirable to have an affidavit that no fiat of bankruptcy had issued against the insolvents subsequent to the notice of application for a final discharge. An affidavit to that effect was put in, and likewise an affidavit, setting forth that inquiries had been made of the Secretary to Government as to whether the notices had been sent home for publication in the London Gazette, and that he had answered in the affirmative.

The Learned Judge then said that as this was the first application for a final discharge under the new act, it would be desirable to introduce a practice that would not require alteration. He would therefore take a day or two to consider the nature of the order it would be proper to make and if he found all the forms complied with, he would, without waiting for the next court day, make the order for a final discharge as of to-day.

A like course was pursued with regard to similar applications made on behalf of Mr. G. A. Prinsep, and Mr. W. Prinsep.—Englishman.

SATURDAY, APRIL 23.

Mr. Turton made similar applications in the matters of George Ballard, Nathaniel Alexander, and John Storm. But as the parties were not present the learned judge took time to consider.

The final discharge of Mr. Gordon was opposed by Mr. Prinsep on the facts elicited by the above examination. The learned judge thought there were only two points for consideration, viz. whether the firm of Mackintosh and Co. were sufficiently excused for not sending home the remittances in Government bills; and secondly, whether they had reason to expect that their own bills would not be accepted. As to matters connected with the will of Mrs. Messing, he thought they might be put out of consideration.

A dividend of three per cent. was declared on the estate of Alexander and Co. and fifty per cent. in that of William Fairlie Clarke.

Sir Benjamin Malkin made orders upon the Petitions of the partners in the Insolvent Firms, under the 4th and 5th William IV. Cap. 79, granting an immediate release only to Messrs. Young, Sutherland and Gordon, and refusing it on account of the absence of the partners in the case of Messrs. Ballard, Alexander and Storm. In the case of G. A. Prinsep and Wm. Prinsep no order was made, and the matter stands over for the present.

The Commissioner made some preliminary remarks upon the operation of the Act, and upon the distinctions that appeared in the several cases before him. The first question, he observed, was whether this Act was really now in force, not having been specifically renewed with the Indian Insolvent Act, when the latter was renewed here in February last. He had himself no doubt whatever on the subject, for he found no limitation of time in the Act of 4th and 5th William IV. Cap. 79. It would have expired, if the other Act had not been renewed, for that was its foundation; but so long as there was an Indian Insolvent Act to hang upon, he considered it to continue in force.

The second question that arose was, whether the benefits of the Act could be granted to Insolvents not present. His own opinion was that it might, but as the Chief Justice had expressed a different opinion, he (Sir Benjamin) would not make an order in this Court that would be final in opposition to that opinion, and therefore as the parties had an appeal to the Superior Court, he should refuse the applications of Messrs. Ballard, Alexander and Storm, on the ground of their absence. A distinction had been raised in the case of Mr. Storm, that his absence was owing to his being employed in the service of the Assignees of his firm. The circumstance the learned Commissioner did not look upon as making any material difference.

He would next consider the main question—the general position of the partners of the three Insolvent firms to which the petitioners had belonged. In this he found a considerable difference. The partners of Alexander and Co. had already obtained their discharge from their Indian Creditors under the Insolvent Act. The partners of Mackintosh and Co. had not; but, like the former, they had been declared “entitled to the benefit of the Act.” Whereas in the case of Palmer and Co., there had been no order of adjudication at all. Why this distinction, he did not know; but a doubt arose upon it, whether the partners in the last case were in a situation to ask for a release under the Act. He had no difficulty in granting it to Messrs. Young and Sutherland, to whose discharge no opposition had been offered by any Creditor, and who might, from the advantageous position in which they appeared to stand, be fairly considered as now exempted from the operation of any of the clauses of exception in the Act:—nor did he see any reason to refuse it to Mr. Gordon. But in the case of the two Messrs. Prinsep, the difference in their position was important; and although a number of years had gone by since the insolvency of their firm, and no opposing creditor had ever presented himself, yet as there had been no adjudication as in all the other cases, it might be proper for the Court itself to subject them to an examination upon their Schedules before proceeding further. He would not say, however, that even if that examination were not satisfactory, they might not in his opinion be entitled to the benefits of this Act, there having been no opposition made within the specified time; but as a difference of opinion existed upon that point, he would for the present refuse their application for a release, and leave them the option of an appeal to the other Court, or of subjecting themselves to an examination as suggested.

The Counsel for the two Messrs. Prinsep said they did not wish to avoid any examination the Court might think proper to make—the closer the investigation the better for them. But as the distinction now drawn to their prejudice had arisen from nothing else but the circumstances of Palmer and Co.’s insolvency having been the first case of importance that occurred under the operation of the Insolvent Act, and Sir Charles Grey had consequently hesitated to make a precedent, and therefore had only given the partners a temporary protection, he would submit that they ought not to suffer by an informality of the Court itself, which had taken charge of the estate without affording the partners that equivalent for the surrender to their property which the Act directed. He therefore requested that the Court would suspend making any order until he should have an opportunity of applying to get this informality removed, and his clients put on the same footing as the partners of the other firms, the circumstances of all of them being alike, in regard to the nature of their Schedules.

Mr. Molloy, on behalf of Mr. Storm, said he should adopt the Commissioner’s suggestion and appeal to the Supreme Court. This appeal, the Commissioner observed, would bring the whole subject under review, and save the necessity of separate appeals in the other cases. —Calcutta Courier.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE.—Sir Charles Metcalfe, accompanied by Mr. Bushby and Lieut. Higginson, left Calcutta at two o'clock on the afternoon of the 2nd April, in the steamer, under a salute of seventeen guns, to assume charge of the Government of the North-western Provinces, and superintendence of the frontier native states. Sir Charles is to have a Private Secretary with a salary of 1,000 rupees a month, and an Aid-de-camp, and Lieutenant Higginson is to fill these offices, with a view to which he has resigned the appointment at Moorshedabad. About two hundred native gentlemen presented an address to Sir Charles on his departure from the presidency.

The Government of the Western Provinces, is to be finally established at Agra, and Sir Charles Metcalfe will carry forward his headquarters to that station during the rains.

SIR FREDERICK ADAM.—Sir Frederick Adam sent home his resignation of the Government of Madras in the month of October last.

THE BORING COMMITTEE.—It is stated that the Boring Committee, after boring about a hundred and twenty feet in the trial for getting fresh water in the Fort, are obliged in consequence of the tubes separating in three places, to take the whole up and begin again.

LOSS OF OPIUM.—Seven boats recently proceeding from Patna to Calcutta with opium for the China market were upset and swamped near Hoogly during the north-wester on the 23d April. The quantity of opium in them was about 260 chests, valued at about three lakhs; but the actual loss sustained is very inconsiderable, as all the opium has been recovered except two chests.

SIR HENRY FANE.—It is reported that Sir Henry Fane will leave Calcutta at the conclusion of the rains, or perhaps earlier, in order to reach Allahabad by the end of October. It is supposed that his Excellency has decided on proceeding up the country thus early in the season, that he may extend his inspection to the large stations to the westward, without encroaching upon the hot weather of 1837.

BENGAL ARCHERS.—The golden arrow has been won by Mr. Smith for the third time.

The Rhotas silver bowl, was shot for by the Archers on the 9th instant, and won by the Lieut. of the Company, Mr. J. C. Wilson.

SHIPPING.—Messrs. DeSouza and Co., if it is said, have closed with Mr. Ambrose for the building of a new clipper of 320 tons, for the China trade, to be constructed upon the plan of the Cowajee Family. This will make the fifth regular clipper built in Calcutta.

A small Government vessel measuring about a hundred tons, for taking the pilots to and from the Sand-Heads, has been launched from the building yard of Mr. James Ambrose at Howrah; she appears a regular clipper.

The Syph arrived off Calcutta on the 29th April, looking as beautiful as ever. We hail the return of the old clipper with joy, and wish her a swift pair of heels and better luck for the future.

The Lady Grant, in coming up the river, ran down the alk-beat near Hooghly Point, and the crew were only saved by getting into the boat of the Lady Grant which was towing netra and was cut away on the accident occurring. On breasting the Bishop's College, the Lady Grant grounded on the tail of the Sumatra sand, and has been obliged to go into dock in consequence.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—A meeting of the Chamber of Commerce took place on the 29th March, in order to receive from Mr. Parker the schedules of duties proposed to be instituted for the transit duties, to the amount of twenty-six lakhs of rupees. The object of the Board of Customs in laying these schedules before the merchants, was to obtain their opinions on the various items of taxation. The Chamber will take time to gather the opinions of the merchants, and then give a written answer to the board. The general opinion of the merchants present, was favorable to import duties on a fixed scale of valuation and at moderate rates, and unfavourable to export duties and the drawback system, from the great trouble which it occasions.

Messrs. G. U. Adam, R. C. Jenkins, T. Leach, J. McClure, A. Mackenzie, J. P. McKilligin, and Ram-comul Sen, were elected Members of the Committee of the Chamber, in lieu of Messrs. Wm. Colville, G. C. Arbuthnot, J. Crooke, B. Harding; J. Stuart, and Rustomjee Cowasjee, who went out by rotation.

Mr. Cockerell was on the 5th instant elected President, and Mr. Colvin Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce for the ensuing year; and Messrs. R. Davidson, E. W. Brightman, and Lewis DeSouza were admitted as members, and Captain J. H. Johnstone as an honorary member.

The several houses of agency composing the Chamber of Commerce, have declared their intention to keep all their accounts in Company's rupees from the first May. Most of the tradesmen have declared the same intention.

FIRM OF WILLIAM PALMER & CO.—A meeting of the Creditors of the late firm of William Palmer and Co. of Hyderabad, was to take place at the house of Mr. William Palmer at Hyderabad on the 20th April, to consider of a plan for prosecuting in England the claims of that firm on the Nizam's Government.

BOARD OF REVENUE.—Mr. F. Halliday, have been appointed Secretary to the Board of Revenue in the room of Mr. Colvin, Private Secretary to the Governor-General.

DINNER TO THE CREW OF THE JUPITER.—On the evening of the 29th March, a grand dinner was given at the Government House to the sailors and marines of H. M. ship Jupiter: the table was loaded with dainty dainties and every solid and liquid obtainable.

DINNER TO COMMEMORATE THE ABOLITION OF TRANSIT DUTIES.—On the first instant, a dinner was got up at the Gyowahun office, Chose Baugan, by some of the educated Hindu youths, in commemoration of the act of the Legislative Council, abolishing the Transit Duties.

AN AMENDED DRAFT.—An amended draft was published in the official Gazette of the 30th March, of an act to rescind the 107th Section of the Act of 53d. Geo III. Cap. 155, which Draft was to be brought up for reconsideration at the first meeting of the Council after the 8th of May. The amendment is the extension of the Act to the three Presidencies, instead of confining its provisions to Bengal, as in the original Draft.

CIVIL ANNUITY FUND.—The appointment of Mr. J. F. Grant to the Secretaryship of the Civil Annuity Fund has not settled the question; Mr. McClintock, who considers himself aggrieved by Mr. Grant's appointment, has addressed a memorial to the Court of Directors on the subject.

It is stated, that twenty-three applications have been made for pensions on the Civil Annuity Fund, under the modified rules prescribed by the Court of Directors.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.—The Calcutta Steam Petition to the House of Commons, was despatched by the Comandul on the 2d April, addressed to the care of Capt. Grindlay as the general agent in London, with a letter to Lord William Bentinck, requesting him (if in Parliament) to present it to the House. The number of signatures upon it was about three thousand five hundred.

The memorials to the Court of Directors and Board of Control were sent up on the 31st March to the Secretary in the proper department, in order that they may be duly transmitted to those authorities.

THE CURRENCY.—The Chamber of Commerce have taken up the matter of the currency, by handing up to Government a letter from Mr. John Watson of Moorshedabad, in which the extreme inconvenience of the present state of things is forcibly pointed out.

The plan adopted by the Trade Association to exchange rupees has already been attended with considerable benefit to the Reges, as it has tended to reduce the exorbitant charges of the shroffs in Calcutta and its immediate vicinity to only half a pice in the rupee.

In the Mofussil, however, the coin can hardly be passed, and two to three annas are deducted as batta for exchanging a rupee. Some of the Zemindars, it is said, have gone so far, as to induce the Government peons to circulate a report among their ryots, that all the new coin will shortly be called in, and have in consequence been able to buy it up from them at most ruinous rates.

THE MOORSHEDABAD AGENCY.—The Moorshedabad Political Agency has been given to the Honorable W. H. L. Melville, Esq.

MR. WALKER.—Mr. Walker is to act for Mr. Plowden in the Salt Agencies of the 24-Pergunnahs and Jessor during the absence of the latter gentleman, who is about to proceed to the Cape on sick leave.

REVIEW.—Major General Watson reviewed the troops at Barrackpore on the 30th March. They were again reviewed on the 2d April in the presence of the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief.

ROBBERY.—A novel description of robbery has lately been introduced into Calcutta. Within the last few weeks several buggies have been stolen. On the 25th March Constable Gwatkin succeeded in apprehending one of the villains going off with a buggy belonging to Mr. Anly the attorney.

ALEXANDER AND CO.'S ESTATE.—On the 9th April the Insolvent Court declared a dividend of 10 per cent., in the estate of Alexander and Co.

THE LAW COMMISSION.—It is said that the members of the Law Commission, intend to attend the Sessions Court of the officiating Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs, whenever the trial of prisoners may take place.

NEW ACTS.—The proposed Acts, No. IX, giving power to commanding officers of Military stations out of the Company's territory, to administer any oath which a Justice of the Peace is competent to administer; and No. X, repealing two clauses of the Indigo Regulation of 1823 and substituting other provisions for them, were promulgated on the 13th April as members of the Indian code.

MRS. ATKINSON'S CONCERT.—Mrs. Atkinson's concert on the 13th April was respectably attended. Mrs. A. was in capital voice and sung delightfully.

FORGERY.—A forgery was committed on the 14th April, in the office of Messrs. R. C. Jenkins, and Co., by one of the native establishment who held a respectable and confidential situation. A draft for 1,200 rupees was forged and presented for countersignature to Mr. Jenkins, at a time of the day when he was very busy, and being passed by him, the forger received the money in Bank of Bengal notes, which he dispatched to the Bank immediately in order to get change for them. The fraud however, was detected in time, and the man who had received silver for the notes, was stopped just as he was leaving the Bank. He was taken to the police and interrogated, but nothing beyond the name of the person who gave him the notes was elicited by the examination.

MILITARY BOARD.—Col. Craigie has given up his intention of returning to Europe, and therefore the expected vacancy in the Military Board, will not take place.

MURDER.—An old Hindu woman was strangled to death on the 31st March, and some valuables stolen from her dwelling. The murderer has hitherto escaped detection.

THE APPEAL DESTROYING ACT.—The appeal of the British inhabitants of Calcutta against the repeal of the 107th section of the 155th chapter of the 53 act of George the III, has been unsuccessful. The Government conceive that the rescinding of the clause will make no change in the rights of British subjects, that the law which they have been all along amenable to will remain precisely the same, the tribunal merely being changed, and that what has been done hitherto by the Supreme Court, will be now done as well by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

ABANDONMENT OF THE HINDU RELIGION.—The following has appeared in the daily papers:—

We, the undersigned Hindoos, make the following declaration of our having renounced Hinduism. Having received a liberal education at Mr. Hare's School, and being freed from the prejudices and superstitions of our countrymen, we had long renounced Hinduism and begun to act according to our principles. This displeased our relations to such a degree that they began to persecute us. Apprehending some injuries would be committed on our persons, and other dangers, from the rage of bigotry, we have escaped from our houses and are living at present in a place where we think we are perfectly secure. Perceiving that our relations are still in pursuit of us, with the intention of dragging us home, we beg leave to inform them that we have determined to return no more to their caste, and as we have taken food which is forbidden in Hinduism, and that with men who are called by them Mlechhas, we request them to desist from giving trouble either to themselves or to us.—DWARKEY RAUTH BANERJEA—GOPALCHUNDER MITTER.

THE TOWN DUTIES.—The Town Duties were abolished on the 30th April.

PRIVATE HOLLOWAY.—Private Holloway, of H. M.'s 38th regiment, has abandoned all further proceedings in the Supreme Court here, and has been permitted, at his own request, to proceed to England on the Comandul, with a view of joining his regiment.

TIGERS.—A letter from Barrapore states that the tigers have made sad havoc amongst the molungees this season, upwards of fifty of whom have either been carried off or mortally wounded. At a village on the borders of a jungle, a boy, employed in cutting wood, was seized by one of the ferocious monsters, when the mother, attracted to the spot by the screams of the child, rushed sized him by the legs. In the struggle the tiger was victorious, and succeeded in a victim into the jungle.

Dr. Wallich has been most successful for the tea plant. He has found it the vigour of a plant in its native locality in five different forests of Assam of at least four completely distinct soils.

THE SYLPH'S SALVAGE.—The insurance offices concerned in the Sylph's salvage, have prepared a letter to Government, requesting that the amount of the eleven China bills upon the Bengal Treasury may be paid over to them under indemnity.

THE RIVER STEAMERS.—The river iron steamers have been re-named in conformity with the orders received from the Court of Directors. The Lord William Bentinck retains her name; the late George Swinton is now the Thames; the late Sir Chas. Metcalfe is now the Jumna; and the late Wm. Blunt is now the Megna.

DR. DRUMMOND.—Dr. Drummond of H. M.'s ship Jupiter has been appointed Surgeon to the Governor-General. Dr. Drummond was surgeon of the Curaçoa, and in that capacity gave as much satisfaction to Lord and Lady William Bentinck as he appears to have done to Lord Auckland and family.

PETITION OF THE TRADE ASSOCIATION.—A petition from the Master, Wardens and members of the Trade Association, has been presented to the Governor-General in Council, to the same purport as that of the petition of the inhabitants at large, lately presented, asking for reform in the municipal government of the town.

ACCIDENT.—A coolie was killed in the ice house on the 26th April, by choke damp. One of the pits which was empty, had been kept closed for about a fortnight, and the wet tan and straw at the bottom had engendered the noxious vapour. Some repairs being necessary in the pit, a coolie was sent down to examine it, with a rope fastened round him, but being overpowered by the foul air, he fainted and fell off the ladder and was immediately pulled up. While the individuals in the ice house were endeavouring to restore him, another coolie, thinking the first individual was shamming, unperceived attempted to descend, when he too became infected by the gas and fell to the bottom. After several ineffectual attempts, he was, after the lapse of two hours, fished up with a boat-hook, but every attempt to restore animation proved abortive.

HOOGHLY COLLEGE.—The students of the Hooghly College were examined on the 8th April, in Geometry, Algebra, History, Logic, &c. and the vast improvement they developed reflected the greatest credit on their teachers, and particularly Syud Uckbur Ally Khan, Mootoollee, to whose unremitting endeavours the institution owes its rise and progress.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, with his accustomed liberality, has presented the New Medical College with the sum of two thousand rupees yearly, for three successive years, to be laid out in prizes for those medical students who may acquit themselves with the greatest credit. The officers of the College, propose to divide the sum into money prizes, instead of laying it out in medals, books, &c.

THE BOMBAY DAK.—The Englishman states, that the recent improvement in the rate of travelling of the Bombay dak, is to be ascribed to the good management of Mr. Babington, who has the contract for the line of road between some place near Midnapore and Raypore, and employs a mounted dak.

THE MUMBAI MAGAZINE.—The Monthly Magazine of this name, has since the 19th April, been changed to a weekly Literary and Political Journal.

MR. ROOS.—A salute from the batteries of the fort on the 21st April, proclaimed the arrival of the Hon'ble Mr. Roos from Agra, to resume his seat as first Member of Council.

NEW BAZAAR.—A commodious and well arranged bazaar is in course of formation at Howrah, where fish, flesh, vegetables and other supplies will be procurable at the same rates as in Calcutta.

THE FRONAUT.—Mr. Robertson will not again exhibit in Calcutta. He has taken his departure for Lucknow from whence he has received tempting offers. He travels by boat, with all his balloon apparatus.

PETITION FOR TRIAL BY JURY, &c.—The Deputation, with the petition relative to trial by jury in civil cases, quarter sessions and extension of the limits of Calcutta, waited on the Governor-General on the 22d April. His Lordship received them alone, with much affability, and promised that the matters of which the petition treated, should have the attention of the Council Board.

JURY LISTS.—The jury lists are undergoing a revision by the Clerk of the Crown, and the Trade Association have been called upon, and have given their valuable assistance to that officer. The gentlemen of the press, who have hitherto been exempted from serving on the Jury, are to be entered on the list.

CONSUL OR ASSISTANT RESIDENT AT RANGOON.—The Chamber of Commerce lately made a representation to Government on the precarious position of the British trade at Rangoon, soliciting the appointment of a Consul or Assistant Resident at Rangoon with Consular powers. The proposition was favorably received, and a reference has been made to the Resident at Ava to ascertain if any objection, will be raised to such an appointment.

MUFUSSIL.

AGRA.—The prosecution of the Delhi Gazette for publishing a libel against the solvency of the Agra Bank, has been compromised by the payment of the sum of five hundred rupees by that paper, to be appropriated to the purposes of native education. The Agra Bank is said to be going on in a most flourishing manner.

Fever prevails to a great extent in the city and suburbs, and is more virulent than has been known for some years.

A real mahseer has been caught in the Jumna, just above the bridge of boats, weighing 26 lbs.

On the 26th March a Mussulman woman was hung for poisoning her husband.

A Hindu woman was recently supposed to have died, and was therefore taken and laid on the funeral pile, but in the process of cremation she indicated signs of existence and ultimately entirely revived and still continues to live.

The Sir Charles Metcalfe proceeded up the Jumna as far as the entrance of the Chumbul; but in consequence of the shallowness of the stream and the shifting sands, she was constrained to return, and was on the 25th March off Sherghurh in the Cawnpore district.

MYNPOOREE.—It is stated that Government demanded of Mr. Boulderson to state if this station could be dispensed with, and that the reply of the Commissioner was that if it were abolished the country would be overrun with thieves.

CANNPORE.—Colonel Which has proceeded to Calcutta to become the Bengal Member of the Ordnance Board, about to be composed from officers of Artillery for each Presidency.

CANNPORE.—Two officers of the Lancers, it is reported, have been placed under arrest for forgetting themselves in the excitement of an argument.

INSURRECTION.—Serious disturbances have broken out at a place called Ballywalla, a part of the lapsed Jeend territory, one of the protected Sheik states, which lately fell into the possession of the British in consequence of the death of the Rajah without heirs. The people had been used to act as nearly they wished under the sway of their late ruler, and they evinced their aversion to a more regular government by attacking Mr. Edgeworth, assistant to the Political Agent at Ambalah, who had been deputed to arrange the territory; pillaging his tents and killing some of his people. A force consisting of a troop of Horse Artillery, a company of Foot Artillery and a small battering train; a squadron of Cavalry, Skinner's Horse and three regiments of Native Infantry, has been ordered to assemble in the Sirhind Division, to chastise the insurgents. Col. Hamilton will command the force.

Accounts subsequently received state, that the rebels in the lapsed Jeend territory have submitted, on finding that the authorities were promptly preparing to put them down. The assembly of troops in the Sirhind Division has therefore been countermanded by General Duncan. Subsequent letters, however, intimate, that although the force required from General Duncan has been countermanded, the disturbances were far from being terminated. Troops had been sent from Ludhiana to chastise them.

The independent Seik Chieftains have taken alarm, at the assumption of Jheend by our Government. Report says, that a compact has been formed amongst them,—the object of which is to defeat the views of Government by adopting heirs where none exist. The Kythul Rajah who is dying, has been urged to appoint a successor immediately; otherwise, his territory, like that of Jheend, will be seized upon by the Company.

DELHI.—One of the Banking Firms of Delhi, has received a letter from Calcutta, stating that arrangements are in contemplation for establishing a Board of Revenue, with judicial powers, at Delhi, as before.

Brigadier Browne, it is stated, has objected to act in the matter of her late Highness the Begum Sumbree's will, from a fear of the consequences and annoyances of the law. The fortunate heir of the Begum, it is said, will receive no less a sum than sixty lakhs of rupees in houses and jewels, exclusive of the thirty lakhs invested in Company's paper.

Captain Wilson, the late Deputy Pay-master of Agra, is to succeed Major Denbey, as Commandant of the Delhi Palace Guards.

A woman was recently murdered in the Palace by a Salateen, who has effected his escape. Jealousy is said to have induced the man to perpetrate the deed. Active measures have been taken for the apprehension of the royal assassin. All the Native Chieftains have been written to, to lend their aid in the search.

A report prevails in the city, that Runjeet Singh is dead, and that an express from one of our political authorities to the address of the lieutenant Governor's agent passed through Delhi on the 21st ultimo.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta, with the Rev. Mr. Estlin, arrived at Delhi on the 26th March and left again for Meerut on the 28th.

A Jemadar newly promoted was murdered in the sepoy lines on the 25th February. He was waylaid and cut down close to his own quarters, and the murderers, two in number, effected their escape after the perpetration of the deed, leaving their dead victim upon the spot. A tulwar sheath was found resting against the wall of the Jemadar's house, behind which the murderers had evidently taken their station to watch his egress. Many sepoys have been placed in custody, and very little doubt is entertained of all the parties implicated in the foul crime being detected.

A few days after the murder was committed, a fakeer made an ineffectual attempt to get the men, who are confined on suspicion, released by inducing a sepoy to declare that he committed the crime, and that no one else was implicated; the fakeer also offered to point out the spot where the instrument of murder was hid, but notwithstanding his assurance, no tulwar was forthcoming. On enquiry it was found that the sepoy was entirely guiltless, although he insisted upon pleading guilty. It appears that he had been cajoled, by the fakeer, into a belief that he would go direct to Heaven if he sacrificed himself to save those who were in confinement one of whom is the Subadar Major of the Corps; the man's innocence, however, has been put beyond a doubt by five men swearing an alibi.

Seven brass cannon and 3,307 stand of arms, lately in use with the Begum Sombre's troops, have been deposited in the Delhi Magazine.

The late Nuwab Shumshodeen's property is about to be sold on account of his creditors and relations.

A woman in the suburbs of the city, having quarreled with her husband, threw herself into a well and was drowned.

A fire broke out recently in the city at night, and three men were severely burnt, one of whom has since died and the other two are not expected to live.

It is said that the Court-martial for the trial of Col. Dundas, has terminated its proceedings, and that the Col. has made a very able and satisfactory defence.

Shumshodeen Khan's relations have refused to take any part in the sale of his property; but are willing that Mr. Banness, a merchant, shall have the disposal of it. About five hundred horses will be put up for sale.

The opium and grain crops this season is said to have a very favorable appearance.

A Punjabee has been detected in an attempt to smuggle some girls into the Great Moghul's palace, with a view to sell them into slavery.

Cornet Robinson, assistant to the General Superintendent of Thuggee, has been directed to proceed to Hansi, and enrol men of the late Begum Sombre's Corps, for the service of that department.

SIMLAH.—The loss of Major Kennedy is much felt in Simlah society, which he promoted in a very liberal manner. The Zemindars and ryots of Simlah are said to be dissatisfied with our system of rule.

MONGHYR.—Four boats laden with goods belonging to a trader proceeding to Cawnpore, were wrecked on the 10th April, between Bhaugulpore and Monghyr. The articles on board were insured for about twenty thousand rupees.

MUOW.—The force lately sent from this station to quiet some insurrectionary Arabs or Bheel, was engaged in a slight skirmish on the 21st March. A small reconnoitering party consisting of three officers, twenty troopers and a dozen sepoys, had pushed forward towards one of the mountain passes, which they found beset by a considerable body of Bheels, headed by a Mussulman named Ahmud a Mookhautee, who commenced an attack on them. An express was immediately sent to the main body of the English, a couple of kos in the rear, for assistance, which however did not arrive until the Bheel leader had been killed; an event, which was followed by the flight of his party. Two sepoy, two syces and three horses were killed on the side of the British, and one sepoy wounded.

MHOW.—Letters from Mhow of the 26th March mention, that Col. Holbrow's detachment was still actively engaged in the pursuit of the two or three Bheel Chief, who had aided and abetted the disturbers of the peace in the Jubboah Rajah's country.

TIRHOOT.—Letters from Tirhoot state, that the district has been visited by a gale from the westward, followed by hot winds and hot weather.

PURNEAH.—Advices from Purneah, speak in favorable terms of the prospects of the planters, as far as they yet may be judged.

GOORGHOOH.—At the last fair held at Goorghoorn, within the last month, although a greater concourse of people were assembled than usual, and although a few sowars and burkundauzes only were employed, yet, not a single crime was committed, owing to the judicious arrangements of Mr. Charles Gubbins.

MEERUT.—The band of the late Begum Sombre has been entertained for Maharajah Runjeet Singh, and proceeds to Lahore under charge of Mr. Perkins the Band Master.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta arrived at Meerut on the 29th March, and was expected to remain in the station for about ten days.

MEWAT.—The mortality produced by fever in Mewat this year, has been unusually great, nearly ten per cent. of the population having been carried off by it.

LOODIAHNAH.—The sepoys confined on suspicion of being implicated in the late robbery here, have been liberated by the Brigadier who, to facilitate the discovery of the guilty parties, has signified his intention of refusing the annual leave to the sepoys of the Regiment, which supplied the guard over the Treasury when the robbery was committed.

COL. FAITHFUL.—It is stated that Col. Faithful has determined to memorialize the Court of Directors on the subject of his recent supercession by Col. Becher.

MOORSAN.—The inhabitants of Moorsun have been thrown into great consternation by the arrival of hitherto thug-approvers, who have gone there for the purpose of identifying their former associates. The reason of their fright is, that thug-approvers are known often to attach blame to innocent persons, with a view to extort money from them.

ALLAHABAD.—Sir Charles Metcalfe arrived at Allahabad on the 22nd April, under the salute due to his rank.

The Baiza Baie and her followers have by the Lieutenant-Governor been declared amenable to the ordinary civil and criminal courts in these provinces.

After a long contest of about thirty years, the Durghah of Sultan Soolymaan, has been awarded to a faqueer.

Some fresh instances of the corruption of the native Amlah are about to be exposed in the Court of Joudpore, in consequence of an urzi having been presented to the Judge by a prisoner in the debtors' jail.

An affray recently took place between the followers of the Rajah of Burhar, and those of the Zemindar of Uggoree, in which several of the latter were wounded. The defeated party applied to the Magistrate of Mirzapore for redress, who has, in expectation of resistance, proceeded with a party of fifty sepoy, commanded by two officers, to capture the offenders.

Two nephews of the King of Delhi have arrived at Allahabad.

It is reported that a dacoity has taken place at Ghoorawal. The attack was made upon the Treasury in charge of the Thuseeldar, and the Jemmadar, the Darogha and two chupprassees were wounded. The villagers collected to the rescue; but though they attacked and dispersed the dacoits, the latter got off with about two thousand rupees. Some of the dacoits are reported to have been apprehended and arrangements are making to secure the rest.

It has been decided that the Sudder Board of Revenue and Sudder Court, shall remain at Allahabad after the Lieutenant Governor and the other officers proceed to Agra.

The station of Allahabad is said to be overrun with wolves, and that many children have been carried off by them.

The situation of Post Master of Allahabad has been abolished.

A meeting of the uncovenanted was to have been held on the evening of the 23rd April, to consider the draft of a memorial to the Supreme Government, appealing from the decision of the Governor of Agra.

Mr. Woollaston arrived at Allahabad on the 22d April, on his way to Agra.

KUMAON.—Very unsettled weather has been experienced at Kumaon of late, and much rain has fallen. The new Commissioner, Col. Gowan, arrived at Almorah on the 6th April.

NATIVE STATES.

BIHARRIPORE.—Bulwant Singh has just recovered from a severe attack of illness, and in gratitude is about to visit the holy shrine of Buldeo at Muttra, and from thence he proceeds to bathe in the Ganges.

Orders have been issued by the Rajah to apprehend all refugees from Jeypore.

JYPORE.—It is said that the troops at Islampore had received instructions from Lieut.-Col. Alves to march on the 25th March to their respective cantonments. Sahewar is said to have been abandoned, and that Chumum Sing has been compelled to fly. The Jeypore forces had marched on a refractory mud fort belonging to Chyn Sing near Gohalla, but the result is not yet known.

Luchmun Singh has followed up his conquest of Sahwear, by investing Bodoulce, a small town, the inhabitants of which had afforded protection to Chumun Singh. The place was saved from plunder by the head man giving his promise to put Luchmun Singh in possession of Chumun within a month. The execution of Jota Ram, Hookum Chund, Futt-y Singh and the person who cut at Major Alves, was fixed for the eleventh April.

It is said that Government have called upon the Jeypore Government to pay up its arrears of tribute, which amount to 33 lakhs, and that the Rawul has declared his inability to meet the demand. A further period of three years will be granted, but interest will be charged, which will amount to about six lakhs more.

The Rawul Byree Saul, native reports say, in anticipation of the issue of the enquiry into Mr. Blake's murder, has written to Maun Sing of Joudpore and to the Boondie Rajah, demanding their assistance in the event of a war,—representing to them, that should Jeypore, the head of Rajwarrah fall, all the smaller States will be included in her ruin : and that these worthies have refused to join him—Maun Sing saying, that he has already felt the weight of the Sahib loge's displeasure, and will not again provoke it, and that, besides, experience has taught him that the Jeyporians, "ever fair and false," are not to be depended upon. The Boondie Rajah's reply, is equally biting—"one good turn deserves another—when I was in distress, ye refused to assist me, and now ye shall fight your own battles."

The native Ukhbars state, that Lieut.-Col. Alves is entirely influenced by Byree Saul, who has dissuaded him from instituting enquiry into the case of Roop B-darun, who has been in confinement since the death of the late Rajah, upon suspicion of having aided Jota Ram to poison him.

The Rance of Jeypore has issued an edict, prohibiting, upon pain of severe punishment, any of her subjects affording assistance or shelter to the refugee Chinun Singh.

CASHMERE.—Cashmere is once again blooming with vegetable beauty. The wise and conciliatory measures of Sirdar Mahun Sing, have restored confidence to the inhabitants, and those who had emigrated to escape famine and oppression, have returned to their homes and have resumed their usual avocations.

LUCKNOW.—An attempt at highway robbery was recently made in this country, but the party attacked resisted, and a conflict ensued, in which several lives were lost. Four of the assailed had just strength to reach the British territory and expire.

It is said that the King of Lucknow has sought an acknowledgment of his right to the title of King from his Majesty of Delhi; offering, as a return, to address him as "the King of Kings," to give him a yearly tribute of 5 lacks of rupees, handsome presents of horses, elephants, khiluts, &c. &c. &c., on the occasion of every festival, and to pay him respect as his Souverain; and that the great Moghul had refused compliance with his wishes.

Investigation is being prosecuted on the subject of the bribery and corruption of the late Resident at the Lucknow Court, Mr. Rickets. Nothing has further transpired.

CABUL.—Dost Mahumud Khan was, according to the latest intelligence, preparing for his expedition to the eastward, and as a preparatory step had sent forward a body of men under the command of a Mr. Campbell, intending to follow himself quickly. Runjeet Singh hearing of these movements, increased his own force in Peshawar.

Dost Mahumud Khan has also detected a younger brother in conveying to Runjeet Singh a couple of Peran horses, and in consequence imprisoned him. The brother was instigated to this proceeding by another brother, the deposed chief of Peshawar, who is endeavouring to conciliate the favour of Runjeet, by making whatever concession the treacherous Sikh exacts. The settlement of Peshawar is proceeding under the management of Mons. Ventura, who is introducing into it a mixed system of eastern despotism with western justice. Runjeet is at present at Mahadev, a small town to the S. E. of Lahore.

LAHORE.—Payund Khan, with his five hundred followers still continues to levy black mail in them in the vicinity of the Attock and baffles all the attempts of Sirdar Hurree Singh to overtake him.

Runjeet Singh, it is reported, has publicly adopted the son of Rajah Dhean Sing.

Mr. Harland has had a jagheer of 12,000 rupees per annum given to him for his services in the powder manufactory, but which is to be resumed whenever Runjeet Singh chooses.

The report of the Maharajah's death is totally unfounded. He has recently presented Sultan Mahomed Khan with a jagheer yielding three lakhs a year, upon the express condition that he will act against his brother Dost Mahomed, in the event of a collision, which may not be far distant. One of Sultan Mahomed's sons has been retained as a hostage for his father's good behaviour.

Runjeet Singh, at the date of the last advices, was about to proceed to Mooltan, from whence he will superintend the conquest of Shikarpore, a measure he has determined to carry into effect.

It is rumoured that Runjeet Singh is making grand preparations for the invasion of Cabool or Shikarpore, and that he has appealed to the British Government, on the part of one of his sudars, praying for the restoration of certain villages belonging to the sirdar, in the vicinity of Jeend, which the Company have seized.

It is also stated, that the Maharaja has ordered a new coin to be struck off, having on one side an effigy of himself, and on the other an image of the founder of his sect, Baba Nanik, and has issued a proclamation, that after a certain date, no other coin shall pass current through his territories.

ULWAR.—It is stated that the wish of the Rajah of Ulwar to adopt an heir, from the children of his caste, has been opposed by the British Government, who refuse to countenance such adoption.

INDORE.—Hurree Holkar is said to be making warlike preparations, and has drawn up his forces outside the walls of Indore.

PUTHIALEH.—There has been one of the usual disturbances between the Zemendars and Collectors in the District of Bahadur: to repress which the presence of troops became necessary. The Rajah lately held a meeting with some of the neighbouring chiefs to take counsel regarding the severe illness of Oudy Sing; at which, it is reported to have been agreed, to place the son of Busawee Singh in the Chieftainship of Kuhlul, otherwise, that the independent states would soon follow the example of Jeend and be seized by the English.

GOOMSUN.—It is stated that a field officer has been wounded in action at Goomsur, and that one or two others have died of fever. A detachment of Cavalry is said to be under orders to proceed to the seat of war. The climate is working its effects on the troops and fever is becoming very prevalent. About one thousand four hundred are reported to be laid up. The enemy still eluded our forces, and wear them out with harassing marches and scanty supply of food. Mr. Russel is indefatigable in his exertions. Lieutenant-Col. Murial, of the 8th Madras Infantry, as fallen a victim to the fever.

AURUNGBAD.—A Bheel leader named Sutoo, whose acts in this district conferred much notoriety on him, has been apprehended by a party of natives under the command of Moohumud Alley-Beg of the Nizam's service.

HEERAT.—The South Western Provinces of this country have lately been subjected to the inroads of the Oorbaks, who, after a hard struggle with the Moghuls and a most inclement winter, were driven back to their desert home.

MADRAS.

INTERFERENCE OF THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT.—There is a report that despatches have been received from the Home Authorities expressing their surprise that the Supreme Government of India should have interfered, on so many occasions, with the minor Presidencies; and intimating that, except in cases of peculiar importance, all the details of Government should be left to the respective Governors in Council.

BREAK-WATER.—The Fort St. George Gazette contains the report of the Break-water Committee for the month of March. The disbursements are Rs. 2496 15 5, which added to the expense incurred up to the 29th February, amounts to rupees 16,999 14 4.

The Break-water Committee are gradually progressing towards the accomplishment of the work they have undertaken; a great many huge masses of rock for the Break-water have been brought down the Adyar and deposited at its entrance, ready for embarkation. The Newaah has granted leave to the Committee, to use an extensive bed of granite on the left bank of the Adyar, a little below Marmalong Bridge.

THE GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERRY.—The Marquess De St. Simon, Governor of Pondicherry, arrived at Madras on the 1st April under a salute of nineteen guns.

SIR F. ADAM.—As on on dit of the day, it is reported that Sir Frederick Adam will leave the Hills for Bangalore some time in June next, where he will make a stay of some three months, and return to the presidency in October.

BOMBAY.

THE INDUS.—The Nerbudda, Lieut. Carless, returned to Bombay on the 3rd instant from the Indus, where she had been employed in surveying the river. It appears that the river contains much less water than was expected. Lieut. Wood, I. N., was left at Hyderabad, in order to note the rise and fall of the river during the monsoon.

THE HUGH LINDSAY.—The Hugh Lindsay sailed from Bombay for Suez on the 18th March with 2,955 letters on board. The following are said to be the arrangements which have been made for the conveyance of the overland packets for the period from 1st December last to the 1st June next:—The Shannon is expected to bring the packets of 1st January and 1st February, and to arrive there early in May. The Hugh Lindsay may be expected in all May, with the mails of 1st March and 1st April. The Chive may be expected to arrive about the middle of August, with the mails of 1st May and 1st of June.

HORRIBLE MURDERS.—Several native children have been suddenly missed at Amelnugur, and it is supposed that they have been murdered by the emissaries of a Rajpootnee of distinction residing a few days' march from the town, who being dangerously ill, has been persuaded by her medical advisers, that all endeavours to restore her would prove ineffectual, unless she consented to eat the hearts and livers of twenty young children, and which remedy she had in consequence determined to try. The body of one of the missing children, was found in a nullah, with the belly cut open, from which the heart and liver had been extracted. Two men have been imprisoned on suspicion of being connected with the murder.

A woman and a man, her paramour, of the Koonbee Vunjarree caste, were hanged on the 21st ultimo near the town jail of Poona, for having conspired and murdered the husband of the former. This is the first woman hung in Poona.

VILLAGE TELLATEFS.—The experiment which was tried some time since in the Conkan and Deccan, of investing the Deshmookhs and Deshpandys with a sort of superintendence over Jullatees and Shekh-dars, has succeeded remarkably well.

FIRE AT SURAT.—A fire broke out at Surat on the 6th March near Seyd Pooree, by which 300 houses were burned to ashes and property valued at 200,000 rupees destroyed.

APPREHENSION OF A GANG OF ROBBERS.—Twenty individuals of a gang of depredators, who had committed a gang robbery in the village of Warshana, in the Sub-Collectorate of Sholapoor, have been apprehended through the exertions of Lieut. F. Janvrim of H. M.'s 20th Regt., who arrived in the village the day after the robbery had been perpetrated.

CEYLON.

PEARL FISHERY.—The Pearl Fishery, carrying on at Aripo, is not likely to turn out as profitable to Government as the few previous ones; and this is principally owing to the absence of the Natarotayahs, the most wealthy class of Native Merchants. Two reasons are assigned for the unwillingness of these people to attend: one; the severe losses they experienced in their speculations at the last Fishery; the other, that one of their body, having committed an offence, received some punishment in consequence of which he lost caste: this has so highly outraged their feelings, that they have determined, by coalescing in the present manner, to be avenged on Government, for the insult offered to their degraded brother.

PENANG.

THE EX RAJAH OF KEDA.—The ex-Rajah of Keda has quitted Malacca, and was at Perak on the 5th March on his voyage to Delha, where he intends to reside permanently with his family and followers.

and the two children were drowned. The Malay man was picked up after being some time in the water.

SINGAPORE.

PIRACIES.—The pirates are waxing bolder daily in their depredations in the Straits. An attack was made on the 12th February on the brig Fatal Gunnie whilst on her way to Lookoot, a tin district a little to the northward of Malacca, by three prahus. After an action of about half an hour, the pirates gradually retired to a short distance and lay too for six other boats which were pulling up to their assistance. One of the seacunnies of the brig being killed by a ball while serving a gun, and the people on board fearful of the numbers now approaching, the vessel put back to Malacca with a favorable breeze, where she arrived on the 14th February.

A sampan pukat, with a crew of fifty men on board, was attacked in the Straits of Lambajin by four piratical prahus, and after a warm engagement, in which she lost five men and had nine wounded, and had killed about thirty of the pirates, the commander was obliged to run the pukat into a small river and beach her, as she was ready to sink. The crew soon erected a stockade for their defence, in which they were shortly attacked by the pirates who kept up the assault for about five hours and then retired. The pukat after remaining four days to repair damages, put to sea and arrived at Malacca in safety in five days.

A boat belonging to H. M.'s ship Rose was attacked near Penang by pirates, but she succeeded in capturing one of the corsairs after having one of her crew killed and several wounded.

His Majesty's Ship Wolf, was about to start from Penang in quest of a horde of pirates, who, it was reported, had established a depot on the Ding-Dings.

Several other native craft and fishing boats have been plundered by these ruthless corsairs and their crews barbarously butchered. The sanguinary depredations have all been committed within thirty miles to the eastward of Singapore. His Majesty's sloop of war Wolf and the schooner Zephyr, had come to an engagement with a fleet of pirates, but the result of the encounter was not known, as the junk which brought the intelligence of the conflict, came away when boats of the men-of-war were in pursuit of the pirates.

STEAMER JARDINE.—The Steamer Jardine has arrived at Singapore and been tendered to the Government.

THE SYLPH.—The Sylph hauled out from Sandy Point on the 24th March, to her anchorage in the roads all a tanto, and sailed for Calcutta on the 2nd April.

STEAMER JARDINE.—The merchants of Singapore contemplated to get up a Company to purchase the Jardine, Steamer, in shares of one hundred Spanish dollars each, to be employed as a regular trader between Singapore, Penang and Malacca.

MR. D. MACINTYRE.—Mr. Donald Macintyre, late assignee of the firm of Cruttenden and Co., died on board of the Lady Clifford on the 12th February, on the way to Singapore.

CONQUEST OF SUMATRA.—It is stated that the Dutch, undeterred by the severe castigations inflicted on them by the ourang padrees, still continue to cherish the hope of subjugating Sumatra to their rule. For this purpose they have collected about 2,000 of their climate-worn soldiers in Padang, and sent them up to Ayer Boongy.

VOLCANIC Eruption.—An eruption of Gunong Apie (one of the Banda isles) took place in October last, attended with a violent earthquake, which destroyed the barracks at Amboyna and caused the loss of a number of lives. The walls of the several forts on the island, have been much injured by the concussion, and great Banda, where the principal clove plantations are, has suffered considerably.

ENTREPOT FOR OPIUM.—The authorities at Macao have declared that port a place of entrepôt for opium, and also for foreign goods generally, except from places on this side the Cape of Good Hope. They are allowed to remain in entrepôt six months, after which, if not previously re-exported, they will be subject to the regulated duties. There is a deposit charge of 5 dollars per chest on opium, and one and a half per cent. on other goods,—besides fixed rates of godown rent. The edict is declared to be experimental, but to be in force not less than one year.

BURMAH.

Letters from Arracan state, that the province is still in a very disturbed state. Three companies of the 40th N. I. were at Akyab on the 8th ultimo, but owing to the nature of the country, they anticipated some trouble in restoring the district to order, even though the freebooter insurgents are few in number.

The rebels having succeeded in getting the hill tribes of Lymro to join them, made an attack on the old town of Arracan. They killed four or five individuals, wounded about as many, and burnt upwards of a hundred houses to the ground. They also succeeded in carrying away the arms from the thana, and rescuing a few prisoners. After this they attacked a large village called Raing-kiong, belonging to another hill tribe, where they killed upwards of twenty individuals, besides severely wounding many.

CHINA.

ATROCITIES COMMITTED NEAR THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

—Several vessels have lately been attacked near the Sandwich Islands and their crews murdered. The Awashouks, Captain Coffin, was attacked and her Captain, the first and second officers, and some of the seamen killed by the natives. The third mate managed to escape with the vessel. The schooner Honduras of Boston, Captain Scott, was attacked at Strong's Island, and Capt. Scott and thirteen of his men were killed. The mate with the help of a boy only, slipped the cable and escaped with the vessel to Ascension. The Captain of the Jonale, two Europeans and two Bengallees, were also murdered with an axe by the Serang of that vessel. The fellow was subsequently shot by the Supercargo after a hard struggle with the second mate.

CHANGE OF EDITOR.—The editorship of the Canton Press has changed hands.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kuhn's Monthly Price Current, April, 31, 1836.

In our last number we alluded to certain alterations, contemplated by this Government, regarding the Inland Transit and Town Duties; those measures have been finally determined upon, and promulgated for the information of the public.

The liberality of Government has been conspicuous on this occasion. The revenue derived from the Inland and Town duties, and now given up, amounted to about 13 Lacks, while, instead of levying imports upon the external commerce to nearly the same amount as was at first contemplated, they have been satisfied with drawing only one half of the revenue thus abandoned. The effect of these joint measures must be most beneficial to our trade with Great Britain, as the relief afforded to the dealers and consumers in this country, will enable them to pay, for the articles imported, prices more than equal, to cover the present duties, and, when in addition to the removal of the pecuniary grievances, we consider the cessation of the vexatious delays and fraud attendant upon the old system, there is every reason confidently to expect, a decided progressive increase of the local consumption.

With respect to our produce market, the state of comparative insensibility into which we have been thrown by the extraordinary scarcity of tonnage has not been relieved since our last publication; but, on the contrary, notwithstanding the general expectation, that the next arrivals must reduce existing rates, the few ships now loading, are obtaining rather more than formerly, £8 per 20 cwt, having been paid for saltpetre to London, 13 rupees per bale for cotton to China, and 3 rupees per bag of rice to Mauritius.

From the great increase of the production of grain and seed in this country and also the extension of the cotton cultivation, it is not likely that hereafter freights in this port will decline below the average of the last twelve months.

INDIGO.—The season may now be considered to be closed; there are some few parcels yet to arrive, about 400 mds. The stock comprises about 4000 mds. held by speculators; prices are nominal and nothing whatever is doing in the article. The prospects for the growing crop are generally unfavourable and certainly considerably worse than they were at this time last year, owing to the continuance of the dry weather. It is yet too early to form any correct calculation of the quantity that may be produced; the present appearances are however against an average crop, as the season is likely to be a very dry one.

OPIUM.—Notwithstanding the unfavourable accounts received from China, (and the advices from Bombay confirming the intelligence of an abundant crop of Malwa) the Opium

Sale of the 29th April, was well attended, and the prices have been driven up higher than could possibly have been expected. The principal buyers are native and other speculators. The greater part of the limited orders were of course rendered inexecutable.

The result of the sale is as follows :

	chests	highest	lowest	average
Behar... ..	2001	1.85	1.925	1861 14 9
Benares.....	1869	1.245	1.225	1227 9 9

RAW SILK.—The March band is now arriving, the produce is considered to be of a good quality and abundant ; our prices may be expected to improve, as the demand for the home markets is extremely active.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—It will be observed that our prices have improved, there are no stocks at present in existence, and shippers are generally obliged to execute their orders by making advances to agents in the manufacturing districts. The purchases of choppahs and bandanoes for the Americans have been very extensive during the last eleven months. The exports of corahs to Great Britain is about the same as last year, while the exports of choppahs and bandanoes have fallen off to a remarkable degree.

RAW COTTON.—The present crop is stated to be large, and our prices have consequently declined. The accounts from China are very discouraging, and it appears that from Madras and Bombay, the supplies will be unusually liberal. Our exports to Great Britain have very materially increased of late years ; shipments during the last eleven months having amounted to 38,289 bales, notwithstanding the scarcity of tonnage.

SALTPETRE.—The shipments to America have been on a very large scale, more than double of last year's, and nearly equal to the exports to Great Britain. The stock of fine and good quality in the market is very large and considerable, but the lower qualities are rather plentiful.

SUGAR.—The new sugar may be expected to arrive in quantity about the latter end of the next month ; in the Ghazepore districts the cane has been very unproductive, owing to the decay occasioned by the excessive rains ; the price of the jagry has in consequence risen about 30 per cent., and it is generally estimated that the crop of these parts (producing the sugar known under the denomination of Benares) will experience a falling off of about one-fourth. In the Burdwan district, the produce of which is not generally exported to Europe, the cane has thriven throughout and the crop is consequently abundant. The Americans have for the first time become purchasers of this article. Although there are many parcels of sugar in bands of the exporters, waiting for opportunities of shipments, the stock for sale in the bazaars is extremely reduced.

LAC.—Lac Dye.—Our prices have advanced. The demand for England has been steady, and our exports nearly equal to those of last year. The Americans have bought very freely, and their shipments have more than doubled the quantity taken by them last year.

Shell Lac.—Our prices remain stationary with a slight tendency to decline. The amount exported to England is rather in excess of last year, but, as in the case of lac dye, a remarkable increase is observable in our trade with the United States.

RICE.—The scarcity of tonnage already alluded to has occasioned a complete stagnation in this trade, with the exception of a few cargoes dispatched to Mauritius and to Bourbon ; to the latter place, our exports have been considerable.

WHEAT.—The new wheat is expected to arrive about the end of June ; the little of the old that now remains is nearly worthless from the attack of the weavils.

HIDES.—Shipments for England continue on a limited scale, owing to the scarcity of available tonnage. The Americans have purchased during the last eleven months 361,376 pieces, while the average of their shipments of the preceding three years, is only 231,372 pieces, showing an increase of more than the double. Prices remain as reported in our last.

LINSEED.—The last crop is now all arrived, the most part of which has been shipped to England, the remaining is in the hand of the persons engaged in the supply of the home markets, waiting for opportunities of shipping.

SPICES, DRUGS, &c.—There have been some transactions in regard to the articles under this head.

METALS.—Copper.—The state of our market although not active for the present, is however very satisfactory, and prices may be considered safe.

Spelter.—Our market continues calm owing to the declining consumption in the interior.

Lead.—The demand for the interior continues active and our prices are steady.

Iron.—With the exception of sheet iron, the supplies of which have diminished ; our imports this year have been increased nearly 150 per cent. The market has been however preserved from a more serious decline in prices by the extraordinary increase in the demand for the interior.

Steel and Tinplates.—Continue, as before, dull of sale.

Quicksilver.—Sustains its high price ; our stock being reduced to almost nothing.

TWIST.—Mule.—Our prices have not improved since our last, notwithstanding a tolerably brisk demand. The discouraging accounts from home, respecting the cotton market appear to induce importers to realize with all due expedition.

Red Twist.—Is declining ; the import of this year being rather too heavy for the market.

Orange Twist.—Prices are maintained notwithstanding the large supplies from England ; this firmness is entirely attributable to the considerable increase of our re-exports to Madras.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.—In plain cottons the amount of business done during the last month, is rather limited the warm weather has as usual restricted the sales of heavy goods ; on the other hand for Jaconets, book muslins, lappets and leucos the enquiry has been brisk. Printed goods of dark colours such as neutrals, &c. have also been neglected, but of Bengal stripes and single coloured chintz the purchasers have been willing to take freely at improved rates.

WOOLLENS.—Our market is extremely inactive. The demand is not likely to revive before the opening of the rivers in June or July.

THE PETITION AGAINST THE REPEAL, 53 Geo. III.

To the Right Honorable GEORGE LORD AUCKLAND,
G. C. B., Governor-General of India in Council.

The humble Memorial of the undersigned British-born inhabitants of the Province of Bengal in the East Indies.

MOST RESPECTFULLY SETS FORTH,—That your Memorialists are British-born subjects of his Majesty King William 4th, and as such are entitled as their birth-right, to the enjoyment of the protection of British laws and institutions in whatsoever part of the British territories they may be placed, in as far, and to as great an extent as is compatible with the nature and circumstances of the country in which they reside.

That recognizing this principle, the Legislature of Great Britain in the 53d year of King George 3d, passed an Act of Parliament, giving British born subjects resident in the interior of India, an appeal from the decisions of the Courts of Justice of this country to his Majesty's Supreme Courts established in the several Presidencies of Bengal, Madras and Bombay.

That your Memorialists are fully and deeply impressed with the importance and reasonableness of establishing throughout his Majesty's dominions in India, held in trust for his said Majesty by the Honorable East India Company, one uniform and single Code of Laws, embracing one universal and equal system of jurisprudence, and administrative justice, based upon sound and equitable principles, and to which, every well-disposed and well-informed British subject, wheresoever born, will yield ready and willing obedience; but that now the variety of confused codes and unsystematic judicatures subsisting throughout the interior of India, the united co-operation of much time, great labor and the constant exercise of the highest talent will be required, before the several codes of administrative justice, prevailing throughout India, can be shaped and framed into one uniform system, in any manner approximating to a perfect administrative code.

That the Mahomedan and Hindoo systems of jurisprudence, which are the present prevailing codes of law in the interior of India, are for the most part founded on principles utterly at variance with the principles of English law, and consequently utterly at variance with all that an Englishman has been taught to esteem just and right.

That not only in the estimation of British-born subjects, but in the opinion generally of well informed Natives of India themselves, the Courts of British judicature are far preferable in respect of the due administration of justice to the Courts of the country.

That in the latter Courts, among the subordinate officers thereunto attached, bribery and corruption prevail to an enormous extent; evils which your Memorialists venture to suggest, are impossible in a Court of British judicature.

That your Memorialists are led to believe from the provisions of the British Legislature touching the future administration of justice throughout India, that such a code of laws is now preparing by the Commissioners duly constituted for that purpose, as shall do away with the anomalies and contradictions, reconcile the discrepancies, conflicting codes, rules, and regulations, now subsisting throughout India, and in a word produce one uniform and equal system of jurisprudence and administrative justice to which British subjects, both Native and British-born, will yield ready and willing allegiance, and which they will hail with gratitude as the greatest blessing that can be conferred upon this country, and each and all of its inhabitants without discrimination of birth and country.

But that as in the nature of things, allowing the highest talent and the most unremitting and undivided labour and exertion to be devoted to this great object by his Majesty's Law Commission for the correction of the jurisprudence of India, many years must elapse before such code can be promulgated, your Memorialists humbly pray that until such time as such code shall be compiled, made known, and put in operation throughout India, your Memorialists and other British-born subjects resident in India, may still enjoy the right and privilege bestowed upon them by the British Legislature of appealing from the decisions of the Company's country Courts of justice to his Majesty's Supreme Courts of the several Presidencies of Bengal, Madras and Bombay, wherein British Laws are administered.

That your Memorialists, without presuming to question the general authority of the Legislative Council of India to make laws for the good government of the Indian territories, yet venture to suggest that as that authority is conveyed by Act of the British Legislature, it must be exercised strictly subordinate thereto, and conformably therewith; and consequently that the Legislative Council of India does not possess the power under the present Act of 3 and 4, of William 4, c. 85, of abolishing any Courts of Justice established by his Majesty's Charter without the previous sanction of the Honorable Court of Directors for the affairs of India, nor of abolishing a Court of Justice, established by Act of Parliament even with that sanction; the 46th clause of the 3 and 4, W. 4, c. 85, which gives implied authority to abolish Courts of Justice, with the sanction abovementioned, expressly limiting such power of abolition, to Courts of Justice established by his Majesty's Charter.

But the Courts of Appeal in cases of British born subjects from the Courts of Justice established in the interior of India, are Courts of Justice established by Act of Parliament.

Your Memorialists beg further to suggest, that as Englishmen, and as constituents of that representative form of Government under, and subordinate to which, the Government of India exists, your Memorialists cannot by any constitutional or reasonable construction of law, be deemed either foreigners, in the British territories of India or subjects of the Honorable Company.

That by the wise and considerate provisions of the Supreme Legislature of Great Britain, the due administration of justice is secured to the Mahomedan and the Hindoo according to the different codes they severally recognize, and your Memorialists venture to hope that if trial by Hindoo law be secured to the Hindoo, by the Mahomedan law to the Mussulman, your Memorialists are not asking too much if they require in their own case an appeal from Hindoo or Mussulman law, or the law of the Honorable Company's regulations to the laws of their country, a right already recognized and confirmed by Act of Parliament.

That by the notification of the Legislative Council of India, promulgated on the 1st February, 1836, it is signified that the 107 section of the Stat. 53, Geo. 3. c. 55, by which the privilege of appeal from decisions of the country Courts of India to his Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature is given to British subjects, shall be rescinded.

That the proposed rescission of 107 Sec. of the Stat. 53rd Geo. 3. c. 155, being made without any restriction or qualification whatever, it will necessarily follow, that suits or actions or criminal trials wherein British-born subjects are plaintiffs and defendants, will be tried by laws to which they are total strangers, that the whole proceedings will be in a language to them unknown, and but partially known to their Judges themselves, entailing, from the construction of the country Courts, the certain occurrence of enormous bribery, and the most corrupt proceedings, and exhibiting the unprecedented anomaly of an English Judge trying a suit in British territory, between English subjects, in a language unintelligible to the suitors, and but partially understood by the Judge; and such trial being decided by laws to which Englishmen are strangers; with appeal only to a higher Court of the same character.

Upon these grounds, therefore, your Memorialists humbly pray, that the Notification of the Government of India in its Legislative Department, of the 1st day of February, 1836, hereby referred to, be rescinded.

And your Memorialists, &c.

[REPLY TO THE ABOVE BY THE GOVERNMENT.]

TO MESSRS. T. E. M. TUNTON, SAMUEL SMITH, and other British Inhabitants of the Province of Bengal, in the East Indies.

Legislative.

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed to inform you that the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Council has attentively considered your Memorial against the repeal of section 10th, cap. 155 of the 53^d Geo. III., and in reply to communicate to you the following observations:—

2.—You state “that the proposed rescission of the 107th section of stat. 53, Geo. 3^d, cap. 155, being made without any restriction or qualification whatever, it will necessarily follow that suits or actions or criminal trials wherein British-born subjects are plaintiffs or defendants, will be tried by laws to which they are total strangers.”

3.—I am directed, however, to remind you in the first place, that neither the 107th section of the Charter Act of 1813, nor the draft now under the consideration of his Lordship in Council, has any reference whatever to criminal trials, both relating exclusively to civil suits; that in the second place the rescinding of the 107th clause of the Charter Act of 1813 cannot in any way affect the situation of any British-born subject who may be a plaintiff, as all the privileges which that clause gives to British-born subjects, are strictly confined to cases in which such subjects are defendants; and that in the third place the rescinding of that clause makes no change whatever in the law by which actions will be tried.

4.—Your argument appears to rest on the supposition that the Supreme Court, when sitting on appeals from the Mofussil, under the authority of the Charter Act of 1813, is at liberty to proceed on principles different from those to which the Mofussil Courts are bound to conform. You say, “that you are not asking too much if you require in your own case an appeal from Hindoo or Mahomedan law, or the law of the Honorable Company's Regulations, to the laws of your own country,” and you affirm that your right to such an appeal has already been recognized and confirmed by Act of Parliament.

5.—His Lordship in Council directs me to inform you, that you are mistaken in supposing that you ever possessed such an appeal. A judicial appeal is, by its own nature, an appeal, not from one law to another law, but from one tribunal to another tribunal.

6.—The Charter Act of 1813 gave indeed an appeal in certain cases from the Mofussil Courts to the Supreme Court; but it gave no appeal from the Mofussil law to the English law. In every case in which the Hindoo law, the Mahomedan law, or the law of the Company's Regulations is binding on the Mofussil Judge, the Hindoo law, the Mahomedan law, or the law of the Regulations is equally binding on the Supreme Court in its character of a Court of Appeal. The Charter Act of 1813 expressly provides that the Supreme Court, when engaged in trying Appeals from the Mofussil, shall be guided by the Rules of the Company's Courts. It provides that on such Appeals the Supreme Court shall have such powers as the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut would have had, and shall make rules of practice for the conduct of such Appeals “conforming in substance and effect as nearly as possible to the course of procedure in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.”

7.—You will therefore perceive that the question is not between one law and another, but merely between one tribunal and another; not between the law of England and the law of the Mofussil; but between the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Supreme Court, bound to act exactly as if it were the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

8.—His Lordship in Council is sensible that there are defects in the Indian systems of jurisprudence. He concurs with you in hoping that it will be in the power of the Government, aided by the Law Commission, to remove many of them: and he also thinks with you, that a considerable time must elapse before that great work can be brought to a completion. But until the existing laws shall be reformed, the Supreme Court of Appeal from the Mofussil is bound to act according to those laws.

9.—It appears from many passages in the memorial to be your opinion that the Act of Parliament of 1813, gave to British-born subjects an Appeal in all cases from the Company's Courts to the King's Courts; but you do not seem to have adverted to the important limitation by which that privilege is restricted. The Appeal to the Supreme Court was given to defendants who are British-born subjects only in cases in which a party who was not a British-born subject would have an appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. It was left to the Indian authorities to determine in what cases natives should have an Appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. It was consequently left to the Indian Authorities to determine in what cases British-born subjects should have an Appeal to the Supreme Court. Before the passing of the late Charter Act, the Government of every Presidency of India had the power of enlarging or narrowing the extent of that privilege. Nor was this power suffered to lie dormant. It was exercised, and exercised without calling forth a single complaint. By Regulation IV of 1827, of the Bengal Code, the Supreme Court was indirectly deprived of its Appellate Jurisdiction in a large class of cases in which British born subjects were concerned. His Lordship in Council is not aware that this Regulation which continued in force several years was productive of any evil, or that it gave rise to any murmurs. In fact it was adopted in compliance with the earnest prayer of a respectable body of English merchants and Indigo Planters settled in the Mofussil.

10.—The rescinding of the 107th clause of the Charter Act of 1813, will make no change in the rights of British subjects. Its effect will be merely this, that what has hitherto been done by the Supreme Court will be done by the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The substantive law remains the same. The law of procedure remains the same. The individual Judges only will be different.

11.—His Lordship in Council entertains the highest respect for the talents, learning, and integrity of the eminent persons who now preside in the Supreme Court. He is convinced that, since the institution of that body, there never was a time at which it might more safely have been entrusted with great powers and wide jurisdiction. But when His Lordship in Council looks back to the history of the last sixty years, he can find no reason to believe that the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are likely, on an average, to be less upright, less deligent, or less able than the judges of the Supreme Court. The judges of the Sudder Court are like the judges of the Supreme Court English gentlemen of liberal education. They are as free as even the Judges of the Supreme Court from any imputation of personal corruption, and they are selected by the Government from a body which abounds in men as honorable and as intelligent as ever were employed in the Service of any State.

12.—The Law according to which the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut will decide appeals from the Mofussil, will, as has already been said, be exactly the same law according to which the Supreme Court is now bound to decide them. In a great majority of cases the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut will probably be better acquainted with that law than the Judges of the Supreme Court can possibly be. Points may doubtless arise which cannot be properly decided without a knowledge of the English law: but it does not appear to his Lordship in Council that it will be more difficult for a Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on such an occasion to learn what the English law is, than it is for a judge of the Supreme Court to obtain information touching the Hindoo or Mahommedan law. As respects the mode of procedure, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut has a clear advantage over the Supreme Court. The Charter Act of 1813 directs the Supreme Court to conform on Appeals from the Mofussil to the practice of the Sudder—with that practice the Judges of the Sudder must necessarily be quite familiar, the Judges of the Supreme Court have to learn it.

13.—You state that venality prevails to a great extent in the Mofussil Courts, and that on this account an appeal to the Supreme Court is desirable. His Lordship in Council directs me to observe, that if this imputation be well grounded, it constitutes an additional reason for giving the Appellate Jurisdiction to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. That Court is generally composed of gentlemen who have themselves administered justice in the Mofussil, who know the forms which corruption ordinarily takes in this country, and who must necessarily be better acquainted with the abuses of the native courts than any man can possibly be whose life has been chiefly passed in England, and whose Indian experience is confined to Calcutta.

14.—On the whole, his Lordship in Council sees no reason to doubt the expediency of passing the law in question. The information which he has received from the other Presidencies induces him, indeed, to think that the extension of its provisions to the whole of the territories of British India is advisable, and he trusts that he may have succeeded in answering to your satisfaction the principal objections urged in your Memorial. Of his legal competency in this matter his Lordship in Council entertains no doubt, and he deems it altogether unnecessary on the present occasion to enter into any discussion of that topic.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

W. H. MACNAGHTEN,

Secy. to the Gov. of India.

Council Chamber, the 26th March, 1836.

[REPLY TO MR. MACNAGHTEN'S LETTER.]

To W. H. MACNAGHTEN, Esq.,

Secretary to the Government of India.

SIR,—The constant avocations in which most of us are engaged, and which engross nearly the whole of our time, with the necessity of consulting many who reside at a distance, must afford an apology to his Lordship the Governor-General in Council, for any seeming inattention, or any kind of disrespect, in not sending an earlier reply to your letter, dated the 28th of March last. We think it best to answer it paragraph by paragraph. The two first, indeed, require no answer.

As to the 3d, we are happy to find our alarm made us magnify the immediate danger, but when we reflect on the general nature of this proposed law, we cannot flatter ourselves that it is a long anticipation of it, and in the remainder of that paragraph we cannot acquiesce. We still think that wherever the proposed act shall extend, British-born subjects will, unless we wholly mistake the intentions of Government, be tried by laws to which they are as yet, happily, total strangers, and if not, they will be tried under laws to which the Judges who administer them are total strangers. We freely admit that such is partially the case under 53d Geo. 3, c. 155, but that partial sacrifice for the benefit of natives is rendered of less importance under an appeal to Judges who are acquainted with the laws to which British subjects are liable.

As to the latter part of par. 3, we were not aware that such was the opinion of his Lordship, namely, that all the privileges given by s. 107, of 55, Geo. 3d, are confined to defendants, though such certainly was the opinion formed by every Advocate-General down to 1827, or perhaps to the present time, they having uniformly held that s. 107 only applied to empower natives, for whose benefit it was passed, to bring actions against British subjects; but as recently we believe circulars have been issued from the Sudder to the Provincial Courts to allow of actions under that section being brought by one British subject against another, we were hardly prepared for the expression of his Lordship's opinion, as contained in that part of par. 3.

Par. 4.—His Lordship is right in the supposition that we rest our case on the ground that the Supreme Court, when sitting on appeals from the Mofussil, under the authority of the Charter Act of 1813, is at liberty to proceed on principles different from those to which the Mofussil Courts are bound to conform, so far that the Mofussil Courts are not bound to conform, except when British subjects are defendants, to British law, and in consequence are wholly ignorant of it: but in answer to par. 5, we respectfully say that we are not mistaken in supposing that we ever possessed such an appeal as we contend for, for as we fully admit that a judicial appeal is not from one law to another law, but from one tribunal to another tribunal, so we never contended, or could desire to contend, for any other appeal. We said we had, and of right ought to have, an appeal from one tribunal to another tribunal, each acting upon the same law. In this respect, without wasting more time on verbal criticism, which never dignifies a bad or upholds a good cause, we proceed to examine the remaining paragraphs of your letter.

•6.—Before his Lordship can tell us that wherever the Hindoo, the Mahommedan, and Company's Regulation law is binding on the Mofussil Judge, it is equally so on the Supreme Court sitting on appeal, it must be established that it is at all binding upon the Mofussil Judge. This we deny in toto. If it is, how did it become so? Not by act of Parliament. It is the right and privilege of British subjects in a conquered colony or province to carry with them their own laws till duly altered by competent authority. Nothing less than a proclamation of the Crown can deprive them of this their birth-right. If such a proclamation was ever issued, if such an act was ever passed, we beg to have it pointed out. That right and privilege they have always enjoyed in India, at least since the charter of Geo. 2, long before there was what is called a "Mofussil Court" in existence. The 53d, Geo. 3d, c. 155, s. 107, makes no alteration in this. It merely gave juaddiction to a Court which had it not before. It prescribed no new rule of law to be applied to persons not previously subject to it. On the contrary, though it gave the native a power to institute his suit in the district where the cause of action arose, if it became necessary to appeal to Calcutta, it sent the appellant to the Court at Calcutta most conversant with the law to which British subjects were amenable, to correct, if necessary, the errors of ignorance. As to the practice on the hearing of appeals, the amount and circumstances under which a cause should be appealable, it required the Supreme Court to conform and make rules as near as possible to the course of procedure in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The object of this, of course, was in matters of mere form, to prevent a native plaintiff from being embarrassed by the form and circumstances of appeal, but his Lordship will, at once, we trust, see the difference between an act that merely gives a jurisdiction which did not previously exist over defendants, and prescribes the mode and practice of procedure, and is silent as to the law, and one that lays down the law by which the courts shall be guided. The latter not having been done by 53d Geo. 3, c. 155, s. 107, the birth-right of Englishmen remains,—the state of British subjects in India was no otherwise altered by it, than to subject them in the first instance to a tribunal confessedly incompetent to determine on their rights in any but the simplest cases, subject to an appeal to one which was as confessedly competent in the most intricate. If then this made no alteration in the previous state of British subjects in India, we shall feel obliged to his Lordship to point out to us by what authority the Supreme Court "on such appeals were bound to act exactly as if it were the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut," as his Lordship is represented to think in the 7th par. of your letter, or that until the existing laws shall be reformed, the Supreme Court, on appeal from the Mofussils is bound to act according to the Mofussil laws, which we take to be the meaning of par. 8 of your letter.

9.—We do not stop to enquire whether the privilege of appeal has been or could be limited in the way pointed out in your 9th paragraph. It could be we should perhaps doubt the policy of even trusting to the protection which the rights and privileges of British subjects have generally received from a British Nobleman being usually appointed by the ministers of the Crown to act as Governor-General, in whom was vested at that time practically the sole power of legislation, but who possessed none as to legislating for British subjects, and who could hardly be supposed ready, without any motive, indirectly to limit the power of appealing which he could not either take away or transfer, even though the additional security of the Regulations being annually laid before Parliament was nothing, and we admit next to nothing. If the power did exist, it appears as his Lordship states, to have been exercised (indirectly however) in compliance with the earnest prayer of a respectable body of English merchants and indigo planters settled in the Mofussil. We are yet without the least information that such a prayer has occasioned the intended infliction upon us, nor what state necessity calls for this anticipation of the protracted labors of the Law Commission. It is, however, clear, that if regulation 4 of 1827 was productive of no evil, it was productive of no good, for without, as it appears, having given rise to a single murmur it has been repealed.

Those who know how in the year 1827 regulations were promulgated to the Indian public, would think little of one being passed which escaped general observation. But we insist nothing on this. Our case, if it be true, is stronger. We insist that to pass the proposed law is an exercise of power not yet vested in the Legislative Council, as well as an interference with the prerogative of the Crown and the Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, each by the late Indian act, beyond the Province of the Legislative Council, and a violation of the natural rights of British subjects, without any reason assigned!

10.—His Lordship will perceive that in our opinion the rescinding of 53, Geo. 3, c. 155, s. 107, will make a most important change in the rights of British subjects. We contend that by the existing law they are only liable to their own laws administered through Mofussil Judges, subject to the correction of the Supreme Court, and that by the proposed change, as avowed by his Lordship, they will be subject to a new law and a new tribunal.

11.—Whether the learned personages now filling the Supreme Court deserve all the eulogium which his Lordship, through you, has passed upon them, is not for us to determine; we are unwilling to incur the odium of presumption on the one hand, or to brave the charge of flattery to which our acquiescence might subject us on the other. We, however, would deprecate the idea of men being trusted with greater power or wider jurisdiction than the necessity of good government and the wants of the governed reasonably require. It is sufficient for us to say that we are contented with the manner in which the Supreme Court exercises the power and the jurisdiction with which it is now invested. At the same time it would to you, Sir, considering the service to which you belong, be a discourtesy to combat the truth of what his Lordship has commanded you to say of your service in general. It might be more. It might seem a want of that respect for yourself and your personal character and career, which is sincerely felt by us, and we doubt not by every individual who signed the memorial.

12.—Even if we admitted that the Mofussil law were that by which, as British subjects, we were to be judged, we should still give the preference to the King's Court. The objection of the Judges of the Court of Appeal not having been brought up to a knowledge of Hindoo law can hardly be urged in favour of those who have been brought up to no line of business or employment—who though to-day engaged in the Judicial Department were yesterday in the Political, previously in the Commercial, before that in the Salt, Opium or Customs, and perhaps originally in the Revenue or Accountant's Departments. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council had no professional instruction in Hindoo, or Mahomedan law, or the Company's regulations, and yet they are appointed to act as a Court of Appeal against the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, of the very Judges so eulogized by his Lordship. The Supreme Court has now been administering Hindoo and Mahomedan law to the whole of the Natives of India who carry on business in Calcutta for 62 years. Most of the important authorities upon Native law are now translated into our own language, and the Judges at least have the assistance of a bar whose duty and interest it is to make themselves acquainted with the law applicable to their native clients. On the other hand, from whom will the Sudder Court, on points of English law which his Lordship admits may arise, derive aid and information? The best which they can obtain must be from the Advocate-General. So that all such points will eventually be decided upon the opinion of an Advocate of a Court that the Act declares incompetent to decide upon the appeal in general.

13.—His Lordship seems to doubt the fact of venality existing in the Mofussil Courts. We have accused no Judges of those Courts of venality; but, if those about him have persuaded him that such does not exist among the Native Omlahs, and to an extent in many instances that few Judges who are themselves pure can imagine, we say that his Lordship has been deceived. We did not advance this upon vague report. Many of the memorialists have been frequent litigants in the Mofussil Courts, and speak from personal knowledge of the corruption of the Native Omlahs. Nor can we admit that a Mofussil Judge is the most likely to detect such corruption. The Judge would be the last to hear of the corruption of his Officers. It is not long ago that a highly esteemed Civil Servant was removed from his situation for the corruption of his Moonshee, which he was the last to suspect, or to believe, though it had long been notorious to every one in the neighbourhood, and was ultimately fully proved; indeed, it was admitted by the Civil Servant's best friends in the Government, that the Moonshee exercised a paramount and pernicious influence over him, and this gentleman, if we mistake not, for sometime filled a Judicial seat in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

But, Sir, it is well known to you, and can it be forgotten by us, who are not children in India, that personal corruption has been the cause of the removal from office of many Civil Servants even in the last ten or fifteen years. A gentleman, who for many years filled with the highest reputation the post of a Judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and who was afterwards a Member of Council, was not long since removed for real or suspected corruption, when at a distance from the capital, and in a political station. There is one amongst the Secretaries of Government who can, at least, upon this subject give his Lordship the necessary information. Has the retirement of a Resident at Lucknow, and the measures it gave rise to, been already forgotten? To these add, a head of the customs in Calcutta removed for corruption, a collector of Inland customs, also at Calcutta, a collector of Cawnpore, a judge of Purneah, a Magistrate of the 24-Pargunnahs, and many others not made equally public, all occurring since some of the memorialists have been in India, and it perhaps would hardly have excited his Lordship's surprise if with such instances before us as we have mentioned, we had ventured to dispute the propriety of an opinion, originally expressed by one of the Members of Council at a public dinner, which seems to make little or no distinction amongst the different members of the civil service, and does not even seem to admit the possibility of corruption in a body, which, highly ostensible in itself, has produced some, and not a few, specimens of conduct, which at least must detract something from the value of an opinion which we then thought and still think was as likely to have been formed in the drawing rooms of London as in the meridian of Bengal.

In venturing these remarks, we beg we may not be misunderstood. We neither intend to express, nor do we feel, that the character of corruption applies to the civil service in general, but we as unhesitatingly declare that it does apply generally and with few exceptions to the Native Omlahs—to which the mode of taking evidence in the native Courts, and the immense number of causes tried in many of them, greatly contribute. We readily and sincerely admit, the respectability, the intelligence and integrity of the civil service as a body. Many of them are amongst our most esteemed friends. But we do think that the nature of their original education, their continued change from one line of service to another, their total dependance upon Government, their general ignorance of the principles of law amongst civilized nations, and the habits of submission and flattery which they are accustomed to from the natives of India, are calculated to unfit them for the arduous duties of Judges over their fellow British-born subjects, educated and bred to the advantages of British-law and British freedom. When to this we add the consideration that many are placed in situations remote from the capital and from all controul of their superiors, of public opinion, or a public press, exposed to temptations to which many of their body have unhappily yielded, with no other protection to any of them than their natural born integrity, we cannot but feel unwilling to submit ourselves to such a tribunal, not from any opinion that the body from which they are chosen is corrupt, or that any individuals of that body who are known or suspected of being so will be placed in situations of responsibility, but because we think the tribunal worse than what we have at present, and that as others of the highest reputation for talents and integrity have ultimately been found underserving of confidence, we see no reason why we should be now exposed, pending the preparation of a code, without any efficient protection and without cause assigned to so insufficient and ill-constituted tribunals.

In conclusion we beg you will assure his Lordship how painfully we feel being placed even in an apparent position of hostility to him on his arrival in this country.

We would rather meet his Lordship with every expression of good will, and with every concession upon points not naturally considered of essential—of vital interest to British subjects. We were prepared to sacrifice our laws, if necessary (attached as we are to them) for the advantage of a well considered and digested code; but we are not willing to be the first and only of his Majesty's Eastern subjects disfranchised without a code. To his Lordship we look to avert the evil we deprecate, and we yet venture to hope that he will withdraw his approbation and sanction, from the proposed law. Firmly, but respectfully, we venture our opinion, that the Legislative Council in passing it will exceed their powers. But it is not upon this which we would chiefly wish to prevail with his Lordship, but upon the inexpediency of the measure at the present moment. If we cannot satisfy his Lordship upon either point, we must have recourse to the Home Authorities for the protection of the rights of British subjects.

Requesting you to lay this letter before his Lordship the Governor-General in Council, we have the honor to subscribe ourselves,

Your obedient servants,

(Signed) T. E. M. TURTON.

MEMORIAL.

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE LORD AUCKLAND, G. C. B.
Governor-General of India in Council.

The Memorial of the undersigned Inhabitants of Calcutta.

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH,—That on the 19th ultimo, a Memorial signed by nearly fifty respectable inhabitants of Calcutta was forwarded to your Lordship in Council, praying for certain explanation respecting the meaning of the proposed act for repealing the 107th Section, 53d Geo. 3d, Cap. 155.

That no answer has yet been returned to the Memorial and as the draft act is to be read a second time, and may be passed any day after the 8th of this month, your Memorialists are apprehensive that the answer of Government may not be received in sufficient time to enable the Inhabitants of Calcutta to assemble in public Meeting and address the Government on the consequences of the contemplated measure.

Your Memorialists, therefore, most respectfully pray that your Lordship in Council will be pleased either to return an answer to the former Memorial by a day sufficiently early to admit of a public Meeting; or, that on account of the shortness of the intervening period, the final consideration of the proposed Act may be further postponed for a reasonable time.

And your Memorialists will ever pray, &c.

[REPLY TO THE ABOVE]

To T. DICKENS AND R. H. COKERELL, Esqs., and other British born Inhabitants of India.

Legislative.

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your Memorial dated the 15th ultimo, and to inform you, that the Act respecting which you inquire, makes no alteration whatever in any part of the substantive law.

2. The Company's Courts are directed by the Regulations, to decide according to equity and good conscience, only in cases in which no other rules exist. The proposed Act repeals no existing rules. To whatever extent, therefore, the English law of inheritance, marriage, and succession is now in force with respect to British subjects residing in the Mofussil, to the same extent it will continue to be in force, after the passing of the proposed Act.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

W. H. MACNAUGHTEN, Secy. to the Govt. of India.
Council Chamber, the 2d May, 1836.—Hurkaru.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general Meeting was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 11th May, 1836.

Present,

THE HON. SIR E. RYAN, President, (in the Chair.)

General Sir H. Fane, G. C. B.; Col. Dunlop; Jas. Pattle, Esq.; Dr. Wallich, M. D.; Chas. Prinsep, Esq.; Wm. Storm, Esq.; John Allan, Esq.; Dr. Strong; Chas. Trebeck, Esq.; Dr. Marshman; Jas. Kyd, Esq.; Thos. Leach, Esq.; A. Grant, Esq.; and John Bell.

Visitors.

G. A. Prinsep, Esq.; and G. Hough, Esq.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen were ballotted for and duly elected Members, viz.

The Hon. Col. Rehling, Governor of Serampore; J. O. Veight, Esq.; R. N. Hamilton, Esq.; Major Smyth; E. A. Samuells, Esq.; Capt. J. Mathie, (re-elected); Lieut. T. Brodie; Jas. Crooke, Esq.

J. Mackay, Esq.; was elected an honorary Member.

Mr. Bell laid before the Members a few copies of Part 1. of 3d vol. of the Society's Transactions, that moment arrived from the press.

The Officiating Secretary submitted a memorandum, showing that the amount of Funds now invested in Government securities, and lodged in the Government Agency office, is Rs. 13,500.

Dr. Wallich here took an opportunity to advert to the circumstances, under which he had been induced to accept of the Secretaryship, on the resignation of Mr. Robinson, and with reference to the inconvenient distance of his residence, and the numerous other calls upon his time; he felt that he would be unequal to the task of resuming his labors, and requested that the Society would allow him to resign.

Dr. Wallich then proposed that Mr. Bell be requested to continue his services as Secretary—which motion being put from the chair, and seconded by His Excellency Sir H. Fane, was carried.

Mr. Bell stated his perfect readiness to accept of the Secretaryship.

Sir E. Ryan briefly stated the weighty obligations under which the Society stood to Dr. Wallich for his long, zealous, most active and truly valuable assistance, since he undertook the arduous duties of Secretary.

Resolved—That the warmest thanks of the Society be offered to Dr. Wallich, for his invaluable services as Secretary.

The Officiating Secretary submitted a list of the gentlemen to whom he had distributed grain and other seeds presented by Lord Auckland.

The following communications were read.

No. 1.—From the Right Honorable Lord Auckland, to the Officiating Secretary, bearing date the 14th April, acknowledging the receipt of the Society's letter of the 13th, and intimating His Lordship's ready acceptance of the title of patron to the Society.

No. 2.—From Capt. C. G. Dixon, Superintendent in Mhairwara, to the Officiating Secretary, dated the 5th April, requesting a small supply of Egyptian Cotton Seed, and mentioning having sown some Pernambuco Cotton and Madder Seed received from the Society.

No. 3.—From the same, dated the 15th April, intimating the total failure of the Pernambuco Cotton Seed, which, on being dug up, was found quite rotten, and desiring a small supply of fresh Upland Georgia, Sea Island, or Pernambuco Seed, independently of the Egyptian Seed, referred to in his first communication.

Capt. D. adds, "The noise in this country caused by our sinking so many wells, forming numerous tanks, and new villages, besides two new towns, has caused a marked sensation amongst our neighbours in Marwar and Meywar. Hundreds of cultivators, mahajuns, smaller buneahs and the various castes who accompany a crowd, are coming to settle in this district."

Mr. Bell had accordingly supplied Capt. Dixon's wants, by dispatching per dāk banghy, the Rio Cotton Seed presented to the Society by Lord Auckland, also some Egyptian Seed.

He had at the same time sent parcels of Medicinal and Kitchen Garden Seeds, part of these received from the Governor-General.

Memo.—It is much to be feared that the charges of banghy hire, falling so heavily on individuals, who have no other object in view than the improvement of the condition of the people and resources of the State, must materially impede agricultural advancement in India, and until this burthen is lightened or removed—the efforts of the Society to promote such objects, will remain exceedingly contrasted.

No. 4.—From John Vaupell, Esq., Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Bombay, to Mr. Bell, dated 5th March, advising the shipment of Egyptian-Cotton Seed and Otaheite Sugar Cane, per Lonach.

No. 5.—From the same to the same, dated 13th April, enclosing a highly interesting paper on the successful cultivation of the Otaheite cane throughout the several collectorates subject to Bombay.

The mode adopted at Bombay, resembles that observed in the West Indies, and is a decided improvement on the wretched system practised in Bengal. The consequence is, that the Bombay planter, derives, a first, and sometimes a second, ratoun crop, in addition to his first year's plant cane, without more labor than weeding and hoeing. The acclimated Otaheite cane, is described in the paper sent, to be three times the size of the common cane, therefore, the common cane of Bombay being about three times the size of the indigenous cane of Bengal, it follows that one Mauritius cane is nine times the size of our common sugar cane here.

This proportion is corroborated, by a statement of Mr. Derrinne, vide Akra report, page 18.

No. 6.—From Mr. J. W. Masters, dated Botanical Garden, 25th April, reporting that all the sugar cane slips (100 in no.) received per Lonach from Bombay, were found dead, excepting two.

Mr. Bell having found out the cause, had written for a further supply, which he had no doubt Mr. Vaupell, with his usual courtesy, will very soon dispatch for Calcutta.

No. 7.—From Dr. Stevenson, Secretary to the Agricultural Society at Lucknow, to the Officiating Secretary, dated 2nd May, acknowledging receipt of Mr. Bell's letter of 20th February last. Dr. Stevenson states, "the only good of any consequence that we have effected, is the introduction into Oude of the Otaheite sugar cane, which has been eagerly sought after, and is likely soon to be in general cultivation throughout the country."

No. 8.—From the Hon'ble W. H. L. Melville, to the Officiating Secretary, dated Moorshedabad, the 26th April, intimating his resignation of his seat in the Committee of Papers, in consequence of having quitted Calcutta, and expressing the deep interest he has always felt, and will continue to feel, in the proceedings of the Society. Mr. Melville very politely offered his services to the Society in any way they may be available. The best thanks of the Society were desired to be offered to the Hon'ble Mr. Melville for the interest he had taken in the labours of the Committee.

The President moved that Colonel Dunlop be requested to take Mr. Melville's seat; but Colonel D. was compelled to decline, as he expected to leave the presidency shortly.—W. Storm, Esq., was then solicited and accepted the office.

No. 9.—From Doctor Wallich to the Officiating Secretary, dated 10th May, presenting to the Society, in the name of Mr. C. Bruce of Seddeya, a manuscript work, entitled The Gentleman Farmer's Guide for Bengal and Assam, written by his brother, the late Major Robert Bruce, of the Mahratta Service.

The work contains a great deal of valuable information, in small compass, and will not be lost longer to the public.

Doctor Wallich bears testimony to the deep interest taken both by the late Major Bruce and his brother, who is now in charge of the tea nurseries in Assam.

"Few men alive are so well acquainted with that province and its vast resources as he is, and to him more praise and credit is due on account of the discovery of, and active enquires into, the growth of the tea plant in Assam than to any other individual. It was he, in fact, and his late brother who first brought the shrub to the notice of the late Mr. David Scott."

Dr. W. desires that Mr. Bruce may not be forgotten whenever the Society have any seeds for distribution.

No. 10.—From Major Honeywood to the Officiating Secretary, dated 25th April, acknowledging the receipt of sundry parcels, containing copies of the Society's transactions—for Societies and individuals in England and Scotland, which Major H. had very kindly offered to carry home, and forward to the respective addresses.

No. 11.—From James Kyd, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 10th May, enclosing two notes to his address for Mr. Glass of Dacca, on the subject of purchasing potatoes at the expense of the Society, to be forwarded to Mr. Inglis at Sylhet for distribution among the Cassyals, as an inducement for them to supply the Calcutta market, and drawing upon the Society for the amount of Mr. Glass's bill, viz., for sixty-seven maunds of potatoes, including all charges to Sylhet, sicca rupees two hundred.

The Officiating Secretary had accordingly paid the draft.

No. 12.—From Lieutenant Meik, dated Hazareebaugh, 23d April, acknowledging his election.

No. 13.—From C. K. Robison, Esq., to the Officiating Secretary, dated 4th May, enclosing two old letters relating to the Society.

No. 14.—From H. Piddington, Esq.; suggesting—submitted prior to last month's meeting, but not read for want of time—regarding the utility of addressing a circular of queries to all such gentlemen as might be supplied with seed.

Mr. Bell submitted two pots of Egyptian cotton plants, from seed sown on the 28th ultimo, to show that the parties to whom seed has been dispatched need be under no apprehension of its failing. He also laid before the meeting, four plants of Indian corn, two from seed received in a parcel from the Honorable Mr. Melville on his return from England, supposed to be "Cobbett's corn," and the other two from seed received from Mr. J. B. Jones of Jaunpore, the latter being gigantic in comparison with the former, which although perfect were complete miniatures.

Both were raised in the same bed, and planted at the same time.

A peculiar feature in the Jaunpore Plants, is that, they have only one ear each, and this runs through the whole of those in Mr. Bell's garden.

Samples of ramtoorye and flax from Mr. R. H. Matthew of Shahabad were submitted by John Allan, Esq.

With reference to the welcome intelligence conveyed for Dr. Stevenson's letter, (No. 7), the Officiating Secretary was directed to write to that gentleman and solicit a supply from which to form the nucleus for a Nursery in Calcutta, to supply applicants throughout Bengal.

The thanks of the Society were directed to be offered for all the foregoing communications.

JOHN BELL, Sec. Agt. and Hort. Society.

Town-Hall, Calcutta, 1th May, 1836.—Hurkaru.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

At a proceeding of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, on the 7th May, 1836.

W. Mackenzie, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon of the Madras Presidency, was proposed as a Member of the Society by Mr. Howitt, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read:—

From R. Phillipson, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, 19th Regiment N. I., requesting that his name might be withdrawn from the Society.

From J. Mout, Esq., Surgeon, H. M. 13th Dragoons, stating that several more cases of petulant deposit had occurred in his practice, the particulars of which he should have much pleasure in forwarding to the Society.

From C. Morehead, Esq., Secretary of the Medical and Physical Society of Bombay, forwarding a copy of the rules of that Society.

From Dr. Falconer of Saharunpore, stating that the Botanical Garden under his superintendence, of that station, presented many advantages for the cultivation of the plants brought out from Europe by the Right Honorable the Governor-General, and that he should be very happy to take charge of any of them, which might be spared from other stations. Several letters were likewise presented from various quarters in reply to the circular on the subject of a proposed journal, but they were not read as it was resolved that communications on that subject should be deferred until answers had been received from all the members applied to, when they could be classed together, and the votes taken at once.

The following communications were then presented:—

1.—A case of protracted ulcer, cured by two applications of galvanism, by R. Tytler, Esq., presented by the Medical Board.

The patient was a scabby who had suffered during several years from a scrophulous sinus in front of the trachea, which had defied every attempt at relief. Dr. Tytler twice applied the wire from the zinc extremity of a galvanic trough to the surface of the sore, and in seventeen days the man was discharged cured.

2.—A case of enormous liver abscess in a European successfully treated by J. Colquhoun, Esq., Assistant Surgeon 12th Regiment N. I., presented by Doctor Dempster, H. M. 49th Regiment.

3.—A letter from Doctor Wallich, forwarding some specimens of a poisonous root, which he had obtained in his late journey in Upper Assam.

Doctor W. states that this root is called bish or beesh by the Mishmees in Upper Assam. It is used by these people for poisoning arrows and spears. They employ the leaf in its fresh and dried state, simply beaten into a pulp with the acid juice of the athena; (dellenia speciosa,) of the dried root they select such as retain some degree of flexibility, looking upon the others which are hard as less efficacious.

Dr. W. says that it resembles the poisonous root of the aconitum ferox of Nepal, and he concludes that the Mishmee root is produced by the same species of plants, that it is indeed, perhaps, the same plants. It is brought down into Assam in baskets of various sizes, the larger of which contains 52 roots each, and it is sold at eight annas the basket. The Mishmees employ it indiscriminately for destroying both man and beast. Dr. Wallich states that he is not aware that this poison is mentioned by any other writer than Major Wilcox, who apparently alludes to it in his memoir in the 17th vol. of Asiatic Researches, p. 337, in speaking of the extract of some root with which the Mishmees poison their arrows.

Dr. W. then refers the Society to his work upon the Plantæ Asiaticæ, Rariores, vol. 1st, p. 35, for some account of the Himalaya poison (the aconitum ferox.)

The letter concludes by recommending an investigation of the chemical properties and physiological operations of the root which the writer presented.

It was forthwith resolved that a committee be appointed to carry Dr. W.'s proposition into effect. The members to be Drs. Wallich, O'Shaughnessy, Goodeve and Cantor.

Dr. Mout's paper on purulent discharges from the bladder and rectum in hepatic diseases, was then read and discussed.

The author commenced by remarking that purulent deposits have been known from very remote antiquity, instances having been mentioned by Galen, Scutetus, Paré and others, where the sudden disappearance of abscesses have been followed by evacuations of pus from the bladder and rectum. Purulent deposition, from these organs have always been attributed to the direct opening of the abscess either into the intestines, gall bladder, ureters, &c. but Mr. M.'s observations have induced him to believe that in many cases no such communication has occurred, these discharges being depositions or excretions in the focal or urinary passage. He proposed to illustrate this by cases bearing upon the point in question. That this occurrence in hepatic abscess should not have been recorded is no reason why it should not exist; indeed, in the present cases the observation was made accidentally. The author quotes the abscesses which form after fractures, amputations, wounds of the head, &c. as somewhat analogous, for he considers these to act as derivatives from the original seat of the disease, and he asks, why a similar event should not take place in hepatic abscess. He then adduces the known efforts of the system in relieving itself when any of its principal functions are impeded in their natural action as evidenced in the metastasis which take place in various diseases, and which however explained, must be allowed to exist. The author mentions also the existence of this in the veins of several people who have died of extensive abscesses as mentioned by Audral and Alison, and the case of hepatic abscess related by Mr. Twining where pus was found in the right ventricle of the heart. We may look therefore, he observes, to the vascular system as the probable cause of the removal and subsequent secretion of the matter in the cases which form the subject of his paper. The Doctor then gives thirteen cases of Europeans affected with liver abscesses in which pus was passed, by stool in 10, by urine in 11; by vomiting in one, by expectoration in 4; of these 7 died and the rest recovered; on dissection of those who died no trace of communication was discovered between the abscess and any of the outlets through which the matter had made its way; by analogy the author concludes that those who recovered were similar cases. In two instances the disease was complicated with diseased veins having the Pathognomic symptoms of berl beri. In almost all the above mentioned cases the discharge of pus afforded great relief to the hepatic disease—the swelling of the side diminished—and the patient was easier. In those which were cured the improvement produced by the discharges was permanent. It appeared almost critical. The discharges in several instances were simultaneous with the action of mercury; on the system Dr. M. remarks that although in many instances of dysentery and hepatitis there is found extensive disorganization notwithstanding the most free action of mercury, nevertheless he has observed the remission of acute disease is generally synchronous with pyrexia and the appearance of pus always tends to quiet the constitutional disturbance and alleviate urgent symptoms.

In an appendix the author remarks upon the distinction usually drawn between Dolens and Phlebitis—and observes that in the cases brought to his notice, the symptoms of both have been conjoined, whence he is led to believe them only varieties of the same affection both as to the violence and the order of vessels and tissues implicated, as well as some peculiarity of action in the vessels themselves as seen in the application of blisters where the discharge is generally watery and limpid, yet in some cases it becomes agelatinous mass. Dr. Monat in this part of his communication details the experiments made by Mr. Macgregor, of H. M. 89th Regt, upon the matter discharged in one of the cases related in the paper. These consisted of the usual processes with sulphuric nitric and muriatic acids. That gentleman admits the well-known uncertainty of the results which attended experiments of this nature and the impossibility of ascertaining exactly the distinction between pus and mucus, but that as far as he could judge the deposits submitted to his experiments undoubtedly were pus.

Dr. Macdonald observes, that in the course of the experiments which he made upon these reports, he observed, that the pus taken from the breast of a native woman six months pregnant, when dropped into several boiling solutions, coagulated in a solution of carbonate of potash and ammonia, and perfect coagulum was obtained, and in muriate of ammonia, a very consistent coagulum took place from very watery pus.

Some blood taken from the woman abovementioned presented upon the under side of the coagulum some discolored spots. These spots ran towards the centre of the clot. In the clot last obtained some of these spots became converted into an excavated scab, having the appearance of lymph or pus dried. The rounded part in both cases looked like tubercle or the masses described by Carswell as appearing in the blood in the spleen of tubercular subjects.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1836.

Present.—Sir Edward Ryan, (in the chair), C. B. Cameron, Esq., Jas. Prinsep, Esq., John Bell, Esq., D. Hare, Esq., Captain Pemberton, Dr. J. T. Pearson, Rev. Dr. Mill, A. Dobbs, Esq., J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., Ram Comul Sein, Dr. Evans, Wm. Martin, Esq., Dr. Corbyn, and J. Awdall, Esq.

Colonel Caulfield was ballotted for and declared duly elected.

Mr. B. W. G. Frith and Mr. Wm. Bruce were proposed as members, the former by Mr. James Prinsep, seconded by Mr. William Martin, the latter by Dr. Pearson, seconded by Ram Comul Sein.

The President read a letter from Lord Auckland, signifying his Lordship's willingness to become the Patron of the Society.

The year for which a Curator of the Museum of the Society was appointed on a salary having expired, and it appearing by the Report of the state of the Funds of the Society that the expense could no longer be borne without encroaching upon the vested funds of the institution, the question of the propriety of resorting to the capital or of adopting some other mode of meeting the expense, was brought upon the tapis. Two or three plans had suggested themselves to the Committee of papers who had been looking into the matter, and they had come to the determination of submitting either that voluntary and public contributions be invited to meet the charge,—or that an effort be made to secure the gratuitous services of a Curator,—or that the principal of the funds be broken in upon. It appeared from their statement, and from the Report of the Curator (Dr. J. T. Pearson) which was read to the meeting, that the museum had been very largely augmented during the past year in the department of Natural History—that great pains had been taken to preserve and classify many very rare and valuable specimens which had been presented—and that the number of the members of the Society had materially increased, owing, as there was reason to suppose, to the attention now paid to the museum.

After considerable discussion of the ways and means, and some remarks from different members upon the very great importance of keeping the museum in a state of efficiency, it was proposed by Captain Pemberton, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, that the salary of the Curator be continued for another year, and that if the current receipts should not meet the expense, the vested funds should be resorted to for that purpose. On the question being put to the vote, there were seven for, and four against, the proposition.

The Secretary then brought to the notice of the meeting the various papers and donations to the museum presented to the Society during the past month. Amongst the latter there was a large collection of stuffed birds and small animals from Mr. Robert Inglis of Canton. They had formed part of the Macao museum which had recently been broken up, and constituted a very important addition to the stores of the Asiatic Society.

Mr. William Carr presented the skull of a Chinese in a very perfect state of preservation.

Dr. Evans presented two alligators, stuffed and preserved by himself. The specimens, which were of two different species, furnished striking evidence of Dr. Evans's skill.

The Secretary laid before the Society a few specimens of Mr. B. Hodgson's "Illustrations of the Zoology of Nepal" now in course of preparation. The Society agreed to subscribe for two copies, and several members present put their names down for separate copies. The drawings are admirably executed and beautifully coloured. Every person who takes an interest in the Natural History of this country ought to endeavour to procure a copy.

No papers were read to the meeting, but several were laid before it and accepted. Amongst these were some curious details respecting the geology of Siam and countries to the eastward.—Englishman.

MAGISTERIAL BENCH.

A meeting of the magistrates in session took place on the 9th May, from which there have been results not otherwise than important. The discussion began by Mr. Justice O'Hanlon saying, that he had declined becoming a party to those papers and accounts, not because he was aware that there was anything wrong in them, but because he did not know that they were correct. He had called for documents in support of charges made against the police fund in these accounts, but he had not been able to procure them. He found a minute of Government fixing the rate of remuneration for the collection at 2½ per cent: in addition to this charge, he found in the collector's account, a charge of 1½ per cent. for the native collector, and a further monthly charge for writers in the collection department of 344 Rs. He was willing to admit that 2½ per cent. was not a sufficient remuneration for such a collection, nor was 4 per cent. too much; but he thought the charge of 344 Rs. per month, for establishment, was extra, and he knew not under what authority it was made. He found also a monthly charge of 430 Rs. and of 300 Rs. for assessors,—perhaps, something was done for these monthly salaries, but he knew not what it was. No doubt considerable trouble would attend the assessment, and it was important that men of integrity should be employed to make it; and the remuneration ought to be suitable; but he was not aware that this trouble occurred monthly. He found also a charge of 132 Rs. and of 100 Rs., where he understood were two persons employed to report as to untenanted premises. If the assessors were necessarily kept on a monthly salary, he knew no reason why it might not be made a part of their duty to report on unoccupied premises.

Mr. Justice Blacquié said it was highly important that persons of respectability should be employed in the assessment, and it could not be expected that they would report on untenanted houses.

Mr. O'Hanlon was understood to say that he was not aware that the one duty was less respectable than the other; he made these observations that they might be considered by his brother magistrates, and the subject be disposed of on a future day. There were three other subjects to which he wished to draw attention—the fees charged by constables on levying by distress the tax from tardy or unwilling payers. He had found these fees, in some cases which had come before him, enormous. As they now stood, they were totally unauthorised: they ought to be fixed at a moderate yet remunerating rate, for the constables had no salary. 2dly. He wished the time for objections to the rate of assessment to be at least two weeks instead of one: and, lastly, he wished the accounts to be published. The magistrates, were as to the funds, trustees for the public, and they ought to exhibit all documents necessary to show that they were faithful trustees.

Mr. Justice Macfarlan entirely concurred in the propriety of publishing the accounts.

Mr. Blacquié thought the publication of this account would lead to the necessity of publishing other accounts: that the more important accounts were those of the expenditure in which there was much to object to—frauds, embezzlements, and misapplications.

The other two magistrates said, that the necessity for further exposure of accounts as likely to result from the publication of this account, was a reason rather for the publication: every account should be accessible to all who wished to examine them.

The discussion ended in an order to the Clerk of the Peace to publish in the Gazette a copy of the Collector's account, an extension of the time for the receipt of objections to the assessments, and an order to Captain Birch, the Collector, to make a return of the cases in which the assessment was collected by constables, to enable the magistrates to fix the schedule of fees.

The sessions were adjourned to the 4th June.—Englishman.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

SATURDAY, 4TH JUNE.

The Justices of the Peace assembled this-day to receive petitions against the rate of assessment. There were present, the Chief Magistrate, Mr. Justice Blackiere, Mr. Justice McMahon, Mr. Justice Robison, Mr. Justice O'Hanlon, Mr. James Kyd, one of the Honorary Magistrates, Mr. James Young, the Clerk of the Peace, and the rest of the officers connected with the assessment.

The Chief Magistrate having been called to the chair, the following memorial was read by him :—

To the Worshipful His Majesty's Justices of the Peace in Quarter Sessions assembled.

The Memorial of the undersigned Householders, Agents of Householders, and occupiers of Houses.

Sheweth,—That your Memorialists have attentively considered the notice put forth in the public journals under the signature of the Clerk of the Peace requiring "all persons having objections to make" to the "present assessment" to present the same to your worships, on or before the 28th instant, and being assured that the present rate of assessment is either much too high for the purposes to which it is applied, or is injudiciously, if not extravagantly and carelessly distributed, they do hereby petition your worships to sanction such abatement as may appear, on rigid enquiry, to be feasible, or to nominate a committee from their own body to ascertain to what extent a reduction may be effected, or in what manner a better appropriation may be assigned.

Your Memorialists have examined the statement of receipts and disbursements lately published, and they cannot conceal their surprise that so large a sum as upwards of six thousand and six hundred rupees per quarter should be expended in the mere collection of an assessment which amounts in the aggregate to less than sixty thousand rupees. Upon enquiry, they are satisfied that one "Assessor and one Examiner of empty houses" would amply suffice for the labor required in that particular department of the collection, and they are equally convinced that the additional percentage to the responsible collector is, to a certain extent, a superfluous charge upon the accounts.

Your Memorialists are, moreover, assured that much laxity, at least, prevails in the department of "Examination of empty houses," and that much imposition is practised on the assessors by sundry owners and occupiers of houses, which a little extra vigilance would obviate, to the advantage of the general collection and the consequent release of your Memorialists from part of the present exorbitant tax. It is broadly asserted, and could, we understand, be established by the investigations of an active committee, that numerous houses are reported empty which, in point of fact are occupied :—that many, actually vacant when the examiner makes the enquiries, are tenanted immediately that their exemption from assessment has been admitted, and that many houses yield a much higher rent than the landlord or tenant (in probable collusion) is disposed to allow. These are circumstances, your Memorialists submit, which your worships may consider it your duty to thoroughly investigate. Your Memorialists, however, are not so anxious to obtain an abatement of the assessment upon their landed property as desirous of seeing the monies raised on account of the assessment applied to the greater advantage of the town of which they are inhabitants; but, while contemplating the state of the roads and the indifferent and partial manner in which they are watered; the inattention paid to the lighting the different streets, and the inefficient state of the town Police, they cannot approve of the continuance of an impost, which under existing circumstances is very exorbitant and certainly unnecessary.

• And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c. &c.

(And about 20 other native householders.)

Mr. McFarlan then said that the memorial, on its receipt, had been handed over to the division magistrates for their opinion; and the sentiments of those gentlemen were as follow :

With regard to the complaint of the imperfect and partial manner in which the streets are now watered and lighted, the division magistrates presume that the memorialists do not mean to insist on these, as they do not fall within the "watching, repairing and cleaning" of the streets, to which the Act of Parliament limits the application of the assessment, and the justices in sessions have therefore no power to expend the monies collected, under the Act, upon either of these objects. The division Magistrates confine their observations to the rate or amount of the assessment, the expense of levying it, and the disbursements of what remains, for the purposes of the act.

As to the rate of 5 per cent they assume that this is not too high, as it has never appeared to yield so large a sum as government expended on these three objects.

The next point is the expense of collection, and without entering into details, the magistrates think that it is enough for them to say, that for many years past, these have been specially ordered by government, in correspondence with the Chief Magistrate alone, and that the division magistrates have no permission to reduce them.

The last point is the expenditure of the assessment after it has been levied. For many years past the duty of all the magistrates, excepting the chief magistrate, has terminated with their meeting in sessions to render the collection of the assessment legal. The collector has been a person nominated by government, and who, so soon as he has made his collections, pays the amount into the government treasury, from whence it is drawn.

* I do not think the assessment too high, but I consider it injudiciously laid out.

† I consider the assessment too high.

‡ The nuisance complained of in this memorial is so universal and great that an immediate reform is loudly called for. The assessment is not only too high but is likewise injudiciously appropriated.

§ We have always been given to understand that between watering and repairing roads there is no intimate connection that the necessity for the one must greatly depend upon the extent of the other. Abundant watering is generally considered an effectual method of preserving the roads.—Ed.

not by the magistrates in sessions, but, from time to time, by the chief magistrate under the permission of government. Neither are the allowances of the collection, nor the salaries of the assessors or inspectors fixed by the magistrates in sessions, but by government, and their salary bills are all audited and passed by the civil auditor of government, in the same way as the salary bills of the magistrates themselves.

For many years past the magistrates, who are now called division magistrates, have been relieved from all duties of "repairing and cleaning" the streets, or conservation; and during the last six years, they have been further relieved from the duties of "watch and ward," the only remaining duties imposed upon them by the above named act of Parliament, and directed to confine their attention to the judicial business within their respective divisions.

Upon the whole, therefore, the division magistrates think it must be obvious to the memorialists that the magistrates can afford them no relief in their present application, and, that government must be appealed to before they can expect any.

"These," said Mr. McFarlan, "are the sentiments of the division magistrates, and I can only say that they embrace an accurate view of the state of matters as they now stand. As far as I am concerned, the most full and complete information will be afforded to all tax payers in regard to the manner in which the tax is received and disposed of."

"In regard to the specific charges of mismanagement in the assessment, the fullest inquiry will be made when charges are specifically preferred."

"The charges made on the assessment fund are closely confined to the items specified in the act of Parliament; it is deficient by about 70,000 Rs. every year. There may be different opinions on the strength of the collector's establishment; a well considered opinion from a committee of tax payers would pave the way for some deduction. Items which might be charged to the assessment are now thrown upon government."

Mr. McFarlan added that the honorary magistrates concur in the foregoing statements so far as they are informed.

Some conversation here ensued between the magistrates and Mr. Stocqueler in respect to this reply to the memorial. Mr. S. remarked that he thought it was very unsatisfactory. The whole responsibility of the collection and disposal of the assessment appeared to be most comfortably disposed of. Nobody seemed to know any thing about it—nobody would give an opinion about it, and the memorialists were, therefore, told to go up to government.

Under the circumstances Mr. S. perhaps was not sorry for this, as Lord Auckland had manifested the strongest disposition to support and sanction a system of local taxation and to give to the bearers of burdens the power of managing their own affairs. It was his (Mr. S.'s) intention to forward to the Fever Hospital committee the reply of the magistracy, as that Committee was now about to apply itself, with the assistance of other intelligent inhabitants, to a consideration of the best means of giving effect to Lord Auckland's suggestion. He (Mr. S.) therefore wished the magistracy to sign a paper to the effect of what the chief magistrate had stated to be their views.

The magistrates declined to do this. What Mr. Stocqueler had heard he might report.

Mr. S. then asked the bench if they would pass an order for the publication of the assessment accounts. The magistracy replied that it rested with the chief magistrate to do this.

Mr. Justice O'Hanlon begged to say for his own part he was as ignorant of the manner in which the assessment was collected and expended as any gentleman to whom he might be then speaking. But with regard to the memorial, he was very glad to hear that the inhabitants of Calcutta were taking an interest in a matter which so particularly concerned them; and he would take this opportunity of pressing on their attention an act passed during the reign of the late king, and to which indeed he might not be the less partial, because it was an offspring of his own. It was an act passed by the legislature for a particular part of Ireland where the value of daily labour was not less than, as he might call it, twelve annas; it assessed houses of the first description at five per cent., of the second at three and a half per cent., and of the third, at two and a half per cent. and this was found to be sufficient for the purpose. Here, however, where the assessment was five per cent. it was said to be insufficient; but without in the slightest degree imputing blame to the present management, he begged leave to say that he thought the rate, placed under the direction of those most interested in its economical expenditure, would be found sufficient for all purposes. The act to which he alluded had been enquired for by Lord William Bentinck a few days ago, when municipal matters were brought to his notice, but whether his lordship had thought this community not ripe for self-government, or whether he had considered the then existing state of things best adapted to the wants of the community, he (Mr. O'H.) did not know. However, there had since been a great improvement in the state of things in this town, and he did not suppose but that the inhabitants were capable of managing their own affairs, and that if they were placed in their own hands, the collection of the assessment and the expenditure of it would be conducted properly and effectually.

The Chief Magistrate said he also would be glad to see the inhabitants of Calcutta bestirring themselves in their own affairs. They should have his best assistance, and, with reference to the expenditure, he begged to say that the accounts were open for inspection as were the different items to enquiry.

Mr. Stocqueler, addressing himself to Mr. McFarlan, remarked that it was very true the accounts were open to the public—it was very true that certain sums were entered as paid on such an account and for such an object; but what the tax payers desired to know was whether such and such payments were necessary? and this could only be ascertained by a thorough investigation of the accounts.

The Chief Magistrate answered that he would readily assent to the publication of any thing, and every thing, if no expense were to ensue therefrom.

Mr. Stocqueler undertook to publish the accounts without charge, and Mr. T. R. Scott said he would do the same.

After a little more conversation, Mr. Justice Robison denied for himself having any power to interfere with the arrangement of the assessment or the charges for collecting it: he had once had that power, but it had been taken from him. If, however, he might be allowed to express an opinion, he thought the arrangement with government was "comfortable" that the public received two rupees worth of attention for every one rupee that they contributed. At the same time he did not wish it to be considered that he approved of the management of the assessment: that he could not do for he was entirely ignorant of it.

Mr. Blacquiere with reference to what had fallen from Mr. Robison denied that the power belonging to the magistrates in regard to the assessment had been taken from them. He wished to know where any evidence of the withdrawal was to be found.

Hereupon a brochure was produced, which turned out to be a "Report of the select committee appointed by government in 1829 to enquire into the state of the police of Calcutta;" and appended to it, in MSS was a resolution of government regarding the future management of the assessment. Mr. Justice Robison read from this latter document in order to establish the fact of the magistrates relief from responsibility. It was the opinion of Messrs. Blacquiere and O'Hanlon, however, that the case of "relief" was not made out. Much discussion ensued, but as it was not very relevant to the matter in hand, the memorialists retired, intimating their intention of referring the whole matter to the government through the committee adverted to above.—Englishman.

THE CURRENCY—WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

RESOLUTIONS.

1. Resolved,—That in the opinion of this Meeting it is most desirable for the general convenience of commerce, throughout the Bengal Presidency, to establish, if possible, one currency, and one denomination of weights and measures.

2. Resolved,—With advertence to the 1st Resolution, that the new or Company's rupee, of which 106-10-8 are equal to sicca rupees 100, be universally adopted in all our commercial dealings, that currency being now established by law as the currency of India.

3. Resolved,—That the Indian maund or mun of 40 seers of 80 tolas, equal to 82½ avoirdupois weight,* being the weight established by Government, and approximating as it does so nearly to the present Calcutta bazar maund, be the standard employed in all our transactions.

4. Resolved,—That the imperial gallon be used as the standard of liquid measure.

5. Resolved,—That the English yard be substituted in long measure, for the Indian angle hut and greea and other Indian long measures.

6. Resolved,—That in lieu of the present Indian grain measure, namely, rek, palee, sale, aree, besee, kaliun &c., the Indian mun weight be substituted.

7. Resolved,—That all goods be bought and sold for cash.

8. Resolved,—That it being understood to be the intention of Government to fix the par exchange (or equivalent for Company's Rupees, in the currency of other countries) at 2s. British currency per Company's Rupee, this meeting do adopt the same, and declare this rate to be the Commercial par of Company's Rupees.

9. Resolved,—That in order to make the foregoing Resolutions as effective as possible, and to render them in fact operative as a bye-law, for the better regulation of trade and commerce, all persons interested and now present do affix their names to these Resolutions, and that they do lay on the table of the Exchange Rooms for further signatures for 15 days.

10. Resolved,—That copies of the above Resolutions in English, and in Bengalee and Hindoostanee, be published in the Presidency and Mofussil newspapers, and circulated in the Bazar, and in the great marts of Mirzapore, Futtyghur, Benares, &c. &c.

11. Resolved,—That the proceedings of this Meeting be submitted to Government, and that they be requested to take such measures as may seem to them best for producing the desired uniformity, and for enforcing the use of the new weights and currency as soon as sufficient time shall have elapsed for their full proclamation throughout the country.

12. Resolved,—That Government be solicited to direct that sets of standard weights be prepared at the Mint for sale at cost price, and that the public may be allowed to have their present weights adjusted at the Mint to correspond with the new Indian maund, which shall be returned to the parties within a fixed time.—Hurkaru.

SIXTH ANNUAL EXAMINATION AT THE ORIENTAL SEMINARY.

We had the gratification of attending the Sixth Annual Examination at the Oriental Seminary in Bow Bazar, on the 20th May, for a short time while Mr. Rushforth was examining the third class—and certainly never have witnessed any thing more creditable to those by whom the school is conducted. It is about eight years, we are informed, since this Seminary was established, which is now the joint property of Baboo Gour Mohun Auddy and Mr. E. I. Turnbull. The instruction given embraces every grade from the first rudiments of the English Language up to History, Algebra, Natural Philosophy, Geometry, Political Economy and English Composition. There are eleven classes in the school of every age, from five or six to that of manhood, the number of pupils being in all about 250, of whom there were 235 sitting out at the examination—all natives, and some of them richly and very tastefully attired. The answers given to the questions put in geography and history shewed that the lads were neither deficient in memory nor intelligence; but a better test of their being well taught was their manner of reading, which was really much better in respect to the pauses and emphasis, in verse as well as prose, than that of nineteen out of twenty educated Englishmen, and their pronunciation too was a very near approximation to that of persons bred up in England. Before we came away, two fine boys, each of eleven years, were brought forward to recite as Brutus and Cassius. Their appearance was sufficiently interesting. Our little Brutus, Isore Chundra Chunder, was singularly handsome and of a very elegant figure and address, richly attired in purple (in that respect more like a satrap of Persia than a Roman patriot); while the little Cassius, Bhubany-prasad Dutt, was a smaller delicate looking boy, but with a very intelligent countenance. The manner of both was exceedingly graceful, and, young as they were, they spoke as if they felt the sentiments they expressed, without the common defect of overdoing the part with too much action. It was without exception the prettiest recitation we yet witnessed among the many good things of this kind in Calcutta, and the room rung with plaudits when it was over. These two boys had been only three years in the school, and had a more perfect English accent than many of the older scholars.

The fête is to close with an exhibition of Fire-works in Wellington Square.—Calcutta Courier.

SUPREME COURT,—MAY 10, 1836.

THE MARTIN CASE.

JUDGMENT.

Mr. Justice MALKIN.—The first question to be considered in these cases, and it is one on which the Judges unfortunately are not agreed, is the propriety or impropriety of proceeding any further with the causes in their present condition, when they are alleged to have abated by the death of the executors of General Martin.

They were originally parties to the suits, but were discharged by the decree of 1822 from further liability in these proceedings: and though the decree of 1832 expressed that, notwithstanding that declaration they may be liable to be again called before the court, it does not say that they are so liable in these suits, and in fact the decree was made without them, and so made expressly on the ground that they were not wanted, that their presence would be unnecessary and useless. Indeed, the court could come to no other conclusion consistently with the principle which they adopted, and on which they varied the decree of 1831, namely, that they were bound by the decree of 1822; for that decree had discharged the executors.

Now, there is no dispute, but that we are bound by these decrees, that we cannot now reverse or vary them. If so, they have, as I read and understand them, found that the suit may go on without the parties in question: and if so, it cannot, of course, be necessary to revive the suit for the purpose of introducing unnecessary parties. From this conclusion, I believe there is no dissent, though Mr. Justice Grant puts a different construction on the decrees, and does not think they are to be treated as amounting to such a declaration as I consider them to import. I do not feel it necessary to enter into any minute discussion of the question: for it is allowed that the natural construction of those decrees is that which I put upon them; and I confess that it appears to me to be so strongly conveyed that I cannot feel them to admit of any other.

If this be the case, I am bound to proceed on the footing of those decrees, and to consider the parties unnecessary, unless for that, or for any other reason, I feel the decree to be one which I ought not to be concerned in carrying into effect. In such a case, which in my opinion can only be an extreme case, I admit that I am obliged to go forward; I cannot proceed except on the footing of the former decisions; but I may hold my law, and thus force the parties to get those former decisions corrected in a regular way, if I feel that there would be real mischief in allowing them to continue. But I ought to be perfectly satisfied of this before I depart from the usual course of adopting and acting on what has been already done.

Now, I believe that none of the Judges who have at least during any of the more recent history of these cases, been occupied upon them, have failed to see that they were involved in excessive difficulties, both with reference to the questions of substantial law on which they were to be decided, and to the mode of proceeding. With these difficulties fully before them, difficulties arising in some measure perhaps out of the earlier conduct of the causes, but probably insuperable at the time of any of the more recent proceedings, they adopted the course they took in 1822: so that we have either the opinion of the court at that time that the original declaration of the decree of 1822 was correct, or at all events that it was not so incorrect as to make them refuse to act upon it; whichever way it is to be understood, it is a great accumulation of authority in favor of now acting on it: an authority which I ought to see very clear ground for declining to follow. Now, no amount of mere irregularity even allowing it to exist, would in my mind furnish a sufficient reason for my so doing: if I saw that real injustice would be done, it would be a different question: but that is not contended with reference to the principal results of the case, and the points on which any dissatisfaction has been expressed are now said to be the subject of appeal, and will, therefore, be set right if they have been wrongly determined. It is, therefore, for the interest of all parties, and so indeed they all treat it, that the case should go forward: and I certainly do not feel it to be my duty in such a case to review all the proceedings which have taken place on mere technical and formal grounds. Without, therefore, minutely inquiring into the merits of these proceedings, I am convinced that it is for the interest of all parties that they should be upheld: and I feel myself at liberty, under these circumstances to submit to them as authority in this case, without considering whether authority be good or not. The whole circumstances are too peculiar to involve any danger of making a mischievous precedent: or probably any thing which would be treated in other cases as a precedent at all.

Proceeding then with the case, and proceeding on these principles, it is not necessary to discuss many of the points with respect to which further directions are to be given, and which are in substance merely the carrying into effect the provisions of the former decree, or the further postponement of such matters as are not yet ripe for decisions. But there is one open question, which involves considerations of very great importance, and appears, perhaps, to bear on others which it does not really and necessarily affect: and on which, therefore, especially with reference to former discussions, it is desirable that I should fully express my opinion. It will, of course, be understood that I refer to the question of the extent of lands in the Mofussil, on which the court was formerly divided in opinion.

I entirely concur then in the decision of the whole court on the last occasion, that the lands held by General Martin in Calcutta escheated to the Crown. It would hardly be necessary for me to state this, as on the principles I have explained, I should be bound in this cause by that decision, even if I did not fully agree in it: but I can more clearly explain my views on the question now before us, by stating that as my opinion, than by merely treating the point as one decided. The question in Calcutta seems to me a clear one, resting not only on the King's sovereignty, but the undoubted introduction of the general English laws by the different charters of justice. The King's sovereignty seems to me, I confess, just as clear and undisputed in the Mofussil as in Calcutta. I am fully aware of the arguments by which this conclusion was impugned on the former occasion; but I cannot myself feel any serious doubts that the view of the question which was taken by Mr. Justice Ryan was the only one that can be supported. Even the statute 53, Geo. 3, c. 155, sec. 95, which was relied on as the first promulgation of the sovereignty of the Crown in the Mofussil, is so far from bearing this character, that it declares it to be "undoubted;" and independently of this legislative declaration of a sovereignty to which it is impossible to assign any commencement after the introduction of the British power, the whole course of legislation for many years preceding seems to me equally conclusive on the subject. The King's writ runs over the whole of the country; the King's Judges administer justice in cases arising every where within it, though only to particular degrees of his subjects, and the same charter which empowered them to do it in some, could have been equally competent to empower them generally: it was just as complete an exercise of sovereignty as it would have been if unlimited in its operation the highest local authority of the country, the Governor-General himself, is a Parliament's officer: and his whole powers and privileges from the commencement have been derived from Acts of Parliament, and those acts, it is to be observed, not citing mediately through the East India Company, and binding them to assign certain functions and prescribe certain rules to their officers, but directly confirming the authority and determining the duties. The whole frame therefore, of India government, at least from 1773, has depended on Acts of Parliament directly operative on this country; and this direct operation cannot be supported in any way that I know, except it be derived out of the sovereignty of the Crown.

To this extent, therefore, I treat the question in Calcutta and in the Mofussil as identical; but in Calcutta there is the further fact of the introduction of English laws by the charters. In the Mofussil, on the other hand, it is still the great undetermined question, whether this law has been introduced at all, except with reference to British subjects in the sense of the term. On this question I do not wish unnecessarily to give an opinion: and I wish to be fully understood as intimating no inclination of opinion when I say, that when introduced or not, the question there stands on grounds quite different from those applying to Calcutta. The result may be the same: but the argument is different.

I do not, however, think it necessary to discuss this question on the present occasion. There is no doubt of the general rule that in the case of a conquered or ceded country, the laws of the country remain in force until by proper authority the conqueror has introduced others. The position may be liable to modifications to meet particular cases: and the case of the British possessions in India may or may not be one where the general rule does not fully apply. But assuming it to apply fully and completely, it must in all cases be taken, I apprehend, with a reservation of every thing necessary to secure the sovereignty of the Crown. The Crown in taking by conquest or by cession, except as far as the terms of a particular capitulation or treaty may affect the question, acquires the absolute and complete right of sovereignty, and every thing incidental thereto: it does not merely step into the place of the supreme authority previously existing, nor is it bound by the constitutional or other checks imposed on such authority. It would be idle to contend that on acquiring territory from a republic by conquest, the King of England becomes in such territory the elective, and probably temporary chief magistrate of a republic: or that if he found a co-ordinate legislative authority existing, he could only introduce a new form of government or of law through their instrumentality. Of none of these positions can there be any doubt since the great case of the island of Grenada, nor indeed I apprehend before it. That case indeed has been the subject of much discussion, but the only question has been as to the mode in which the sovereignty was to be exercised, whether by the King's proclamation, or by Act of Parliament, and whether the territory became strictly the territory of the Crown, or the territory of the state: there has been no doubt of the complete and absolute sovereignty of the conqueror, but only to whom that character was to be ascribed, or rather through what channel the sovereign was to exercise his power: for there is no doubt again. I conceive, that the sovereignty is in the Crown of England, whether it be to be exercised through the medium of Parliament or without it.

Now, one of the clearest incidents to this right of sovereignty seems to be that of preventing aliens from holding lands. The reason given in Blackstone's Commentaries 371, is conclusive on this head: "If an alien would acquire a personal property in lands, he must owe an allegiance, equally permanent with that property, to the King of England; which would probably be inconsistent with that which he owes to his own natural liege lord, besides, that thereby the nation might in time be subject to foreign influence, and feel many other inconveniences." It is to be observed that this reasoning is general, and independent of the particular law of England. It is independent also of any particular locality, though it refers in terms to the immediate realm of England, but the same mischief would alike apply to its colonies. If, however, authority is requisite on a matter where the reason of the case seems clear, it is to be found in abundance, in all the cases which have reason on the subject, and without entering into any deduction of authorities, where all authority is one way, I will merely refer to the opinion of Sir Fletcher Norton in 1764, 2, Chalm. 366, as conveying in the strongest terms the general result of all the cases, "that no aliens, except such as can claim the benefit of the definitive treaty, or being themselves within the sovereignty of his late majesty, are by law entitled to purchase lands for their own benefit and transmit them on others, either from the crown, or from private persons, in any of his Majesty's dominions in North America or the West Indies." The laws of these settlements were various; the opinion, therefore, general, for all must rest on the general ground of sovereignty, and not on the particular law of each settlement. There are abundance of other opinions to the same effect, in all of which the only question has been, who were aliens and who were subjects, not what the rights or disabilities of aliens were, which have been considered too clear for decision. But I know none in which the doctrine is more clearly or explicitly contained than in that which I have cited, and which I rather quote, because I think that Mr. Chalmers in his very valuable argument which follows it, and which support the same views, has not done justice to the distinctness and strength of Sir Fletcher Norton's opinion, when he says (ib. p. 388,) "the bill which he advised for quieting doubts was never passed, perhaps, never proposed as wiser men than Norton probably considered such advice as weak, the law being clear." I confess I cannot read Sir Fletcher Norton's opinion and recommendation as conveying any doubt as to the point of question; it is clear to me that the bill to be recommended was a bill for the benefit of aliens, who did not come within the protection of the treaty or statute referred to, supported entirely on grounds of justice or policy, and quite free from any consideration of existing doubts in law. It refers, as I understand it, entirely to aliens who had resorted or were about to resort to the settlements, after their acquisition by the crown of England.

Treating it then as clear, that it is inconsistent with the sovereignty of the crown that an alien should hold land in its dominions, it must follow that the crown must have the means of preventing him from doing so. The only remaining question on this part of the case, and I confess it is the only one which seems to me to have much of difficulty, is to ascertain how this prevention is to take place. The right to prevent depends on the sovereignty and is general: that the mode of preventing may depend upon particular law, and it is accordingly different under the civil law of England. This Blackstone says in the sentence immediately following the already-cited "wherefore" (that is by reason of inconsistency with the sovereignty) "by the civil law such contracts were also made void, but the prince had no such advantage of forfeiture thereby as with us in England."

It is difficult to conceive any manner in which the disability of an alien to hold lands could be enforced, except one of those mentioned in the above passage; the avoiding the contract for their purchase, or the declaring their forfeiture when purchased. Now, it seems to me impossible to hold that the contract is avoided by the sovereignty of the crown: to do so would be to introduce a material alteration in the law of contracts between parties, which I have already stated to remain unaffected by mere conquest, and an alteration going beyond the evil it seeks to remedy, for it acts on the land-holder as well as the purchaser; it forces him to retain his lands and return the purchase money instead of merely preventing the alien from holding. On the other hand, by holding the doctrine of forfeiture, by asserting that the alien can purchase only for the benefit of the crown, the remedy is confined to the evil. The conclusion might, perhaps, be sufficiently supported by treating the remedy as merely incidental to the right, by saying where the crown for the protection of its sovereignty had a right to prevent the holding of land by an alien, it must introduce, in the absence of others, its own means of prevention, and thus that independently of any general introduction of the English law, this particular head of it would be introduced. But there are other arguments on which, as it appears to me, the same conclusion may be satisfactorily sustained. If the contract is not to be declared void, there must be a declaration of forfeiture to secure the rights of the crown, and the only question is to whom that forfeiture is to accrue? Now the forfeiture must surely accrue to the party aggrieved by its cause: and a forfeiture by subtraction of allegiance, as in the case of alien tenure, must go to the crown from whom that allegiance is subtracted, just as a forfeiture by non-payment of the land revenue goes to the Company from whom the revenue is subtracted. The two cases seem exactly analogous, for according to the doctrine of Freeman v. Fairlie, the Company or the Government have only a power of seizure for the non-payment of a tribute, not a right to resume a possession originally vested in them for the non-payment of a rent, and in conformity with this distinction, the great question has always been, not whether the land belonged to the Government, who have been admitted to have only this tributary right and the powers incident to it, but whether it belonged to the zemindar or to the rent.

I treat the question, therefore, as clear of any conflict between rights of the King and of the Company. If any such conflict is ever likely to arise, it would probably be on a question by failure of heirs, on which I cannot form an opinion when I say it is intermediate between the two cases of alienage and non-payment. With respect to the present case of alienage, even if, as has been often contended, the Company by the acquisition of the Dewanny, acquired all the laws and rights of Government, they could only as British subjects, acquire them, as far as the rights of sovereignty were concerned, for the benefit of the Crown, and to the Crown their rights and powers would pass with all their incidents. The Company would retain the revenue, and the means of deriving it as their own; the Crown would take the sovereignty, and the means of rendering it available. If on the other hand, the Dewanny was a mere collectorate, the comparative rights of the Crown and Company would remain the same; those of the Crown indeed would no longer be denied through the Company, but this would be the only distinction. There might, indeed, in that case be a speculative and fanciful question between the rights of the King of England and of the Mogul sovereign: but that is not a question which could ever be entertained by a Court either under the King's charter, or the functionaries, acting under a Government erected by the authority of Parliament.

This question has been so fully discussed in the former decisions upon this case, that I have thought it desirable to express my opinion upon it; on the principle, however, already adopted, with respect to the land in Calcutta, the above will not ascertain any right of the Crown, in a cause where it has been avowed not to be fully represented, but will merely declare General Martin's incompetence to devise land which he was incapable of holding.

There remain the questions as to the allowance of interest or the sum appropriated to the building of Constantia house, and as to the application of the money intended for the void or impossible legacy in favor of prisoners at Lucknow:—

Or 1st. No reason for allowing interest, which might far exceed all that is necessary.

Or 2d. Lecke v. Robinson, and Skeysheer v. Northcote is conclusive to me, as to its falling into the residue.

Mr. JUSTICE GRANT.—Those who heard what fell from me when these causes were last before the court, will be prepared to expect that I should find difficulty in concurring in any order to be made in them in the state and condition in which they at present stand,—and that they must necessarily have received my best attention. I cannot agree that the question here is one of mere regularity or irregularity which might be waived by the consent or acquiescence of parties, or that it turns upon technicalities. It concerns most materially the essential principles of equity and justice. It is no light matter to subject this unfortunate estate to further proceedings at an enormous expense;—it is no light matter when I see the array of counsel at the bar before me, to permit these causes to proceed under circumstances wherein no object can be answered but to the costs to which it has been already subjected, when it is certain that no decree can be pronounced in these causes which will have any validity.

The learned Judge then gave a brief abstract of the proceedings in the causes from the commencement in 1816 to the 26th of January last, when they were set down for hearing. As this detail of the proceedings is embodied in the judgment of the Chief Justice, we have not thought it necessary to insert it here.

Mr. Justice Grant continued. When they came on, the Advocate-General, with whom was Mr. Cochrane, appeared for himself as I understood, as informant in the first cause (entered as third) and defendant in the third cause; Mr. Prinsep for Godinot, Mayor of Lyons, plaintiff in the second cause; Mr. Osborne and Mr. Grant for Christopher Martin and others plaintiffs in the third cause, and defendants in the fourth or cross cause brought by the executors against the plaintiff in the third cause. There was no appearance for the two executors, Palmer and Devens, sole defendants in the first and second causes, joint defendants with the Advocate-General in the third cause, and sole plaintiffs in the fourth or cross cause.

Mr. John Palmer being known to have died and to have been buried in Calcutta a few days before, and it being stated at the bar and by the officers of the court, that Deverine was believed to have gone to France out of the jurisdiction of the court, which is assumed to have been so on the 23d February, 1832, by the decretal order of that date, and that neither of them had appeared in these causes for many years. I confess being very much surprised at the course of proceeding proposed. I enquired of the Advocate-General whether he admitted that Palmer was dead, to which he answered that he did admit it. He nevertheless was prepared, as it seemed, to proceed on his information, and the learned counsel for such of the surviving parties as appeared, intimated no desire to stop the progress of a suit in which the two only defendants were, one of them dead and the other out of the reach of the process of the court, having no attorney, so far as I can learn, representing him on the record. I declared my opinion that one of the two executors being out of the jurisdiction, and not appearing by his solicitor, and the Advocate-General appearing not to deny this, and expressly admitting that the other executor, the other defendant is now dead, the suit could not proceed; that it had abated by the death of the sole executor within the jurisdiction, and could not proceed until it was revived. Upon which my learned brother, the Chief Justice said, that there was no objection made for want of parties, and that the cause must proceed; and my other learned brother, Mr. Justice Malkin said, that he concurred, that sitting here he did not know that Palmer was dead.

The cause accordingly proceeded, and the counsel were heard, the Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane on the same side; but for whom they did or could appear in the shape in which these causes stood, it was very difficult to say. The Advocate-General, informant, expressly on behalf of the King, the Mavor and community of Lyons. Christopher Martin, an executor, who had proved the will in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, also a legatee, and other legatees under the will, all residing in France; and the two executors, Palmer and Deverine, were the sole persons who were or ever had been parties to these causes. The corporation of the East India Company were not, and never had been parties; and the Advocate-General could not appear for them, unless they had been admitted to appear gratis for their interest, or been made parties, of which there is no trace in the proceeding. To my surprise the Advocate-General did not claim the lands of the testator on behalf of the Crown. I asked if the Advocate-General appeared on behalf of the Crown, as informant; how it happened that he did not appear to claim these lands on behalf of the Crown? and if he did not or could not appear on behalf of the Crown, how the information could remain on the record? To these questions I obtained no answer. The Advocate-General proceeded to state that there was no Alien Law in India.

The Advocate-General here interrupted Mr. Justice Grant,—"My Lord, I could not have said there is no Alien Law in India. I have always contended the Alien Law does extend to India."

Mr. Justice Grant.—Mr. Advocate General I may have mistaken your words. But it is so in my notes, and they are usually pretty accurate. Of course, I took you only to mean with reference to the matter in hand. But the note I made was this:—"No Alien Law in India. If there is, then not the Crown, but the East India Company ought to take advantage of it. Whole exercise of sovereignty is delegated. Escheats form a part." I may possibly have mistaken your expressions, but it is certain that the Advocate-General then being the Advocate for the Crown, and the East India Company no parties in the suit, maintained with great zeal and ability that the testator's lands if they did escheat, escheated not to the Crown but to the East India Company. Whether the Advocate-General really appeared for the King under the existing decree of the court, it is very difficult to say. I do not mean to say whether by law the Advocate-General has or has not the right and duty to appear for the King in a suit of this nature; or whether this is a question of difficulty or not; I think the court, by the decree of 23d February, 1832, has decreed that he does not, i. e. I presume that he cannot, though how it was possible so to decree in a cause the basis and foundation of which is nothing else than an information filed by the Advocate-General, for and on behalf of His Majesty King George the Third, at and by the relation of John Martin Wilkins which has been going on ever since 29th June, 1816, in which there have been many decretal orders which stand on the record unrescinded: and which, notwithstanding what was so decreed in February, 1832, was not stopped by the court for want of parties, but under that decree, in pursuance of orders made by it, has been going on ever since, and is now proceeding as if all were quite regular, it is certainly very difficult to understand. But it is equally difficult to put upon the terms of this decretal order any other construction.

The decree distinguishes between the land in and out of Calcutta, within the provinces subject to the presidency of Fort William. As to the first, it says, that the testator, being an alien, they could not pass by his will. As to the second, that there were not the proper parties nor sufficient evidence to enable the court to determine whether they could pass by the will. As to the evidence, it is difficult to see what other evidence was wanting, it being ascertained that according as the court has decreed, that the testator was an alien, and that the lands were situated, in what is called the Mofussil. As to want of parties the decree explains its meaning. At least I think it contains sufficient to shew what was meant in the next sentence, giving as a reason for what it is about to do "inasmuch as the Attorney-General of our Lord the King is not resident within the jurisdiction of this court, and there is no party to these suits who has made any claim to any of the said lands, &c. on the part and behalf of the Crown," and then it orders that a receiver be appointed, &c. I do not say that this is very explicit, for it seems to imply that some other party to these suits not being the Attorney-General, might have made a claim on the part of the Crown, which I think can only have been meant of the Advocate-General. But then if the Advocate-General has merely neglected his duty, what has the non-residence of the Attorney-General within the jurisdiction to do with the matter? There is nothing in the 63d. Geo. 3. c. 855 giving the Advocate-General such powers as he possesses where the rights of the Crown are concerned, which makes them in any way dependant upon the Attorney-General. What the Court might be bound to do in discharge of its constant duty to the Crown upon any such case of breach of his duty to the Crown committed by the Advocate-General, I give no opinion. It were very unbecoming in me to suppose such a case, and as long as the office is in the hands that now hold it, I am very sure, it is impossible that it can intentionally happen; but if the case were to happen, if the Advocate-General has the right and duty under the statute to appear for the Crown, the objection would not be for want of parties; but that the Crown, a party, was betrayed by its officer.

The decree, however, says that these are not the proper parties, and it seems to intimate that if the Attorney-General were in Calcutta the defect might be cured. I must, therefore, take the decree of February, 1832, as purporting that the Advocate-General either does not or cannot represent the interests of the Crown upon this occasion. I do not say, whether this finding of the court is right or wrong, but I find it, as I understand this decree so decreed—and this is a decree upon further direction. I do not know how this can be reversed if it be wrong except upon a re-hearing, and until this be done, I take it that nothing which is against the foundation of that decree can be done. I find it decreed that the interests of the Crown are most materially concerned in the causes before the Court. I am aware that decretal order of February, 1832, it is very difficult to reconcile with the decretal order of 2d November 1816, which was pronounced expressly in the cause, Strettle Advocate General, for and on behalf of His Majesty King George the Third, at the relation of John Martin Wickens v. Palmer and Deverine, before either of the bills in the two other original causes was filed,—and that of 16th August, 1819, which consolidates this cause with the other two, and expressly recognizes the account taking in it between the Advocate-General as such informant on behalf of the King and the executors, and makes the parties to the other suits, parties to this account, they consenting. These decrees are express judicial recognitions of the right and duty of the Advocate-General appointed by the East India Company to appear in this cause, and for and on behalf of the King. And whether the judgments be in this respect right or wrong, they stand upon the record unaltered and unreversed. Then comes upon the 23rd February, 1832, a decretal order which, notwithstanding this, finds that the said Advocate-General cannot and does not appear in this cause, for and on behalf of the King. I cannot reconcile these decrees which most certainly standing on the same record in the same cause are utterly repugnant, and cannot stand together. But I do not know any way by which any of them may be reversed or altered except upon a rehearing. There is no way that I am acquainted with of altering the record except recently for errors of the officer in engrossing or in miscasting, but upon rehearing, or if the decree is enrolled, upon bill of review. And how am I to know when the court has decreed one thing, and so recorded its decree in 1816 and 1819, and has decreed the direct reverse and so recorded its decree in 1832, which is the decree that ought to be rescinded and expunged from the record, and unless upon rehearing the cause? And one main ground for a bill of review is error apparent upon the record. Although, therefore, I think this decree of 1823 in this particular could not be regularly or validly pronounced as being repugnant to former decrees in the cause standing unreversed, I do not think there is any way in which this can be declared upon motion or petition, or ex proprio motu of the Judges, or otherwise than upon rehearing, or bill of review or appeal. But therein stands a decree that there are not the proper parties to the causes, that there is not before the court the proper officer to represent and protect the interests of the crown, and that these are largely concerned. What then ought to follow? that the causes do stand over. It may have been right enough with one executor out of the jurisdiction and the other adjudged insolvent, to appoint a receiver, and to have the money paid into court for the safety of the property, there to wait till the proper parties should be before the court, and till upon a rehearing the decrees finding that they should be reversed, if they ought to be reversed. But I think it much to be lamented that the court did not stop here, but should have proceeded to refer it to the Master to make enquiries which, as I think, could not but be nugatory,—and to frame a report, which in my opinion must be waste paper upon the very shewing of its own decree, and to make decrees upon undry matters not referred to the Master, which for the same reason, as it appears to me, could not be otherwise than equally irregular and without any possible legal ground to any one.

For the Mayor and community of Lyons I have said that Mr. Prinsep appeared. For Christopher Martin and the other legatees, and some of the next of kin of the testators, Mr. Osborne and Mr. Grant appeared. For the two executors, the most essentially necessary parties of any, no one at all appeared, and for the reason which I have mentioned that one of them was out of the jurisdiction, and had not appeared in these causes, for many years, and that the other was dead. But it is now admitted that Mr. Deverine, who had been living out of the jurisdiction, is dead also. [The Registrar said, I believe my Lord he died about the year 1830.] Administration has been applied for, and we have granted it to the nearest of kin of Mr. Palmer the other executor. I was of opinion that the admission at the bar of the counsel for the plaintiff of the death of a necessary defendant was sufficient to compel the court to hold that the cause had abated. And I have never heard or read of any evidence being gone into upon the subject after such admission. Nor can I conceive a case in which any thing more could be necessary than the information of the council or solicitors, unless some extraordinary mystery hung over an event usually notorious to all the surviving parties, and the neighbourhood where the deceased parties have resided. If the suit has abated, the court has no longer jurisdiction in that suit, till it is revived by supplying the defect from want of parties, and it is pari judicio to see that he has jurisdiction. But now we are in a different situation. We have it upon the records of our court that Palmer is dead and administration granted of his effects.

Here then we are in this position. The Advocate-General whose predecessor filed the first bill in these consolidated causes in the year 1816 on the part of the crown as informant; and who now desires to appear in virtue of his office and of the statute in that character; the King being a necessary party both as parens patrie and as having a patrimonial interest in right of his crown, has been decreed by the court not to represent the crown by virtue of his office of Advocate-General in these causes. And that there is nobody here who does or can appear on the part of the King. The Advocate-General, therefore, is out of court. We have no informant plaintiff in the first cause, and according to this never had. The first cause, therefore, never had any legitimate existence. It has been decreed to have been a supposititious birth. But however this may be, it certainly has according to this decree no legitimate existence now. In the second cause there were only two defendants, the two executors, and they are both dead, and the cause has not been revived against their representatives. That cause, therefore, has totally abated, and no proceedings can be had in that. In the third cause the Advocate-General has been decreed to have no persona standi in judicio, and the two executors are dead, so that there are no defendants in that cause. The fourth cause is a cross cause brought by the said two executors the only plaintiffs, who as I have said are both dead, besides which there has been no replication ever filed in that cause, so that this cause has never been in a state in which any order could be made.

The three first form the consolidated causes in which it is proposed, we should decree, i. e. in the first without any plaintiff, or any defendant, and in the other two without any defendant. This is not a question of regularity or irregularity, or of particular persons whether by the rules of the court they are or are not necessary parties. Upon such questions if I had the misfortune to differ from the majority of the court, I should feel myself bound by the decision of the court, and it would be my duty if the cause went on to give my best attention and assistance to the decision of it. But in this case, where it appears to me, that the court has no jurisdiction, not because it has not some of all the necessary parties before it, about which there may sometimes be a difference of opinion, but that in one cause there are no parties according to what has been decreed. And in the two others there are plaintiffs but no defendants; and that therefore there is in truth no cause at all before the court, for there can be no cause not judicial proceeding without two parties, plaintiff and defendant and a judge; and where there are not two parties there can be no judge; being in this case of this opinion, it follows that I ought not to take any further part in this proceeding.

I have expressed no opinion upon the question whether the Advocate General does or does not here, under the statute, represent the King to the same extent and in the same manner as the Attorney General in England. It is not necessary to decide that in these causes till the question shall be moved upon a re-hearing, when the suit is revived, if the parties, when there shall be parties to it, are so advised; but I think it proper that I should state one thing upon which I have no doubt, namely, that supposing the Advocate-General of the East India Company to have that representation to its fullest extent, he cannot at the same time represent or be counsel for both the King and the Company, where they have conflicting interests. No counsel can appear for conflicting parties. He must make his election. If his duty to the Company is paramount to that to the King—then he must elect accordingly, and the cause must stand over till some one shall be duly appointed who may appear for the King. If on the contrary, he appears for the King with the leave of the Company, and the Company have an essential interest in the suit, it must stand over till the Company shall be made a party and appoint some one else as their counsel.

Whether after appearing here upon the record as informant on the part of the Crown; supposing the Advocate-General to be authorized so to do, he can withdraw himself from that character in order to appear for the Company where their interests conflict, is another question. But I am very clear that in this case the escheat, if it falls at all, must fall to the King, unless there are peculiar circumstances arising out of the grant made to the Company of the Government of India, which vest it in the Company instead of the Crown. He cannot appear on the part and behalf of the crown to argue against the interests of the crown in favour of those of the Company under this grant. In this case the corporation having the local and delegated Government, and pretending to rights limiting or superseding the prerogative, by virtue of a grant from the King in Parliament or otherwise; and by virtue of such rights pretending to an interest in the estate of the testator, the administration of which was under adjudication in these causes before they abated, ought to have been a party and to have appeared by their own counsel totally distinct from the counsel for the crown, to contest with the crown its claims against the crown; but it never can be contended that its Advocate-General or any other person on its behalf can take upon himself to decide whether we shall claim a right which is in dispute for the King; or whether he shall not rather claim it for the Company. But where the King and the Company have both interests to be heard in any suit, and their interests as in the present case are conflicting, they must both be made parties and contest their rights in the King's Court, as the King and other corporation would contest them in any other suit. For there is nothing more certain than that the corporation of the East India Company under its delegated powers, whether of Government or now of Legislation, cannot through any of its officers, or by any means whatever, assume to itself any part, the most minute, of the prerogative of the crown, beyond what has been specially granted to it, or in any way limit or infringe upon that prerogative which resides inalienably. Though capable of being temporarily communicated in the person of the King, in trust for the preservation of the rights and liberties of his people, the adjudicating upon which prerogative in all cases, and the giving effect to it according to law, he hath wholly and exclusively devolved upon judges commissioned directly by himself who are, therefore, bound to see in all cases that come before them; that the rights of the prerogative whether patrimonial or other, that may come into question in judgment are duly advocated by those to whom this duty has been or may be assigned by the King. And he is very ignorant of the laws and constitution of England who thinks that the least part of the ancient and legal prerogative of the crown can be invaded with safety to the liberty of the subject.

I think it right also to say that the decretal order of 23d February, 1832, is one in which I cannot concur; that I think it a decretal order to which it was and is impossible to give effect consistently in my opinion with the best established and best known rules of a Court of Equity? that there is hardly any part of it, in which I can agree except that which says that the report of the late Master is exceptionable, though even with this it would be difficult, it having been confirmed, as I see stated, by consent, to deal, unless by the like consent; and that if the objection arising from there being at present no parties to the suit, but such as are all on one side, there being nobody to defend the estate itself, or against whom a decree can be made, nor that will assert the rights of the crown, nor that has any right to assert the rights of the Company, in whose favour no decree could be made in the shape the cause had acquired before it abated: that if these objections were removed, I could not concur in any order tending to give effect to this decretal order, but in my opinion before another step can be taken consistently with Equity, the causes being first rendered complete by the introduction of the necessary parties, must be opened up by general petition of re-hearing, and being carefully examined from the beginning upon the established rules of Courts of Equity freed from the errors and defects, which I am sorry to say, have infected and disgraced them from the decretal order of 2d December, 1822, downwards. Being of opinion that the court cannot lawfully or equitably take any proceedings in these causes in their present state, it is unnecessary that I should observe upon the particulars of the decretal order of February, 1832, or of the Master's Report. Indeed it would be inconsistent with my opinion,—that there is no cause at present before me to do so.

I have only to request of the Registrar, if he marks my presence at the causes being called on, that he will note that I am no party to the order which is about to be made.

It seems to me strange to cite authorities to justify my declaration of the law in matters which I consider so plain and well established as the following propositions:—

1st. That the executor is a necessary party to a suit which concerns the administration of his testator's estate, and that no such suit can proceed without him. For this I refer to 1. Eq. ca. ab. 73 and the modern case of Lowe v. Parley, 2. Mad. 101 and cases cited in both.

2d. That where a suit was abated, the consent of parties can enable the court to perform any further act, whether by process, order, or decree, except to pay money out of court or do some merely collateral thing until the suit is revived. For this I refer to Wharam v. Broughton, 1 Ves. Senr. 181 and Beard v. E. Powes 2 Ves. Senr. 399.

3d. That no decretal order can be reversed except upon re-hearing bill of review, or appeal, and that nothing can be done which is against the foundations of such decree until it is reversed. For this I refer to 25 Ves. 75 1 Ves. Jun. 93 and the Prac. Reg. 357 Wy. edition. I refer to the original book which is a book of authority. But

4th. That although where a decree signed and enrolled is capable of being executed by the ordinary process of the court, whatever its inquiry may be, the court till it is reversed is bound to assist it with its process, that it may have its due effect by ordinary forms—for in this the conscience of the present judge is not concerned, because it is not his act, but rather his sufferance, and it is truly a merely ministerial act for which he is not responsible; yet that where even a decree signed and enrolled requires a further judicial act, as a new decree to have the execution of such former decree, and much more must this be so where it is a decretal order, remaining merely interlocutory which requires a further decree to carry it in execution. This obligeth the court to examine the grounds of the first decree before they make the same decree again, and there this court desireth to be excused in making it its own act to build upon such ill foundations, and charging its own conscience with promoting an apparent injustice; and for this I refer to Lawrence vs. Bery 2 Rep. in Chy. 127.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—This case comes before the Court for further directions on the Master's report, and under ordinary circumstances I should content myself with observing on the questions raised by the report, and on which the Court has to decide, and should not think it necessary to advert to the previous proceedings in the case. But after what has fallen from one of the learned judges, Mr. Justice Grant, I think it necessary to enter fully into all the proceedings, and to state accurately what has taken place, in certainly one of the most difficult and complicated suits that was ever presented to any Court.

These causes commenced on the 20th June, 1816, by Mr. Stretell, in his capacity of Advocate-General of the East India Company, filing on the relation of John Wickens and on behalf of His Majesty King George the 3d, an information against Palmer and Deverine, the executors of Claude Martin; in which information it was stated that in about September, 1800, Claude Martin, a Major-General in the East India Company's service, had died at Lucknow, possessed of large property, real and personal, and leaving a will which was set forth, and that the two defendants were then alive and within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that they had possessed themselves of the property, and praying an account, and that the Court would give effect to the charitable bequests contained in the will. An answer was put in on the 22d July, 1816, which admitted assets and generally the statements in the information, and alleged that Louis Martin, one of the executors, had obtained probate in the prerogative Court of Canterbury in England, and got possession of property in the English funds and India stock and other property to the amount of upwards of 30,000 pounds sterling, and that the defendant Palmer claimed to be indemnified against his liability incurred under a bond which he had been obliged to give in the course of legal proceedings in England.

On the 2d November, 1816, the information came on for hearing on the pleadings, and the Court decreed that the charitable bequests to the town of Calcutta in the 24th clause of the will, should be carried into execution; that two lacs of rupees, which was within the amount of assets admitted by Palmer to be in his hands, should be paid into Court, and applied to that purpose, that the master should prepare a scheme for the charity, and take an account of the personal estate of the testator from the hands of the executors, and of the debts and legacies, and advertise for creditors and legatees, and that a commission should issue, empowering the commissioners to receive the claims of creditors and legatees in England and France.

On the 26th August, 1818, a bill was filed by Monsieur Godinet, Mayor of the city of Lyons in France, in behalf of the community of the city of Lyons, against the same executors, Palmer and Deverine, setting out the will, and stating nearly the same facts as had been set forth in the information, and praying for the payment of the sums appropriated to charitable bequests in the city of Lyons, by the 25th clause of the will, with arrears of interest, and that the immoveable property of the testator, not situated at Calcutta or Chandernagore, may be declared to be personal property applicable to the purposes of the will, and that the executors may account for the rents, and generally for the personal property, and that the residue may be ascertained, and the city of Lyons may be decreed to be entitled to one-third share thereof.

On the 22d October, 1818, a bill was filed by Christopher Martin, Maria Desgranges, P. Balloffet, and Claudine his wife, and Francois Martin, an infant, by Maria Desgranges Martin, his mother, against the Advocate-General of the Company and the two executors, in which Christopher Martin claimed as one of the executors of Claude Martin, and also as legatee and beneficial co-heir of Louis Martin, deceased, and Maria Desgranges Martin, a widow and usufructuary legatee of half the estate of Louis Martin, and P. Balloffet, and Claudine, in right of Claudine, as legatee of Claude Martin, and daughter of Louis, deceased, and Francois Martin, as a relative of Claude Martin, and the only other son and legatee of Louis Martin. In this bill it was alleged that Claude Martin was born at Lyons, but at the time of his death was domiciled at Lucknow, which was subject to a Mahomedan Court, and the complainants after stating the kindred of Claude Martin, averred that at the time of his death, Louis Martin, his only surviving brother of the half blood, was entitled by the Mahomedan law to take the whole of his property, and that Louis having taken out probate of the will of Claude Martin afterwards died, leaving a will whereby he bequeathed to all the complainants, except Balloffet, all his interest in the estate of Claude Martin, and appointed Christopher and Francois his executors, that all the rest of the kindred are out of the jurisdiction, and either do not claim any interest or were not entitled to any by the Mahomedan law; that the real estate in Calcutta was not disposed of by the will, and the complainants ought to be declared entitled to all the property not disposed of by the will, it was prayed that an account might be taken of the rents and profits of the landed property; and the landed property might be sold and the proceedings brought into Court, and that the executors should make good all losses occasioned by their fault, and may deposit securities and pay all money in their hands into Court, and that the complainants should be declared entitled to their respective legacies, and to the whole of the residue not disposed of by the will.

On the 19th Feb., 1819, the two executors filed a cross bill against Christopher Martin and the other complainants in the bill of the 22d October, 1818, charging that Louis Martin had got possession in his life time of assets more than sufficient to discharge all the legacies to the complainants, and praying an account of assets come to the hand of Louis Martin, or to those of the complainants since his decease.

On the 4th March, 1819, the executors put in an answer to the bill of Christopher Martin, and the others, co-complainants, whereby they denied that complainants were heirs at law of Claude Martin: admitted that Claude was born at Lyons, and was domiciled at Lucknow at the time of his death, and stated him to have left landed property at Chandernagore, a French settlement, as well as at other places, charged Louis Martin with the receipt of the sums mentioned in the bills: and also that Joseph, another executor, residing out of the jurisdiction, had obtained possession of assets.

On the 3d June, 1829, a return was filed to a commission which was issued under the decree of the 2d November, 1816, stating that the commissioners had published advertisements, that no creditors had come in, that the city of Lyons had made their claim, but admitted the payment into the Court of Chancery in England of pounds sterling 25,833-6-8, and that Christopher Martin, Charles Xavier Marta Martin, and Catherine Charlotte Martin had put in claims on behalf of themselves, and the other next of kin to the residue; and it was further stated that the next of kin of the testator at the time of his death were Louis Martin, the testator's brother of the blood, Charles Xavier Maria Martin and Catherine Charlotte Martin, the children of Pierre Martin, another brother of the half-blood, who died in the life time of the testator, Fleane Martin, the wife of Christopher Durand Francois Martin, and Magdelene Martin, the three sisters of the half-blood of the testator.

On the 4th August, 1819, the executors filed an answer to the bill of Godinot, the Mayor of Lyons, wherein they allege that they had remitted a sum of two lakhs of rupees to a banking house in London, to be paid to the city of Lyons, and that there was a suit pending in the Court of Chancery between the city of Lyons and the bankers.

In August, 1819, the causes, in one of which Godinot was complainant, and in the other, Christopher Martin and others, were set down on bill and answer, and it was ordered that those two causes and the information filed by the Advocate-General, should be consolidated, and it was referred to the master to take an account of the rents and profits of the real estate of the testator living out of Calcutta, which had come to the hands of the executors, which was in the possession of the testator at the time of his death, and that all parties to the several causes should be parties to the account then going on in the master's office, and should be bound by it, and that 20,000 rupees should be paid to the attorney for the city of Lyons to be applied in the liberation of prisoners under the 25th clause of the will, and that the master should make one report in the consolidated causes by the next term.

On the 5th November, 1822, the master made his report, whereby he reported that there was then in the hands of the executor Palmer, in Company's paper and cash, 21,55,963 Rs., of which 3,489 Rs. were rents and profits of real estates out of Calcutta, and 3,60,115 of the real estate situate in Calcutta, including the price of a house sold, which was situate near Chandpaul ghat, that the usual advertisements had been made for crediture and legatees but none had come in.

On the 2nd of December, 1822, the cause coming on to be heard, the court decreed that the executors had fully accounted, that Palmer should pay the Accountant-General of the court the money found by the report of the Master to be in his hands, and that upon his doing so the two executors should be absolutely discharged and exonerated from the trusts and executorship of the will, and from all acts, deeds, receipts and payments concerning the same, and that the Accountant-General should be appointed receiver of the real estate, and that the Master should enquire respecting the bond against which Palmer claimed to be indemnified, and the Court decreed that interest was due on the sum already paid into Court for carrying into effect the charitable bequests to the town of Calcutta, from the 30th September, 1801, to 6th December, 1816, and the master was directed to enquire whether the estate was adequate to pay the additional bequest to Calcutta, 150,000 Rs., and if so the town of Calcutta was declared to be entitled to the same with interest from the time when the assets became sufficient to have paid the same, that the charitable bequests to the city of Lyons should be established and carried into execution, and that interest was due on the sum of 200,000, appropriated to that purpose from 30th September, 1801, to the 10th July, 1816, when that sum was remitted to Europe, and that interest was due on the sum of 50,000 rupees from the 30th September, 1801, until the same should be paid, and that the arrears of the annual sum of four thousand rupees should also be paid to the city of Lyons, and that these sums should be paid to Mr. Abbott, the attorney for the city of Lyons, together with a principal sum sufficient for the annual payment of four thousand rupees, and that the Master enquire and report what rates of interest have been produced by the government securities held by the executors, and that such be the rate of interest where interest by that decree was ordered to be allowed, and that the Master report what will be a proper sum to set apart for securing the payment of the pensions directed by the will, and that the Accountant-General do pay the same, and what will be a proper sum to appropriate to keep up the establishment, house, buildings, premises at Lucknow, and to pay the salaries of the persons directed to be employed there and to keep up the tomb of the testator and two other persons named in the will, and that such sums be set apart from the estate, and that the Master enquire, whether the colleges directed to be connected with the establishment at Lucknow can be established and in what manner, and that interest is due on the sum of 100,000 appropriated to the college from 30th September, 1801, till it be paid, together with the arrears of the annual sum of 4,000 rupees, and that the Master ascertain what sum will be necessary for securing the payment of the said annual sum of 4,000 rupees for the release at Lucknow of prisoners for debt, and that the same be set apart, and that the Master do enquire and report what sums have been paid to, and received by, Louis Martin, one of the executors of Claude Martin, or the representatives of Louis, and to enquire and report who are the five poorest relatives, and that the Accountant-General set apart the sum of sicca rupees 20,000, with interest from 30th Sept. 1801, for the payment of them, and that the Master ascertain whether the will of Claude Martin was executed in the presence of three creditable witnesses, according to the statute of frauds, so as to pass the real estate in Calcutta; and the Court decreed that the house at Chandpaul Ghat, which had been sold, and which had been mortgaged to the testator, was of the nature of personal estate, and that the rents and profits and purchase money thereof are part of the assets; but that the real estate remaining unsold in Calcutta is freehold estate, and that the heir-at-law, according to the law of England, is entitled thereto, and to the rents and profits, if the will was not executed so as to pass it, and the Master was directed to report who was the heir-at-law by the law of England, by the Mahomedan law, and who are the next of kin by the law of England, and who by the Mahomedan law, and what was the domicile of Claude Martin at the time of his death, and how by the laws and usages there the inheritance and succession to the real and personal estates; and the Master was directed to ascertain and report whether there was any and what residue after providing for all the directions of the will, and that all the costs past and to come be paid out of the funds in the hands of the Accountant-General.

On the 7th July, 1823, a commission which had issued in August, 1820, was returned with the examination of witnesses in France on the claims of the city of Lyons, and also of Christopher Martin and his co-complainants, together with the answers of Christopher Martin and his co-defendants to the cross bill filed by the executors. These returns shewed the French law relating to public charities, the constitution of the city of Lyons, and who were the next of kin of the testator, Claude Martin, and Christopher Martin and the other defendants in the cross suit, admitted in their answers that Louis Martin, as executor of Claude Martin, had possessed himself of 45,707 pounds sterling English, out of which he had paid the specific legacies due to the family and relations in France, pursuant to decrees obtained in the courts there; they could give no account of what had been done with the remainder.

On the 26th October, 1826, the Master reported a scheme for the Calcutta charity, which on the 7th March, 1827, was sent back to the Master.

On the 23d June, 1828, the Master reported that the estate was competent to pay the additional bequests of 1,50,000 rupees to the town of Calcutta, and as to the rate of interest to be allowed.

That a piece of ground had been bought for the purposes of the charity and vested in a trustee, and a schedule was annexed, containing a scheme for the establishment of it.

This report was subsequently confirmed.

On the 11th of October, 1828, the Master reported that 3,36,000 Rs. would be a sufficient sum to set apart for the payment of the pensions.

On the 12th of March, 1828, it was ordered that there should be a change of trustees of the land purchased for the purposes of the Calcutta charity, and that he should advertise for plans and estimates for a building.

On the 9th July, 1829, 29th July, 1829, and 27th March, 1830, triplicates of the same report were filed, in which the Master reported that a sum of 311,300 was a proper sum to be set apart for the pensions.

On the 4th February, 1830, a general report was made by the Master, which on 1st March, 1830, was sent back with directions that the Master should report separately as to the sum to be set apart for pensions, &c.

On the 27th March, the triplicate report before noticed was made.

On the 12th May, 1830, the Master reported that 68,698 would be a proper sum to lay out for repairing the house in Constanja, and 201,000, a proper sum for keeping up the establishment and paying salaries, &c.

On the 17th July, 1830, the Master made a general report.

After the various reports and proceedings that I have mentioned, these consolidated causes came for hearing on further direction of the Master's reports in November, 1830. The argument lasted several days. On the 8th of February, 1831, the then Chief Justice, Sir Charles Gray, delivered at great length the judgment of the whole Court. This decree, it is necessary I should state, for after it was pronounced, petitions for a re-hearing were filed by both the next of kin and the City of Lyons; and these petitions came on for hearing in June and July of 1831, and counsel were again heard for several days. The Court took time to consider, and on the 23d of February, 1832, pronounced the decree under which the Master has made the report now before the Court, and on which the cause has been set down for further directions. That decree is different from the decree of 1831, in many important respects. One of the grounds for a re-hearing stated in the petition of the next of kin, (whom Mr. Grant and Mr. Osborne now represent) was that the decree of 1831 had varied and altered the decree of 1822, which the Court was not competent to do—and on which ground expressly some material alterations were made in the decree of 1832 to obviate that objection, it is singular part of the proceedings in this case that the council for the same parties at this hearing have strongly urged upon the Court the necessity of altering in the decree we are about to make the decree of 1832. With what consistency they make this request it is difficult to say. I will now state the substance of the decree of 1832, which the learned judge seems to think so erroneous, but notwithstanding the observations he has made, to make, I am satisfied was in substance a

The decree recites that it appeared at the hearing that the report of the master which was filed on the 17th day of July, 1830, which was confirmed without any objection, having been filed or any cause shown against the confirmation, was in some respect unreasonable. And that the two executors of the testator, Claude Martin, namely, John Palmer and Jacques Deverine notwithstanding the decree of the 2d day of December, 1822, were liable to be called again before the Court by any of the parties to the suit. But that great expense and delay would be occasioned by now sending back the said report to the Master, and deferring all further directions until a corrected report should be obtained, and that no party had prayed for an order to that effect, nor for any further process against the said executors, or either of them, and it was alleged at the hearing, and was not controverted that one of the said executors, namely, the said J. Deverine was living beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, and that the other, namely, the said John Palmer had been adjudged insolvent by the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors at Calcutta, and it thereupon appeared to the said judges that the court ought not by reason of any of the imperfections in the said report, nor by reason of the said executors having been so discharged as aforesaid to be prevented from now declaring the intentions of the said testator, and the rights of all the parties now before the court so far as the state of the proceedings might enable the court so to declare now from making any decree respecting the disposal and application of the monies which have been paid into the hands of the Accountant-General and Sub-Treasurer of the East India Company, with the privacy of the Accountant-General of the Court, and are now standing to the general credit of these causes. The Court therefore declared that the testator, Claude Martin, was born a subject of the kingdom of France, and at the time of his death, which took place at Lucknow, in the month of September in the year of our Lord 1800, was an alien friend, and had acquired an English domicile during his service under the United Company and the British Government in India, which domicile he retained at the time of his death. And that all questions respecting the succession to his property and the disposal thereof, and the effect of the will of the said testator, must be determined with reference to the aforementioned facts of his having been an alien friend, and having had an English domicile at the time of his death.

And that the said testator at the time of his death had no relations of the whole blood, nor any heir-at-law according to the English law. And that at the time of his death the next of kin of the said testator according to the law of England were all resident in France, and where a brother of the half blood, named Louis Martin, a sister of the half blood named Fleurie Martin, married to Christopher Durand, another sister of the half blood named Francoise Martin, another sister of the half blood named Magdeline Martin, and Charles Xavier Marie Martin and Catherine Charlotte Martin, children of Pierre Martin, a deceased brother of the half blood. That Louis Martin had since died, having first duly made and published his last will and testament in writing, and leaving him surviving his widow, Maria Desgranges Martin, and his three children, Christopher Martin, Claudine Martha, married to Pierre Ballofet; and Francois Martin, all parties to these suits. And that the will of the said Louis Martin has been duly proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury by his eldest son the said Christopher Martin, who also obtained in the same Court administration de bonis non, with the will annexed, to the estate of the said testator, Claude Martin. That the said Christopher Martin as such executor of Louis Martin, and as such administrator, de bonis non of Claude Martin on behalf of himself and others interested, and the said Charles Xavier Marie and Catherine Charlotte Martin stated their claim under the commission which issued on the 11th December, 1816, for the purpose of enabling creditors and legatees in Great Britain and Ireland or in France to prove these claims, and which said commission was executed and returned the 2d June, 1819, and that none other of the next of kin stated any other claims under the said commission, but that they all had by the said commission, and by another commission which issued in the month of August, 1820, and which also was duly executed and returned the 7th

July, 1823, due notice of the proceedings in these suits, and that none of the next of kin are now resident within the jurisdiction of this Court, nor in any place, where any proceeds of this Court could lawfully be served upon them. That the said will of the said testator, Claude Martin, as duly executed in the presence of three credible witnesses, and in such manner as to have been sufficient according to the English law to pass real estate. But that the said testator, Claude Martin, having been by birth a subject of the King of France, and having been at the time of his death an alien, the lands and houses in Calcutta alleged in the pleadings to have been held by the said testator at the time of his death with the exception of the interest of the said testator in the house at Chandpaul Ghaut, which previously to the decree of the second day of December, 1822, had been sold, by the said decree was declared to have been a part of the personal estate of the said testator, could not, according to the law of England, be devised nor pass by the said will of the said testator, and that there are not the proper parties to the suits, nor sufficient evidence before the court as to the lands or houses or other real or immovable property to which are alleged in the pleadings to have been held by the testator, and to be situated beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in the places which at the time of the death of the testator were within the presidency of Fort William or some of the provinces, subject to or forming a part of the said presidency, to enable the court to determine whether the said could and did pass by the said will of the said testator. And in as much as the Attorney General of our Lord the King is not resident within the jurisdiction of this Court, and there is no party to those suits who hath made any claim to any of the said lands or houses or other real or immovable property on the part, and on behalf of the Crown, it is ordered that the receiver appointed by the Court in those causes to receive the rents and profits of the immovable property as well that which is situate within Calcutta as that which is situate beyond the boundaries thereof, but in places which at the time of the death of the testator were within the presidency of Fort William, shall continue to receive the rents and profits thereof, and from time to time to pay the same into the hands of the Accountant-General and Sub-Treasurer of the Company, with the privy of the Accountant-General of the Court. That the rents and profits of the said houses and lands in Calcutta, with the exception as aforesaid of the said house at Chandpaul-Ghaut, so declared as aforesaid to have been part of the personal estates of the testator, which have heretofore been received either by the executors or by any receiver appointed by this court, together with the accumulations thereon arising from interest, ought to be ascertained, and the amount when so ascertained, ought to be set apart and placed to the credit of a separate and distinct account in the causes, to abide any claim respecting the same which may be hereafter made by or on behalf of the Crown, and that all the rents and profits of the lands and houses in Calcutta, except as herein before is excepted, which may hereafter be received by the receiver of the court as aforesaid, ought to be paid in and placed to the credit of the same account, and that in like manner the rents and profits, or the proceeds of any sales of any lands or houses or other real or immovable property situate beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in places which at the time of the death of the testator were within the presidency of Fort William or the provinces subject to or forming a part of the said presidency, which may have come to the hands of the said executors, or of any receiver appointed by the court, or may hereafter be received by any such receiver, and may have been paid, or may hereafter be paid to the Accountant-General and Sub-Treasurer of the East India Company, with privy of the Accountant-General of the Court, ought to be ascertained and set apart and placed to the credit of another separate and distinct account. That the intent and meaning of the said testator in the said will was, that payment of his debts and legacies should first be made, and a sufficient sum should be set apart and secured for the payment of the several pensions, and for the completing and maintaining of the several buildings, charitable institutions, and establishments in the said will mentioned, or so many of them as could be lawfully and effectually established and maintained, and for the payment of all salaries, wages, and allowances in the said will provided for supervisors, servants, and other persons to be employed in and about the said buildings, institutions, and establishments, or any of them, and that after making all such payments and provisions, if it should be found that the sum remaining would exceed ten lacs of rupees, the whole of such surplus should be divided into three equal portions, which should be respectively appropriated and applied as far as they could be lawfully applied to the same charitable institutions, and uses at Calcutta, Lyons and Lucknow, to which certain other sums were bequeathed and made applicable by the preceding provisions of the will, and if it should be found at the time of the said testator's death, that the sum so remaining as aforesaid after making all such payment and provisions as aforesaid, should be less than ten lacs, then that it should be kept at interest upon Government Securities, until it should amount to the sum of ten lacs, when the whole should be divided and applied in the same way and for the same purposes as it hath been stated, that it was the intention of the testator in the aforementioned cases that the surplus of it should at first exceed ten lacs should be divided and applied. That legacy of forty thousand rupees to Pierre Martin in the said will mentioned, in consequence of the death of Pierre Martin in the life time of Claude Martin, became and was a lapsed legacy, and that all the other specific legacies to the several individuals in the said will mentioned, saving and excepting the monthly and annual pensions, salaries, or allowances in the said will mentioned, have been fully paid and satisfied. And that the sum of (1,50,000) one hundred and fifty thousand rupees, which by the 23d article of the said will, was bequeathed to the poor of Calcutta, Chandernagore, and Lucknow, and a further sum to provide for the payment annually of the sum of five thousand rupees, and of one thousand rupees directed by the 28th article of the said will to be paid annually for the release and relief of prisoners for debt at Calcutta; some time before the said decree of the 22d December, 1822, were paid by John Palmer, one of the executors aforesaid into the hands of the Accountant-General of this Court under a certain order of this court, in a cause in which Ralph Uvedale, Esquire, clerk of the crown, at the relation of Thomas Christenson, was informant, and the said John Palmer and others were defendants. And that a sum of Rs. 3,11,300 which with the accumulation of interest thereon, amounted on the 31st day of December, in the year of our Lord 1830, eighteen hundred and thirty, to the sum of three lacs, twelve thousand, and ninety rupees, seven annas, eight pie, 3,12,090 7 8 being a sufficient sum to provide for the payment of all the monthly and annual pensions in the said will mentioned, except such salaries and allowances as are directed by the said will to be paid to servants, supervisors, and other persons to be employed in and about the establishment, tomb, and buildings at Lucknow in the said will mentioned, had been appropriated and set apart, and is now standing to the credit of a separate account in these cases in the books of the Accountant-General and Sub-treasurer of the Company and of the Accountant-General of this court under the head of Christopher Martin and others against Robert Spankie and others, and other causes for the payment of the monthly and annual pensions. And that the sums of two hundred thousand and of one hundred and fifty thousand rupees bequeathed in the twenty-fourth article of the said will for a charitable institution at Calcutta, together with accumulations of interest therein from the time of the death of the testator, have been set apart and placed to the credit of a separate account in these causes under the head of Edward Stretfield and others against John Palmer and others; and, together with subsequent accumulations of interest, and after certain sums had been paid for the purchase of certain lands for the purpose of the said charitable institution at Calcutta, did amount in the whole on the 31st day of December, in the year of our Lord 1830, eighteen hundred and thirty, to the sum of eight lacs, eighty-two thousand, eight hundred and fifty-six rupees, one anna and seven pice (8,82,856-1-7.) And that the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand rupees bequeathed for a charitable institution at Lyons by the twenty-fifth article of the said will, together with all accumulations of interest thereon from the time of the death of the testator, and a sum sufficient to satisfy the bequest of four thousand rupees to be paid annually under the same twenty-fifth article of the said will for the liberation of prisoners at Lyons, together with the accumulations of interest upon the same from the time of the death of the testator, have been fully paid to the Mayor and Commonalty of the city of Lyons, or to John Abbott, Esq. the duly constituted attorney of the said Mayor and Commonalty. And that diverse large sums since the death of the testator have been paid to or retained by the executors residing at Lucknow and beyond the jurisdiction of this Court for the purpose of being applied in making the tomb of the testator and after buildings, gardens, and establishments there, according to the directions contained in the said will of the testator. Further deuce and declared that the form of the Government of Lucknow and the circumstances of that country make it impossible that any effect should be given to the bequest of four thousand rupees directed to be paid annually for the liberation of prisoners at Lucknow in the thirty-third article of the said will, and that such bequest is consequently void. And this court is incompetent and unable by itself to give effect to the other bequests for charitable establishments and institutions at Lucknow, which is a place beyond the jurisdiction of this court, and not forming any part of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, but that the Governor General in Council of Fort William in Bengal has the means and is able to give effect to the same, and that the same ought to be carried into effect, and that it appears by the report of the master under an order made in these causes on the 25th day of July, 1831, and which report is dated the 5th day of November 1831, that the said Governor-General in Council is willing to receive and apply such sums as the court may decide to be lawfully applicable for those purposes. And for as much as the said testator Claude Martin, in and by the thirty-third article of his said will, hath expressed his desired intention that in case it should be necessary, the protection and assistance of the Government should be obtained for the purpose of giving effect to the said last mentioned bequests and testamentary dispositions. And that if the whole sum of two hundred thousand rupees bequeathed in the thirty-third article of the said will of the testator, Claude Martin, for the finishing of the house at Constantia, hath not been expended and applied for that purpose, whatever may remain thereof, ought to be set apart from the funds now standing to the general credit of these causes, and applied as a building and repairing fund for the house and establishment at Constantia, and ought for that purpose to be paid to the Governor-General in Council, or to some person duly nominated and appointed by the Governor-General in Council to receive the same. And that out of the same funds standing to the general credit of these causes, a further sum of one hundred thousand rupees for the support of a college and school at Lucknow bequeathed in the 33d article of the said will, together with accumulations of interest on the same from the death of the testator until the setting apart of the same, ought also to be set apart and the interest thereof, from time to time as the same shall accrue and be received, ought to be paid to whomsoever the Governor-General in Council for the time being shall duly nominate and appoint to receive the same, in order that the same may be applied to the purposes in the said thirty-third article of the said will mentioned. And, that, out of the funds standing to the general credit of the causes the further sum of three lacs of rupees ought to be set apart, and the interest thereof paid to the Governor-General in Council, or to such person or persons as the Governor-General in Council for the time being shall nominate and appoint, in order that there may always be allowed and paid the salaries and allowances for supervisors, servants, and other attendants, and persons to be employed in and about the tomb, buildings, and establishment of Constantia in the said will mentioned, namely, in the 30th article of the said will the annual sums of seven hundred and twenty and four hundred and eighty rupees for two persons to take care and superintend the tomb, house, buildings, and gardens at Constantia, and in the 32d article of the said will the annual sum of two thousand, five hundred, and eighty rupees for divers servants to be employed in and about the said house, buildings, and gardens; and also the sum of six thousand, nine hundred, and sixty rupees in the same article of the said will directed to be paid annually for other persons to be retained and employed in and about the said house and tomb, and also the sum of one thousand and two hundred rupees directed in the same article of the said will to be paid annually for an European superintendent, and also the sum of two hundred and eighty-eight rupees directed in the same article to be paid annually for eight burkarras, amounting in the whole to the sum annually of twelve thousand, two hundred, and twenty-eight rupees; and it is further declared that if any sums of money should have been expended according to the intentions of the testator in and about the necessary care and superintendence of the said tomb, house, gardens, and buildings at Constantia, and should be now due and owing to any persons who may have acted for that purpose under the directions or authority of the Master or Accountant-General of the Court, or any former Master or Accountant-General, such sums ought also to be paid out of the funds now standing to the general credit of these causes. It was referred to the Master to enquire and report what part of the funds now standing to the general credit of these causes hath arisen from the rents and profits with the accumulations of interest thereon of any of the lands or houses situate in Calcutta, with the exception as before mentioned of the house at Chandpaul Ghat, declared by the decree of the 2d December, 1822, to have been part of the personal estate of the testator, and which in the pleadings are alleged to have been held by the testator, Claude Martin at the time of his death. And to enquire and report what houses, lands, or other real or immovable property situate beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in places which at the time of the death of the testator were within the presidency of Fort William, or the provinces subject to forming a part of the said presidency, was or were in the hands of the testator at the time of his death, and what was the nature of the tenure thereof, and the estate or interest of any which the said testator had in the same, and what regulations or usages have prevailed and now prevail in the said provinces beyond the boundaries of Calcutta as to the right and power of European aliens to devise or bequeath by will any lands, houses or other real or immovable property of which they may be possessed at the time of their death within the said provinces, and whether any lands, houses, or other real or immovable property situate within the said provinces which was or were in the hands of the said testator, Claude Martin, at the time of his death, hath or have been since sold, and the proceeds of the sale paid into the hands of the Accountant General and Sub-Treasurer of the Company, with the privy of the Accountant-General of the Court, and of what part is any of such lands, houses, or real or immovable property the receiver appointed by the Court is now in the receipt of the rents and profits, and what is the whole amount of any of the proceeds of any sales and of the rents or profits of any such lands, houses, or real or immoveable property, together with the accumulations of interest thereon which is now standing to the general credit of these causes. And to enquire and report whether the several sums hereinbefore mentioned to have been paid by the executor to the Accountant-General of the Court under and by virtue of certain orders made in a cause in which Ralph Uvedale, Esq., clerk of the crown, at the relation of Thomas Christenson was informant, and the said John Palmer and others were defendants, have been and are sufficient to provide for the charitable bequests and purposes for which the same were directed to be set apart and paid, or what further sum may be required to be retained and set apart for that purpose. And to enquire and report with greater certainty and particularity what persons entitled to receive monthly or annual pensions under the will of the testator are still living; and whether any and what part of the sum of six hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and thirty-three rupees, which hath been set apart as aforementioned for the payment of such persons may now be transferred back to the funds which are standing to the general credit of these causes, and to state some plan by which the payment of the said pensions may be conducted so as to prevent all frauds, and to provide for the gradual transfer back to the general credit of these causes, as the pensioners die, of the whole sum so set apart and placed to the credit of a separate account as aforesaid for the payment of the said pensions. And to enquire whether the whole sum of two hundred thousand rupees allowed by the thirty-third article of the said will for the finishing of the house at Constantia hath been applied to that purpose, or what part thereof still remains unapplied. Add what sum will be sufficient to satisfy the bequests of one hundred thousand rupees for the establishment at Lucknow in the thirty-third article of the said will mentioned, together with accumulations of interest thereon from the time of the death of the testator, and whether any and what sums are now due and owing to any persons who have acted under the directions or authority of any Master or Accountant-General of the court for the necessary and proper care and superintendence (according to the intentions of the testator) of the tomb, gardens, house, and buildings at Constantia in the will of the testator mentioned, or for the necessary and proper salaries or wages of any servants who may have been employed in and about the same, and for that purpose to permit any person claiming any such sum to be so due to them as last aforesaid, to come in before him the said Master to prove their said claims and further to enquire and report what surplus doth now remain out of the funds standing to the general credit of these causes, after making provision for all the payments, reservations, and appropriations to separate accounts and other matters and things by this decree ordered, directed, or declared.

Since the pronouncing of this decree, the parties have been attending the Master on the matter referred to him. Separate reports have been made by the Master on some of the matter referred to him. Exceptions were argued on a separate report of the Master on July last, before Mr. Justice Grant and myself, and in November last this case was set down for further direction on the report which is now before us, and in January last counsel were heard at considerable length.

It is now necessary that I should advert to the questions that arise on this report, and on which the court is about to pronounce its decree. The decree of 1832 recites that there is no sufficient evidence as to the lands and houses which belonged to the testator at the time of his death, and which are situated out of the local limits of Calcutta, to enable the court to say whether they could and did pass by the will of the testator, and the Master was directed to enquire and report what was the nature of the tenure of these lands, and what is the usage as to European aliens making a bequest of lands beyond the boundaries of Calcutta. The Master has reported on this point. I consider at the time this direction was given, I had not any great confidence that a report of the Master would throw any great light on this subject, and I do not think any very great assistance has been afforded to the court on this question. At the time of this direction being given, I did state my own views upon the power of the testator to dispose of lands in the Mofussil, although, unfortunately, at that time, on this part of the case, the then Chief Justice did not agree with me in opinion. It is not necessary that I should enter upon the reasons of the court for holding that the lands in Calcutta did not pass under the testator's will. I certainly agree with the opinion on that point, expressed by the Chief Justice. Doe on dem. Pordelet v. Humphrey, had decided that the common law of England as to aliens is in full force in Calcutta, and that, consequently, they cannot inherit lands on the principle accurately stated in Story's conflict of Foreign and Domestic Law. In page 363 he states, that it may be laid down as a general principle of the common law, that a party must have a capacity to take according to the law of the situs, otherwise he will be excluded from all ownership. Thus, if the law of a country exclude aliens from holding lands either by accession, purchase, or devise, a title becomes wholly inoperative, as to them, whatever may be the law of the place of their domicile. The question as to escheat in Calcutta rests on two grounds, that the law of Calcutta is the common law of England. That Calcutta is part of the territories of the Crown of England. I do not think it necessary to express any opinion, as to whether the common law of England does not extend over the Mofussil on the grounds on which I relied before, and which, with some very slight modifications I now repeat. I stated in my former judgment, that I thought it could not now be questioned, that all acquisitions of territory made by arms or by treaty, by the subjects of the realm, do of right belong to the state, and that necessarily, the sovereignty of the British Crown and legislature extends to all such acquisitions by the East India Company at the period at which they are made. From the period of the grant in 1765 of the Dewanny of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, including the administration of the public revenue and of civil justice, with the whole of the powers exercised by the subah under the Mogul constitution, it may be said that these provinces became the territories of the King of England, on the principle laid down by Lord Tenterden in Doe on the Claims of Thomas v. Acklam, 2d B. and Cresswell, 796, that a relinquishment of a government of the territory is a relinquishment of authority over the inhabitants of that territory. From this period, as has been accurately stated by the late Mr. Harrington, a most distinguished civil servant, and at the time the chief Judge of the Sudder Dewanny, the civil and military power of the country with the resources for maintaining it were transferred to the East India Company, and through their means to the British Empire. It is true, that it was not until 1772 that the Company themselves stood forth as Dewan; but in that year, in consequence of orders from the Court of Directors, the office of Naib Dewan was abolished, and the internal government of the provinces was committed to British agency. In 1773 the British parliament, after a long and laborious investigation into the whole state and condition of these provinces, passed an act by which they regulated and provided for the whole civil and military government of this presidency, and empowered the King to grant a charter for the establishment of a court, and having, as to British subjects jurisdiction throughout these provinces. The King by the charter granted in the following year, created the judges of this court justices and conservators of the peace throughout Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. The writs issued by the court were to be in the King's name, and the sheriff was empowered to execute those writs throughout the provinces. Whatever may be said of the time anterior to this as to the empire and sovereignty of the Mogul, brought down as Sir William Scott observed in 1800, from the clouds, as it were for purposes of policy, and which hardly existed otherwise than that as a phantom, I am of opinion, that from this period at least, the territorial acquisitions of the Company in India, though permitted to remain in the possession, and under the government of the United Company, were part and parcel of the dominions of the King of England, and that the interference of the legislature and the King in the Civil and Military Government of the provinces, is the strongest assertion that can be made of undoubted sovereignty of the crown of the United Kingdom over the same. I think if it is conceded that from the period I have mentioned, the King of Great Britain held the British possessions in India in right of sovereignty, that it will be exceedingly difficult to find any satisfactory reason for saying that after that period an alien could acquire a permanent property in land in the Mofussil on the general principle stated by Blackstone, that if he could, he must owe allegiance equally permanent with that property to the King of England, which would be inconsistent with that due to his own liege lord. I cannot see any solid grounds upon which in this state of things it can be said that the law of alienage extends to Calcutta and not to the provinces. Upon a question submitted for the opinion of the Attorney-General Norton in 1764, whether the subjects of the crowns of France and Spain who remained in the ceded countries in America after the peace of 1763, were aliens or subjects; the Attorney-General after expressing an opinion that such persons were not to be considered in the light of aliens, added, "but I think that no aliens, except such as can claim the benefit of the definitive treaty, or bring themselves within the 7th of his late Majesty, are by law entitled to purchase lands for their own benefit, and transmit them to others either from the crown or from private persons in any of his Majesty's dominions in North America or in the West Indies." At the time that opinion was given in 1764, there were dominions in the West Indies acquired by the crown in every possible way; some by conquest, some by treaty, and some taken possession of when uninhabited. The opinion expressed by Sir Fletcher Norton was, according to my opinion, applicable here from the moment these provinces became part of the dominions of the crown. In all cases of conquest the previous aliens became subjects of the crown, and of course are virtually naturalized by the act and operation of law.

Upon this view of the subject, it does seem to me clearly established that aliens cannot hold lands in the Mofussil.

When this case was last, before the Court, Sir Charles Grey stated, that, in his opinion, the lands in Calcutta stood in a totally different situation from those in the Mofussil, and he rested this distinction mainly, as he contented, on the different footing at the time of the testator's death, on which all questions connected with the sovereignty of the crown stood as applicable to the Mofussil and to the town of Calcutta. I endeavoured to shew then in the same manner as I have done now, that as far as regards the sovereignty of the Crown, for the period I have named, no such distinction can be made. I am aware, however, that it may be contended, that although on the principle I have stated, it may seem clear that an alien cannot hold land or devise by will, that the incapacity to hold does not of itself decide, that the escheat must be to the crown, and that such right only exists in the King's dominions, where the common law of England is introduced. Now, if it follows, as I have endeavoured to shew, that the crown for the protection of its sovereignty has a right to prevent the holding of lands by an alien, it seems to me, that independently of any general introduction of English law, the right of prevention implies, that the lands must escheat to the Crown; for in what other mode can the prevention take place? The Company, as I have shown, can only as British subjects acquire territory for the crown, and their right to the possession of lands forfeited for the non-payment of revenue, is only incidental to their possession of the dewanny, which the crown has permitted the Company to hold for a limited time. In no other way, therefore, as it seems to me, can effect be given to this incident of sovereignty than by holding that the lands escheat to the crown.

I need hardly add, that I entirely agree in the very clear and satisfactory manner in which Mr. Justice Malkin has treated this part of the argument.

The court now agreeing in the view I took of this question, we decree that the lands and houses which belonged to the testator at the time of his death, and which are situated out of the local limits of Calcutta, did not pass by the will of the testator. Further than this we do not think it necessary (on the principle adopted in the former decree) to make any declaration of the right to those houses and lands.

The sums reported by the Master to arise from the lands in the Mofussil will be placed to a separate account to which any application that may be made to the court on behalf of the crown, and the receiver will continue to receive the rents and profits as they shall accrue.

The next point arising on the Master's report, and which has been argued at the bar, is as to the allowance of interest on the sum set apart for the building of Constantia house. We are clearly of opinion, that it was not the intention of the testator that that sum should carry interest, and no interest, therefore, can be allowed. Another question arises upon the legacy of 4,000 rupees directed to be paid for the liberation annually of prisoners at Lucknow, and which bequest the decree of 1832 declared to be void. The next of kin have claimed this legacy, and argued that it cannot, on the authority of Skrinde and Northcote J, Sowston Reports, fall into the residue. The principle involved in this question was argued at great length on some of the former hearings, and all the cases bearing upon it were then cited. The principle established in all the cases on this subject is clearly this, that where the testator's view is confined to the sole purpose of establishing and supporting a particular charity, which cannot take effect, the particular mode will be considered as of the essence of the bequest, and the Court of Chancery will not apply the funds bequeathed to any other charitable purposes, but the legacy will be void.

The first clause of the testator's will expressly shows his intention to apply, after the payment of legacies, the residue of his fund to general charitable purposes.

I was at the former hearing, and am still of opinion, on the authority of Mills and Farmer, 1 Meriville, and Leake and Robinson, 2 Meriville 393, that this legacy falls into the residue, and must be disposed of with the residue according to the decree of 1832.

I have now noticed all the points that arose upon the Master's report, and to which the attention of the court were directed by the counsel at the bar.

It is true, that the counsel for the next of kin did argue at some length on matters on which the court had already decreed. I expressed at the time my opinion of the inutility of all such argument, to say nothing of their inconsistency. A decree drawn up, passed and entered, cannot on further direction, or by petition, or by any other bill, or in any way, be revised, altered, or explained, except on a rehearing. 2, Madd, 454.

This is well known and established law, and it is the only notice I think it necessary to take of that part of the argument of counsel which went to impeach the validity of former decrees.

The same answer might be given to what did fall from the junior counsel, Mr. W. Grant, for the next of kin, but which was repudiated by his leader, Mr. Osborne, namely, that the suit could not proceed from the want of parties, neither the executor for their representatives being before the court. I expressly called upon the counsel for all the persons before the court, to know whether they took any objection to the case proceeding for want of parties. The counsel declared they did not, and what may have fallen from Mr. Grant unauthorised and disavowed by his leader, I cannot notice. But this point, though not taken by the parties before the court, has been observed upon at considerable length by one of the learned judges, and has been with him a sufficient reason for taking no further part in these proceedings. I am bound, therefore, to notice what I should otherwise certainly have passed over in silence.

My first, and I think decisive answer to this objection is, that to which I have already alluded. The court has decreed that it can proceed without calling the executors again before the court: that decree can only be reversed on a rehearing; none of the parties before the court have either sought or desired a rehearing on that ground. The court cannot of itself direct a rehearing contrary to the wishes of all parties before it, and all that the court in such a case could do, would be to stay its hands and proceed no further.

This, I for one, if I felt the force of the objection to be infinitely greater than I do, I am not prepared to do. For some 14 years the proceedings have been continued in the suits with the same defect as to parties,—large sums have been paid under the decrees and interlocutory orders that have been made,—a vast expense has been incurred in the costs of the different proceedings. The city of Lyons received 5 lacs, the arrears of interest, &c. after decree of 1832. The decree of October, 1832, with the same want of parties, has established the school, and appropriated 8 lacs of rupees to its use. The decree of February, 1832, has led to extensive enquiries in the Master's office, of which we have now the report before us. At the time that decree was made, the Chief Justice delivered at great length the judgment of the court in which he declared for the court, that though the executors were liable, the court would not on that account stay its hands in proceeding to decree, feeling as we then did the great intricacy and difficulties of the case, knowing well the position in which the court had been placed by former proceedings, and deliberately satisfying ourselves that the best and wisest course was to proceed with the case.

The court thought then, as I think now, that nothing but some legislative provision could free this case from the technical difficulties which surround it; but we thought, as I still think, that we have done substantial justice to all the parties before us, and that in interpreting a will of no common intricacy and obscurity, we have showed out what was the intention of the testator, and have done substantial justice to all who were the objects of his benevolence.

I am now about to read that which the learned judge has pronounced to be waste paper, viz. the decree in this case, and before I do so, the learned judge must excuse me if I observe, that I think the designation he has been pleased to give to the solemn acts of this court, is expressed in language stronger than any occasion can warrant.—The decree will be inserted hereafter.—Hurkaru.

SUPREME COURT, MADRAS,—APRIL 20, 1836.

SECOND SESSION FOR 1836.

Reg. v. E. Daviot and others.

FOR FELONY AND PIRACY.

Counsel for the Prosecution.. Mr. Advocate General,
Attorney..... Mr. N. B. ACKWORTH, Company's Solicitor.
Counsel for the Defence..... Mr. MICHAM.
Attornies..... Mr. J. WILKINS, and Mr. J. W. BRANSON.

Emanuel Daviot, Edwin Simonds Allen, Jacobus Fize, Domingo Antonio, De Rozario, Gregory Lupus, James Cornelius Mutor, Carolus Pereira otherwise called Jacobus Domingo De Rosa Deo Gracie, Shunsheng Hyder Ally, Abdul Ally, and Attor were this day placed at the bar upon their trial for felony and piracy. The indictment charged that the prisoners and one James Boyle Connett, who was in Hospital in a dangerous state of health, and therefore not arraigned, on the 2d December, 1835, on the high Seas within the Admiralty Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, on board the Bark Skimmer, belonging to John Richard Gillon, a subject of our Lord the King, and of which Captain Gillon was master, did endeavour to make, and did make a revolt on the said ship. The prisoners upon being arraigned severally pleaded Not Guilty, and the following gentlemen were sworn upon the Jury.

Mr. E. C. Griffiths,	Mr. C. R. Martin,
W. Donelan,	A. J. Home,
B. Lacy,	J. Alves,
B. Johnson,	J. Raymers,
G. B. Shaw,	C. Goodall, Junior, and
J. C. Owen,	J. Fitzgerald.

The Advocate General opened the case on the part of the prosecution. The learned gentleman commenced with stating, that the prisoners were tried under the 11 and 12 Will. 3. c. 8; whereby it is enacted "If any Commander of any Ship, or any Mariner, shall in any place where the Admiral hath jurisdiction, betray any trust and turn pirate, enemy, or rebel, and piratically and feloniously run away with the Ship, or any board, ordnance, ammunition, or goods, or yield them up voluntarily to any pirate, or shall bring any seducing messages from any pirate, enemy, or rebel, or consult or confederate with or attempt to corrupt any Commander, Officer, or Mariner, to yield up or run away with any ship or goods, or turn pirate, or go over to the pirates, or if any person shall lay violent hands on his Commander, to hinder him from fighting in defence of his Ship and goods, or confine his Master, or endeavour to make a revolt in the Ship, he shall be adjudged a pirate, felon, and robber, and being convicted according to this act, shall suffer Death, and loss of lands and goods."

The learned Counsel conceded, that to constitute the crime provided against by this statute, there must be something more than disobedience or refusal to obey orders; and that to complete a revolt, there must be an actual taking of the vessel out of the care and power of the Commander. With regard to the jurisdiction of the Court in case of piracy, it did not matter who the parties were, for pirates are considered the common enemies of all mankind. The learned Counsel concluded by remarking, that the object of Government in causing their law officers to appear upon the prosecution was, that the whole merits of the affair should be laid before the Jury, and he was perfectly assured that their verdict would satisfy the justice of the case.

John Richard Gillon sworn, examined by the Advocate-General. I am a Mariner, and have been so 43 years. I have had the Skimmer under my command; I built her in May, 1833, and launched her; I had the command on the first voyage, then Captain Randall, then Captain Hill, then myself; they were acting as Masters under my authority. I have lived principally at Calcutta; have done so from the earliest time; my family is now at Chandernagore; I was living in Calcutta when I took the command; my family lived at Chandernagore since I took the command; I went to Penang in April, 1835. I took in Allen there; I came to Acheen then to this Coast; I went to Tranquebar; it was in August last; I did not take Daviot on board at Tranquebar but at Negapatam. He came on board as Chief Officer; Allen was 2d Officer from Negapatam I went to Trincomalee; at Negapatam, I shipped Nestor, Shumseen, Abdoollah, D. De-Rosa, Gregory Lopez, the Manila man Deo Gracio, and Attoo the Chinaman; the rest of the prisoners came on board at the Nicobar Islands; I heard the Admiral was at Trincomalee; I saw a petition in the hands of the Judge; Gracio presented it; it was read over to me; the prisoners at the bar heard it read; they wanted the arrears of their wages; I heard people complain about their wages; the gunner was one, and Shumseen another; Daviot told me that there was a petition presented against me by all my crew; I went from Trincomalee to Nancowry Harbour; I arrived there on the 1st October; D'Acunyah came on board for service; I was gathering coconuts and beche de mer, and buying berclenut; stores were delivered to the Danish Government on my arrival; the cargo was taken in under my direction, and landed by me; all were under my authority; I put D'Acunyah in irons at the end of October; I did it in consequence of what I witnessed myself; I received and delivered cargo as before till December; I remember on the 1st December something occurred between Allen, Daviot, and myself; I said the people were getting sick and it is high time for us to leave the place; I said this to both; I said to Mr. Allen I had entrusted the affairs of the rigging to him for 45 days, to get the vessel into a sea-worthy condition that I might be able to sail at a moment's notice, and that I was sorry to observe that my vessel was not in a sea-worthy condition, and therefore to leave it to me, and I would undertake that part of the duty myself; Daviot had orders to get every thing ready on shore; at 12 o'clock I set Fuze a passenger, Hyderally, Abdoollah, and Shumseen about the rigging; Mr. Allen wanted to interfere; I desired Allen not to interfere, and told him I had taken the rigging under my own care; I spoke in a cool manner; I said to them all, I shall put to sea in a week; Daviot was on board; I went forward and called Shumseen; I asked if every rigging was completely forwarded; he answered yes, except the jib guys; I said can you begin upon and finish the main-mast next day, he said yes; no one heard this; I said can you bend the sails the day after; I then came aft, and I observed Daviot and Allen in close conversation on the larboard side; I called Mr. Daviot away, I told Mr. Daviot I am happy to learn every thing forward is done; to-morrow the tidal promises me he will finish with the mainmast, and the day after he, Mr. Daviot, might bend on the sails and water the ship so as to be ready to start on the 7th; Daviot said "the jib guys are not set up;" I said "it is no consequence," he said it was; I saw him speaking loud; I said Mr. Daviot speak slow; I am not accustomed to have Officers speak to me in that way; I said he knew nothing about seamanship; I said he should obey my orders. He said you promised me the command but you have not given it to me; I will stop no longer. He then said, "give me a boat and I will go on shore." I refused but said he might go the next morning. He again said in a violent tone for a boat, I said "do not think of going on shore you will leave me in distress for carrying on the duty; I can easily dispense with your services;

—you wanted to go on shore at Trincomallee, now you shall go." Daviot then said he would go; Allen heard all that passed; I heard them speaking loud and return from the cabin. I saw Jacobus, Jacob, and Domingo seated on the windlass. Mr. Daviot came up to me and shook his finger close to my nose and said "I am ready to meet you at any time;" Allen heard this; all heard it; D'Acunyah, who was in irons, heard it; I said to Mr. Daviot, "I consider you no more than a passenger; you have discharged yourself; if you were an Officer I would confine you to your cabin; you are taking advantage of my age; I will meet any man of my size." I said what will you meet me with? He said with pistols as a gentleman; I said pistols are dangerous weapons. See here are two cutlasses that will settle our dispute; take your choice; Daviot said he would not fight on board; Allen said take up one; if you won't I will fight the rascal. I then took up both swords and went into the cuddy and threw them on the table; I called the gunner to put them away; I lighted a segar and went out, Daviot ran up to me and seized me with both his hands, and said I was his prisoner; I thought he was joking; I said "are you a bailiff, the ship is my own, how can you take me a prisoner." Allen seized me by taking hold of my neck and hair, and gave me a shove. They said "you rascal, we will show you what we are going to do with you." I turned round and said Allen you have always stuck by me, why do you use "such language now." He said " whilst you used good treatment, I was for you, when you began to ill treat me, then I have done this." In a moment I was at the gang way; Daviot said "come here," and those three persons who were in the windlass flew on me like lions; Daviot spoke to those who were on the windlass, every body else was asleep, Domingo took my shoulders and pressed me down, Jacobus seized both my heels and gave them a pull; I fell on my back; Allen let me go; Daviot still held me when I sat up; Daviot pressed his knees on my back and held my arms, Jacobus held my thighs and legs; Daviot cried out "bring the rascal and put him in irons; I will be answerable for the whole." Allen cried out for Attoo the carpenter; Attoo came and he was desired to take the irons from the Malay man and put them on me; Attoo brought the irons. The men Gregory Lopez, Nestor, Abdoollah, brought the irons; Gregory, Abdoollah and Nestor fixed them on my feet, and the carpenter clenched them; I told Daviot "I was much tortured and begged him to ease me;" he said he would not; he made use of beastly language in English; I stopped quiet; the tears were flowing from my eyes; I addressed the crew; I said "I am an old man, you are treating me in a cruel way;" one of them took the cheroot, put of my mouth and Daviot called out for hand-cuffs, that is, the bar that was used, (identifies the bar) the key of the hand-cuffs was in my cabin; the butler made himself busy and took the key; I saw them taken off the ether man; Allen did it; Allen and Jacob brought them; Allen tried them on and covered them with rag and twine and fitted them on; my hands were fastened behind; Daviot went with Allen to the starboard side; they then ordered Shumseen, Hyder Ally, Nestor, Domingo, Jacobus and Pereira, to carry me into my cabin; Daviot gave orders; Daviot gave some orders "carry that rascal into the cabin in irons;" they lifted me up bodily and hurt my feet; I begged them to take the iron off and I would walk; Allen asked Daviot if he should, and Daviot ordered it; the people took off the irons from my feet, and I walked in with a drawn cutlass on each side; Jacob and Jacobus had each a cutlass; Allen went with me, the locker was high, so they took me up and threw me like a brute animal on the bed; they put on the irons and laid the bar across the cabin at an angle of 45, with the horizon my feet rested on it; the shackles were put on my feet; I was left in that state with two sentries three days and nights in that torture; I was fed by Jacob and Nestor; Daviot on one occasion said "stuff him" and they poked the yams down my throat; I said to Daviot spare my life and put me on shore, and give me a suit of clothes; I will give my solemn oath in writing I will give up my ship and all; I was crying; he said he would put my hands before but he could not loose me; the crew would not let him; Allen came and took the irons off from behind; Connell came and unlocked the irons and I fainted away; I then asked for some water; they gave it to me; Jacob, Allen, Connell, and Nestor were there; I was put in irons and put on bed the first night. Daviot, Allen, with Nestor, Jacobus, Jacob and Domingo and Hyder Ally came in with a lantern; Daviot and Allen demanded my watch; I refused to give it; they said where is it; I would not tell them; Daviot asked the butler Bukshoo where it was kept and he said "under his pillow." Allen then took the watch and gave it to Daviot; I sung out, "they rob me now;" Daviot asked the butler and he gave them the keys; Daviot opened the liquor case and took out the brandy, and he and Allen took a glass and drank each other's health. I saw this through the venetian; I heard Allen give orders to call all hands. When the people were assembled, Daviot said "I am the Captain of the Ship; every one shall obey me; I shall see and have all the arrears of wages paid by the sale of the ship; I shall sail from here in three days, and deliver this rascal to the Admiral at Trincomalee." I heard the tindal and gunner say "we will obey you if you will give our salary." Daviot said "I will feed you better than that rascal did;" and gave orders that they should have a glass of grog a piece. The storeroom key was on the panels and Daviot opened it; I saw all this; I remained on the bed 37 days; for 15 days I did not go to the quarter gallery, afterwards I was allowed to go there, but no where else; I left Nancoury Island on the 1st January; I had my prayer book all the time, and knew it was 1st January; I guessed the wind was N. E.; I asked Domingo and he said it was, and told me the course the ship was sailing; I opened my large chart and told him we were going to Pondicherry and not to Trincomalee. The next day they took away my chart—the vessel lay at anchor at night and went on to Pondicherry at day light; I knew nothing about the cargo; Allen kept the log; the log is in his hand writing:

December 2d and 3d in Allen's writing.

" 4th and 5th in Allen's writing.

" 19th, 20th, 21st, 22d and 23d in his writing.

" 24th, 25th, 26th, also January 7th and 8th also,

On the 1st January the wind N. E. steering N. W. Trincomalee is almost E. S. W. of Nicobars; that wind was fairer for Trincomalee than Pondicherry; that book is Daviot's son's writing; Daviot on one occasion said "this fellow is in our way;" Allen said "it is easy to give this fellow a launch overboard;" Daviot said "we have a jolly crew on our side, but I am afraid the Danish sepoys will blow the gaff upon us.—This was a day or two before Christmas day. At Pondicherry, Captain Patton of the Zoroaster came on board and I was liberated by the French Master Attendant, who brought a guard of sepoys on board; I was then taken on shore; Allen after our arrival came in and wanted to shave me at night.

Cross-examined by Mr. Minchin.—I was born in Dacca; I sailed from Calcutta in December, 1834; the Skimmer is registered as a bark; the ship was originally built as a schooner; she was carried to Calcutta as a schooner; I am the registered owner of the bark Skimmer; I am sole owner of her; I assigned the vessel by way of mortgage to Mr. Manook of Calcutta; the usual assignments were made by me; on that occasion I gave Mr. Manook a bond for 10,000 rupees; the assignment to Mr. Manook was the first assignment of my interest in the vessel; the Calcutta register was given to Mr. Manook to get the endorsement made upon it, and the same was returned to me; I have received notice to produce the register and ship's articles;

I received this notice at half past 11 o'clock yesterday—(Here Mr. Minchin put in the notice to produce the register certificate and ship's articles), I do not produce any register; the register is in with the ship, and she is at Tranquebar. There are no ship's articles; no one signed any ship's articles; on board every ship where the crew are shipped their names are entered in the log. Shumsheen was shipped at Madras, Deo, Gratio, Attoo and Gregory were shipped at Calcutta, Mr. Daviot, Nestor, and Abdoolah were shipped at Negapatam. Domingo the gunner was shipped at Calcutta. Two days after I left Negapatam I arrived at Trincomalee, when a general complaint was made against me by the crew; the Magistrate said "some of these days I will come on board and enquire." I got under weigh about midnight the same day; I did not wait for the Magistrate to come on board; I got under weigh just as the hour I pleased; I was off immediately and took my crew with me. The gunner was the first man who was flogged after I sailed. He was punished for improper conduct. The prisoner Attoo was also concerned; I brought out my catlass and put both of them in irons. The apprentice was flogged for writing the petition. The butler was flogged for disobedience of orders; I never used the words "Admiral's men;" the butler was not knocked down; I entered under English colours; I had No. 7 flying previously, after I anchored I had No. 7 and sometimes No. 8 up whenever I saw English flag; I never took the command of the Island; I did not live in the Government House; I never got the natives to swear allegiance; I never went on shore but once the whole time I was at Nancowry; D'Acunyah is here; he was a common dubash; I never loaded a musket to shoot him or any body else; D'Acunyah was not the assistant to the Governor that was dead; I did not demand the keys of the Government house from D'Acunyah; after I had engaged D'Acunyah, I ordered him to get the Government House prepared; I was in charge of Government stores and was consequently justified in so doing. The Government House is very small; only one room; D'Acunyah paid the natives for the repairs done to the Government House at my instance; D'Acunyah was so employed till Captain Snowball came there; D'Acunyah and Abdoolah were sent out by me to dive for oysters. It was in one fathom water; I sent Nicobarians to see if there were any gold and silver mines; D'Acunyah was put in irons by my orders. His hands were in front. His hands were not hand-cuffed behind; the lashings were taken off the following day; there were no lashings upon his arms next day or ever since; the ship's cook was not flogged for bringing a fowl on board; D'Acunyah was a month confined. He was confined for an attempt upon my life. When the irons were taken off D'Acunyah to be put upon me, he D'Acunyah was able to walk. He was kept on the deck in the day time under a shed. I went on shore twice at night; I did not take any liquor with me at night; I never insulted the natives of the Island; I did not cut at Mr. Daviot with a sword; I never brought out a musket or threatened to shoot any persons; I do not remember that I even held a loaded musket in my hand, I brought out an empty musket and presented it at D'Acunyah when he was pushing off from the ship and abusing me; D'Acunyah said it was Captain Snowball who had instigated him to the act and provided him with a creese; the gunner and Abdoolah had the watch; D'Acunyah was on deck at the time I was put in irons; it was not dark; I do not know whether there were sepoys on board at the time; Mr. Daviot said "we have a jolly crew—but these rascally sepoys will blow the gaff upon us." I did not tell either Mr. Daviot or Mr. Allen that they would commit an act of barratry if they did not proceed to Pondicherry and land the cargo there. I never represented myself to be a Frenchman; Domingo is a Macao man, Deo Gratio is a Manilla man, Shumsheen, Chittagong, Nestor Negapatam, Hyder Ally Chittagong, Abdool Ally comes from either Muscate or the Mozambique, Gragory Lopes Bombay, Attoo, China, Domingo Rozario was a passenger,—he is not an Englishman.—Jacobus Fuzze was also a passenger, he comes from Colombo. Pereira is a foreigner, he was also a passenger. I don't know whether any cargo was brought on board; I was put in prison at Pondicherry with six pice per day; I would rather have applied to the Turkish flag than to the French; a part of the cargo brought from the Nicobars was delivered to defend the case brought against me by the crew for wages; the decision of the Court was against me and I appealed. I was sent under drawn swords to the Danish Government; every person that insulted me, that spat in my face, and treated me with indignity, was rewarded with grog and tobacco.

Re-examined by the Advocate General.—I am not now under any investigation or charge of the Danish Government. Mr. Daviot was in chains at Tranquebar for flogging two sepoys. I have no knowledge of these prisoners before they came to me. Daviot's father was in the Court at Pondicherry, and I heard Daviot say his father was a person of so much consequence that the Governor could not do without him. I heard cloths tearing in the next cabin; D'Acunyah was put in irons about a month before this; there was often angry words between Mr. Daviot and me; the apprentice is 18, or 19 years old; he complained nothing about himself.

John Tayler sworn and examined by the Advocate General.—I was a passenger on board the Skimmer, and went on board at Nancowry. For two or three days there was no disturbance. I was below; I was very sick; I heard noise one night; I came on deck and there was a crowd of sailors; Capt. Gillon had irons on his hands and irons on his legs, I took provisions to the Captain; his food was sent to him previously to the 1st and 2d Officers taking their meals. Hyder Ally was flogged for stealing tobacco. Buddoo was flogged; the butler was struck with the gavel dawayn, a large thick rope, by Captain Gillon. Mr. Daviot said "as this man has done such a thing, we must take him and deliver him up to the Admiral;" previously to Captain Gillon's being put in irons, the men were fed on salt and rice and afterwards on beef, pork and tallow.

Cross-examined by Mr. Minchin.—Captain Gillon was 13 or 14 days in command when I entered on board; I saw D'Acunyah in irons; he had irons in his legs, and both hands were ironed behind him; there were lashings on his arms; the lashings were on during the whole time; he was very near dying; his legs and arms were sore; during the day he was kept in the fore-castle and at night he was kept in the waist. Daviot used to help the Captain's provision with his own hands. If the Captain wanted more he used to ask and it was given him. He had coffee in the morning; at his break, fast, dinner and supper the irons were taken off and a spoon given to him at meal times. He was not allowed any knife or fork; he used to go to the quarter gallery; I saw him go with my own eyes 2 or 3 times; before the Captain was put in irons the natives used to bring 2 or 3 fowls and eggs once in 2 or 3 days, afterwards they brought provisions plentifully.

Re-examined by the Advocate General.—I saw Captain Gillon drink his coffee with my own eyes; I saw D'Acunyah on the second day after he was released from irons. He was very weak and he was not able to walk. Here the witness underwent a long re-examination but he was clear, firm, and consistent throughout.

John Jacobs, sworn and examined by the Advocate General. Witness was a sailor on board the Skimmer; Gillon went inside the cabin, took a sword and pulled it out; saw it was not sharp and threw it down under the table. Then he took hold of two other swords and came out; he threw one of them on deck and pulled the other from the scabbard, and said to Mr. Daviot, "Do you think I am a coward; I have been to the Rangoon war," and then he said "come let us fight." Mr. Daviot said "I did not come on board your ship to fight but to serve." Afterwards Gillon went in, came out again, Mr. Daviot came and took hold of his hand; one sword was lying on the deck. Mr. Daviot said "this man who came to kill me we can put him in irons;" then the irons were taken off D'Acunyah and put upon the Captain; I saw on that occasion Gregory and Abdulla; Mr. Allen was behind Mr. Gillon standing still. Afterwards Mr. Daviot said to the crew "you must tell the Admiral exactly what you now saw." We had a glass of grog on Christmas-day, and one on New Year's day, and occasionally when we got wet and worked hard.

Cross-examined by Mr. Minchin.—There was a petition to the Admiral; Captain Gillon set sail the same night, so long as a vessel that we observed was in sight, nothing occurred; but on the second morning, when the vessel was not in sight, Captain Gillon called the butler, the Admiral's butler, and the cook, the Admiral's cook, and flogged the apprentice for writing the petition. Gillon took a rattan and flogged the cook, saying "you took my paper, my ink, and wrote against me;" the gunner, he called the Admiral's gunner; on one occasion the Captain desired the gunner to be seized, the gunner ran forward. Captain Gillon went into the cabin, brought out a sword; the Captain came sword in hand to stab the gunner, the gunner opened his shirt about his breast and said "stab me"—the Captain went into the cabin and loaded a gun; he brought out a cartridge and loaded the gun in my presence, and said he would shoot the gunner; the butler was flogged every day. On one occasion the Captain dragged him out by the hair, and beat and kicked him, and upon this treatment he was very sick and not able to work; we went into the Nicobars under Danish colours. D'Acunyah's both arms were fettered and lashed. He had an abscess under each arm; the flesh was rotten; the flesh on his wrists were raw. On one occasion Captain Gillon returned on board from shore at 1 o'clock at night. He was very drunk, not able to walk; next day, some Nicobarians came off well armed with lances, 6 or 7 in a boat and in several boats. This might be 10 or 11 days before Captain Gillon was put in irons.

Re-examined by the Advocate General.—There were 6 or 7 armed men in the boats; the boats, also, brought cargo; there were about 20 on board among the crew; they left their arms in the boat and came on board; I never saw them do any harm to any body.

Buddoo sworn, examined by the Advocate General. I went before the Captain, and danced in woman's clothes. First I danced on the deck and then before the Captain.

Cross-examined by Mr. Minchin. This was on Christmas day.

The other witnesses whose names were upon the Indictment were here called, and upon their appearing, the Advocate General said he did not intend putting any questions to them.

This was the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Minchin now rose, and submitted the following matters of law to the Court; the learned Counsel contented in the first place, that the prisoners Domingo Rozario, Jacob Fuzze and Carolus Pereira having been passengers on board, they did not come under the meaning of the act; and 2dly, that the native prisoners and Mr. Daviot being foreigners, they could not be brought to trial in the Supreme Court under any statute of Great Britain, inasmuch as they, like all other foreigners, when not within British jurisdiction, were liable to their own laws or to the laws of the places they may be at, where the offence is charged to have been committed; the charter of the Supreme Court was confined to persons amenable to the Supreme Court in its ordinary jurisdiction; and 3dly, that no evidence other than the ship's articles can be produced to show that the prisoners were Mariners; and 4thly, that the Indictment ought to have averred that the prisoners are British subjects and amenable to the Admiralty jurisdiction of the Court.

The learned Counsel cited a variety of authorities, — and submitted that as against all the prisoners, save Mr. Allen, who was an Englishman, the Court had no jurisdiction and could not therefore entertain the Indictment.

The Advocate General was heard in reply.

His Lordship the Chief Justice said, he thought the objection on behalf of the prisoners Domingo Rozario, Jacob Fuze and Carolus Pereira, was valid. The act did not extend to passengers, and these prisoners were entitled to their acquittal; to Atto there was no evidence against him, and consequently he would have the same benefit as to the other points. His Lordship thought it was not necessary to produce the ship's articles; that the Supreme Court had jurisdiction to try the prisoners, and that the cause ought to go to the Jury.

Mr. Minchin then rose again, the Indictment charged the revolt to have been committed on board the Bark Skimmer, whereas the evidence went to prove that the vessel was called The Skimmer, and not The Bark Skimmer. — The learned Counsel contended that the variance was fatal.

His Lordship the Chief Justice, however, overruled the objection, being of opinion that the evidence sufficiently supported the Indictment in that respect.

The prisoners were now called upon for their defence, when they put in the following written defence.

May it please your Lordship, and Gentlemen of the Jury, — Our defence to this charge, as you may have collected from the line of cross-examination pursued by our Counsel, is based on the imperative necessity which existed at the time, that we for the preservation of the ship, the ship's company, passengers, and our own lives, should take upon ourselves the very great responsibility of depriving the prosecutor of the command of his ship, till we could bring him before authority competent to decide on the question of the propriety or impropriety of our actions; and, Gentlemen, we freely admit, that no trivial occurrence would have justified us in so doing; but when we show to you the conduct of Captain Gillon, on every occasion since we had the misfortune to join the vessel under his command, we are confident that your verdict will not only exonerate us from their charge, but will fully exculpate us from all criminality whatever on the subject.

Gentlemen, before we proceed to detail the circumstances immediately attendant on the confinement of the prosecutor, it will be necessary for us, as shortly as possible, to bring to your notice his conduct for some time previous; almost every act which will tend to shew, that the sequel which actually occurred was to be expected.

On the 10th of September last, shortly after we had joined the ship, we arrived at Trincomalee with a Naig and several Sepoys in the service of the Danish Government, destined to the Danish settlement in the Nicobar Islands. Captain Gillon had also in his charge about 800 rupees, and certain stores for the Governor of the settlement; at Trincomalee we took on board 400 peculs of ebony, belonging to Mr. Brook, on freight for Singapore, Captain Gillon receiving the whole freight in advance.

Shortly after our arrival at Trincomalee, a petition was sent to the Admiral from several of the crew, stating that their wages had not been paid, upon which coming to Captain Gillon's knowledge, he weighed from Trincomalee in the middle of the night of the — September and stood towards the Nicobar Islands.

Two days after leaving Trincomalee, he commenced a series of arbitrary treatment against those of the ship's company who had presented the petition to the Admiral;

among these were the gunner and carpenter, against the former of whom he ran with a drawn sword, and would have cut him down but for the interference of the Danish Havildar; he afterwards loaded a musket, and presented it at the gunner, when he was prevented by the second Officer, Mr. Allen.

In a few days afterwards we reached the Nicobars, and on entering Nancoury Harbour, which is the name of the Danish settlement there, Captain Gillon ascertained that the former Governor was dead: upon which he determined to proclaim himself Governor in his stead. He accordingly directed that a red flag with a yellow cross, which is used as No. 7 in Marryatt's Code of Signals, to be hoisted at the gaff peak, which bears a strong similarity to the Danish National flag. He desired the people of the settlement to cause the Government House to be repaired for him, and appointed a time for the inhabitants to swear allegiance to him, and upon D'Acunyah, the assistant to the former Governor, remonstrating with him, a quarrel ensued between them, during which he, Captain Gillon, threatened to shoot D'Acunyah and actually loaded a musket for the purpose, and afterwards caused D'Acunyah to be placed in irons, in such away as to cause him the greatest torture, in which position he remained till Captain Gillon was himself confined.

In the mean time the schooner Bassin Merchant arrived at Nancowry Harbour, upon which Capt. Gillon directed the British ensign to be hoisted; Capt. Snowball, the master of the schooner coming aboard the Skimmer, Capt. Gillon informed him he was Governor of the settlement, and offered to freight Captain Snowball's vessel and pay him from the funds of the Danish Government entrusted to him, and from which he had already taken the sum of 100 rupees; but Captain Snowball refused to have any thing to say to him, and cautioned him as to his conduct towards the natives, as if he offended them they would surely cut off the vessel.

After the departure of the Bassin Merchant, Captain Gillon again hoisted the same red flag and continued to act as if he were the Governor, but from the circumstances of his having used the British ensign while the schooner was in the harbour, the natives became distrustful of him and refused to have any thing further to say to him, although he had advanced goods in exchange for copra and beetle-nut, and cocoanut; the more especially, as when any of the natives did come on board, he treated them in the roughest manner, and frequently threatened to put them in irons, so that at last they refused to furnish us with any provisions at all; the officers and crew were reduced to use rice and salt fish.

About 11 o'clock at night of the 29th of November, Captain Gillon, who at the time was quite intoxicated, ordered the boat to go on shore to drink with the natives; and, accordingly, accompanied by Mr. Allen, who went with him at the request of Mr. Daviot, the Chief Officer, for his protection, he went on shore taking with him a considerable quantity of liquor; when he got on shore, he commenced knocking at the doors of the native houses and requesting them to drink; and drinking himself at the same till he got excessively intoxicated; he then commenced using indecent familiarities towards the native women, which so irritated the natives that they would have murdered him, and one actually took a spear for the purpose, but was prevented by Mr. Allen, who after great difficulty got him on board the ship.

The natives were so much incensed at the general conduct of Captain Gillon, that they vowed they would be revenged on him, of which he was aware, as on the following day he gave Mr. Allen a spear, telling him he knew how to use it, in the event of the rascals, meaning the people of the Island, making an attempt at his life.

The foregoing details will tend to shew (and many more could be brought forward if necessary, amongst others his making his crew dive for pearls in 13 fathoms water where no oyster was ever heard of) the arbitrary and violent conduct of Captain Gillon, we shall now proceed to the circumstances which were the proximate cause of his confinement.

On the night of the 2d of December, at about half past 10, Captain Gillon went up to Mr. Daviot and commenced abusing him about the rigging of the ship; and upon his remonstrating, Captain Gillon called Mr. Daviot a coward and made use of other abusive language—Mr. Daviot replied I am not a coward, but I do not wish to make any disturbance on board the ship.

Captain Gillon then ran into the cuddy and brought out two swords, one of which he threw down on the deck, calling upon Mr. Daviot to take it up and defend himself, and upon Mr. Daviot retreating, he rushed at him and struck at him with the sword, which Mr. Daviot avoided by running forward among the crew; after some time Captain Gillon returned into the cuddy, but shortly afterwards again came out with one of the swords in his hand, looking for the scabbard which he had thrown away; Mr. Daviot was at the time standing near the gangway; upon Captain Gillon seeing him he again flew at him, and would have cut him down but Mr. Allen drew him out of the way.

Mr. Daviot in his own defence then, with the assistance of the crew, disarmed Captain Gillon, who was exceedingly violent, so much so, that it was necessary to confine him in irons to prevent his having again recourse to similar conduct.

On the following morning one or two of the people of the Island came on board and upon ascertaining that Captain Gillon was confined, stated that it was very fortunate as the natives had determined, if he pursued the same conduct towards them, that they would cut off the ship and murder every person on board.

In the course of the morning we held a consultation as to what was to be done, at which the whole crew declared that if Captain Gillon was set at liberty their lives would be in danger, and that they would desert the ship; upon which we determined, under all the circumstances of the case, that we would continue Captain Gillon in confinement and sail to Trincomalee and deliver him up to the Admiral, to be dealt with according to law, which we considered the only course we should be justified in adopting.

In order, however, to show that we were not actuated by any spirit of hostility towards Captain Gillon, we determined before leaving the Nicobars to collect the cargo which he had purchased there, which we accordingly did, and during all the time he was in confinement we supplied him with the best food that could be obtained; taking care that he should be served before ourselves, and making his confinement as easy to him as possible; and to shew that we had no idea of concealing what we had done, we caused the circumstances attendant on Captain Gillon's confinement to be entered on the log of the ship.

Upon Captain Gillon understanding that we were about to sail to Trincomalee, he declared that it would be an act of barratry, as he had cargo on board for Pondicherry; we therefore, on the 1st of January, 1836, sailed for that port, intending to land the cargo there and afterwards proceed to Trincomalee; but on our arrival at Pondicherry, and on reporting the circumstances to the French Government, Captain Gillon was taken on shore.

These, Gentlemen, are the simple facts of the case as they actually occurred, and it will be for you to say whether under all the circumstances we were not fully justified in our conduct.

You will perceive that so long as Captain Gillon confined himself to mere threats against the crew, we did not interfere; that when he assumed a power to which he had no right, we did not interfere; and that notwithstanding his tyrannical and arbitrary conduct towards the natives, by which he put our very lives in danger, we only endeavoured to avert its effects; but, Gentlemen, when he went far beyond this—when he attempted to make his own quarter deck a scene of bloodshed, if not of murder, we considered that he had forfeited all claim to further forbearance, and that to put him in confinement till we could hand him over to a competent tribunal, was the only alternative left for the preservation of our lives and the safety of the vessel.

Captain Snowball sworn, examined by Mr. Minchin. I am Captain of the Bascien Merchant; I went to the Nicobars; there was there the bark Skimmer, Captain Gillon. I remained at the island 8 or 10 days; Captain Gillon said he had come there as Governor. The natives came on board my ship and told me (here witness was interrupted and informed, what the natives told him was no evidence)—I did not communicate to Captain Gillon what the natives had told me. I did not give Captain Gillon any advice. The natives came off and told me—(here witness was again reminded that that was not evidence) I did not tell Captain Gillon what I had heard.

D'Acunyah sworn, examined by Mr. Minchin. I am the second Governor, watching nutmeg trees. The Governor was dead; witness went into a long statement of Captain Gillon's doings at the Nicobars; witness was in irons, and in a dreadful state of suffering; saw the acts which led to Captain Gillon's confinement, and spoke of his violent conduct. The natives would not give him assistance, but when he was put in irons they supplied the ship with every thing.

Jacobus Hughes, sworn, stated the whole of the facts, that Captain Gillon once went ashore accompanied by witness; that he was in a state of intoxication; that he attempted to take indecent familiarities with the wife of a native, who took down a spear and was on the point of having it through Captain Gillon's body, when he, Captain Gillon, was saved by the interference of Mr. Allen; that he was taken on board in a state of utter inebriety; that he flourished his sword at Mr. Daviot and returned with a sword in one hand and a cegar in his mouth; that the crew had wretched treatment and food during the time he was at large, and the natives refused to assist the ship; and that when the Captain was in irons, the natives came and brought with them abundance of every thing the crew could want; and they had abundance of good and fresh provisions; that if any complaint was made to Captain Gillon about their fare, his reply was—"What—do you come on board my ship to eat kubbaub?"—that his conduct towards his crew was violent and utterly unbecoming.

John A. Arbuthnot, Esq., sworn, stated that he had some knowledge of Mr. Daviot, and knew him to have been in command of ships himself—ships that have been consigned to the firm of Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., witness never heard anything against Mr. Daviot; witness had not any knowledge of Mr. Daviot other than such as he derived from the circumstance of Mr. Daviot being in command.

J. Rodgers, Esq. sworn. Witness stated he knew Mr. Daviot from the year 1819—always knew him as Commander of vessels—never as mate; Mr. Daviot is a humane and altogether well meaning man.

Mr. Allen here addressed himself to the Jury and said he was a perfect stranger at Madras, and it was therefore not in his power to offer evidence of character.

This was the case for the defence.

His Lordship the Chief Justice commenced summing up about 20 minutes to 10 o'clock. His Lordship went through the whole of the evidence, and concluded a brilliant charge at about quarter past eleven.

The Jury retired for 3 or 4 minutes and returned with a verdict of Not Guilty—the prisoners were thereupon immediately discharged.

The Court House was literally crammed as full as it could hold.—Madras Herald.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 30.

In the matter of William Fairlie Clarke and others.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause against a rule obtained by Mr. Advocate General on a former day, directing that the Bank of Bengal be admitted to prove their claims, as creditor against the estate, of Sa. Rs. 6,52,156, and that it be entered on the schedule accordingly. The facts were, that the late firm of Alexander and Co. having become much embarrassed, a deed had been executed, bearing date 15th February, 1832, by which the firms of Cluttonden and Co., Mackintosh and Co., Colvin and Co., and Fergusson and Co. had agreed to accept accommodation bills for Alexander and Co. to the extent of twenty lakhs of Rupees, and very extensive real property was conveyed to trustees to indemnify the firms. Colvin and Co. declined acting under this deed, and were therefore no parties to the present question. On the 13th of September, 1832, a letter was addressed by Alexander and Co. to the three firms, announcing an error in the deed, and that the Union Bank had a prior lien over the property: this was admitted by the mortgagees. Other transaction having taken place, on the 17th of September, 1832, a similar deed was executed to indemnify the same three firms for acceptances to the extent of Sa. Rs. 18,25,947, mortgaging the same property to them with the rent, profits, &c., excepting two sums of Sa. Rs. 1,16,000 and 69,000 of Indigo of the ensuing season, which had been sold. These acceptances had been discounted at the Bank of Bengal to the amount of Sa. Rs. 17,730,49, and were due to that establishment when Alexander and Co. failed on the 2nd of December, 1832. The Bank applied to the three firms for payment, and the latter solicited time, and as a security assigned to the Bank the whole of the property which had been mortgaged to them, by an instrument dated 18th December, 1832. On the 18th November, 1833, the Bank of Bengal sent to the assignees of Alexander and Co. a valuation of the property, and also consented to advance them Rs. 7,11,500 for the purpose of carrying on the factories. This was done without the consent of the other firms or their assignees. On the 5th of April, 1834, the assignees of Alexander and Co. proposed to redeem the mortgaged property at price much lower than the debt due; and there was a letter from the assignees of the three firms, giving a guarded and conditional assent to this redemption. The Bank were not to lose any claim they might then have by permitting the assignees to redeem, nor were the estates of the three firms to lose any defence they might then have against the claim. In short, the redemption being for the benefit of all parties, was agreed to by some and not opposed by others on the express understanding that the legal position of all parties was not to be in any way affected by it. The difference between the sum realized and the amount due for principal and interest was what was now claimed by the Bank. The learned counsel contended that the law and facts were both in favor of his clients; he argued the law on the ground of the Bank having traded with the property, made large advances for indigo cultivation, and treating it as their own instead of immediately selling it, and all this without the consent of the guaranteees. He cited Nisbit v. Smith 2. Bro. 579; The Bank of Ireland v. Beresford 6. Dow. 235. Rers v. Berrington 2 Ves. jun. 542 and Burke's case 6 Ves. 809, and on the common law side, Canty on Bills 411. He admitted that there was no case in point, and that these were cases of giving time; but he said that the principle on which all the decrees and judgments proceeded both at equity and in law, immediately applied, and that the Bank could not be let in but in opposition to these principles.

Mr. Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep were then heard in support of the rule. They admitted that the assignees of Fergusson and Co. had acted prudently in refusing to pay so large a sum unless by the direction of the court. That there had been an error, and too much indulgence on the part of the Bank, who should have proved against the three firms in the first instance, and then sold the estates for the deficits. Mr. Clarke had not shewn that the estates had been injured by the advance of the Bank; the fact was the contrary, and no time had been given but what was for the benefit of all parties. This put the question on a different footing from the cases cited by Mr. Clarke, who had proceeded on the ground of the parties having been damaged by delay or improper indulgence.

Mr. Justice Malkin thought the question was too important for him to give a decision without further consideration.

In the matter of W. and G. A. Prinsep.

Mr. Prinsep presented a petition from the insolvents, praying that the court would proceed to a hearing on the 25th of June next, the date to which the matters stand adjourned, and then regularly adjudicate the case, or dismiss the petition altogether.

Mr. Justice Malkin ordered that this petition, and that of the same parties for a release should be taken into consideration on the 25th of June next, and that the insolvents then hold themselves prepared for examination.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

PYROTECHNICAL EXHIBITION AT HOWRAH.—There was a grand pyrotechnical exhibition and a nautch, on the night of the 6th May, at the residence of the Baboos Mullick, at Howrah, in honor of the marriages of the sons of Baboo Sreenauth Mullick and the late Baboo Hurraynauth Mullick, the former to a daughter of Baboo Ramdhun Mitter. There had been a great illumination and nautches for three days previously; and the tamasha terminated on the 7th May. There were a great many respectable ladies and gentlemen present on the occasion. The fireworks were very beautiful and admirably managed, and reflect great credit on the native artiste who prepared them. There was a native fort, which was stormed in a gallant style by a body of British soldiers, and ultimately blown up, victors and vanquished being sent whirling into the air in a blaze; and the flights of rockets and thousands of stars shot up were really splendid. The nautches were stupid enough, and no sooner did the first rocket announce that the fire-works had commenced, than Bebee Bunnoo and her daughters were almost entirely deserted, and left to waste their graceful exhibitions for the entertainment of a few greasy Baboos and Portuguese ayahs. The crowd of natives was so great, that it was with difficulty we could thread our way through them; but we believe, nevertheless, that with the exception of a few huts being set on fire by a rocket, the flames of which were quickly extinguished, and a gentleman receiving a slight burn, no accident of any kind took place. About half past eleven, some of the ladies were conducted by the Baboo to a house at a little distance from the bungalow in which the nautch girls were exhibiting, where refreshments were laid out for them; but they were not long allowed to remain there uninterrupted, for some hungry gentlemen, who had collected in a crowd at the door of the house, forced themselves in—despite the resistance of the sepoys placed at the entrance, and the remonstrances of the Baboo—and sans ceremonie seized upon the wines and viands, which speedily disappeared under their vigorous attacks.

COLONEL DUNDAS.—The general court-martial held on Col. Dundas at Nusseerabad, has fully and honorably acquitted him.

THE LADY GRANT.—The Lady Grant has been examined in Messrs. W. S. Joy and Co.'s dock, and found to be uninjured by grounding on the Sumatra sand.

THE SYLPH.—OURANG-OUTANGS.—The Sylph has been minutely examined by an eminently qualified surveyor, who has pronounced her repairs to have been completed in the most perfect manner, and that the vessel has not been in the least strained, or is in any way less valuable than before the accident which befell her. She is now thoroughly repaired, new coppered, and ready to depart for the Straits again. Two ourang-outangs have been brought round in the Sylph, a full grown female and a young male.

NEW STEAMERS.—Official intelligence has been received relative to the two steamers building for the Company in England. Their engine power is to be that of 200 horses for each vessel. They are both destined for Bombay, under restrictions not to be employed as packets.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—Letters received from factories to the eastward report a fine shower on the 28th April, in Myzaming, Dacca, and as far as Rajeshye; so that for the present the indigo planters are in no distress for want of rain. At Moorshedabad, however, the Junghipore concern is suffering severely and complaints pour in from almost every other part of the country, of the want of rain. The plant is generally reported to be very stunted in growth and actually dying in some places. It is expected that the crop this year will be considerably less than that of the last season.

Favorable accounts have been received from Tirhoot.

MR. JOHN BELL.—Mr. John Bell has been appointed Inspector of Customs, on a salary of 800 rupees per month.

THE NEW MAUND.—The merchants and traders of Calcutta, it is said, intend to adopt the new maund, consisting of forty seers of eighty tolas each, as the measure of weight, as well as the Company's rupee as the measure of value and account, in all their dealings.

SUPPRESSION OF PIRACY.—His Majesty's Ship Andromachs proceeds immediately to the Straits, and such ample powers are entrusted to Capt. Chads, that it is hoped something effectual will be done for the suppression of piracy.

WOMANS.—At Comartoles, in Calcutta, a native of respectable family, who had been deranged for many years, wounded his own mother, sister and brother (with whom he was living) with a tulwar, so severely that the brother died from the wounds he had received.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The Library subscription list is now on the increase. There are fourteen first class subscribers, five subscribers of the second class, and two of the third class. The Library is to be open from sunrise to sunset every day for the future, Sundays excepted.

OBILITERATION OF SIGNATURES FROM BANK NOTES BY COPPER.—A number of bank-notes without signatures, were presented bonâ fide by a native, who stated them to have been kept for sometime in a copper box, but was unable to explain how they came without signatures; but he declared his belief that they bore the usual signatures when put into the box. None of the printing appeared defective, and there were several native endorsements upon the notes in Bengalee ink, but no English writing whatever. The Bank registers showed that notes of corresponding numbers and amounts had been regularly issued and were still in circulation; but the Secretary refused to pay them without the special authority of the directors. The Assay Master has been requested to enquire and report upon the probability of the signatures being erased by damp or other means. In an experiment tried by Mr. Prinsep, writing traced on a piece of paper with common ink, being placed between two plates of copper, was soon entirely obliterated.

AFFAIRS OF BARRETTO AND SONS.—The liquidation of the debts of the estate of Barretto and Sons, is going on satisfactorily. The sale of the docks for 204,000 rupees, which there was at one time an idea of cancelling for want of the required security, has been rendered effective, and the instalments are in progress of realization during the ensuing twelve months. From Fergusson and Co.'s Assignees dividends have been received to the amount of about 48,000 rupees, and as it is expected that estate will make another dividend of ten per cent. next year, there may with interest and dock-rent arrears be about three lakhs in hand twelve months hence. At present all the receipts are paid into Court to wait the issue of two equity suits, which, however, will probably be determined by that time.

MR. JOHN TYTLER.—It is said that Mr. John Tytler is a candidate for the situation of Agent to the upper Orphan School; and that if he succeeds to the appointment, he will resign the medical service in England.

WET DOCK IN CALCUTTA.—It is said, that a plan for a wet dock in the heart of Calcutta, has been submitted to the Governor-General by Capt. Johnston, which is estimated to cost forty lakhs of rupees.

THE APPEAL-RESCINDING ACT.—The reply of the local Government to the petition recently sent in, requesting to be reformed as to the law under which British-born subjects residing in the Mofussil, shall live, after the contemplated Appeal-Rescinding Act shall be passed into law, was published on the 7th May. The Government state, that the proposed act will make no alteration whatever in any part of the substantive law; that the Company's Courts will decide according to equity and good conscience, only in cases in which no other rule exists; and that the English law of inheritance, marriage, and succession, as now in force with respect to British subjects residing in the Mofussil, will still continue in force after the passing of the proposed act.

The Black Act, despite all remonstrance, has been perpetrated—the proposed Act, No. XI. of 1836, rescinding the 107th section of the 53rd Geo. 3rd admitting of appeal from the decisions of the Mofussil Courts to the Supreme Court, was passed into a law by the Governor-General in Council on the 9th May, and published in the Official Gazette on the 11th. British-born subjects are now made over to the tender mercies of the magnates of the Mofussil, to be judged by their consciences and sense of equity. A meeting has been summoned by the Sheriff of the Town Hall on the 18th June, to petition Parliament against the Act.

ATROCITIES AT KALEE GHAT.—A priest of the temple of the goddess Kales, it is said, waited on the Editor of the Durpan, and stated that he was shocked by the atrocities he had seen perpetrated there and was resolved to bring them to light. He put down upon paper, that on several occasions individuals, dwelling in the immediate vicinity of the temple in unsuspecting confidence, have been seized in the dead of night and put to death, as an offering to the goddess; that some of these cases have been brought to the notice of the magistrate, but that through the great wealth and influence of the priests, and the Hindu partialities of the native officers deputed to investigate the matter, the enquiry has been stifled, and such report made as was calculated to lull suspicion asleep. A Serjeant and his party have since been posted at Kali Ghaut in order to put a stop to the revolting acts which of late have been perpetrated at that shrine of villainous notoriety.

GOOMSTUN.—Eight Staff Officers of the Madras army, under orders of the Supreme Government, have been temporarily placed at the disposal of the Madras Commander-in-Chief for employment with their regiments on field service at Goomsun. This looks as if a protracted contest was anticipated in that quarter.

THE COINAGE.—Complaints still continue to pour in from the Mofussil about the inconvenience and annoyance concomitant on the introduction of the new currency, from which we derive that the nuisance is unabated.

Government issued an act on the 25th May, intimating that from the 1st January, 1838, the sicca rupee shall cease to be a legal tender, and that from the 1st of June, 1836, the trisoollee pice shall cease to circulate in any place, except Benares and Furruckabad, at par with the Calcutta sicca pice.

CHANGE OF EDITOR.—Another, and another, still ever changing! Once more the management of the Oriental Observer is said to have passed from the hands of the sapient Editor of the Englishman.

FEVER HOSPITAL.—The Committee formed to take measures to establish a Fever Hospital, met on the 6th May, for the purpose of ascertaining what progress had been made during the past year in carrying into effect the object in view, and to determine upon the course of proceeding for the future. The Committee have been most active and judicious in all their measures, but all their efforts to move the native community to exert themselves in the cause, have proved almost fruitless. The whole sum that has been raised is rupees 24,050, of which sum 19,000 rupees have been subscribed by the Rajah of Burdwan, Dwarkanauth Tagore, Rustomjee Cowasjee, Rajchunder Doss, Prosannocomar Tagore, and Madab Dutt, under these circumstances, the Committee have been induced to depart from their original resolution of not soliciting subscriptions from Christians, and have determined to ask the aid of the European community. Sirs E. Ryan and J. P. Grant have already subscribed, the former five hundred and the latter three hundred rupees, as donation, in addition to annual subscriptions of fifty and one hundred rupees.

ACCIDENTS.—Thirteen men were recently picked up from a drift-log in the river, by the Forbes. They were the crews of two boats that had left Saugor with fifteen men on the commencement of the flood and had been capsize on the Spit sand off Mud-punt. They had been in the water seven hours, and the two of their number that were missing, had lost their hold from exhaustion and been drowned.

Mr. C. N. Phillips, Surgeon of the Victory, suddenly disappeared on the morning of the 12th May, while bathing alongside of that vessel. It is supposed that he was seized by a shark.

HURRY RAO'S VAKEL.—The Vakeel deputed by Hurry Rao to Government, has arrived in Calcutta with a large retinue, and is located at Baligunge.

FORGERY.—A native of respectable connexions, who by his own dissipated extravagance has reduced himself from affluence to penury, was detected endeavouring to pass a forged promissory note, purporting to be drawn by Baboo Shamlal Tagore and accepted by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. He has been confined in the Town Guard, and the police are investigating the case.

ROBBERIES, &c.—Another very impudent robbery was committed in the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. A sum of rupees 6,250, brought from the Bank of Bengal in notes, by one of the sircars, was left upon his desk for a moment while he went to speak to the Baboo who called him. On the sircar's return, the notes were missing; he in consequence immediately went to the Bank, where he found they had already been presented and changed for small notes and cash, by one Cossinath Chatterjee, a writer in the office. As the man was known to live on the other side of the river, he was immediately followed by the sircar, who had the good luck to catch him just going off in a boat, and thereby recovered the whole amount. The thief has been sent to the police.

Several robberies, it is said, have also recently taken place in the environs of Calcutta. About half a dozen have been perpetrated on the Chumputollah road, eight miles from Calcutta, and in one instance two men were killed. People have now become so much afraid to pass in that direction, that they prefer making a circuit of three or four miles.

Mr. Commissioner Pigou's house in Allipore, was also entered by a gang of thieves on the morning of the 10th May, who carried away a large side board from the house to the back of Mr. Justice O'Hanlon's premises, where they broke it open and escaped with plate and other articles of considerable value.

Some of the thieves have since been detected and been committed by the magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs; and twelve cart-loads of non, which had been regularly cleared out of the Custom House, but never heard of afterwards, have been found buried in the yard of a house in Allipore.

Mr. Dyson, Serjeant of Entally, was robbed on the 15th May, of jewels to the value of 1,400 rupees and 122 rupees in cash. The robbery was perpetrated early in the evening while Mr. Dyson's family were at Divine Service.

A dacoity is stated to have occurred on the 12th May, at Bouree, in the jurisdiction of the Twenty-four Pargunnahs, to investigate the circumstances connected with which, an European officer, assisted by a body of native police, has been deputed, with directions to arrest the perpetrators, if possible. The robbery was attended by torture, but no lives were sacrificed on the occasion. The dacoits are supposed to be from the Hoogly zillah, and are suspected of having been concerned in former outrages of a like nature.

About five o'clock on the morning of the 20th May, a robbery took place in the house of an opulent native female residing in Harcata Gully near Potulidanga Thannah. Three or four men went to the door of the house, and having knocked at it, enquired for the owner, and were answered from within by a female servant, that it being the Dashorah her mistress had gone to the river side in order to bathe, and that she could not open the door until she returned. The party outside on this replied that they had brought a present of mangoes from a Baboo to whom she was well known, and on this representation the fastenings were unloosed. This had no sooner been done, than the thieves laid hold of the servant, and after binding her hands and feet, stuffed a cloth into her mouth, in order that she might not be able to cry out for assistance. They then proceeded into the rooms of the house, and took away property in silver and other articles to a considerable amount.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.—An attempt to rob the house of a gentleman residing in the suburbs of Calcutta, was made by a gang of thieves on the night of the 22d May. The gentleman, however, was fortunately awakened by the barking of his dogs, when the thieves ran away, but not before one of them was wounded with a dirk with which the gentleman had armed himself. From the quantity of blood left on the spot, it is conjectured that the thief has been severely hurt, and it is expected that his wound will lead to his apprehension.

MURDER.—An old woman, who led a secluded life in the Burra Bazaar, was found dead on the morning of the 12th May. A piece of cloth was fastened round her neck, which had obviously been used to strangle her. Jewellery and other articles to the amount of two or three hundred rupees were taken away by the murderers from the dwelling of the unfortunate woman. Five of the villains who murdered the old woman have since been detected through the praiseworthy exertions of the police, and are in confinement. It is expected that some others who participated in the perpetration of the horrid deed, and have hitherto baffled the exertions of police to detect them, will soon be apprehended.

THE STOLEN BUGGIES.—The Chief Magistrate has been engaged investigating a charge brought against two of the Mysore Princes, in which it was alleged that they had received two buggies, recently stolen in Calcutta, under circumstances of a not very creditable description. The buggies were found in the possession of the Princes who had purchased them at a low price, and shortly afterwards made some very material alterations in their build; but as there was nothing in the case, that connected them with the offence of stealing in Calcutta, and the receiving the stolen property not having taken place within the jurisdiction of the Chief Magistrate, the case has been handed over to the Court in the 24-Purunnahs.

BRIBERY.—One of the native Amlah, a Moonshie of the Ainbala Circle, was charged with several cases of bribery, but the proof not being sufficiently strong to admit of severe punishment, he has been dismissed.

The investigations of Mr. Officiating Commissioner Gordon into the charges preferred against the record keeper of the Hooghly Collectorate, have also terminated in a similar result—that officer having only been displaced from his situation for want of direct legal evidence to substantiate the charges. He has either appealed or is about to appeal to the Supreme Government against the decision of the Sudder Board.

LAND RESUMPTION.—It is stated that a gentleman of the Civil Service is about to visit Singapore on a land resumption expedition, that is, he is to enquire into the nature of all the grants that have been made in that settlement, and to see whether the revenue cannot be increased on behalf of the Company.

DR. VOS.—This meritorious public officer, who was for many years Police Surgeon of Calcutta, died on the 16th May.

CIVIL SERVICE.—The adopted son of Rajah Rammohun Roy has been appointed to the Civil Service by Sir J. C. Hobhouse.

MILITARY PENSIONS.—The new regulation for the army pension is arrived. It gives to officers at twenty-five years' service the pension of a Major, &c., yet does not prejudice those officers who by good fortune may have attained a higher grade in the same period.

RESTORATION OF A FINE.—GOVERNMENT CIRCULAR ORDER.—The case of a fine recently levied upon an Englishman by a Magistrate of Monghyr, for refusing to answer the official enquiries relative to his authority for residing in the district, has occasioned the circular order of Government to be revoked which required annual lists to be furnished containing particulars of Europeans residing in the Mofussil—this revocation being limited to those districts in which Englishmen are now permitted by the Charter to reside without license. The fine of twenty-five rupees levied by the Magistrate on a gentleman at Monghyr, has been ordered to be returned.

HAJA PRATAP CHUND, BAHADUR, OF BURDWAN.—It now appears that there is some truth in the reports of the re-appearance of Rajah Pratap Chund, Bahadur, of Burdwan. Enquiries have been made by various native as well as European gentlemen as to their truth, by personal conferences with the individual representing himself to be the Rajah,—who has been imprisoned with about one hundred and fifty of his followers, on an allowance of two pice a day,—and the result has been such as to leave little doubt of the individual identity. Mr. Shaw has had a conference of three hours' duration with the putative Rajah, and is persuaded that he is not an impostor. Government have sent peremptory orders to the Commissioner of Burdwan, to investigate promptly into the case and have also written a letter to Prannauth Baboo, calling upon him to report minutely and without delay, as to when and at what age Pratap Chund died, where his body was burned, whether there has not been a report since the time that the Rajah's demise was announced, that he did not actually die, and how that report originated, and whether the person now claiming the title is or is not the real Pratap Chund. The investigation by the Commissioner is now going on.

ICE AND NOTIONS.—The Warsaw, with 250 tons of ice and other articles, left Boston on the 26th of December last, and another ship was to be dispatched in all February. The Warsaw arrived on the 17th May. The ice received per Warsaw, is advertised for sale at the reduced rate of three annas per seer. The apples and other notions have all turned out bad.

REPORTS ON QUALIFICATION OF SUBORDINATES.—The Court of Directors have ordered the discontinuance of the reports required from Boards and other superior local authorities on the character and qualifications of subordinates.

DEPUTY MASTER ATTENDANT.—In consequence of the decease of Captain Collic, the late Deputy Master Attendant of Calcutta, Captain Clapperton has been appointed to officiate in that grade during the absence of Captain Harrington, on leave—Captain Robinson to officiate as second assistant as before. It is understood that the Deputy Master Attendantship will not be filled up, but referred for the Court's orders.

NATIVE EDUCATION.—"The native gentlemen resident at Benares, His Highness the Nuwab Ekbul-ud-Dowlah, Raja Kaley Shunker Ghosaul, and Baboo Rajindro Mitter, have been appointed by Government, Members of the Local Committee of Public Instruction at that station."

FREE SCHOOL.—Capt. R. J. H. Birch has been appointed to a Governorship of the Free School vice Major Taylor resigned.

MENAGERIE AT BARRACKPORE.—It is said that the Menagerie at Barrackpore is being revived. Rajah Rajnarain last week made an addition to it, by presenting the Misses Eden with a porcupine, a couple of sloths, four peacocks, a couple of monkeys, a parakeet, a parot and a loorie.

SIR C. METCALFE.—A letter from Allahabad states, that Sir Charles Metcalfe intend to proceed to Agra by steam, on the 16th of June.

CRUTTENDEN AND CO.'S ESTATE.—The indigo shipped to London last year by the late Assignee of the Estate of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co., it is said, will yield a surplus of £7,000 or £8000 above the advances made on it.

SPORTING.—The following resolution has been passed by the stewards of the next Calcutta Races:—"That maidens at the Hadjepore Meeting be considered as maidens at the Calcutta Races, provided sealed nominations and subscriptions be received by the Calcutta secretary before the first day of the Hadjepore Meeting.

It is said that Lord Auckland, with the view of promoting the revival of the Calcutta Turf, has intimated his intention of presenting a cup, to be run for at the next races.

OUTRAGE.—On the evening of the 25th May, a palanquin, containing the female members of the family of a native gentleman of respectability, was attacked on the road leading from Chitpore to Colotollah, and close to the Police Constable's house, by a gang of ruffians composed of Europeans and East Indians, with the intent of robbing the inmates of their jewels, &c.; the villains were however frustrated in their attempt by the intrepid conduct of the bijobassees attending the palanquin, who seized one of the ruffians and held him fast until he obtained assistance, although he was assailed and severely beaten by the rest of the parties.

MOFUSSIL.

MURNAUL.—One of the privates of the 13th Light Infantry, without any known cause, loaded his musket with three pice, and deliberately and coolly shot one of his comrades.

MUTTRA.—The Raja of Bhurtpore arrived at Muttra on the 13th April, and after remaining four days, in consequence of the indisposition of his mother, continued his route to the Ganges. His majesty distributed alms to the Brahmins and purchased some genuine relics.

ALLROHUR.—A new and large gunge has just been built in the town of Coel, and settlers established by the exertions of the Collector.

UGGOREE.—The Uggoree affair, it appears, has not yet terminated. The Magistrate of Mirzapore, who had gone out to apprehend the people of the Rajah of Burhur, was obliged to halt at the Soan, on whose opposite bank five or six hundred men were ranged in hostile array, armed with bows, arrows, &c. The rabble was soon dispersed, and their ringleaders fled and took refuge in the Kewah Rajah's territories. The Rajah has refused to give up these men; and the Magistrate has returned with the loss of five or six of his party, and applied for an increase of force and a couple of guns, with which, when granted, he will recommence hostilities.

RUNJEET SINGH.—It is stated that Runjeet Singh is about to make a strong appeal to the British Government against the sinfulness of slaughtering horned cattle.

AGRA.—Two murders were committed on the 27th April in the 45th regt. N. I. A sepoy and the head native doctor of the regiment were killed by being struck on the head, it is supposed, with some heavy instrument, as both their skulls were dreadfully fractured. A heavy dumbell was found in a well with marks of blood upon it; but, although every effort has been made to trace the murderers, they remain undiscovered.

AURA.—Mr. Laing, it is said, has resigned the Company's service, and Mr. Blunt has succeeded to the appointment vacated by him.

It is reported that Col. Lumley will soon vacate his present appointment and be succeeded by Col. Dunlop.

CANNFORD.—A considerable sensation has been excited in the society of this station, by the arrest of Captain Ford, paymaster of H. M. 16th foot, under a charge of being a defaulter to the amount of Rs. 50,000.

A report has reached Agra of the murder of the Sergeant Major of the 69th and his wife, by some sepoy of that regiment. The cause assigned for the act was the detection by the murdered officer of some irregularities among the sepoy, and the subsequent report of them to the Regimental Staff.

BRIGADIER HAMPTON.—It is said that Brigadier Hampton is about to prosecute the Agra Ukhbar for libel, for stating that he was about to be removed from his command at Neemuch and appointed to a subordinate situation more suited to his temper and talent.

DR. HENDERSON, THE TRAVELLER.—The friends of the late doctor John Henderson are exerting themselves to raise a monument over his remains by subscription, to bear a suitable inscription.

PRIME.—A report prevails in the city, that immediately Sir Charles Metcalfe shall have established himself at Agra, Wulley Ayud, the heir apparent to the throne of Delhi, will be vested with regal authority, and allowed to hold his court in the town of Agra.

The inmates of the Great Mogul's palace have been thrown into great consternation by a late order of the Sudder, prohibiting the payment of muzzers out of the public treasury, to any but the Commissioners.

Two sepoy stationed in the fort at Hansi, recently had a dispute about the room the beds of each should occupy, which climaxed to a combat with swords, and was terminated by one of them being put hors de combat with two severe wounds. The victor attempted to make his escape but was captured and imprisoned by his comrades. The wounded man has been sent to hospital and is expected to recover.

The valuable live stock of the late Nuwab Shumshodeen Khan, has arrived at Delhi, preparatory to being put up for sale. There are about seventy-five Klash horses, among which are some of the most splendid specimens of that noble animal. People are congregating from all parts to make purchases, and it is expected bidding will run very high. Almost all the independent chieftains have commissioned their vakeels to make unlimited purchases. The proceeds of the sale, it is supposed, will amount to about five lakhs of rupees. One of the Klash horses alone sold for 3,100 rupees.

The question regarding the jagheer of Ferozepore, still forms a topic of debate among the natives. They are only now recovering from the panic occasioned by the extreme measures adopted towards Shumshodeen, and scruple not openly to question the justice of his sentence.

The Tehseldar of Hisar has been convicted of bribery and other mal-practices, by the Magistrate of that place, and made over to the sessions court at Delhi.

Three travellers were lately murdered while passing through the territory of the Jujurr Nuwab, who has been called upon by the Commissioner, to give up the murderers and restore the property of the travellers.

Mortality, to a most alarming extent, is said to prevail all over the country. In one small village alone the deaths are estimated at seven hundred. In Delhi there is scarcely a native family that has not had a bereavement.

The shroffs are said to be in great consternation, at the high price paid for hoondies on Jeypore, which has continued now many months.

Suroop Sing, the claimant of the Jheend Jagheer, has passed through Delhi on his way to Allahabad, whither he is proceeding to plead his cause in person.

A party of dacoits recently entered the town of Soonput, at dusk, and pillaging the shop of a bunsah and the house of a courtesan, of property to the amount of five thousand rupees, walked off with lighted torches. Two women who attempted to give the alarm were killed.

A serious affray took place between the brother and nephew of the head man of Rewarris, which ended in the former being severely wounded. The quarrel is said to have arisen out of some dispute, regarding the right of possession to a village.

MERUT.—An attempt to murder Mr. Troup, one of the gentlemen in the late Begum's service, took place at Sirdanah. One of the discharged sepoy having failed in obtaining service at Lahore, returned, and in a fit of desperation, determined to sacrifice some of the Europeans to his disappointment, with which intent he rushed into a billiard room and made a blow with a drawn sword at Mr. Troup, which that gentleman contrived to ward off with a billiard-cue, when the infuriated man was surrounded and confined by the other persons present. One gentleman is said to have suffered severely in the struggle. The man was perfectly undecided as to whom he should attack.

A Serjeant of Suppers was found dead in a valley under Captain Thompson's house; he is supposed to have fallen down, when drunk.

The Government have ordered the balances, out standing, at Bahdshapoor, to be recovered by their officers, and paid over to the heirs of the late Begum.

NATIVE STATES.

OWALAH.—Col. Jacob and the Minister are said to have become very repulsive to each other. A sepoy of the Colonel's having been killed by the inhabitants of a village, the Colonel to satisfy the clamour of his troops for revenge, sacked the village and plundered it of every thing.

It is stated that a plan hostile to the interests of Hurree Rao, was set on foot by the old partizans of Martund Rao Holkar, but it was timely discovered and thwarted by the former. Martund Rao Holkar has gone to Poona.

HYDERABAD.—Intelligence from Hyderabad up to the 6th May, intimates, that a serious disturbance had taken place in the city between the Arabs and Rohillahs, in which lives were lost on both sides. The Rohillahs were then outside the city, but threatened to burn down the Begum's Bazaar if they were not allowed to fight out their dispute with the Arabs, who, being fewest in number, endeavoured to evade the conflict. The whole Bolarum force had moved towards the city, and it was expected that the affair would be soon settled.

JERPORE.—It is stated that some discontent has been excited among a body of horse who were directed by Beree Saul to place themselves under the orders of Major Forster, a step they refused to adopt in consequence of the strict discipline maintained by that officer. They have consequently had their pay stopped until they think proper to succumb.

JOODPORE.—Chymun Sing, the refugee Chief of Sabewar, had arrived at the Court of Maun Sing of Joodpore, who, being unwilling to involve himself again in a quarrel with the British Government, refused him shelter; but, being overcome by the solicitations of the thakoor, he has tacitly consented to his remaining at Joodpore.

LAHORE.—Runjeet Sing was encamped on the 15th April at Vapang. Payund Khan, the bandit chieftain, is again committing serious depredations; an encounter took place between his gang and Runjeet's troops, when ten or twelve men were killed on either side. The Zindadars are beginning to evince a spirit of insubordination which Runjeet finds it difficult to suppress. Dost Mahomed, it is thought, is endeavouring to create as much opposition to Runjeet's sway as he can.

Runjeet Sing is daily making acquisitions to his enormous possessions. His encroachments are looked upon with a jealous eye by all the other chieftains, who yet have not the power to check them. Payund Khan, the noted bandit, has been so hotly beset by Runjeet's forces, that he has been compelled to make proffers of submission, which have been accepted. He is to be rewarded for his services with a jagheer. The Chiefs of Durray Klubur, indignant at his cowardly submission to the Sheik, and alarmed at the power the possession of Doorbund (Payund Khan's stronghold) would give to Runjeet over their actions, have written to Dost Mahomed Khan, calling upon him to make common cause with them, and reduce the Seiks to their original nothingness.

ROUDE.—Accounts from Lucknow give a very unfavourable picture of the King: his time, it is said, is entirely spent in the zenana, where his chief amusement consists in disciplining the body of amazons he has raised and divided into three regiments, the one consisting of unmarried, and the other two, of married women; and to these he has committed the care of his person. All business is transacted by his Minister, and much satisfaction prevails. Enquiry is being again instituted into some circumstances connected with a certain transaction, which has occupied much of the public attention of late.

MULHAN.—Sultan Mahomed Khan has been already acting the tyrant in his territory: his zameendars disgusted with his severity, invited Mahomed Ackbur Khan, the son of the Cabool chief, to assist them; and he, with a few followers, has already succeeded in obtaining one of the forts of Sultaun Mahomed, who has sent out his son to oppose the intruder. Mooltan is in a very disturbed state: the ryots are up in arms, and pay little or no obedience to their Seik chief, Dewan Sawun Mull.

TONE.—It is expected that if not prevented by the Resident, a fratricidal war will shortly break out between the Nuwab Wuzer Moolhummud Khan and his brothers, in consequence of the dissatisfaction of the latter with the unequal distribution of territory by their father.

MADRAS.

STEAM PETITION.—The steam petitions have been sent to England via Ceylon; that to the Lords bearing 1,141 signatures and that to the Commons 1,161.

THE BREAK-WATER.—The Break-water is progressing; stones are now being conveyed from the Adyar in catamarans, some of which are said to be of a large size.

SUPREME COURT, APRIL 22.—On the 22d April the Chief Justice proceeded to pass sentence on the prisoners who had been found GUILTY during the sessions.

Sentence.—Henry De Bells for stealing a watch, &c. from the warehouse of Mr. Pharoah:—Transportation to New South Wales for SEVEN YEARS.

Govindoo, Narrainan and Hyder Sahib:—Transportation to the Tenasserim Coast for FOURTEEN YEARS.

Manyatty Vayarasamy, Palleattan Venkatesan, Chima Vencutaramon, Paria Vencutaramon, and Khader Sahib—ditto ditto SEVEN YEARS.

Chavry Mouttoo for larceny:—Imprisonment with hard labour for one year.

Appannah for stabbing his wife—DEATH; to be hanged.

PLAN FOR CLEANING THE TOWN.—A plan was submitted to the Justices in session on the 27th April, for cleaning the town of Madras and preventing the accumulation of filth, which is expected fully to answer the purpose contemplated, but it is doubtful if the Government will sanction the cost.

THE HAMANSHAW.—Little hopes are now entertained of getting the Hamanshaw afloat again. She is so formally fixed on the beach.

THE MINT.—It is said that the Supreme Government have determined on giving no instructions for the re-establishment of the Madras Mint, until they receive further despatches from England in reply to their communications of June last.

FIELD HOSPITAL OF THE NORTHERN DIVISION.—The Medical Board have advised the appointment of a Staff Surgeon, Deputy Medical Store-keeper, and three Assistant-Surgeons to the Field Hospital of the Northern Division. It is said that Mr. Macdonell and Dr. Cumming have been recommended to fill the two Staff appointments. A plentiful supply of Hospital comforts have been lately forwarded to Gumsoor by sea, together with most liberal instructions from Government as to their distribution.

THE COINAGE.—Great inconvenience is felt for want of small coin of the new currency; change can only be procured with a great deal of difficulty and considerable loss.

ACCIDENTS.—Major Claridge, commanding the 43d Regt. N. I., was killed by a fall from his horse on the evening of the 28th April. Mr. Blanchard, a midshipman of the Earl of Balcarras, was accidentally drowned on the 1st April, while bathing in the Adyar river.

GOOMSUR.—The news from Goomsur is very unsatisfactory. It appears that only a few of the Petty-Chiefs have been taken, and that the principal leading men of the zemindary are still at large. A combined movement of detachments from several regiments for the capture of the principal chief had entirely failed. The chief dispersed his followers and escaped by passing between the combined force and the main body of the Army. The number of sick at head-quarters amounts to 1,500, and one regiment has only 75 effectives.

FAILURE OF A HOUSE OF AGENCY.—The firm of Messrs. Guichard and Co., General Merchants, stopped payment on the 5th May. Their failure is supposed to have been caused by their large cotton speculations.

COURT-MARTIAL.—It is said that Captain Fitzgibbon, of the 5th Light Cavalry, is to be tried by a Court-Martial, on charges founded on disclosures made before a recent general Court-martial, of an indelicate nature.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH AND DR. STOKES, &c.—Captain John Smith, of the Madras Cavalry, who was suspended last year by Sir F. Adam, has been restored by the orders of the Court of Directors. Dr. Stokes has also been restored, and the transportation of Captain Dickenson has been commuted.

RETIREMENT OF THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.—The present talented editor of the Madras Herald will resign the management of that paper by the end of the present month.

SIR JOHN KEANE.—It is currently reported, that Sir John Keane, the present Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, is to succeed Sir Robert O'Callaghan in the command of the Madras Army.

MADRAS CIVIL FUND.—An alteration has lately taken place in the regulations of the Madras Civil Fund, by which the widows of deceased Civilians will be allowed the sum of £300 per annum, without reference to the property of which their husbands may have died possessed; nor will any deductions be made in future from the pensions of children, unless they have property beyond £50 a year.

LAND WINDS.—The land winds have set in, and the heat has become insupportable. The thermometer in a well-shaded room stood at 89° for several hours during the middle of the day, and has been above 90° on one or two occasions since that time.

BARA REGIA.—The supposition that the bark Regia, bound from the Malabar Coast to England, had been cut off by a refractory crew of Manila-men, is not correct: that vessel's arrival at the Mauritius has been announced.

SIR JAMES LYON.—It is said that Sir James Lyon, K. C. B. and G. C. H., is likely to succeed Sir Robert O'Callaghan in the command of the Madras Army.

OFFICER'S RETIREMENT.—The following orders has been issued by the Court of Directors regarding the retirement of officers:—

"In consequence of the unequal operation of the Regulation prescribed in our military letter to Bengal of the 25th November, 1823, para 64, we have resolved to substitute for it the following rule, viz. officers retiring from the service shall be considered to have retired from the date of their application for leave to retire, or from the expiration of two years and a half from the date of the commencement of their furloughs, whichever shall first happen; and casualties by death in this country, after the expiration of the same period of two years and a half from the date of the commencement of their furlough, shall be considered to have occurred from the date when that period expired, notwithstanding in both cases the officers may have received from us an extension of furlough.

THE HON'BLE MR. MACAULAY.—It is said, that instructions have been brought out by the Mulcilm for the return to England of the Honorable T. B. Macaulay, Esq.

BOMBAY.

COURT-MARTIAL OF ENSIGN CHADWICK.—A general Court Martial was assembled at Bombay on the 26th of March last, for the trial of Ensign David Dempster Chadwick, of the 8th regiment, Bombay Native Infantry, for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, &c. &c., in writing and causing to be published, a letter signed EQUITE, addressed to the Editor of the Bombay Gazette, commenting on and holding up to public reprobation and contempt, the conduct of Major Robertson, of the 8th Bombay Native Infantry, and for denying the authorship of the letter and endeavouring to attach other officers of his regiment with it. The court found the prisoner guilty of having written the letter and endeavouring to hold his commanding officer up to public reprobation, but acquitted him of having endeavoured to fix the authorship on other officers of his regiment, and sentenced him to be suspended from rank, pay and allowance for six calendar months, and to be severely reprimanded.

TANK AT GOREGAUM.—It is said that Government have sanctioned a sum of six thousand rupees to be laid out for the construction of a tank in Goregaum, a large village twelve miles distant from Mahar, where the scarcity of water is very severely felt at present.

MARRIAGE OF SUYAJEE RAO'S DAUGHTER, &c.—Grand preparations are making at Baroda for the union of the daughter of Suyajee Rao to the son of Khanvelkur.

Veneram, the Dowan of the Guicowar, is also preparing for the nuptials of one of his children at Ahmedabad.

THE VOSNUTHOLE.—Proclamation has been made by beat of tom-tom, that Vosnuthole shall not be carried in procession any more. The procession is, that the Lingayets, with a view to affront the Brahmans, suspend an artificial hand of Vas, the founder of their sect, to a pole. This procession has created a great many broils, to prevent which the Government proclamation has been issued.

A MONSTER.—A male dwarf is paraded about the streets of Bombay by his father, with a view to obtain alms, who has been born without arms, but has his legs so constructed that he can hold every thing that is given to him with his toes.

PIRACY.—On the 22nd April a large battilla, bound from Bombay to Tankaira Bunder, with passengers and goods to a large amount, was attacked by pirates off the harbour of Damaun and plundered. It is said that the pirates had a lady and gentleman imprisoned on board of their patimmar.

NATIVE LIBERILITY.—The narrowness of the two principal gates of the fort has long been a great nuisance, and to the lower classes of natives it has proved even dangerous. The expense of widening the entrance, however, was so great that little or no prospect existed of any attempt being made towards it by Government, restricted as it is from expending more than the sum of 100 thousand rupees upon any one work of public improvement without the sanction of the Supreme Government or the Court of Directors. In this state of things, some of the leading natives came forward and offered to raise twelve thousand rupees towards the expense of the undertaking, provided Government would advance the remaining sum. A correspondence ensued, and the result, as might have been expected from the desire manifested by the present authorities on all occasions to promote the interests of the public is, that the contemplated improvement has been sanctioned, and is about to be commenced.

ATTACK ON THE DAK.—The southern dak, dispatched from Deesa on the 25th April, was attacked near the village of Chandkana, the packets torn open and several letters destroyed or carried off.

CEYLON.

THE TRADING OF CIVIL SERVANTS.—It is stated that instructions have been recently received by the Ceylon Government in reference to the trading of Civil Servants, directing them to cause all persons appointed in future, to make solemn declarations, that they neither are, nor will whilst in colonial employ, be connected with commerce.

BARK REGINA.—Considerable anxiety exists respecting the bark Regina, Nunn, which a short time since sailed from Colombo for England. The Regina was chartered for the voyage at Cochin, by a gentleman from Bombay, who advanced a large sum of money to Captain Nunn. The last accounts heard of the vessel say, that when on her way to Colombo she was driven back to Quilon, and that the crew, composed mostly of Manila men, was in a very disorderly state; but that the commander was determined on making them put to sea, which he did on the 1st of March, since when no intelligence of the vessel has been received. As the character of Captain Nunn stands high both as a seaman and man of honour, and as the Regina is perfectly new, great apprehensions are entertained as to his safety, lest he should have been compelled to submit to the usurped authority of a mutinous crew.

BURMAH.

THE BANDITTE.—The robbers who have for some time past infested our provinces and caused so much harassment and annoyance to our troops, have at last been completely discomfited and dispersed, by the judicious proceedings adopted by Lieut. Macgrath. This Officer having succeeded in dis-attaching the hill tribes from the robbers, and induced them to come over to the Company's interests, the brigands were constrained to fly from our territories towards those of Ava. They were, however, overtaken a day's march from the frontier and completely defeated: one of their Chiefs was taken prisoner, two men were killed, and eleven muskets, a double barrel detonating gun, a quantity of ammunition, twenty spears, eight dows, forty thousand rupees' worth of gold and silver, and several other articles, fell into the hands of our sepoy's.

PENANG.

PIRACY.—A prow laden with 5,000 bundles of rattan, bound from Kuala to Penang, was pursued by a fleet of ten pirate prows off Pulo Punkour, and the crew finding that the pirates were fast coming up with them, and dreading the consequences of being captured, got into their sampan and escaped, leaving the prow to the pirates.

NOBBERY.—On the 4th April a gang of fifteen robbers made an attack on the house of a Malay man named Loongh Kitchce and carried off several gold and silver ornaments and some clothes, and would perhaps have stripped it of every thing had not Loongh Kitchce, after being severely wounded himself, stabbed one of them in the breast, and the neighbours came to his assistance. The robbers fled with their wounded companion to within a short distance of the Muda river, which divides the Company's and Siamese territories, where he died, his body having been discovered covered with long grass, wounded in several parts. A coroner's inquest was held over the corpse, and a verdict of justifiable homicide returned.

By advices from Penang, up to the 26th April, we perceive, that the inhabitants of that island had been thrown into a considerable degree of excitement and consternation, in expectation of being attacked by a fleet of near fifty boats, containing about one thousand four hundred pirates and other Malays collected by the young Rajah of Perak for the purpose of invading Quetlah and reinstating the ex-Rajah, who has declined proceeding to Dalhi in the Island of Sumatra, and is aiding and instigating the armament to the invasion, by his presence and persuasions. It was supposed that the pirates in the fleet, if allowed to pass through Penang harbour, would make a dash on the shipping and town and plunder them, as they would stand a chance of reaping a richer booty by so doing than they could possibly do by following the ex-Rajah; the Sheriff had in consequence of this expectation, convened a meeting of the British inhabitants to take into consideration the best means of repelling the attack, and a despatch had been forwarded to Singapore to the Commander of H. M's. ship Wolf, for assistance.

SINGAPORE.

PROPOSED DUTIES.—It is stated that the Penang Government have transmitted to the Supreme Government a schedule of the duties proposed to be levied at Penang, Singapore, &c., and that the prevailing opinion was, that the impost was inevitable and would not long be delayed.

STEAM ASSOCIATION.—The shares for the proposed scheme of a Singapore and Penang Steam Navigation Company, are not being taken with that avidity which was anticipated. The repairs of the Jardine had nearly been completed.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.—A Temperance Society has been established at Penang, and the first report shews, that the labours of the society have been attended with greater success than could well have been looked for so immediately after its establishment.

SIR E. J. GAMBIER.—It is said that Sir E. J. Gambier, the Recorder, has been appointed to a Puisne Judgeship at Madras and was expected shortly to leave Singapore for that presidency.

PIRACIES.—Very many acts of piracy have been committed in the Straits on native craft; in fact we seldom take up a Strait's paper now without meeting with some record of the sanguinary depredations of the ruthless corsairs who infest the neighbourhood of the Straits. Surely the British Government should, for the safety of the lives and property of their subjects, adopt some more efficacious measure, and exert themselves more strenuously than they have done, for the suppression of piracy.

To send a man of war or two occasionally to cruise about the Straits, is mere trifling. The Editor of the Singapore Free Press, speaking of the encounter the boats of the Wolf and Zephyr recently had with a fleet of pirates says:—"It seems that the 'rousing out' which the boats of the Wolf and Zephyr gave the fleet of pirates at Point Romania, as noticed in our last, has injured and intimidated them so little that they recommenced operations the moment these cruisers returned to harbour, and have ever since been reaping a harvest of booty stained with blood, from defenceless native traders. The result of the last cruise only points out more forcibly the necessity of employing light-armed steamers on expeditions against pirates; as it is well known that these fellows out sail or outpull our boats, and laugh at the praise-worthy, but over-laborious and futile attempts of our tars to do them any great injury. We are of opinion, that the constant employment of steamers alone, will effect the desired extermination of the pirates.

PERSIA.

Letters have been received from the Persian Gulf, giving very gratifying accounts of the commerce of Bushire. Indigo was in great demand, and sugar was supposed to yield a good profit. Every thing was quiet at Bushire, and all disaffection on the part of the native chieftains almost entirely abated. Preparations were going on in the Court of Tehran for an expedition to Herat. The young King is remarkably brave, and seems to be averse to keeping his troops idle. He is well contented at the establishment of his ascendancy in the country, and appears to be confident of success in his present undertaking. Important despatches were daily expected from England at Tehran. Isfahan has been subjected to a peculiar visitation of Providence. The small pox was making ravages there, and hundreds of children had fallen victims to it. Notwithstanding the existence of a small vaccine establishment there, maintained by the Residency of Bushire, casualties, resulting from the prevalence of the small pox, were lamentably numerous. An experienced Armenian has been employed in the vaccine establishment, whose operations are attended with the greatest success. Another Armenian of great intelligence, who was in the Indian Army during the administration of the late Marquess of Hastings, is stationed at Isfahan as a physician to the Governor of the place. The merchants of the caravansary of Golshan were all on the qui vive to receive the shipments of indigo arrived at Bushire. Bills of exchange were given by them at the rate of 175 mahib curius per 100 macca rupees. A report has been bruited about that the young King of Persia contemplates issuing a new coinage immediately after his return from the intended expedition to Herat. The roads from Isfahan to Shiraz, and from Shiraz to Lushire, are represented to be at present safe and undisturbed by the depredations of marauders.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From A. E. Kuhn's Monthly Price Current, May 31, 1836.)

Government having received a Memorial from the Chamber of Commerce, proposing some alterations in the Tariff, the measure has been re-considered in Council, and promulgated by Government in the Gazette of the 24th instant.

It is the intention of Government to adopt the suggestion of the Chamber of Commerce to substitute fixed rates for ad valorem duties, and that the proper department will be directed to prepare tables for that purpose, subject to occasional revision.

The continual dry and hot-weather has since the last 10 days been varied in some parts, by rain accompanied by strong north-westerly wind. The rivers continue still to be closed, our market offers consequently no great variation since our last number.

Freights for England are gradually becoming more available, and this facility, added to the opening of the rivers, which is expected in a few weeks, will doubtless impart new activity to our market.

INDIGO.—During the greater part of this month the advices from the factories represented the plant as suffering from want of rain, and in some places almost destroyed. About one-fifth of the estimated cultivation for the season was then unsown in Bengal; since the last 10 days we have had several strong north-westerns, and the latest advices from the interior report some partial rains, but even allowing abundance of rain before the 10th June, we doubt that under existing circumstances the produce of the next season could range above 100,000 mds. and should rain continue to hold back, it may fall considerably below this estimation. The accounts from Jessore leave no doubt that the low ground will be overflowed by the rivers before the plant is fit for cutting; the volume of water will be in all probability greater than has been known for many years owing to the melting of the great accumulation of snow in the Nepal Hills, and the country beyond, the oldest inhabitants of these districts declare never to have seen the surface so deeply covered as is the case this year. In Peshnagur the sowings are much retarded, and in many places the ground will have to be re-sown. From Dacca and Purneah the accounts are more favourable. About 1000 chests of the last season are still in the market, in the hands of speculators. 110 chest of Hills, White and Co. bought during the season at Sa. Rs. 157-8 were re-sold in the past week at Sa. Rs. 180 for England.

OPIMUM.—Great activity has been observed during the whole month in the Bazar, and shipments have continued heavy. During the last week there has been some increase in prices, owing to a rumour in the bazar of bad quality of the Metwa drug and purchases to great extent have occurred.

RAW SILK.—The extraordinary duration of the dry weather and the intense heat have considerably injured the mulberry trees and the cocoons of the April bund are reported small; the worms having derived but little nourishment from the leaves. These account from the interior, combined with favorable advices from England, continue to keep up the demand, and prices are tending to advance.

The total shipments to England averaged for the 5 years previous to 1835-36 12311 mds. while they amounted during 1835-36 to only 11527.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—The market is bare of good qualities of Corahs; the demand continues active and orders are executed directly from the depôts in the interior. The stock of Choppahs and Bandanaces is much reduced, and the Americans have during the year purchased largely thereof. Prices have experienced some advance. The amount of the shipments to England both of Honorable Company and private of the 5 years previous to 1834-35 amounted to 276,408 pieces, whilst the exports to England of 1835-36 were 303,891.

RAW COTTON.—Production is greatly on the increase, and from the eagerness of the natives to improve this cultivation by the use of foreign seeds, an improvement in quality may also be expected.—The crops of this year is now commencing to arrive and is estimated at 550,000 bazar mds. During 1835-36, 531,203 bazar mds. were brought from the interior to this market, while the import in 1832-33 was only 10,000 mds, 1833-34 215, mds, 218,626, and in 1834-35 387,991.—The exports to England of this article have also considerably increased, and amounted in 1835-36 to bazar mds. 113,968, whilst the average of the exports of the 5 years previous 1835-36 is only 19,247 bazar mds. To China the exportation has also increased considerably and amounted during 1835-36 to 439,996 bazar mds. whilst only 107,991 bazar mds. appears to have been the average export of the five years previous to 1835-36. Shipped to China some time in active progress, but sales are slow.—Tonnage for England becoming more available, we may expect active business for the next month in this article. Prices remain steady.

SALTPETRE.—Advices from being favorable and freights more abundant, may expect some improvement in prices. The market at the present time has of fine qualities; the accounts from the Haze-pore districts are not favorable, the violent rains in February and March having much injured the earth, and prices of the rough product experienced a considerable increase. Our export to England during the last year fell short of the average of the five years previously by 55,868 bazar mds.

SUGAR.—The late favorable advices from England have improved the market, and the supply is expected during this month for the home market may receive some further increase. Our crop is small owing to the injury done to the cane in the Ghazepore districts during the last rainy season. The average export to England of the 5 years previous 1835-36 was 2,671,000. During 1835-36 our exports amounted to 5,504, showing an increase of more than the double. Several parcels have been sold of the finest Benares at Rs. 9.2 and 9.0 without drawback and subject to the then anticipated duty of 3½ per cent.; in the other districts some few parcels inferior and old Sugar are selling at Rs. 8.2½; this apparent disproportion is accounted for by these latter enjoying the drawback, having paid the inland duties under the former transit regulations.

LAC.—Lac Dye.—Our supplies are small and the old stock having been cleared, the parcels as they arrive are taken freely. Our exports to the United States have considerably increased, during the years, being 4,417 bazar maunds against an average of 357 of the 5 years previous 1835-36. The exports for England during the last year remain at about the same figure as the average of the years previous, being about 7,500 maunds.

Shell Lac.—Our exports to England in this product have also increased, but without an improvement in prices. Our stock continues heavy and prices are on the decline. The average export to England of the 5 years previous 1835-36, is 12,736 bazar maunds. The export of 1835-36 is 17,836, showing an increase of 5,063 bazar maunds during 1835-36.

RICE.—Our shipments to England during 1835-36 have fallen considerably short of the average of the former years, being for the last year 1,96,523 bazar maunds against 2,67,139. This decrease of 70,616 bazar maunds is owing to the discouraging accounts from Europe and to the high rates of freight. The crop is reported to have been full 50 per cent. above that of an average year, and prices continue to be lower than ever was known before.

WHEAT.—The new grains is still detained by the lowness of the rivers; however, vessels from New South Wales begin to arrive, and as the harvest in that colony is reported to have been a total failure, we may expect some vessels to arrive from those parts.

HIDES.—Our supplies from the interior continue large; the demand for England is limited and the purchases chiefly on American account. Freights becoming more available, the demand of this article for England will probably revive.

LINSEED.—Continues as reported in our last. The crop is expected in June and July with the opening of the rivers, and is said to be equal to the last.

SPICES, DRUGS & OTHER MISCELLANEOUS PRODUCE.—Market as usual in regard to sales during the season.

MIRZAPUR.—Copper.—The market continues to be in a healthy state, and prices have every tendency to a further improvement. The stock of the Mirzapore Depot is reported to be very small, and our stock in Calcutta is not excessive, and may be estimated at about 40,000 mds. of Slab and Tile, and 10,000 mds. Braziers and Sheetings. The exports to the interior of the last year, are about the average exports of the 5 years previous 1835-36. The importation in Tiles during 1835-36 has fallen short of the average import at 16 years previous by 16,801 bazar mds. while on the contrary there is an increase of 7086 mds. in Braziers and Sheetings.

Importation having been limited during the present month, prices experienced a slight improvement, and may now have further support, as the high price in Calcutta of the article will probably restrain any large shipments. Our exports to the interior during the past year have fallen considerably short of the average of the five years previous, which amounted to 54,738, while the exports of eleven months of 1835-36, amount only to 23,362. The abolition of the town and transit duties having taken effect on the 1st April, the Customs Revenue ceased on that day, and we are therefore only enabled to give extracts of the goods passed to the Interior during eleven instead of the whole 12 months.

Lead.—The market continues dull of sale; prices are however supported. The imports of Pig were rather heavy during 1835-36, being 21,572 baz. mds. against an average of the 5 years previous of 17,763 baz. mds.

Copper.—We have already stated in our last number, that excessive imports from England have met with an increased consumption for the Interior, which sustained our prices beyond expectation. The imports from England in 1835-36 amount to 263,163 baz. mds. while the average of the five years previous was 152,888. Our exports to the interior are for eleven months of 1835-36 149,075 bazar mds. against an average of 101,263 bazar mds. of the 5 years previous.

Tin Plates.—Without alteration since our last; the market continues depressed and the stock is considerable.

Quicksilver.—The late arrivals have occasioned a decline in the price.

TWIST.—The market has not improved since our last, and the late arrivals have caused a further decline in the prices. The demand for Coloured Yarns is limited at present.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.—The demand continues active in Chambrics, Lappets, Jacquets and Book Muslin; but prices are depressed by the late heavy arrivals in Satinings and Longcloth the consumption being considerably extensive, the prices are upheld; our stock being rather small. Mull-Mulls, stock heavy and prices declining; on the other hand our stock of Book Muslin is very moderate, the same may be observed in regard to Lappets. In coloured Piece Goods consumption is increasing and our stocks are limited, and present prices are likely to be maintained.

WOOLLENS.—Market inactive, stock moderate and prices likely to improve as soon as the demand for the interior shall be renewed by the opening of the river.

PUBLIC MEETING, — SATURDAY, JUNE 18th, 1836.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, convened by the Sheriff, took place on Saturday evening last, at the Town Hall, for the purpose of petitioning Parliament against Act XI. of the Legislative Council, repealing the 107th section of 53d Geo. III. ch. 153, whereby British subjects are deprived of their right of appealing to English Courts of Law against the decision of the provincial tribunals. There were about 800 persons present. At 8 o'clock the Sheriff opened the business of the meeting by reading the requisition, of which the above is the substance, after which, on the motion of Mr. Dickens,

THE SHERIFF WAS CALLED TO THE CHAIR.

Mr. R. H. COCKERELL, the Sheriff. Gentlemen, it is quite unnecessary for me to enter into an explanation of the business for the consideration of which I have convened this meeting in compliance with your requisition. Its importance is deeply felt by every person not only in our immediate neighbourhood but in the remotest corner of the Mofussil. As a merchant and a party to a circular recently published and sent into the Mofussil, I state for your information, that out of three hundred persons to whom it has been forwarded six or seven only have objected to sign it. Having stated this, I leave the business in your hands, earnestly requesting as your chairman that a fair hearing may be accorded to every person who may address the chair, be his opinions in accordance with those of the requisitionists or be they otherwise.

Mr. TURTON spoke as follows:—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen.—It may to some appear a matter of objection to my support of the objects of the present meeting, that I belong to the profession of the law, and practise that profession in his Majesty's Supreme Court at this presidency. This objection, which however I shall take occasion to prove to you is altogether nugatory, even though it did apply in as far as it might infer an interest to exist on my part in maintaining the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, yet supposing that such even were the case, why should I be required tacitly to sacrifice my birth-right, because advantages would result to me from its maintenance, independent of its own intrinsic and incalculable value? We meet here for an object which is the common cause of all,—we meet to consider resolutions upon the basis of which we may go in a firm but respectful manner to the Legislature of our country and ask them to reconsider this act, and if it be opposed to all the better feelings both of Europeans and of natives, all of whom will be thereby deprived of rights, which they have so long enjoyed, earnestly to pray for remedy of this general grievance; I call upon them all to join me in making known their real sentiments upon this occasion. I do not believe the act will be popular with any class. I ask for no separate or distinct rights for the class to which I belong; I wish for political rights to be extended in respect of all classes, and the object of the present enactment is to contract the rights of all. (Cheers.) I do not believe that any class will be benefited by this act. Does the native derive any advantage from it? Neither native nor any one else can discover it. (No, none, and cheers.) But it is said this act will only operate to place a handful of foreigners on the same footing as the great body of the natives in respect of the law. Looking at the numbers of Englishmen throughout India, looking at the numbers here, at Madras and Bombay, a population which may not be estimated at less than 500,000 who have been deprived of their rights by this act, I think it is rather too much to consider them an indifferent and insignificant handful of foreigners. It has been said in a quarter, which was the last place where it ought to have been said, that here there must be a pure despotism. Why, I should wish to be informed? There never yet has occurred in this country a single instance of what may be truly denominated rebellion. Why then must there be a despotism? The various classes of the natives of this country may sigh for the restoration of the dynasty that have passed away, but never with even a distant hope of their wishes being accomplished. (Hear, hear.) It has been represented in various quarters that I am hostile to the Company's servants. Far from it, nor will they think so themselves if they rightly consider this act. They are not flattered by it, and I am myself aware that many of the most respectable of that service themselves look upon it with horror. That outward respect which they are compelled to maintain towards the rulers of this country, may prevent them from expressing their sentiments openly, but none even of the Company's servants think at heart, that this enactment will conduce to their elevation in the scale of character as Englishmen. This question has been represented a mere contest between the Courts, a dispute only involving the interests of practitioners. I deny that such is in any degree the case. The right of appeal was given in the year 1818, and since that period there have been two, and only two cases of appeal under the act now locally rescinded; and where was the great source of profit or advantage arising out of this power of appeal, to the Courts or the practitioners therein? Of the money expended on these two appeals, I can assure you, gentlemen, my portion has not been very large. (Laughter.) From this, however, an argument may be deduced, that a power so rarely exerted is superfluous and useless, and consequently to complain of its abrogation is mere idle clamour. But it is not so. It is not the exercise but the existence of this power that is useful. In proportion that every case is well considered by the inferior jurisdiction, will there be less likelihood of occasion for appeal; and the mere apprehension that a decision will be subjected to the examination of a Court that will examine it rigidly, will produce the very care and caution, which is likely to render appeal unnecessary. Can these two appeals then furnish grounds for this act of the Indian Legislature? In my apprehension quite the reverse. But we have a Law Commission appointed under act of Parliament, whose duty is to examine into and amend the Laws, and to whose suggestions of improvement the Local Government is bound to pay some respect. This commission is directed by the act under which it is appointed, to frame laws for this country, due consideration being had to the feelings, prejudices, and religious creed of the several classes of inhabitants. But let me not be supposed to consider this act as the act of the Law Commission, I believe they never would have recommended this act. My purpose in coming here is not to blame, it is to remedy a great evil affecting directly a large class of the community and indirectly the whole; but when I look to the purpose for which the fourth ordinary member of the Council was appointed, when I take into consideration what that honorable gentleman has publicly declared to be his opinions as to the mode in which India ought to be governed, I do attribute to him the recommendation of this obnoxious measure. It was his duty in the situation in which he was placed, to watch every enactment and to take care that it did not infringe, not only upon the rights of British-born subjects but upon the rights of any class whatever. I do not consider that Lord Auckland is primarily responsible for this act. There can be no doubt that the whole Council, one and all, are responsible for this measure; but chiefly he whose duty and office it was to watch over the rights and liberties of all and to see that those rights and liberties were invaded in no particular. I impute to him having acted with reckless disregard of the rights and liberties of every class and of every individual in India. Such conduct originated in a mistaken notion on his part of how this country ought to be governed. I blame him as the party who could tell the British Parliament that in India absolute despotism must be established. This was the doctrine of the pseudo Whigs, men who had left the ranks of Toryism and who in 1833 conferred upon the Company's Government the power of Legislating in the manner of which we now complain. There is thus to be said in extenuation of Mr. Macaulay, that at that time he knew little of India, or of those he should find in this country, whether he has learnt something more by this time I will not say. I find in a certain paper circulated in Calcutta, a criticism on my public conduct and public assertions. I court criticism on my public conduct, but I am here represented as inconsistent, because, as is alleged, I have contended that Government have no power to pass this act, whereas in 1835 I stated at a public meeting that the new India Act had, with the consent of the Court of Directors, the power to abolish the Supreme Court. I say so still, they have that power under the New Indian Act, but still I deny their authority to pass the present Act, seeing that it directly interferes with the prerogative of the Crown. It cuts off all appeal in cases of claims not above four thousand rupees, the amount must be fixed thousand before an appeal will now lie. A great deal has been said upon the subject of the defects and expenses of the Supreme Court, and I would not have it understood that I am here to apologise for those defects or to defend those expenses, but we must consider what is the object of the constitution of the Court, that object is to give the suits the great benefit of English Law, English Judges, English Counsel and English Attorneys. If you are satisfied to entrust your rights and properties to the Native Omrah, why you certainly can get the work done cheaper, and I advise you at once to get rid of Court, Counsel and Attorneys altogether, but when you sick me out I have to request you to perform the same kind office by Mr. Macaulay. (Much laughter.) Cannot you get a native to do his work cheaper? He would have to look about him a long while in England before he could get £10,000 a year for his utmost services, there he got 1,500 a year as Secretary to the Board of Control, here his services are valued at £10,000 per annum. I do not deny that the expenses of the Supreme Court are great, more than they ought to be, and I believe more than they will be, but my little experience in Mofussil Courts goes to convince me that these last are neither less expensive nor more expeditious. In a case of my own in one of these Courts, brought on by dint of execution prematurely, I obtained a decision after seven years litigation, and it cost me through my valuer three thousand rupees, and some pice to recover a debt of 8,000 Rs. In our Courts six or seven hundred rupees would have been the utmost to which the costs would have amounted. So that here I paid four or five times as much in the Mofussil Court as I should have paid in the Supreme Court. I never wished to enter into comparison between the two Courts, they are forced upon us, but I had always understood that the Supreme Court was originally established agreeably to the request of the Company themselves, in order to protect their own subjects, against their own servants. There is it is true, a marked difference between the Company's servant of the present day, and the Company's servant of the time when the Supreme Court was established. I can myself bear testimony to the high conduct, character and talents of many individuals of the Company's service, and it is not of them as a body that I complain, but that they have to work a bad system. In reference to the comparative degree of expensiveness between a Company's Judge and a

King's Judge, the estimate is made and very well stated in the Westminster Review. Mr. Turton here referred to the following comparative estimate in the Westminster Review for July, 1833.

"The items of the charges of the Company's judge, recapitulated are as follows.

Haileybury College..	£.
Simple interest on the same, for 27 years, at 5 per cent	804
Calcutta College and salary ..	920
Simple interest on the same for twenty six-years ..	1,196
Salary as Judicial Assistant ..	3,240
Simple interest on the same, for twenty years ..	3,240
Salary as Register, one half ..	2,400
Simple interest on the same, for fifteen years ..	1,800
Judicial Services, for fifteen years ..	69,000
Value of a Life Annuity of 500 l at forty-seven years of age	4 905
		£88,205

The salaries and charges of several of the Judges sent by the Crown to India are represented in the following table —

OFFICE	15 years salary.	Pay-money to India	Value of annuity	Total £.
Puisne Judge of the King's Sup Court at Bombay	62 500	1,000	10,668	74,168
Recorder of Bombay..	60,000	1,000	8,890	59,890
Recorder of France of Wales Island	45,000	1,000	8,890	54,890
Recorder of Singapore, &c	53 000	1 000	8 890	62,890

"It appears from this statement, that a Company's judge without a professional education costs nearly twenty per cent. more than the highest class of King's judges exhibited in the table, and sixty per cent. more than the lowest class, that is to say, an individual without legal reputation, or education, advanced to the bench at the premature age of 30 is much more costly to the state than a judge of reputation and character, promoted from the expensive bar of England at the mature age of forty. If the comparison be made with the Judges sent by the Crown to the colonies, it will turn out to be still more unfavorable to the system pursued by the Company. Thus in Ceylon there is a King's Chief Justice and two Puisne Judges, the Chief Justice with a salary of 4,000*l* per annum, the first Puisne Judge of 2,000*l*, and the second of 1,500*l*. Their fifteen years' services therefore cost respectively 60,000*l*, 30,000*l*, and 22,500*l*. There is not of necessity, and by stipulation, any pension. A Company's Judge therefore costs 20,000*l* more than a Chief Justice of Ceylon, nearly as much as three first Puisne Judges, and nearly as much as four second Puisne Judges. It is hardly necessary to inform the reader that a King's Judge in Ceylon must be a barrister of five years standing. This may be taken to be conclusive of the whole affairs of an exclusive service for India."

The Government of Ceylon is of all the British Governments of the British possessions in India, that which approaches the nearest to the English system. There is enjoyed the benefit of trial by jury—and a system of administrative justice under the control of King's Judges. Will any body say that that system has not worked well?

Again let me say, that all I ask for is equal rights for all—I should be ashamed if I could ask for any thing else. Again I will say that I consider English Law to be my birth-right; but if we must have a pure despotism, let it be so declared; let Turkish Law be the Law of the land, and let a Turkish Can administer it; but if so, let us be made acquainted with the fact in order that we may know that this has proved to be the land in which Englishmen can live. (Hear, hear.) It is no longer the country for us. I would not consent to live in it on such terms, whatever were the emoluments or whatever prospect of advantage a residence here could hold forth. (Hear, hear.) No temptation of profit should induce me to remain here on such conditions. I would leave it with disgust to be enjoyed by those who are content to hug the chains that bind them, and kiss the rod by which they are scourged. (Much applause.)

Mr. Turton then proposed the first resolution.

41.—That in consequence of the passing of Act XI. of 1838, the Government has declared an intention of abolishing all appeals to the only Courts of justice in India independent of the executive Government, whereby the rights and property of British subjects resident in the interior are rendered insecure, and the application of British skill and capital to the improvement of the resources of India will be checked—and it is therefore expedient to memorialize the Court of Directors and Board of Control to repeal or to allow this act.

Dwarkanauth Tagore.—Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in rising to second this resolution, and I do hope that may doing so may be the humble means of removing an impression that the natives of this country are indifferent to the subject of this discussion. When we see assembled a set of intelligent gentlemen, among whom I perceive a number of natives who I may say are not ignorant now though they were so, under the rule of the Mofussil Courts. But no, the Central Free Press will say, that we are a set of ignorant Calcutta Baboos; and why will the Central Free Press say this? Because we will not run out of our houses on the approach of a civil servant's palankeen and fall prostrate in the street before him (laughter.) If we are not so ignorant as our brethren in the Mofussil—and who will say that we are not better informed than they are?—to whom are we indebted for it? To Englishmen. Twenty years ago the Company treated us as slaves; who first raised us from this state but the merchants of Calcutta, and the first among them was the late much lamented Mr. John Palmer. All that time the Government servants never took any interest to improve the condition of the natives; though there might have been a few honorable exceptions. It was to those who were called interlopers. (Hear, hear, and loud applause.) It was to the merchants and agents, and other independent English settlers that the natives of Calcutta were indebted for the superiority they possess over their countrymen of the Mofussil, and to the lawyers, who are ever ready to defend the rights threatened to be infringed, they are also under particular obligation. Are the learned gentlemen who thus come forward to defend the rights of the people at every public meeting ever paid for their trouble? No; on the contrary their services are always gratuitous, and thus are they deserving the warmest thanks and the sincerest gratitude from the people. Instead of their receiving anything, I know that in some cases they have paid out of their pockets for the expenses attending public meetings. We are told the Government wish to equalize Englishmen with the natives. But what equalization do they put in practice? The natives have hitherto been slaves, are the Englishmen therefore to be made slaves also! This is the kind of equality the Government are seeking to establish. They have taken all which the natives possessed, their lives, liberty, property, and all were held at the mercy of Government, and now they wish to bring the English inhabitants of the country to the same state: they will not raise the natives to the condition of the Europeans, but they degrade the Europeans by lowering them to the state of the natives. (Hear, hear.) If you (addressing himself to the Englishmen present,) do not come forward to defend your rights at this juncture, you will repent when it is too late; you will suffer what we have suffered for these last sixty years. Little is to be expected from our countrymen. They are timid in the extreme, and very reluctant to come forward in asserting their rights. They fear that those who rule them will be displeased, and would ruin them by a stroke of the pen; but, gentlemen, the fear is not without cause, for numbers of them have suffered for no other crime than displeasing a Civil Servant or unintentionally omitting to make a salam when they were passing on the road. This is the character of the generality of them,—the few exceptions are confined to those who, like myself, have been spoiled by the interlopers! (Laughter.) The majority of my countrymen say;—"if I have lost one eye let me take care of the other," and thus they keep themselves back from public meetings and are tardy in the assertion of their rights. Do not be surprised, gentlemen, that there are so few natives present on an important occasion like the present; their absence is not unaccountable, for they do not understand the merits of the question we are considering. But a time will come when the case will be quite different. Let the Hindoo College go on as it has gone on for three or four years more, and you will have a meeting like this attended by four times your number of natives. My friend, Mr. Turton, has brought to your notice one case which he had in the Mofussil and has shewn the badness of the system pursued in the courts there. My experience in those courts is extensive: I have frequently been engaged in the management of suits in the Mofussil courts, having property of my own, or relatives of mine, in almost every district of Bengal, and well know the system adopted there; I have also some experience in the Supreme Courts, and am therefore qualified to speak upon the merits of both. The costs of the Supreme Court are heavy; but heavy as they are, they are incurred openly and with proper authority; so that when a case is decided the winning party gets back all the costs he has incurred. The case in regard to the Mofussil courts is very different. There the suit costs—the bribes to the corrupt amlahs amount to twenty times the authorized charges, and there, too, the costs when once given are gone for ever. I am not so great a friend to the lawyers of Calcutta as to sacrifice my own interest for their sake. If I believed that the Mofussil Courts were preferable, I would not be such a fool as to pay more for justice here when I could obtain the same justice for a far less amount in the Mofussil. The fault, however, is not in the persons who preside over those courts; it is in the system which needs reform. To this the Law Commission should direct their attention. Why does not Mr. Macaulay correct the abuses of the present system? Can any one find fault with the justice of the Supreme Court? If its expenses are high they should be lowered. I beg, gentlemen, to call your attention to the evidence given by Ram-mohun Roy before the Committee of the House of Commons. That experienced and respected gentleman had nothing to say against the justice of the Supreme Court: its expenses were all that he found fault with. The first and principal judges of the Mofussil courts are the amlahs, who lead the inexperienced judges as they please. There is scarcely any law for the realizing of money decreed by the Mofussil Courts. The Collector, perhaps the brother of the Judge, is the person to realize the money; but this functionary has more to do than he can well get through in the way of his immediate duties in the collection of the revenue, in attending to the resumption cases, and several other duties which fully occupy his time, and you may go on presenting petitions all your life, but get no money out of the Collector's treasury without difficulty. I have now decrees to the amount of 4 lakhs long standing unrealized. What would you think, gentlemen, of such a court of justice, where after all the trouble and expense attending the suit you cannot get the fruit of your labours. How had it been in the Supreme Court? Could the Sheriff delay the proceeding? If he refused or delayed to do his duty, I would have my friend, the Sheriff, put into jail. (Laughter.) These observations, gentlemen, are not the result of mere theory, they are the lessons taught by every day's experience. In the Mofussil courts a distress of property for rent occupies a couple of years. There are no common law or ejectments in the Mofussil, every case must be heard like a regular equity suit. In the mean time should you let the Government revenue fall into arrear, your estate is sold by the tax gatherer without any mercy or consideration. Whether we look to the expenses, the unfair and secret costs, or the delay in the proceedings of the Mofussil courts, in comparison, the Supreme Court will always be found far better. There is no doubt that the Court of Directors are desirous of exercising absolute and despotic power in this country. I would call to your attention the case of Mr. Courtney Smith, one of the most upright judges the civil service ever had. He, it is well known, refused to accept Company's paper as security in a certain cause, because he conscientiously doubted whether it could afford sufficient and certain guarantee. For this he was threatened with suspension. Even in the times of the Mahomedans a Cazi could not be removed for far greater supposed transgressions; without conviction he could not be condemned. Such, gentlemen, is the system pursued under this Government; yet there are some who uphold it. I will let them enjoy those precious blessings, and thank God that my person is in Calcutta, within the Marine Ditch, where my life is secure, (Hear, hear.) I have property in the Mofussil which the judges there if they chose may take away, but my person they cannot injure. I have seen no reason why natives ought not to support a petition to Parliament on the present occasion. I have gone over the comparative merits of the Mofussil and the Supreme Court, and said that the latter is far preferable. I have pointed out the desire which the Court of Directors have to rule India with absolute power, and that these attempts to infringe upon the rights of the people are in conformity to that wish. It now only remains for us to give our hearty support to such measures as may be adopted to defend those rights and to preserve us from the threatened despotism. Gentlemen, if I go to give you the particulars of a few cases, and detail how they are decided by the Judges who pretend to decide according to justice, equity and good conscience, it will take me some time to finish. But as the business of the night must be got through, I must conclude by seconding the resolution so ably moved by Mr. Turton.

(The speaker sat down amidst loud applause.)

The Sheriff now put the resolution, and it was carried nem. con.

Mr. STOCQUFLER. I rise, gentlemen, to propose the second resolution, and I do so with very great pleasure, because I entertain a strong confidence that the appeal which it recommends you should make will be attended with successful result. It is a great and a happy thing for us, gentlemen, that we have at least one appeal left to us (hear)—an appeal of which no local, distant, or dependent government can deprive us—and to a tribunal whose purity and impartiality few men have been bold enough to question, and to whose well considered fiat it is the duty, as it is the pride and pleasure of every Englishman, to bow (Hear, hear.) Gentlemen, I believe there are many among my fellow citizens who entertain an apprehension that an appeal to Parliament will fail of producing the anticipated effects; the same view, I believe, cherished by our enemies, but under far different feelings, and this arises from the result of the debate on the 43d clause of the Act. A little examination, however, of the temper of the Parliament when the clause in question was discussed, will, I think, serve in some measure to lay the apprehensions of our friends, and to abate, if not destroy, the over-wearing confidence of our foes. I find on referring to the debate on the 43d clause of the Act that the enemies of arbitrary power were left in a minority of thirty-three in a house of, I think, 100 or 115 members. But I contend that this is no criterion by which to judge of what may be the feeling of Parliament hereafter. Recurring to the speech of Mr. Halcomb. It appears that he complained that a clause of so much moment should be disposed of in a house of thirty members, that is to say, there were but thirty members actually present and sharing in the debate—the remaining 80 or 90, constituting the sum total of the ministerial majority, being in the adjoining apartments or Bellamy's coffee house, discussing their chops and reading the newspapers, until the minister's cry of "divide" like the huntsman's "tallyho" should summon them to give their "most sweet aye's" in favor of a measure for or against which they had not heard one single argument!—(Hear, hear.) Now, gentlemen, if this was the state of the house and the temper of Parliament when the authors and originators of the Indian Act were present to accomplish their views through the agency of official and ministerial influence, have we not reason to hope for the success of our appeal now that our enemies are no longer on the spot to whip in their majorities, while our friends still remain to do battle for us with the confidence strengthened by the present demonstration of feeling? (Hear) Recurring to the debate to which I have just alluded, it appears that those men to whom we are mainly indebted for the clause under which the Governor-General acted, and who spoke in its favor, are for the most part out of Parliament, but those who protested against the extension of arbitrary power are still upon the spot! We have no longer, gentlemen, to fear the influence or eloquence of that member who scoffed at the idea of suffering Englishmen to move about in an atmosphere of liberty of their own? (Hear) We have no longer to encounter the opposition of him who thought that the despotic power given to the Governor-General of India "was absolutely necessary," that gentleman is now ruling the people in the Bombay territories. Neither have we to apprehend much from the exertions of that nobleman (now translated to the Upper House and never very remarkable for his activity) who thought that the Europeans in India should be sacrificed to "a principle." (Hear.) But we have with us that extraordinary man whose exertions have obtained justice for millions of his persecuted countrymen, and who said of the proposition to equalize the India laws, that "all revolted at the idea of debasing Englishmen to the level of the Hindoo." We have with us that not less valuable servant of his country (Mr. Shiel) who said "Give to the natives what privileges you please, but do not deprive Englishmen of their privileges." (Hear, hear.) I say, we still have the support of him (Mr. Wynn) who declared that the power now given to the Indian Government was vast and monstrous and rendered it absolutely despotic! But I will not trespass on you, gentlemen, by quoting the various sentiments of those on whose powerful support we may still happily calculate. It is sufficient to have shown that there are grounds for confidence in the resolution I have the honor to submit, and if there could be any doubt of the probable success of the appeal, after what I have stated, they will be considerably lessened by our appointing an active and skilful agent who will muster our friends and keep our enemies out of the way. But much as I depend on these circumstances, more than all, gentlemen, I rely for success on the justice and integrity of OUR CAUSE (Hear, hear.)

"Thrice is he armed who has his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though locked up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted."

Gentlemen, I conclude by moving the second Resolution,

II.—That it is also expedient to provide for the chance of the failure of such memorial and to petition Parliament to repeal the said act.

Mr. DICKENS briefly seconded the motion.

Mr. WYBORN now rose and was received with mingled disapprobation and applause—the latter from a very few individuals. The Sheriff entreated the meeting to allow a fair hearing to every person, and at length the learned gentleman was permitted to proceed.

Gentlemen,—In addressing you, I do not contemplate any subject calculated to excite a difference of opinion, inasmuch as what I have to say is in favor and in furtherance of what appears to me to be the main object of your wishes, namely, the “preservation of the rights of English Christians, to be tried by the English Christian Judges.” So far I conceive no Englishman can oppose you, or wish to exclude the natives of this country from an equal advantage; for according to my view of the rights of that nation in which Christianity is part and parcel of the law, and in which only Christians can hold office of trust. Every Englishman’s life and property ought to be confided to the care of those only who agree with him in what forms the bases of his laws, all future ameliorations in the political state of the Hindoos, must be derived from the contact with and the example of Christian Europeans. To encourage the settlement—by ensuring the safety and comforts of Europeans here,—ought to be the first object of the British Legislature. Any system, which reverses that position, which deters, or disinclines them from such residence and settlement, is a vicious system and ought to be amended. But the worst parts of such a system are those which tend to render the existence of English colonists here positively insupportable, by placing their lives and fortunes at the mercy of Hindoo judges,—men immersed in the abysses of the most abject and hideous superstition, who consider the Christian religion to be false and dangerous to the present and future prospects of its votaries. We are met to discuss the propriety of that law which renders every Englishman subject to tribunals—the judges of some of which are now Hindoos, and under an Act, which renders Hindoos eligible for the posts of judges of the highest courts of appeal. Are the Hindoos now in a fit state to sit in judgment over their conquerors of a different religion? I ask of you, who have lately witnessed the Churruck Pooja, one of their hideous and disgusting festivals and processions, at the aspect of which my blood revolted, and I blushed for the degradation of the human race, under the tyranny of their spiritual guides. I saw the frantic and crawling populace of all ranks and ages and sex—enjoying this spectacle of human abasement. I saw (amongst thousands of such fanatics) a naked, dishevelled figure, his face painted with various grotesque colours, his long hair and whole body besmeared with dirt and ashes. Bamboos were carried by four men, which passed between the integuments of his bleeding arms. His protruded tongue was pierced with an iron bar about four feet long—in front his breast was scorched by the fire from the burning altar which rested on his stomach—behind his back was pierced by a quantity of fish hooks held by cords from the end of a pole. In this manner he danced through the streets of Calcutta. I am told the highest natives seek to propitiate their divinities by these penitences, and this nation is now considered fit to decide upon the destinies of civilized Christian Europeans, nay, this revolting figure, covered with ashes, dirt and paint, and bleeding voluntary wounds may, should the system be carried out, the next moment, in the ardor of his so obtained additional sanctity, ascend the bench of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and in a suit between a Gentoo and an Englishman think it an act of additional sanctity to decide against law in favor of the professor of the true faith (cheers.) And what is the audacity of these benighted individuals? I hold in my hand the report of a meeting, held in this Hall, on this subject on the 5th of January, 1835, extracted from the Bengal Hurkaru. At that meeting, in a Christian assembly on the question of an addition to the grant of money for religious education and worship, a native publicly declared that the natives (he being one) felt the Christian religion to be destructive of both their temporal and eternal happiness. He denied, on the authority of what he called our sacred book, the justice and the right of the Government to tax the inhabitants in support of the Christian portion of it. I regret to say that these sentiments were received by the assembly, not with reprobation or even silence, but cheers. There was not one Christian present, who thought it his duty to tell the infidel, that if he thought contumeliously of our Redeemer or disbelieved the truth of our scriptures, that this Hall, and that audience ought not to be profaned by his sneers at or blasphemous declarations of his opinions against what they think and the law holds sacred, and that he should reserve such remarks for his own conventicles.

[Here the Sheriff called Mr. Wyborn to order. He said that this was a general meeting composed of inhabitants of all religions, and that nothing ought to be said which was calculated to give pain to any class.]

Mr. WYBORN maintained that he was in order, and that any fact, tending to shew that the present Moslem Native judges were in such an abject state of subjection to their priests, was an argument in favor of the motion, viz., that the Parliament should be petitioned to repeal the Act.

But the Sheriff persisting, Mr. Wyborn out of personal respect, yielded and proceeded as follows.

Gentlemen,—You have an object to attain, and the question now is the fittest mode of attaining it. This certainly, but for what I regret to say has passed in this hall, would have experienced more favor in the quarter which it is now proposed to address. The act complained of is by the Governor-General in council—the appeal proposed is to the Directors. In the report from the Hurler, which I hold in my hand, the proposer of that petition to Parliament, speaks of the future Governor-General as a mere puppet of power, and says that he has always thought an appeal from the acts of such a puppet to those who sent him, i. e. the Directors, is a farce, and that it has always been found so. That same gentleman and others, doubtless from conviction and the best motives, but I think unfortunately and erroneously, have declared that the patronage of the Directors—in other words the Government by its Governors—ought to be divided, with others whom they do not name; but they exclude from any additional power the crown and the Board of Control. Others declare that the Court of Directors ought to be abolished. That the Company ought not to be retained as an instrument for governing India at all, whilst Messrs. Turton and Dickens declare that they have never held the doctrine that Parliament can effectually legislate for India—and the petition complains of too much additional power being given to the Board of Control. One styles the Governor-General, who should act according to the authority of the statute, constituting him a colossus of despotism, either to be a bold, bad man, or a weak, wicked and arbitrary man. That the addition of the 4th Member in Council is no security for the better government of India, but the reverse, and that the task imposed upon the Law Commissioners no man can perform, and the execution of which is a wild chimera; and Mr. Turton complains that the 4th Member may, by the statute assist in discussing a Law, but cannot be said to assist in passing it. Mr. Turton declares that the act of Parliament is the worst passed by any Parliament, reformed or unreformed, does not contain one provision in favor of India, which is not an illusion, and cheers the native, who has the audacity to say to the assembly that the motives of those who passed it, King, Lords and Commons, was not the benefit of India, but their own interests, and that it disgraced the British name and character in India. This self-interest in the Legislature is defined to be the presentation of the dividends of the stockholders. How could the King, Lords and Commons be personally influenced to pass any law injurious to India, by such a motive? Are they generally India stock holders? very few, I believe; but on the contrary I am credibly informed, many and perhaps the greatest part of such proprietors are the rich Rajahs and Bahads of Calcutta. [Here there were great denials on the part of the Bar, but Dwarkanauth Tagore admitted the fact.] Gentlemen, it is easy to vilify the motives of public men, but I think unfair, and at any rate imprudent. The hearts of men are known only to him who made them, and by imputing the worst, you deprive them of the greatest and best motive to purity of conduct—the desire and hope of your good opinion. What is now your situation? You have found your prediction fulfilled and you are now compelled to ask for assistance, and make, if you cannot find, friends—and all who can serve you, have been by turns involved in the same category of delinquents. Do you seek the Governor-General? He is the puppet in power, the bold, bad, or the weak, wicked, and arbitrary man, and not the wise man who refrains. Do you seek the Parliament? That is a dishonest one, whose motives have been to defraud and impose upon you, for their own interests, under pretext of bettering your condition. The Board of Control? You complain they have already sold you to the Directors for an addition to their own power. To the Court of Directors? You tell them, they will err in the exercise of their power of appointing a single individual to any office in the Civil, Military, or Medical Service, however, great may be his claims, and that their mode of appointments is obnoxious in principle and injurious in practice. This general censure would be wrong even if you had reserved some powerful quarter upon which you might rely, and in turn support by the moral influence of the hardship of your situation, the error of the Government, and the view which may be fairly taken of the true interests of the Europeans and natives of India. But at this meeting I find denials of the right, nay, of the power, of all the constituted authorities of India: of the Court of Directors; of the Board of Control; nay, even of Parliament itself. It is now declared that the act of the Governor-General is illegal, at that meeting, Jan. 7, 1835, the grievance complained of was, that the law as it stood, constituted him a colossus of despotism, and that the whole power was given to him; that he had a council, but that council was subordinate to him; and this declaration is true to the letter. It is vain now to complain of the illegality of an act which you then properly admitted to be legal, and threw the whole blame on the Legislature.

[Here there was a great confusion, a loud cry of chair, chair, order, order, question, and the Sheriff declared that nothing which passed at that meeting, was relevant to the present subject.]

Mr. Wyborn declared that it was the same identical subject, and that it was necessary to try the present repeal act, by the test of its legality or illegality. The Sheriff complained that this was the second or third time that Mr. Wyborn had disturbed the public meetings by this species of conduct.

Here some conversation took place near where Mr. Wyborn was sitting, and it was understood that several gentlemen thought he had not had a fair hearing. Mr. Stocqueler asked Mr. Wyborn how long a time what he had to say would probably take up? Mr. Wyborn answered "about ten minutes." This was intimated by Mr. Stocqueler to the meeting, and Mr. Wyborn was then allowed to proceed in quiet; many gentlemen, however, taking out their watches to see that he did not exceed the stipulated period.]

Mr. Wyborn.—I was upon a point of the most vital importance to this question, namely, the legality or illegality of the act of the Governor-General, because if a high functionary has acted illegally, the petition should not be confined to disallowing the enactment, but that he may be recalled and impeached, whereas if the act be legal, though inexpedient, the present is the proper mode of proceeding. Now, gentlemen, in opposition to the authorities of those, who are certainly well qualified to instruct you, I venture as a lawyer to say, the act is strictly legal. It has been said it is illegal, because it affects a Court established by acts of Parliament, whereas the powers of the Governor-General are limited to the Courts established by Charter. Gentlemen, the Supreme Court is not established by act of Parliament, but it was established by charter, the Charter only. (Here was a violent tumult, a general cry of "no, no.") Gentlemen, I was prepared for this denial, and I hold in my hand a copy of the charter establishing the Supreme Court. Statutes have been passed, limiting and defining its powers, but the Court itself exists but by the charter of 1773. By force of the 13 Geo. Sec. 3, c. 63, p 13, by which the King is empowered, after reciting a previous patent in 26th Geo. 2d, it is enacted that his Majesty Geo. 3d may by Charter or letters patent under the great seal, erect and establish a Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William, aforesaid, to perform all civil, criminal, admiralty, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Another point has been dwelt upon by Mr. Turton and others, and which is equally misunderstood, and by those who ought to know and teach you better. It has been said you have been accustomed in the Supreme Court to be governed by English law. You have been so when only Englishmen were concerned, but were a Mahomedan or Gentoo was concerned against an Englishman, and the Gentoo refused to fulfil his contracts, the Supreme Court was and is obliged to decide according to the laws of the Gentoos, whereas if the Englishman refused to perform his contract, the Gentoo was forced to abide by the decision of the Supreme Court according to the laws of England. (No, no, no.) Gentlemen, I was prepared for this denial, and hold in my hand the clause in the act of Parliament, which cannot err; it is the 21. Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 17. The Supreme Court shall determine in such manner as is provided in the said charter or letters patent, all suits against the inhabitants of Calcutta, their inheritance, succession to lands, rents, and goods and all matters of contract between party and party:—in the case of Mahomedans by the laws and usages of Mahomedans, in the case of Gentoos by those of Gentoos, and where only one of the parties shall be a Mahomedan or Gentoo—by the laws and usages of the defendant. Thus, gentlemen, hard as your case may be at finding yourselves dragged before an infidel judge, considering you, as belonging to the beasts which perish, yet as far as relates to your security of British law, even in the Supreme Court, if opposed to a Gentoo defendant, you never had such an advantage over the natives. And those who told you so have (I say it with all respect for their talents and characters) misled you.

Mr. W. P. GRANT.—Before the question is put I wish to say a few words, briefly premising that it is not my intention to reply to what has just fallen from Mr. Wyborn, the greater part of which I am sure I much regret to have heard. In one remark of his I perfectly agree,—I agree with him in reprobating the taste of any person who in an assembly of which Christians form a part, insults the religion which they profess to believe. I leave it to the learned gentleman to conjecture what the feelings are with which I regard the conduct of that Christian and educated man who in an assembly like this, employs the powers which his talents and experience and education give him, to insult the religious feelings of the people by whom we are now surrounded (Cheers and Question.) I have no intention to wander from the question, but I cannot silently permit these people, many of whom cannot speak for themselves, to be insulted in my presence, and I should disgrace my character as an Englishman if I were not to repel attacks on those who are unable to defend themselves. (Cheers.)

Having said thus much I will follow Mr. Wyborn's remarks no further; and leaving him and the disquisitions he has indulged in regarding certain proceedings here in the year 1835 to their fate, I shall address myself to the object of our meeting to-day, viz., this act No. XI of the year 1836. I greatly lament that in some of the opinions which I entertain I shall not have the good fortune to agree with gentlemen now near me, and whom I respect so much, and I feel anxious to show that I dissent from them only on the prudence of the course they have thought proper to adopt, not on the principle of the measure we are now met to consider. To their zeal and ability I bear my humble and very sincere testimony, but I think it a duty to repeat here what I have said to them elsewhere, that a petition to Parliament asking to repeal this act is not in my opinion the most likely means to forward the objects which I believe we all have in view. I will assist them to the utmost of my power in endeavouring to obtain that repeal, or if that cannot be, I will assist them in holding up to scorn, contempt, and obliquely, the men who have polluted their authority by endeavouring to make so disgraceful a law as that which we are met to protest against. I will go all lengths in committing myself against the principle which has conferred upon us that act. Perhaps I have expressed myself ~~earlier~~ more warmly than I should have done, had I felt that there were no differences of opinion between us, but I am really most anxious to shew that those differences relate only to the means and not to the end, which we contemplate. As far as regards the putting an end to this act other means might secure our success, for, should the Board of Control be favourable to our views, the act of Parliament has given them the power to disallow it. I say Parliament has virtually given that power to the Board of Control, for though the Court of Directors are mentioned in the act as the persons who have the power, I thank God that they can now send no despatch to India which the Board of Control disapprove of, and that the Board of Control may now compel the Court of Directors, whether they like it or not, to send out under the seal of the Honorable Court whatever they are ordered by the Board. I have no fears therefore of the Court of Directors, while we have an honest Board of Control, and though I am not over sanguine that the Board will make use of their power in this instance in the way which we may wish, I think it due to them and to Parliament not to appear to distrust the justice of those to whom Parliament has referred us for redress. Upon these grounds, I cordially voted for the last resolution expressing our sense of the propriety of presenting memorials to the Court of Directors and the Board of Control. It appears to me that it would not be a wise measure to send those memorials home without showing the dangers to which the New Act will expose us, and which I am willing to believe the authorities here were ignorant of when they framed it. I would bring the same dangers to the notice of the House of Commons, but with a different intent, and the prayer of my petition to them would be different, and far wider in its extent. I freely admit that I am unwilling to lose this opportunity of shewing to Parliament the feeling with which the Inhabitants of Calcutta regard the powers in my opinion most improvidently granted to the Legislative Council, and the way in which the Legislative Council have not in this instance alone abused those powers. When I look at the numbers of which this meeting is composed, I must feel grateful to those gentlemen who have by their power of mind and strength of their writing roused so many to a sense of the importance of the matters before us, and to a resolution to make public their well founded complaints. I assure those gentlemen that it is with no factious intention that I recommend the petition to be varied. I would make the prayer of it a humble, temperate, but urgent remonstrance against the powers conferred upon the Legislative Council, respectfully asking Parliament to consider the extent of their authority and to define their power, showing the dangerous feelings that will arise among people otherwise well disposed if the rights of man are thus to be trampled on. Here let me notice an assertion which I never will hear in public or in private without contradicting. I seek not to be one of a favoured set, I seek only for that which is at this moment enjoyed, and for long before the English acquired a footing in India was enjoyed by the only classes of inhabitants, which were recognised in the country. I say that the Hindoos and Mussulmen have, and always had their particular laws administered to them by judges to whom their particular laws were familiar; I say that we the British-born inhabitants of India are in no better condition than the Mussulmans and Hindoos, when we like them, have our laws administered by people to whom our laws are familiar. I say that we cannot be charged justly with an attempt to uphold exclusive privileges, when we protest against the anomaly of having our differences, determined by a law which the people who are to determine them do not understand. I need not say that from the earliest period of our establishment in India, the law to which British born subjects in the British parts of India were subject, was the law of England. Am I to be told that if so, it is so still, that the only alteration is in the tribunal? That the substantive law remains the same? I know it does. I know that not even the Legislative Council of India has power to alter this, and therefore I cannot say that I ever believed that such could be the effect of this act of 1836. But at the same time I perfectly understand the apprehensions of the memorialists who addressed the government on this subject, for I believe this is the first instance of a government handing over disputes to a tribunal to be tried avowedly by laws with which the tribunal must be totally unacquainted. Another thing of great importance is to keep in view that we have been told all the opposition against this law has been made by a handful of foreigners. The best answer to this will be the fact that the great body of those joining in these petitions are not British-born; but people of every class and tribe in the East, who come forward to resist an encroachment upon the powers of the only Courts in India, under whose protection their persons and their property are secure. It is well known that the King's Court is the only Court for the inhabitants of Calcutta; are they composed only of British-born subjects? Do British-born subjects bear any proportion to the rest? Is this not the place where foreigners of every sort congregate, and take up their abode, gladly seeking the protection of British law administered by British lawyers? Is it not the same at Madras, and at Bombay? Can I forget the proof which was given at Bombay of the attachment which was shewn lately by the native inhabitants there to British laws and British Courts of Justice, at a time when it was thought the rights of the Supreme Court there were invaded by the servants of the Company, an attachment proved by a petition to Parliament with 6,000 signatures and to which no British-born subject was allowed to fix his name? Can I forget the testimony which was given of this attachment at Bombay in the case of a learned relative of mine, a judge superseded by the power of the East India Company, — a testimony which made the day on which he was condemned to leave that place the proudest of his life, when his house, the largest in the island, was unable to contain the numbers of natives who went to him of his departure, and when he was accompanied to the ship which was to convey him from them for ever by thousands of native well-wishers? We hear a great deal of the excellence of the East India Company's Government, and the improvement which has taken place in the country since it has been under them. I firmly believe that their Government continued to exist only because it is better than that of the Mogul was, and with the exception of the Government of the Mogul, I think the Company's Government the worst I ever knew. However that may be, the only improvement which can be traced is owing to the greater security which persons and property enjoy now than they did previously, and the principal means by which any improvement can be made, is capital employed by British residents in the interior. It is, therefore, of great consequence that the securities under which British settlers may resort there, should not be destroyed. It is well known that before the act of 1813, such persons could only be brought before the Supreme Court. Since that act their disputes have been investigated upon the spot where they occurred, and the facts I believe well and impartially ascertained under the eye of a British gentleman whose errors in point of law were liable to be set to rights by those who understood the law, but now the alteration is that errors are to be rectified by persons as ignorant as those who committed them, by men with no more knowledge of law to guide them, than we might expect to find in English boys of eighteen. I say then it is a crying grievance, I say more, it is a positive wrong to deny what we are asking for. But, gentlemen, it is very late and I will not detain you longer than to suggest that the petition be referred to a committee for the purpose of bringing forward generally the errors which the Legislative Council have committed and the fears which we entertain of the powers they enjoy and the way in which they are likely to use them (Cheers.)

Here the resolution was put and unanimously carried.

MR. LONGUEVILLE CHARKE.—Gentlemen, let me entreat your indulgence for a moment, while I allude to a subject which is not a portion of the business, although it has been introduced into the discussion of this evening. It is to defend the character of a talented and esteemed individual, who has been accused by Mr. Wyborn of insulting Christians and reviling their religion. I deny the fact, and I appeal to Mr. Turton, Mr. Cockerell, Mr. Dickens, Mr. Hare, and Capt. Vint, and twenty others who are standing near me, who were present at the meeting of 1835 and who heard what was said by my friend Russic Krishna Mullick. What he said was, that it was unfair to tax the Hindoo community to pay the salaries of Christian Bishops, and as well might Christians be taxed to support a Brahmin establishment. In this there is no scoffing at the Christian religion, nor is it more, than what is said every day at home, where the Irish catholic complains of being taxed to support the Protestant clergyman—(hear, hear.) Thanking you for this indulgence, in permitting me to allude to a matter not before you, I now have to propose for your adoption, the resolution, which has been committed to me to move. It is with unfeigned gratification, that I find myself entrusted with a motion so important, for the principle which it involves is calculated to establish the true property of the country, and to overthrow the self-interested objects of the Court of Directors. I tell you, gentlemen, that the object of the Court of Directors is now, and always has been, to create a division between the Native and English inhabitants of India, (cheers) and Mr. Macaulay, who is the agent of the Court, and playing their game, would have you believe that the English are desirous of exclusive privileges, and that they should enjoy and retain them, at the expense of the interest of the native community,—a more foul conspiracy has never been hatched, nor a greater falsehood broached. I deny for my countrymen, that we seek for aught to the detriment of the natives, or that we have a privilege in the world, in which we do not desire that they should participate—(Cheers.) Look around you, my native friends, at what has been done by the English in Calcutta, the institutions they have established, to improve, protect, relieve, to impart knowledge in every department, to mitigate the miseries of sickness and of poverty. Are these the indications of an exclusive spirit, or a hostile feeling? yet in the face of these facts, Mr. Macaulay tells you, that his countrymen are grasping at exclusive privileges to the detriment of the interests of the natives. Why makes he this assertion? Gentlemen, I will explain, and expose the whole plot to you, and by reference to facts, demonstrate it beyond the power of contradiction. The true object that the English, the party to whom it is my pride to belong, is not to depress but to elevate the natives, to exalt you in every respect to our level, and the achievement of this, is exactly what the Court of Directors dread, and would prevent; and lest we should elevate you to the position in which we stand, they would cast us down, take from us our privileges, our laws, our birth-right, in order that there may be no free body of men in India, to whose rights the native might aspire (loud cheers.) Well do the Court of Directors know how contagious is the spirit of freedom; how catching its example; how rapid is its progress! Well do they know, my native friends, that if you have among you a body of men who are too powerful for the Government to oppress, and too independent for their notions of obedience, that it will afford the best illustration to the natives of civic rights, and that the example will not be thrown away, and that is the example which they dread, it threatens destruction to themselves, and to remove it is the whole bent of their policy, aye, I repeat it, to remove this example, is the whole bent of their policy, mark now, I prove it. I prove it by shewing that the entire political history of the Court of Directors demonstrates, that this is the object they have unceasingly pursued (hear, hear.) From the birth-hour of their corporation, they placed a ban on their countrymen—they forbade them holding property in India, they forbade their trading to it, nay, more—mark me now, I pray, in the words of the act, it was a high crime and misdemeanour, punishable with fine and imprisonment, for an Englishman without their license, to place his foot upon this soil (Much cheering.) Was not this placing a gulph between the Hindoo and the Briton? Does not this demonstrate their dread of connexion, union, and sympathy between two races? (Cheers.) And when was it they gave up this system, or abandoned this policy? Never; to the last hour they pursued it, and fought for it, till the late act of Parliament was forced on them. And what, gentlemen, was the pretext and excuse for this favorite line of policy? Oh, in sooth! it was pure tenderness for the natives who, the gentle Directors dreaded, might be harassed and oppressed by English ruffianism. (Laughter.) Is there a man who has ever resided six months in India, who can listen to such an argument without laughter? Who, let me ask you,—who, I say, is the hope, and who is the dread of the Mofussil—who is the blessing, and who is the curse of the district? Is it the planter supporting thousands by expending his lacks of rupees, or is it the Darogah and the Sheristadar plundering, imprisoning, and torturing? Is it the body of English planters, or the myrmidons of this every corporation? (Continued cheering.) Gentlemen, this regard for the natives is a shallow pretext, the real object was to prevent the Briton from infecting the Hindoo with a love of liberty, and to stop the contagion of freedom. (Cheers.) The inquisition interdicts the works of the philosopher, the continental tyrants, those of the patriot, and the Indian Company would take from the natives the dangerous example of seeing any class of their fellow-citizens free. (Hear, hear.) But that I may not be accused of misrepresenting, I will read the words of Mr. Macaulay—the tool of the Court, the agent of their work.—I will quote his words on the debate of the Indian Bill. Mark them well, gentlemen—“At present in India, liberty we cannot have, despotism we must have, but let us avoid that worst of all evils, a partial despotism.” Such was his language, and were it not taken from the Mirror of Parliament, I should have doubted, that any man dare have uttered such trash and absurdities in an assembly of intelligent men. If despotism be an evil, then the more unmixed it is, the greater must the despotism be, the more partial it is, the less must it be; but according to Mr. Macaulay, the greater the despotism, the less the evil; the more limited the despotism, the greater the evil—(laughter.) Was there no one in that house to suggest to this wise legislator, how striking is the similarity between a body politic and a body corporal, and to ask him whether he would prefer to have a gangrene on some one spot of his own person, or to be an entire mass of ulcerous sores;—methinks, he would then have a lively sense of the greater and the lesser evil—(laughter.) But, gentlemen, Mr. Macaulay was determined to clear up every mistake; having told the house that the despotism must be universal, and ought to be extended from the native to the Briton, he proceeded to shew what the quality of that despotism was, and he gave no dubious idea of its frightful extent, when he announced that the Governor-General had the power of decimating the native population. Such was the language of Mr. Macaulay; and I thank him for apprising us of his notions of the tyranny to which we are subject. (Hear, hear.) I will not now stop to discuss whether the Governor-General could decimate the population, if the machinations of the Company and their agent succeeded in driving the English from India, by making it intolerable for a freeman to live in it; but this I do know, that while English hearts and hands are in this country, our native fellow subjects are safe from decimation, and that we would soon tell the tyrant, by whom such a mad attempt might be made,

"There yawns the sack, and yonder rolls the sea."

(Loud cheers.)

Mr. Macaulay might treat this as an idle threat, but his knowledge of history and literature will supply him with many striking examples of what has occurred when resistance was provoked, and that milder instances of despotism, than the decimation of a people, have harbingered the wildest changes. Experience teaches us, that despotism is of all suicides the greatest, and invariably perpetrates its own destruction; for no man, however vast his authority, is capable of resisting an excited people. Individually they may be lighter than the grains of dust in the desert, but the wave of the sand storm is not more overwhelming than the concentrated powers of the multitude. The Court of Directors know this—Mr. Macaulay, their agent, knows this. They believe that the native population would succumb to this their cherished despotism, which their own agent has unblushingly proclaimed, but well they know that Englishmen will not submit. To separate us from the natives is then their object. Formerly their scheme was to keep us from the country, but by perseverance we have won every point from them, and we may now trade, settle, and reside where we please. Instantly they change the workings of their conspiracy, and by subjecting us without redress to the abominations of their Mofussil courts, they would drive us from the country. The object of my motion is to defeat this conspiracy, and to give the lie to the assertion, that we the English seek for peculiar privileges. My friends, let us all unite, let caste and color, religion and rank, native and English, make one common cause, demand liberty not for one, but for all—demand justice, not for one, but for all—demand the birth-right of Englishmen, not for Englishmen alone, but to share it with the natives. Let the resolution which I propose for your adoption, be the great, the guiding principle of our union, and let not delay, no, my friends, nor defeat, impair our perseverance;

"For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft is ever won."

III.—That the native subjects of the Crown, ought to be placed on an equal footing with British subjects in respect of the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Russic Kristna Mullick seconded the resolution in a short address.

Captain BIDEN.—Gentlemen, I come before you in the character of a British seaman, and on that ground claim your attention for a few moments. Gentlemen, there has been much talk during the evening of laws and regulations and rights and liberties, and all that, but you all seem to have forgotten that this, gentlemen, is the anniversary of the glorious battle of Waterloo; (loud laughter and cheers.) Gentlemen, I beg to propose, and I call on the statute of Lord Cornwallis, and yourselves, to join me in three cheers for the Duke of Wellington and the battle of Waterloo!!! (Renewed laughter, furious cheering, waving of hats and handkerchiefs, crowing, squeaking, and groaning, during which the Chairman rose to restore order and decorum, but gave way also.)

Mr. OSBORNE.—Gentlemen, this is most disgraceful—Entreat of you—I implore you, to consider that we are here to discuss a very grave and important question, and that we ought not for an instant to tolerate and applaud such outrageous buffoonery. (Loud cries of hear, hear!)

The Chairman.—I expected that Captain Biden was about to speak to the question. He was called upon by name, and it was my duty, therefore, to give him an opportunity of delivering his sentiments. I never could have anticipated such an extraordinary proposition as that which he submitted to you, or I certainly should not have given my sanction to his interruption of the course of the business of the evening.

(Here Mr. Osborne made some remarks upon the conduct of the Chairman, but was loudly called to order by the meeting.)

The resolution of Mr. Clarke was then put and carried by acclamation.

Mr. DICKENS read and briefly proposed the following petition for the adoption of the meeting. But it was afterwards arranged that it be referred to a committee of five to modify it.

PETITION TO PARLIAMENT.

Sheweth—That by the 51st Section of the 3d and 4th W. 4, c. 85, it is enacted that all Laws and Regulations made by the Governor General in Council of India, shall be transmitted to England and laid before both Houses of Parliament, in order that if objectionable, they may be repealed or altered.

That by successive Charters of His Majesty's predecessors and numerous Acts of Parliament all the British-born subjects of His Majesty have had confirmed to them the indisputable right of being governed by the laws of England throughout His Majesty's Indian territories and the English law has prevailed within the town of Calcutta for the space of more than 130 years.

That an Act has lately been passed by the Legislative Council of India, and promulgated as law, entitled Act No. XI. of 1836, purporting to repeal the 17th Section of the 53d Geo. 3d c. 155.

That the object of this new Indian law is to render all the British-born subjects of the Crown throughout these territories amenable to the jurisdiction of the Provincial Courts (many of which are presided over by Mahomedan and Hindoo judges, the number of such judges in the Presidencies of Bengal and Agra not being less than twenty-six), and to take away the appeal to His Majesty's Supreme Court.

That by this new law the British-born subject is deprived of his right to appeal in all cases where the amount in dispute is under 5,000 Rs., and when it exceeds that sum, His Majesty's tribunals are deprived of their jurisdiction which is transferred to the East India Company's Courts of Sadder Dewanny and Sadder Adawlut.

That many of the British born inhabitants of Calcutta, deeming the proposed law to be grievous, unjust and unnecessary, petitioned the Legislative Council of India against its enactment, and the British subjects resident in the cities of Pooreeah in the Provinces of Bengal and Behar preferred a memorial to the same effect.

That the Government of India in their answer to the Petition of the British inhabitants of Calcutta, declared that the act in question made no change in the substantive law to be administered hereafter to British subjects, but that the effect was simply to substitute one appellate tribunal for another, which the Government in its reply endeavoured to shew by argument was a preferable Court.

That several of the British inhabitants of Calcutta, conceiving from the tenor of the Government Regulations that it was doubtful at least as far as the intentions of Government were concerned, whether they might not be wholly deprived of all rules of law and subjected in all civil proceedings whatever to the mere discretion of the Local Judges, before they entered into any consideration of the asserted superiority of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlat as an appellate tribunal for British subjects, thought it necessary to request that the Government would distinctly state what law it intended the Provincial Courts in future should administer where British subjects were concerned, and accordingly addressed a memorial to Government stating that they were left in doubt whether it was the intention of Government by the proposed Act to give to the Judges of the Provincial Courts and to British-born subjects in all civil proceedings whatever (not even excepting marriage and inheritance and succession to property, real and personal) no other law or rule of civil conduct than what the Judges of those Courts might deem to be the rule of justice, equity, and good conscience, or whether it was the intention of Government that the law of England in some or any cases should be administered by these Courts.

That to this memorial after seventeen days the Government returned a reply as follows: "The Company's Courts are directed by the Regulations to decide according to equity and good conscience, only in cases in which no other rules exist. The proposed Act repeals no existing rules. To whatever extent, therefore, the English law of inheritance, marriage and succession is now in force with respect to British subjects residing in the Mofussil, to the same extent will it continue to be in force after the passing of the proposed Act."

That the reasons which induced the British inhabitants of India who signed this memorial to request from Government an explanation of its intentions in passing Act No. XI. were the extreme uncertainty which must exist under the Regulations of Government considered as distinct from the law of England, and until the instructions of the Executive Government are given to their Courts how to act in each case, whether even as between British-born subjects when both plaintiffs and defendants are such, the laws of England or any Laws will be regarded by the Provincial Courts as binding and imperative on them, even in questions relating to marriage, divorce, inheritance to real, or succession to personal property, the proof and construction of wills, the rights and duties of executors and administrators, or in fact in any questions or cases whatsoever.

That your Honorable House may clearly understand there was good reason for these doubts, and good cause for requesting an explanation from Government for the purpose of solving them (at least as far as the intentions of Government were concerned) your petitioners here subjoin the clauses of the different Regulations which contain all the provision that Government has made for the decision of the rights of parties not being Mahomedans or Hindoos. The first section in point of date of any Regulation which contains any provisions that can be construed as applicable to the cases of British-born subjects, is Section XXI. of Regulation 3. of 1798, in these terms.

"In cases coming within the jurisdiction of the Zillah and City Courts, for which no specific rule may exist, the Judges are to act according to justice, equity and good conscience."

The next (Clause 2, of Section 3, of Regulation 8, of 1795, having been repealed) are Sections 8 and 9, of Regulation 7, of 1792, in these terms.

"VIII. Such part of Clause 2, Section 3, Regulation VIII 1795, enacted for the province of Benares, which declare that "in causes in which the plaintiff shall be of a different religious persuasion from the defendant, the decision is to be regulated by the law of the religion of the latter, excepting where Europeans or other persons not being either Mahomedans or Hindoos shall be defendants; in which case the law of the plaintiff is to be made the rule of decision in all plaints or actions of a civil nature," is hereby rescinded, and the rule contained in Section 15, Regulation IV 1791, and the corresponding enactment contained in Clause 1, Section 16, Regulation III. 1803, shall be the rule of guidance in all suits regarding successions, inheritance, marriage, and caste, and all religious usages and institutions that may arise in between persons professing the Hindoo and Mahomedan persuasions respectively.

"IX. It is hereby declared, however, that the above rules are intended, and shall be held to apply to such persons only as shall be bona fide professors of those religions at the time of the application of the law to the case, and were designed for the protection of the rights of such persons, not for the deprivation of the rights of others. Whenever, therefore, in any civil suit, the parties to such suit may be of different persuasions, when one party shall be of the Hindoo, and the other of the Mahomedan persuasion, or where one or more of the parties to the suit shall not be either of the Mahomedan or Hindoo persuasions, the law of those religions shall not be permitted to operate to deprive such party or parties of any property to which, but for the operation of such laws, they would have been entitled. In all such cases, the decision shall be governed by the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience it being clearly understood, however, that this provision shall not be considered as justifying the introduction of the English, or any foreign law, or the application to such cases of any rules not sanctioned by those principles."

That we feel assured that these extracts will make it clear to your Honorable House, that we acted with becoming caution in requesting this information from Government, and we pray your Honorable House seriously and deliberately to consider what good reason the Government could have for refusing to give an intelligible answer, seeing that the Memorial was couched in terms altogether respectful, that there was evidently great uncertainty relative to one of the most serious of human concerns, viz. what law men were hereafter to live under, and in as much as the Government had shortly before conceded in principle and acknowledged in practice, that British subjects had the right to seek in a respectful manner for explanation respecting the objects of a proposed law.

That in the judgment of your Petitioners this answer to a plain request for explanation, proves beyond a doubt, either that the Government was for the first time made aware by the memorial that they would by this Act call upon their Courts to administer, in many cases, the Laws of England (with which even their superior tribunals must be nearly unacquainted and which the greater number of Amicees or native Judges cannot even read) and perceiving this objection and being unable to answer satisfactorily, they thought fit to evade the question; or else, that having a settled policy to dispense with the Laws of England altogether, and to place all British born subjects of his Majesty under the arbitrary discretion of the local Judges in civil proceedings, they felt that such a design was better to be acted upon than avowed, and more easily formed than defended. Whichever of those two reasons actuated the conduct and induced the reply of the Government of India, your Petitioners feel that the uncertainty in which they have been deliberately left as to what law they are to have for their future guidance is in itself a grievous injury and oppression.

That pending the preparation of a general Code of Laws applicable to the condition of each class as far as civil rights are concerned, and which shall preserve to British subjects the civil laws of England in like manner as Hindoos and Mahomedans retain their own, and which shall also provide entire security to all for political and personal liberty, at present entirely unsecured from the hazard of wrong committed by Government, your Petitioners, comprising all the subjects of his Majesty's Indian subjects, are strongly desirous of possessing a liberty of appeal from the local Courts to the only Court of Justice independent of the East India Company and local executive Government, and that such appeal should be open to every suitor without distinction of birth or religion.

That those among your Petitioners who have the right to be governed by the Laws of England, maintain that they cannot lawfully be deprived of a right of appeal to his Majesty's Supreme Court, and they are specially desirous that in all cases relating to marriage, divorce, inheritance to real, and succession to personal property, in which both parties are British subjects, and which ought, therefore, to be decided by the laws of England, the Provincial Courts of the first instance should be altogether prohibited from intermeddling with or entertaining suits, for the decision of which, neither their constitution nor the previous study and practice of the Judges render them at all fitted.

That, moreover, your Petitioners, while they admit the merit and general respectability of the Civil Service of the East India Company, are full of opinion that the Provincial Courts as at present constituted, do not afford adequate security to any class of men that justice can be administered in them and civil liberty duly protected; that these Courts are peculiarly unfitted to administer justice without appeal to British-born settlers in the interior for these reasons, solely affecting the special rights and interests of that class, viz. 1st, because the Judges both English and Native have never studied and are almost entirely ignorant of the laws of England; 2dly, because though they have assistance from native law officers and assessors in the expounding and administering Hindoo and Mahomedan laws, they can have no such assistance in expounding English law, which nevertheless, in cases relating to marriage, inheritance and succession to property, and indeed in all others they may be now called upon to apply. 3dly, because the whole proceedings of such Courts are conducted partly in the vernacular languages of India and partly in the Persian, which latter is in India completely a foreign tongue and therefore imperfectly understood by the majority of the Judges, law officers and pleaders, and not understood at all by the great body of the people, 4thly, because there are no pleaders or attorneys in these Courts who understand the English law and few who understand the English language. 5thly because the Judges of these Courts are entirely dependent on the Executive Government, removable at pleasure and promoted at pleasure. 6thly, because the Executive Government is in the habit of requiring obedience to its own circulars addressed to the Judges, which the Government appears to think, ought to have in all these Courts and with all the Judges, the force of laws, not only in respect to matters of process but in matters affecting right also. 7thly, that such Courts as constituted and subject to such dependance may be easily rendered political engines, by which the residence and settlement of Englishmen in the interior shall become impossible. 8thly, that the refusal of Government to answer the question whether in any case the law of England was to prevail among British settlers in the interior, or whether the Local Courts were to administer to them solely what the Regulations term the law of justice, equity and good conscience, gives rise to the most well grounded suspicions that the Government intends the Courts of Justice in the interior, and through them itself, to possess an arbitrary, unlimited and despotic power in civil matters over the persons and property of British settlers. 9thly, that the East India Company has not only in times long past, but up to the present period, been opposed to the free trade and settlement of their countrymen in India, and your Petitioners are confident that if the power they now possess were exercised in conformity with this policy, they could altogether prevent the extension of British settlements and in the end diminish or destroy those already founded. Indeed for this end the Act No. XI of 1830 would also be amply sufficient, if administered in conformity to such a policy and coupled with a construction giving to the British settlers no other law and to the Courts no other rule of decision than what each Judge may think proper to call the rule of justice, equity and good conscience.

That in addition to these reasons more peculiarly applicable to British subjects, the provincial Courts will, in the judgment of your Petitioners, require many important alterations in their form and constitution before they can adequately protect the civil rights of any class whatever: 1st, because the Civil Service receive their appointments from the Directors of the East India Company with little or no reference to qualifications. Secondly, because each member of the whole body is thus made a Judge or eligible to be a Judge by virtue of his appointment. Thirdly, because the only test of eligibility for office in India is knowledge of two languages. Fourthly, because they receive no legal or judicial training in practice, having previously received no legal education or instruction in theory. Fifthly, because when appointed to judicial situations as the service is now constituted, it constantly occurs that they have never previously decided or considered a civil case, except as connected with the Government Revenue System, in their whole lives. Sixthly, because the ordinary and permanent establishment is but one Judge of the Civil Service to each Zillah, the average population of which in Bengal and Behar may be estimated as exceeding one million. Seventhly, because they had to administer before the Regulation XI of 1830, was passed, three distinct systems of law and practice, viz. the Hindoo and Mahomedan, each sub-divided into several written systems, and also the Government Civil Regulations, besides various minor customary and unwritten laws in each district, and they have now superadded to these the common and statute laws of England, its equity and ecclesiastical systems with all their sub-divisions. Eighthly, because there is no adequate provision made for the execution of their decrees when pronounced, there being no officer like a Sheriff or any other person especially charged therewith: a very serious evil, and which leads in many cases to a total denial and mockery of justice. Ninthly, because they have no honest assistance, the Amli or native officers of Court being notoriously corrupt, a fact not denied by Government or the most able men in its service, and being besides but very moderately versed in the knowledge of the Hindoo and Mahomedan law; and the pleaders or vakeels being mostly ignorant and altogether dependant on the Judges who frequently exercise an arbitrary power of fining for alleged disrespect and contempts. Tenthly, because the Judges are almost irresponsible for their situation, being too much removed from the inspection of Government or an intelligent public. Eleventhly, because the Revenue Regulations are mixed up with the Judicial in such a manner that in many cases it is impossible to separate them by any intelligible definitions; and the Collectors are constantly clothed with Judicial and Magisterial powers and functions, and decide as well as Judges, most important questions relating to civil rights, not only between ordinary parties but between Government and its subjects.

That as the formation of a Code of Laws applicable to all classes throughout India and the reform of all Courts, and particularly the obvious reform in the East India Company's Superior Courts, which shall emancipate them from the direct controul of the Executive Government, are labours likely to consume much time, and to encounter many difficulties, it is expedient in the judgment of your petitioners, that in all cases of debt and contract or trespass, in which one British subject shall be sued by another, or in which a British subject shall sue or be sued by any other than a British subject all suiters without distinction, against whom a decision shall be passed by the Company's Courts, should have the power of appealing to the Supreme Courts or Sudder Dewanne Adawlut at their option, and that in all cases respecting marriage, divorce, inheritance to real and succession to personal estate, merely regarding the rights of British subjects or persons entitled to be considered as such, the decisions in which cases ought to be regulated entirely by the law of England, the Courts of the East India Company shall be altogether prohibited from entertaining them, until reformed by the labours of the Law Commission.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray, that the Act of the Council No. XI. of 1836 be repealed, and that the Sec. 107 of the 3rd. Geo. 3d. c. 135, be amended if necessary, by inserting therein, that in all cases of debt, contract or trespass in which one British subject may be sued in the Local Courts by another British subject, or by any other than a British subject, for an amount exceeding 4,000 Government rupees, an appeal shall be given to the party against whom the decision of the Court shall pass, (whether native or British subject) either to the Supreme Court or Sudder Dewanne Adawlut, at his option, and that in all cases merely between British subjects, relating to marriage, divorce, inheritance to real and succession to personal estate, inasmuch as they relate solely to matters cognizable by the Laws of England, the Courts of the East India Company be prohibited from holding plea thereof.

And your Petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

*Mr. SAMUEL SMITH rose to second the motion. He said the night was so far advanced that there scarcely remained sufficient time, even if the meeting proceeded at the brisk pace, to get through the remaining business of the evening. Even if there were time to spare, he observed that it would be presumptuous in him to obtrude on the meeting his own particular view of the great questions before the meeting, after it had listened to such eloquent addresses from the gentlemen who had preceded him, whose opinions very deservedly carried great weight and were always received, as they had been that evening, with respect. He might, however, notwithstanding, have indulged in a few observations had there been time; as there was not, he contented himself with simply seconding the proposition of Mr. Dickens.

Mr. WYBORN rose and said there were some passages to which he thought he could not in fairness to others give his adherence. He held in his hand a letter from Meerut, from a highly intelligent gentleman, who complained, and he thought justly, that they possessed none of the advantages possessed by the inhabitants of Calcutta. They had sent him a calculation of the expenses of the tribunals all over Bengal, and he certainly thought the disproportion in favor of the metropolis enormous. According to this the whole expense of the civil service in Bengal, was 90 lakhs, out of which the Supreme Court and officers cost eight lakhs. The inhabitants of Calcutta they calculated and (much too highly) at 500,000, and the rest of India at 75,000,000. It has been stated that great reductions are about to be made in the Supreme Court, surely those savings may be usefully employed in establishing single efficient King's Judges, at each of the great stations of Cawnpore, Delhi, Meerut, &c.; for the decision of causes between Englishmen or between Englishmen and such natives as may by contract, submit themselves to such a tribunal. What would the inhabitants of Calcutta think if the Supreme Court were removed to Benares, or Allahabad. The same evils are felt by the upper provinces. Mr. Turton has dwelt upon the abuse which has been bestowed on the Supreme Court, and in his speech in 1835 has traced the sources of the information given to the committee on the renewal of the Indian Charter Act. There were certainly some startling facts asserted, some of which are I find not fictions. It was stated that a chief justice lately deceased had borrowed the sum 25,000 rupees from a defaulter in a suit, for an account and left this country without paying him. I find that in the schedule of that defaulter's effects, now on the records of the Supreme Court—this loan is entered in the list of bad debts. The petition alludes to the legality of the present act of the Governor-General, and calls its legality in question. I tell you, gentlemen, that the origin of the Supreme Court in the present case cannot be brought into question, even supposing that Court to have been established by act of Parliament, and not by charter. This is not an act, abolishing the Supreme Court, but an act making a law for courts now in existence, and amongst other things for repealing laws hitherto in force, and for defining the jurisdiction of those Courts. And what are the words of the act? 3, and 4, Wm 4, c. 85, s. 43. The Governor-General in Council shall have full power to make laws for repealing any laws now in force, or hereafter to be in force in the said territories and to make laws for all persons, whether British or natives, and for all Courts of Justice, whether established by his Majesty's charters or otherwise, and the jurisdiction thereof, and all places and things whatsoever, (saving the provisions of that act the prerogative of the Crown and the supremacy of Parliament, but subject to disallowance by the Court of Directors) and shall be good without registry—and have the force and effect of an act of Parliament.

Here followed some conversation in which Mr. Pate, Mr. Dias, Mr. Lorimer, and others took part. As the hour of midnight approached, on the motion of Mr. Pate, seconded by Mr. Dickens, the meeting adjourned till Monday night.

MONDAY, JUNE 20TH.

The public meeting on Saturday evening last having been adjourned to this evening, at eight o'clock the Sheriff took the chair and briefly re-opened the proceedings. Mr. J. STEWART briefly proposed the following resolution:—

V.—That a Committee consisting of the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the Master of the Trade Association for the time being, and the following gentlemen, be now appointed, and that the Committee be authorised to correspond with the other Presidents, and the Residents in the Mofussil; to nominate a Committee in England to assist, if necessary, the agent to be appointed, and to take charge of the petitions, and see that they are duly presented to Parliament, and that the Committee be allowed to add to their members.

Mr. A. ROGERS.—The resolution just proposed by Mr. Stewart is one of no common interest. It is the first practical step which appears to me to have been taken to co-operate with our sister Presidencies in securing a faithful representation of our wants and grievances. I trust to see the spirit of the resolution followed up in its most extended sense. I hope to see representatives from all parts of India and of all classes on this Committee. (Cheers.) I hope to see a competent Correspondence Committee in England, whose duty it shall be to watch over our general interests, to create a form of Government for the people of British India, the very opposite of despotism. This resolution strikes at the root of the most egregious error that ever possessed the people of England with reference to this country. They look upon the Court of Directors as representatives of our interests!! who are the antipodes of this. Just in the ratio of the misgovernment of this country is their Home Patronage and power, their yearly remuneration increased. This system is a bribe to misgovernment, and this country has never been so odiously misrepresented as by the Court of Directors. Let it be the first duty of our Committee to prove this. I again say, that the resolution is in effect, I think, the most important ever given in this hall, and I second it with pleasure. (Applause.)

Mr. Stewart then proposed the following gentlemen as Members of the Committee.

B. Harding; A. Colvin; K. R. Mackenzie; W. Speir; John Stewart; Wale Byrn; J. Kyd; R. S. Thomson; J. Hattis; J. D. Dow; Lawrence D'Souza; Dwarkanath Tagore; Rustomjee Dutt; Rustomjee Cowasjee; C. A. Covorte; A. Apea.

Mr. DICKENS.—No one who is acquainted with the individuals named by Mr. Stewart will, I am sure, say that a better selection could have been made. Mr. S. has taken care to include in this list persons from every class. He has, however, been guilty of one omission; he has not named himself, I therefore beg to propose that Mr. Stewart's name be added to the list.

Mr. SPED.—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen. Since I came to this country I have had some experience in the Mofussil, and I can confidently state that there is no set of people so capable of giving information in regard to the Mofussil Courts as Indigo Planters. Their situation always affords them opportunity of experiencing the effects of the judicial system adopted in the Mofussil, I therefore strongly recommend to you to let some of this class be joined to your Committee. For myself, as an Indigo Planter, I can speak of cases which have fallen under my own knowledge, which will amply prove the injustice to which we shall be exposed if subjected to the Mofussil tribunals without an appeal to his Majesty's Court. What think you, gentlemen, of a Judge sitting with closed doors to decide cases of this nature, and even refusing to admit parties connected with the suit. (Hear, hear.) Yes, and often bringing criminal law to aid civil suits. (Hear, hear.) This is a great evil and source of injustice. Another source of injustice and persecution is the constant mixing up of civil and criminal proceedings, in the matters brought before the Mofussil Courts. There is hardly a civil suit instituted there in which criminal law and criminal process is not had recourse to and brought in aid of the original action. No sooner is the case instituted than in nineteen out of twenty cases some charge of violence and force arises out of it, and the civil proceeding merges in the foudary case. I can mention a case in which certain ryots refused to fulfil their engagements for cultivation, and the matter was carried into Court. After a month, I—remember it was on a new year's day,—a report was brought to us that the elephant belonging to the factory had been stopt and not allowed to be taken out. In addition to this a party assembled and cut up a considerable space in the public road to prevent communication. We went and endeavoured to argue with the persons engaged in this proceeding, one of the most prominent of whom was the local officer of police—the Buxse of a neighbouring thanna. After few words had been interchanged, we were assaulted by the very officers of the police, whose duty it was to preserve peace. These officers were the most forward in conducting the assault. The affray having ended we returned to the factory. Some few days afterwards, a man who had been laid up with a severe asthma, applied to us for assistance. We rendered him all the aid we could, but the man died. The police people having heard of this occurrence went to the house of the deceased and took away the corpse to the sudder station, a distance of about thirty miles, and a complaint was laid against us for having murdered him. But none of the Europeans concerned in the affray were named in the complaint. We were too dangerous a set for them; it was not therefore thought expedient to say any thing to us. Our Gomasta was the person to be honoured with the purwanah. But how was the purwanah executed? not by serving it on the Gomastah, but by laying hold of twenty or thirty coolies employed at the factory and dragging them all the way to the sudder station. The decision in this case was given after eighteen months, the original civil suit terminating in a criminal or foudary one. This is the way in which legal proceedings are conducted in the Mofussil. If the open authorised costs amount to one thousand, bribes amount to six. This gentlemen is the kind of justice we have in the Mofussil. Indigo Planters are continually experiencing the effects of it, and are more able to furnish useful information to your Committee than perhaps any other class of people. I therefore beg to propose that at least one Indigo Planter be added to your Committee.

Mr. Speed's suggestion met the cordial approbation of the meeting, and Mr. John Watson's name having been brought forward by the Sheriff, it was added to those of the other gentlemen forming the Committee.

Mr. PETERS.—Gentlemen, it is not my intention to say any thing on what has fallen from Mr. Speed. I shall speak upon the petition of Mr. Dickens. Gentlemen, the whole odium of this law rests on the members of the Legislative Council. I do not think the odium should be made to rest on any one individual among them; let it rest on all those who have taken upon themselves the responsibility of the act. If the law of justice, equity and good conscience is good enough to be the law of India, why is it not good enough to be the law of England? (Loud cheers and hear, hear.) Have they in the Mofussil English Barristers to expound the law? No! All must be left to the well known equity, justice and good conscience of the judge. Important as this change is in regard to the European residents in the Mofussil, no more than twenty-three days have been allowed to them to provide Barristers learned in the English law, and make all the other preparations to receive the administration of English laws in native Courts, (hear, hear.) Following the example of Mr. Speed, I shall illustrate what I know of Mofussil Justice by a few anecdotes. But I shall take care not to intrude upon your time with unnecessary details. In bringing the proceedings of a certain Magistrate to your notice, I shall not mention his name nor of the other parties who are concerned in the case, for with these you can have nothing to do. The Magistrate I shall call Mr. Rightabout, or any thing else you chose. There were two Indigo Planters within his jurisdiction, Mr. A. and Mr. B., quarrelling for the possession of a certain piece of ground. Disputes between Indigo Planters are generally disputes between a great many people on either side; for when an Indigo Planter goes to question the right of his neighbour or to defend his own, he takes along with him a number of his ryots, and on the occurrence of a dispute the people on either side take part. Mr. A. had such a dispute with his neighbour Mr. B. and having got the worst of it went to complain to Mr. Rightabout the Magistrate, and represented his case. "Mr. A.," said Mr. Rightabout, "yours is a very good case, I shall immediately give you a purwannah to get possession." Yes, gentlemen, he absolutely granted the purwannah on this expert statement of Mr. A. (Hear, hear.) Having received the purwannah A. goes home. A little while after comes Mr. B. to our worthy Magistrate, and represents his case also. "Why," said Mr. Rightabout, "I find I quite mistook the nature of the case when I gave a purwannah to Mr. A., but you shall also have a purwannah, Mr. B. Mark, gentlemen, a second purwannah on expert evidence in the same suit. (Hear, hear.) The Magistrate was not disposed, however, to fulfil his promise to Mr. B. in a very great hurry; but Mr. B. being a determined character, insisted on being put in possession of the purwannah before he left the court, and he accordingly obtained it. Now both Mr. A. and Mr. B. having arrived on the spot with their respective purwannahs, proceeded to take possession of the premises, and B. being a determined character got his point. A. therefore went back to Mr. Rightabout complaining that he could not get possession, and was told to go and take possession the best way he could, and, I believe, after remonstrating with the Magistrate, actually obtained a third purwannah for that purpose. But B. happening to be the stronger of the two, kept possession. How the case at last ended I know not; but what I have related is sufficient to shew how justice is dispensed in the Mofussil entirely on expert statements. This Mr. Rightabout had a practice of visiting the Darogahs and his other officers with his displeasure if they reported to him robberies or other crimes committed within his district, without bringing up the perpetrators and the property stolen, so that the Darogahs took care not to let Mr. Rightabout know the crimes that were being perpetrated; which threw the whole district into the most insecure state. When the Circuit Judge, whom I shall with your permission call Mr. Nameless, came to visit the station, Mr. Rightabout absented himself for upwards of six weeks. At last meeting Mr. Nameless, he asked him if he did not find crimes lessened in this district, which he attributed to his good management, which had turned all the rogues out of his district. But Mr. Nameless, who had heard from other quarters, and knew that the district was in a very bad state, did not feel satisfied at the account given to him by Mr. Rightabout, and so removed him to another station and appointed in his room one Mr. Turnabout. The last account I had of Mr. Rightabout was that he had been appointed Civil Judge in a certain district. Several other instances of a similar kind could be mentioned; but I will not trouble you further. I must, however, observe that the agitation of this question, if it does no other good, will at least raise the people of England from their apathy in regard to India.

Mr. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE rose and said, that he perfectly agreed with what had fallen from the preceding speakers, as to the propriety of having in the Committee gentlemen who from their talent and experience could give information as to the government and state of the country in the interior. There could be no objection whatever to having the Committee so formed, but a difficulty there was,—where could they find in Calcutta gentlemen of that description? If they were to be found here then by all means let their names be added to the Committee, but if there were not, the only course that the Committee could pursue, would be to solicit all the information that the Mofussil residents could afford them. He had placed before the Committee communications not from three hundred residents in the Mofussil as had been erroneously stated, but from five hundred, deprecating the passing of the obnoxious Act, and these, too, he said it with triumph, were not from one class seeking exclusive privileges, but from Native, East Indians, and Europeans. (Hear, hear.) He threw out as a suggestion to the Committee, whether it would not be worth while to give the utmost publicity to these communications. We have been told, said Mr. Clarke, emphatically, that this is the out-cry of a few Maharatta Ditchers; let us give the lie to the assertion, before the public in India, before every member of Parliament to whom the communications should be sent. Let us show that we have called on the whole of the British inhabitants of the Mofussil for a deliberate expression of their sentiments,—that the call has been responded to, and that instead of this being the cry of a few Maharatta Ditchers, as AMICUS CURIAE, alias Mr. Trevelyan—(much disapprobation)—

Captain TAYLOR, of the Madras Army, here denied that Mr. Trevelyan was the author of the letters imputed to him. He thought Mr. Trevelyan's name had been brought before the meeting very improperly; but he wished to be understood that he was not authorized by that gentleman to adopt the course which he had done. The denial must be understood as given solely on his, Captain Taylor's, authority. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.—Very good; I will take Captain Taylor's denial as conclusive, But—

Mr. DICKENS.—Order, order. Really, gentlemen, this is not the business which we are assembled to consider. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.—I admit that I stand corrected.

The Sheriff.—Well, then, there is an end of it. Pray, gentlemen, drop the subject and let us proceed to the business of the meeting. Really, gentlemen, this uproar is quite foreign to it, and I cannot consent to remain in the chair if it is persisted in. I am sure I feel every disposition to afford gentlemen an opportunity of a fair hearing on either side of the question before the meeting, but I cannot consent to sit here. (Loud cries of "chair," "chair," "order" "order.")

After silence had been restored, Mr. Longueville Clarke apologized to the Sheriff, and expressed his thanks to Captain Taylor for affording him an opportunity of excusing a highly talented Civil Servant (Here a roar of laughter and disapprobation completely drowned the voice of the speaker.) When silence was obtained, we found Mr. Clarke recurring to the letters of "INDOPHILUS," and suggesting that the newspapers, of the Parliament of India, should give publicity to the communications from the Mofussil, and that afterwards they should be distributed in the form of a pamphlet. He merely threw out this as a suggestion, for it was important that the feeling universally expressed should not appear as if it were confined to this town.

Mr. RYLAND, after stating that he had resided 30 years in India, 17 of which had been spent in the Mofussil, declared that the act XI. of 1836 was a degradation to every British subject in India, and could not but subject them to serious annoyance in the Mofussil. In an eloquent address, remarkable for its mild tone and temperate delivery, he implored the meeting not to rest until they had obtained the rescission of the "abominable Act."

Mr. ROGER DIAS then presented himself, but was heard with much impatience, and occasional interruptions of "spoke," "spoke." From what we could gather from this gentleman's address, it appeared to be a complaint that "our class," the East Indians, were not represented in the Committee, mingled with expressions of surprise, that some influential members of that community did not more vigilantly attend to its interests and spare him the trouble.

Mr. GARDENER, in a neat address, on behalf of several East Indians, and himself, disclaimed any wish to separate their interests, or to appear at all separated from the European community. If indeed such a course were desirable, the names on the Committee would be exceedingly satisfactory; but it was not desirable, on the contrary it was to be deprecated, and the interference of Mr. Dias, who represented only that very small portion of the East Indian community residing in South India, had neither their sanction or approbation. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. DIAS replied with rather more warmth than good taste, and amidst shouts of laughter, proposed Mr. Charles Reed. The resolution was not seconded, and all objections were disposed of by Mr. Dickens proposing that the Committee have power to add to their number.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK then proposed that the prayer of the petition should include an expression of the desire of East Indians to be exempted from the jurisdiction of the Provincial Courts in matters relating to marriage, &c. equally with British-born subjects. This resolution elicited much discussion; but on the suggestion of Mr. T. Dickens, supported by Messrs. L. Clarke and T. E. N. Tinton, it was unanimously resolved, as an amendment on Mr. Kirkpatrick's motion, that a separate petition be prepared to effect the objects of his resolution.

Mr. F. H. BURKINGHOUNG eulogized the zeal and talent displayed by Mr. Dickens on this and on various other occasions, and moved the following resolution:—

VI.—"That a permanent Secretary, who will act without salary or emoluments, be appointed and that Mr. T. Dickens be now elected Secretary."

DURBIN DUNN MOONJEE rose to second the resolution, that it might not appear the natives of this country were indifferent to a course of legislation which sowed the seeds of tyranny at the threshold of their European brethren. And here he could not but notice, though he was far from expressing a wish to retaliate, the want of forbearance displayed by a learned gentleman on a former evening, who in his strictures on the natives, had entirely forgotten the golden rule, "do unto others as you would have others do unto you." He would, however, leave that learned gentleman to his own reflections and proceed to the subject more immediately before the meeting, briefly assuring all his fellow subjects, that they were linked together by one common interest, the sole difference between the native and European being, that in this instance the former asked for a right that they never enjoyed, and the latter that a right which they had long enjoyed might be restored to them (Hear, hear.) He was no orator, but he trusted he had the plain good sense which enabled him to discover the difference between justice and injustice, between the Courts in the Mofussil and the Supreme Court at Calcutta, and most cordially did he assent to all which had been put forth by his respected friend Dwarkanauth Tagore on the previous evening. His friend had spoken of the costs of the Supreme Court which they could calculate, and the costs of the Mofussil Courts which they could not calculate, and for his part he declared that sooner than he would lower himself to the purpose of bribing the native officers of justice, he would suffer the penury to which its diverted course might subject him. He ridiculed the continuance of Persian as the language of the courts, and denounced that system of patronage which sent out mere youths to this country, who knew nothing of the people but what they might have gleaned from the Arabian Nights Entertainments, or from Mr. Mills, an author who had himself never set his foot in it (Hear, hear, and laughter.)

Mr. WYBORN said he trusted the meeting would permit him to relieve himself from some portion of the blame cast upon him by the last speaker, and to declare, that in what he had said at the last meeting he had not attacked the religion of the Hindoos but the abuses which the natives laboured under, through the tyrannical influence of their self-interested Priests, in the name of religion, and that his motive in alluding to the subject at all, was because a native (according to the report in the Hurkaru, at the meeting on the 5th January, 1835,) had in a Christian assembly, audaciously told a Christian audience that the British "Parliament had unjustly, and without right, and contrary to the English scriptures, taxed the Indian community in support of the worship and education of Christians, and that they, the natives, felt that Christianity was destructive to the temporal and eternal salvation of its votaries." This he had deprecated as improper, as well as the imputation by that native of bad motives in the King, Lords and Commons. And had he not a right as a Christian to express himself grieved, that this native should not have been told that he should reserve such sentiments towards Christianity for meetings of his own religious persuasion? Mr. Wyborn had never said or insinuated that a virtuous Hindoo could not be saved, or that force could or ought to be employed to convert and enlighten them. But he appealed to themselves whether horrible crimes had not been formerly committed by ignorant, wicked, fanatical Priests, which, thanks to British enlightened Christian Governors, no longer stained the catalogue of their rites. The abolition of suttees—of the custom of infanticide formerly practised in the name of, but really contrary to their ancient religion, had been abolished. The hideous scenes of the recent Churruk Pooja, were not left to be detected by the prying curiosity of travellers, who forced themselves within the precincts of their temples, but these misguided fanatics forced themselves upon the notice and obstructed the paths of British residents in Calcutta, shewing them human beings self-degraded below their rank in the creation, and exciting horror, as well as indignation against their artful and fanatical teachers. To call this self-torture religion—

Here Mr. Wyborn was called to order by the Sheriff, who said he was going beyond an explanation, and had no right to speak of the religion of any other community.

Mr. Wyborn submitted he was within the question; he had been accused of attacking the religion of the Hindoos, and he had a right to set himself in a true point of view, by shewing that the acts he alluded to, were not the religion but the abuses of its discipline, and he had, in defence of the grant of money in support of Christian teachers, to shew, from the avowal of the natives themselves, the good Christianity had already done, in enlightening and so causing them to emancipate themselves from the most horrible of the murders committed by the priests in the sacred name of religion, and to urge them to a continuation of their noble efforts. At any rate Christianity ought not to be sneered at, or its truth called in question by infidels, in a Christian assembly.

Here the Sheriff declared that the sense of the meeting was against Mr. Wyborn's continuing in this strain, and that in his opinion Mr. Wyborn ought to apologize to the natives—(a violent uproar of "hear him," "hear him," "no apology," "no apology.")

After silence was obtained, Mr. Wyborn declared that he had no intention to insult the religious feelings of the natives, he assured the meeting he never had done so—

Mr. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.—You did. If you said that you did not insult the religion of the natives it is an untruth. (A roar of disapprobation followed this assertion. "Turn him out," "turn him out," "Shame," "shame," "Apologize," "apologize.")

The uproar continued for a considerable time notwithstanding the efforts of the Sheriff, whose repeated attempts to leave the chair were met by assurances of "order," "order." Silence having been restored.

Mr. DICKENS accepted the office of Secretary, and with reference to the discussion on the resolution proposed by Mr. Kirkpatrick, pledged himself to prepare such a petition as would meet with universal approbation here. There had been so much said on the subject and so much collateral argument, that he for one would spare a speech. (Cries of "No, no." "Speak, speak.")

Mr. DAVID HARE proposed the following resolution:—

VII.—That it is expedient to have an agent authorized of the Petitioners and inhabitants of Calcutta, for the purpose of presenting the petition now agreed upon and advocating their general interests, and the Committee now appointed be authorized and requested to prepare the requisite powers and instructions for such agent.

Captain BIDEN rose to second the resolution, and took that opportunity to repudiate charges which had been made "right and left all over the court" by various gentlemen against the Court of Directors; a more honorable body was not in existence and he, for one, would never silently hear them vilified—(disapprobation.)

Mr. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE submitted that the Court of Directors had done one thing for the benefit of India when they gave Capt. Biden the uniform, he now wore on his back, (disapprobation.)

The Sheriff.—Gentlemen, I regret to see harmony disturbed by these personal allusions. Let me earnestly entreat that they may not be repeated, or that you may find another chairman to whom they may be addressed. ("Chair, chair.")

Captain BIDEN.—I deeply regret having incurred the worthy Sheriff's displeasure, and will at once haul away on the other tack (laughter). Gentlemen, let us have another night of it! Right glad am I to see that you have at length cut the leading strings off from the learned body. I have heard it said at Madras, at Bombay and at Canton that there was no public in Calcutta but the lawyers,—that you were in leading strings. And,—who has the presumption to call it a burlesque,—Let's give three cheers for the Battle of Waterloo, then I'll propose an amendment which shall go to the whole question, (Tremendous uproar.)

At length the Sheriff having obtained silence, the resolution was put and carried unanimously.

The Reverend Mr. MONROY rose, and said he was quite unaccustomed to address a meeting of this description, but he felt it his duty as a clergyman to attempt doing so in this instance. He expressed his deep regret that reflections should have been made by Mr. Wyborn that had led to personalities by Mr. Clarke. With neither of those gentlemen had he the honor of a personal acquaintance, but he wished to see impartial justice done to all, and he begged to remind the Sheriff that the word "untruth" had passed between them. He felt much difficulty in addressing the meeting, but he thought he would not be doing his duty if he did not propose that the chairman should call upon Mr. Clarke to make an apology for making use of the term (Loud cheers. Mr. Osborne attempted to interrupt the speaker but the meeting would not permit him.) "Sir," continued the Reverend gentleman, "it would very ill become me to make personal reflections while I am reproaching them. My object is conciliation, that those two gentlemen may not leave this place without a reconciliation, and most earnestly do I entreat you, Sir, to call for an apology from Mr. Clarke, as a gentleman and a man of honor, to Mr. Wyborn. (Much cheering.)

After some deliberation, the chairman decided that he could not desire Mr. Clarke to apologize, as he had no jurisdiction in the event of that gentleman refusing to do so.

Mr. DICKENS.—The object of the Reverend Gentleman can be but the one we all wish to attain, viz., peace and conciliation. Let me intreat him and the meeting to pause and consider for one moment the probable effect if his motion were carried. There seems to have been a misapprehension in the conception of this motion, of the relative situations of the parties here and the meeting in its aggregate, arising from some imperfect comparison instituted in the minds of those assembled, between a voluntary meeting gathered together for the purpose of doing a simple political act, and petitioning Parliament, and Parliament itself or any similar public body. If a member on committing a breach of decorum or a breach of the peace were called upon by the Speaker of the House of Commons to apologize to the House or a member in his place and were to refuse to do it, the House could, and undoubtedly would, commit him to the custody of a Sergeant, and send him in grave cases to the Tower: but we possess no compulsory power; and only consider, gentlemen, what are likely to be the consequences of a demand of this kind. Suppose it met by a flat refusal, what would you do, and how would the feelings engendered tend towards harmony or conciliation? Let us leave this to the good sense and good feeling of the parties themselves, and if the mediation of rational friends do not produce reconciliation, depend upon it our interference will not.

After this Mr. Morton withdrew his motion.

Mr. THOMAS FERGUSON then rose and after lamenting his inability to do justice to the talents of Mr. Turton, which he said, would shed lustre on any cause, begged to propose the following resolution, which was seconded by Rustonjee Cowasjee and carried by acclamation:—

VIII.—That Mr. Turton be elected agent of the Petitioners, and inhabitants of Calcutta, and that such remuneration be given to him for his services, as the amount of the subscription will permit, and the discretion of the Committee shall authorize.

Mr. N. C. COOKE.—I have been an attentive listener, from first to last, of all that has been said in this hall, on the important question for the discussion of which we have been summoned this evening. I have heard with no small delight the very lucid, energetic and persuasive manner in which the several learned gentlemen of the bar, who have successively addressed you, have laid before you the effect which the passing of the act XI. of the Legislative Council will have upon the civil rights and privileges of British subjects, I have carefully considered the petition which was read for your approval on Saturday night, but I have failed in discovering embodied in it a prayer which I conceive it necessary should be put forth, nor can I find that any gentleman who has yet spoken has suggested it to the meeting. The prayer I allude to is this, which I move be adopted by the meeting.

That this additional clause will be in accordance with the wishes of almost every individual I see here, I doubt not, but its imperativeness will be also manifest. What will be the use, gentlemen, of your simply petitioning against one act when you leave the person who concocted it to frame others equally repugnant to our feelings? You may say, perhaps, that if the prayer of the petition be heard and answered, it will be but of his power hereafter to do any thing injurious to our constitutional right. Think you so? well and good? Rest, if you please, in your fancied security; but I tell you—and I tell you plainly, that the man who is capable of saying in a British House of Commons that nothing but a pure and universal despotism is fit for India, is not he who will better respect your rights, because one of his acts may (for I speak in doubt) be annulled. I shall not detain you longer than to add, that as this measure is one highly important to us as a body, so should we make our cry, to be delivered from this tyrannous enactment, be heard as that of one man. Let there be no party feeling here! Let all be done unanimously. Recollect that unanimity is strength. Be firm, but respectfully so! and if it comes to the push why strike, but as Britons "strike home!"

Mr. Cooke then proposed.

That as the acts of the Legislative Council, so far as they have gone, do not promise to operate for India that benefit which the British Government unquestionably intended but rather threaten the happiness of millions for whom they were appointed to legislate, the honorable House would exercise its powers by dissolving the Council, and recalling from the situation which he now fills, with no other purpose, as it would seem, but that of degrading the European character, the fourth ordinary Member, Mr. T. B. Macaulay."

Mr. Ryland seconded the motion.

This was met by an amendment from Mr. Thomson, seconded by the Rev. J. Morton.

Mr. DICKENS.—I give my utmost support to the amendment moved by Mr. Thompson and seconded by the Revd. Mr. Morton. Whatever may be our opinion of this Act—whatever may be our opinion as to the part taken with regard to it by the Member of Council who has been named—whatever may be our opinion that peculiar responsibility attaches to him, we must never forget that in so grave a matter as petitioning Parliament or requesting his Majesty to recall a public servant in a high and important station, we request the Crown and Parliament in effect to recall or remove every member of Government. At least we have no evidence to the contrary. If we go to Parliament as accusers of Mr. Macaulay, how are we prepared to answer the question that must be asked, where is the evidence of your accusation? In what respect is his case distinct from that of any other member of Government? Do you know his motives, do you even know his vote? Let our care be in the words of the mover of the amendment to express strong thoughts and feelings, but not to employ unnecessarily strong words. Let us bear in mind that there is in the words of a poet, once undervalued perhaps for that very cause, whose simplicity is not his least merit—whose fame slowly ripening is destined to endure—that there is a "might in mildness." And let us not disarm ourselves of this power, which, together with a just cause, is the only power we possess, for I do not touch upon our total inability to carry our point, considered merely by itself; we ought to abstain not merely because it is prudent, but because it is right and just. I earnestly hope this motion may not be persevered in: let me entreat that it may not.

Mr. Cooke withdrew his resolution.

The following, proposed by Mr. R. Presgrave and seconded by Dwarkanauth Tagore, was carried unanimously:—

IX.—That a subscription be entered into to defray the remuneration of the agent and the expenses of the Petition and be received and collected by the Committee and paid into the Union Bank.

Mr. T. Fergusson proposed the following resolution:—

X.—That the thanks of this meeting are due to Mr. Dickens, for preparing the petition to Parliament, and for his indefatigable exertions on all occasions where the interests of the public were at stake.

Mr. LONOUVILLE CLARKE seconded the motion. No man could bear better testimony than he could of the zeal manifested by Mr. Dickens throughout the whole of this business, nor was it the only occasion on which that gentleman had distinguished himself in the service of the public. He called the meeting to bear in mind his brilliant speech on the Stamp Act which drew forth the encomiums of the Edinburgh Review, not then, as now, devoted to the advocacy of a pure despotism in this country.

The resolution was then put and carried by acclamation.

Mr. DICKENS.—Gentlemen, I thank you, and I accept the trust you have confided to me. I will not speak further of myself, but a few words on the general subject of our meeting I will say, in explanation of the spirit and intentions in which I accept and shall execute it. More I had intended to speak, but in order to forward the end and purposes for which we met I have abstained.

My object is to obtain for all equality before the law; for all a reasonable security for that degree of freedom which no Government can safely exist without, and to which a portion of us, have the most undoubted right. A strange argument it is that has been used to endanger that of Englishmen in this country, by an unrestrained licence of law making. It has been said that we are a handful of foreigners in this country. Truly we are, but they who said it, the five gentlemen for whom it was said, that they might obtain an arbitrary power never before conferred—what are they? are they Autochthons or sons of the soil; are they in reality more interested in the welfare of this country, more trust-worthy towards the natives than their countrymen? Where is the evidence of their good intentions—where those of our evil acts? Can any calumny be more thoroughly untrue, and unsupported by the slightest fact, than that Englishmen here seek to become a privileged caste, and to enjoy rights not shared by their native fellow subjects? Is that your sentiment? (Cries of no, no, from one and all.) Does not this meeting—this petition refute it? Does not the whole history of the last 12 years refute it? When the natives were unjustly excluded from the privilege of sitting upon grand juries, to whom did they come for advice or aid? I am proud of the share I took in that matter, but let them say whether they found one Englishman here opposed to them. When the Indo-British race petitioned Parliament for admission to the fellowship of their fathers too long denied—and I am proud of the share I bore too in that petition,—let them say, whether they found one opponent among the Englishmen here, and did not on the contrary derive cordial aid and support from many. When the Stamp Act was petitioned against, was privilege claimed for the English inhabitants of Calcutta, apart from others? When last, and not least, the freedom of the Press was sought and prayed for not in vain, was not the dangerous proposition rejected, which would have sought a partial exemption from arbitrary power, and did we not make one and all common cause with the natives? More than this, many, I believe, as well as I, well foresaw, that in truth we did by this endanger the permanent security of the English Press, in case of future wars or disturbances. In no one case can it be shewn in answer to these examples that Eng-

Nabmen in this country have ever sought to obtain or to keep advantages which they were unwilling to share. Gentlemen, I feel strongly in this cause: never can that maxim be true in policy which is detestable in morals. I deny a despotism—I might say I defy it. A cooler, a more able Secretary you might have chosen,—one more zealous you could not. (Much applause.)

It was moved by Captain Biden, seconded and carried by acclamation.

LX.—That the thanks of this meeting are due to Mr. Cockerell for his very extraordinary patience and urbanity in the Chair of this meeting.

After this the meeting separated about eleven o'clock, it being understood that the communications from the Mofussil will be published on an early day. One of these are given below.

THE APPEAL-RESCINDING ACT.

To

R. H. COCKERELL,
R. J. BAUSHAW,
K. R. MACKENZIE,
JOHN STEWART,
R. C. JENKINS,
THOMAS HOLROYD,

B. HARDING,
JOHN DOUGAL,
D. TAGORE,
W. C. HURRY,
A. ROGERS, AND
F. H. BURKINGWONG.

GENTLEMEN,—Observing that a meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta is to be held at the Town Hall on the 13th instant, to petition Parliament for the repeal of act XI of 1836, and having further learnt from the public prints, that you have formed yourselves into a committee, "to obtain from the residents in the Mofussil, a declaration of their opinion on the probable bad or good effects of the said act," the subscribers to this letter have thought, that so far from a communication of their views on the merits of this enactment being likely to be deemed intrusive, such a public avowal of them by any section of society, will, at your hands, secure, with similar returns to your circular, that consideration to which the degree of local experience, and freedom from party bias, possessed by the subscribers, may relatively entitle each communication.

2d.—In the opinion, then, of the subscribers, there will be experienced no practical hardship, in European British subjects being made, for all claims on the part of natives, amenable to the country courts of first instance, and no injustice, in this class of men in every class of such suits in appeal, being made exclusively subject to the provincial tribunals. But in respect to placing European British subjects impleading and unpleaded inter se, within the jurisdiction of the local courts, in regard to actions other than those contemplated by Section 107, 53, G. 3, Chap. 155, and to depriving either plaintiff or defendant being not European British subjects, of the privilege of the choice of appeal to the Supreme or Company's Court, we cannot but think, that the provisions of the present act may be open to much objection hereafter, in proportion to the spread of colonization and to the neglect of the legislature to form and promulgate the new code.

3rd.—At the same time, too, we feel ourselves called upon to express our opinion in the strongest terms, that by no construction of British or colonial law, should one British subject by reason of birth or descent, be invested with any right of exemption from the common course of the Provincial administration of justice, in respect to private wrongs, by which his Indian brother may suffer one iota of inconvenience. If the Court of Sudder Ameen can exercise its authority with sufficient honesty, industry, and ability, for the adjudication of the civil suits of the aborigines, it seems to us arrogant and absurd for any parties, (we allude not to such intelligent members of society as yourselves) who, for the avowed object of the happiness of the natives, albeit a mistaken means of securing the same, were, till within the period of a few short months, but licensed by the repeated acts of the British Parliament to reside beyond ten miles from Calcutta, (whether for mercantile or public employment,) to demand that in the mutual dealings between Englishmen and others, the convenience and prejudices of the former should be consulted at the expense of, or without attention to, the equal claims of the latter. As Englishmen, we could ourselves ask for the grant or continuance of no right incompatible with the equal administration of justice. We would demand no lordly privilege of exemption from any judicial tribunal in our dealings with and relations to our native brethren, where the summary nature of the proceedings would enable them to obtain a cheap and speedy award.

4th.—Whatever indeed may be the relative merits of the Supreme Court and the provincial tribunals, the chief point to be considered at the present moment is, that the former in its present state is utterly unequal, and unadapted to administer civil law with an exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction, original or appellate, throughout the whole of the extensive presidencies in India. Numerical strength, a local jurisdiction confined to an area of a few miles, costly judicial salaries, and a splendidly remunerated European establishment, and the dread of the expense of English law, are causes, which, aided by the existence of the Court of Requests, the Chamber of Commerce, and above all the influence of public opinion, secure the administration of justice over a little nook of land and over a population scarce a moiety of that in most zillals in the provinces, in the high degree for which credit is claimed, and in no small measure deservedly claimed by the advocates of the Supreme Court. But the finances of the country on the one hand, and on the other the revenue system, the complex land tenures, the undefined and varying usages, (which among Hindoos and Mahomedans form the law merchant, mercantile or of merchants, and common law of the country,) and above all the general circumstances of the country do not admit of the same instruments being brought to bear upon the judicial administration of the provinces, or rather do not admit of their being brought to bear without a re-organization of the constitution of the country. To the Civil Service as it exists and to indigenous materials, we must for the present continue to resort for the administration of civil law in the provinces. Whatever proportion the demerits of the local Courts may bear to their merits, the most unreasonable partisan of their opponents must admit, that the ordinary benefits of civil society have been obtained to the natives of India by their erection and continuance. Some law must be locally administered. A writ of ejectment cannot issue against the Emperor's Courts returnable by the ensuing term. The perfecting of any judicial system is the fruit of long years of cultivating and improving an ungrateful soil. Even now after centuries of experience a philosophical jurist will object in the strongest language to much of the law and practice in each branch of the proceedings of the Courts of Common law in England. With temper, time and judgment, we may engulf much of the purest essence of English principles on the stock of existing institutions. But it were better, we earnestly urge, not violently to attempt to acclimate an exotic, or even the name of which the mass of the natives are ignorant: the properties of which, ~~healthy~~ though they be by nature, are still fraught with noxious influence in their current modes of use; and which from distant locality and expense of resort thereto, cannot afford that protection to the native, which he now obtains in the vicinity, more or less, of his own home.

5th.—From the expression of these feelings, you will gather that we should have the least objection of allowing to natives the choice of appeal in all cases now appealable to the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, in Calcutta. We much fear, however, that such a change would rise to two systems of process, principle and practice, running counter to one another, and that the seed of collisions degrading to the judicial character, and involving in them the happiness of society, would be sown by the immediate adoption of your proposition, even in the lower provinces.

6th.—Nevertheless we should rejoice to see any well considered plan for blending the Supreme Court and Sudder Dewany Adawlut, in one tribunal of general jurisdiction all over India, embodied in the new civil and criminal code, or even immediately adopted.

7th.—In the mean time, we would beg to call your attention to the advantages, which would result to the local courts and their suitors, by extending the provisions of Reg. XII. 1833, to every judicial tribunal in the regulation provinces. This improvement would alone let in a flood of light upon the remediable and irremediable evils of the existing system, and would silently infuse a spirit of discussion and independence among all classes in respect to the principles of the law and practice of the administration, which would in time cast every branch of either in the mould of its own will; and this, too, alike whether the law commission shall complete its work on the principle of a philosophical jurisprudence, or shall terminate its career in a protracted and abortive labour. The influence of the talents and character of advocates, far indeed inferior to those whose presence now graces the Calcutta Bar, would in the country courts command the removal of many evils, and would ultimately effect the eradication of others, which at present the government and judicial authorities are impotent to directly change.

8th.—We would, too, suggest, that Government be petitioned to allow of all classes of residents in India being innepanned on civil and criminal punchayuts, or juries under Reg. VI. 1832. This would create a new source of aid to the judicial authorities, and would give a sanction to decisions in many cases, which is at present from the ignorance of the public so lamentably wanting.

9th.—On the whole, therefore, we are firmly convinced that equal justice to our native brethren demanded the passing of Reg. XI. 1836, but we should personally have no objection to seeing the act amended as far as to place European British subjects in respect to suites among themselves on the same footing that they were, under Mr. Advocate-General Pearson's opinion, during the currency of the 107th Section of the old charter act. Two important suggestions for the immediate improvement of the local courts now vested with a more extensive jurisdiction, we have taken the liberty to suggest, and other ameliorations capable of ready adoption will doubtless have occurred to other of your correspondents, which together must amount to a better security for the efficient discharge of the new authority, than what heretofore existed for the exercise of the antecedent one.

We have the honor to remain,

Gentlemen,

Your obedient servants

Agra, June 9, 1836.

NOTE.

In general support of the remarks contained in the above, which go to call in question the suitability of the Supreme Court, without much change, for a Court of Appeal or Court of first instance over the civil suits of Natives beyond Calcutta, the following notes are hastily subjoined.

In the action brought by one of the poor men, who was wounded on the 16th of August 1819, against some of the Manchester

Yeomanry, the defendants pleaded fifty one pleas. One of the plaintiff's counsel stated in court that this would cost the plaintiff £40. In fact 49-50 of this plea was false and even legally unnecessary. West. Rev. July 1836.

Mr. Brougham in his speech on the state of the law, having laid down what he deems the fundamental principles which should regulate and repress unnecessary litigation in the common law courts in England, in respect to plaintiff and defendant, emphatically says, that "nothing can depart more widely from them than our practice, and nothing can be more easy than making it conform to them." And in reference to the same subject, remarks on the grievous hardship, by which parties are prevented from directly obtaining justice. "How often," he again observes, "have I been able to trace bankruptcies and insolvencies to some law suit above £50 or 100 pounds, the costs of which have amounted up to large sums. I made the prothonotary, four years ago, at Lancaster, give me a list of fifty writs, obtained at the Lent Assizes, the average was under £14 including however two or three actions brought to try rights, where the damages were of course nominal. But if the money recovered amounted in all to less than £900, the costs incurred certainly exceeded £5,000: £500 aside being indeed a very low average of costs as between attorney and client. It is not too much to affirm, that not above a tenth part of those cases would ever have seen the Court of Lancaster, had a right system prevailed."

"On what ground of common sense does our law," says he again in respect to arrest on mesne process, "in this matter rest?" In respect to English pleading, he continues that it is "by degrees the good sense has disappeared and the ingenuity and subtlety have increased beyond measure and been often times misdirected, nay, to such a pitch have the changes proceeded, that at last subtlety has superseded sense; accuracy and justice are well nigh lost sight of, and ingenuity is exhausted by devising pretexts for prolixity and means of stratagem. In these really hurtful innovations, the courts of law have been far too ready accomplices." "Let not the House suppose that grievance such as I have been describing to flow naturally from the present system are imaginary. I can assure the House from my own daily experience they are not: they produce constantly a cost or a delay, amounting to the positive denial of justice." "All pleas at law are pleaded without any restriction upon their falsehood. In equity the defendant answers under the sanction of an oath. But equity is as inconsistent with itself, as it is different from common law; for the plaintiff may aver as freely as he pleases without any oath or any risk at all." In respect to execution the same authority observes, "I feel perfectly justified in stating our system to be the very worst in Europe;" and "how widely does our law depart from these obvious and natural principles by dint of refinements, blunders, and openly avowed injustice." Again "a grant, perhaps the greatest evil of our system, as at present constituted, is the excess of the costs which a party succeeding is obliged to pay, over and above what he can recover from his antagonist. This is so certain and considerable that a man shall in vain expect me to recommend him either to bring forward a right claim, or to resist an unjust demand for any sum such as 20 or even £30. It would be difficult to point out greater uncertainty or more caprice in any branch of the system than are to be found in the law of partnership." "But how much nobler [than the boast of Augustus, he found Rome of brick and left it of marble] will be our sovereign's boast, when we shall have it to say, that he found law dear and left it too cheap: found it a sealed book, left it a living letter: found it the patrimony of the rich, left it the inheritance of the poor: found it the two edged sword of oppression, left it the staff of honesty, and the shield of innocence." Brougham's speech on the state of the law, February 7th, 1828.

"In the last session of parliament," said Sir E. Ryan, in his address to the Grand Jury, April 13, 1826, "Lord Teutenden introduced a short bill of only two pages, relating to matters of contract which having passed into an act, will be the means of checking much litigation, and of rendering the branch of law clear and certain, which from the variety of conflicting decisions, no man could with any thing like certainty, pronounce what was the law. I cannot help expressing a hope that this and similar improvement, may be extended to the King's courts in India."

NOTE UPON THE PRECEDING NOTES AND LETTER.

The gentlemen who wrote this letter deserve great credit. They will see how nearly the general statements and prayer of the Petition now under consideration concur with their own views. The wish of the inhabitants of Calcutta of all classes is for equality before the law. The wish of none, for an exclusion of the local tribunals—or a monopoly of appeals for the S. C. except in the very few specified cases in which British subjects are alone concerned. It may be remarked that the expenses of appeals are much less than those of causes, because no witnesses are examined or summoned. As to the abuse of numerous counts the writer are not aware that both in England and in the Supreme Court this is abolished in a great degree, and will be totally done away with when the new rules under consideration, and printed, shall be finally passed, which cannot be long delayed.

The extension of the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests to cases of 1,000 rupees will abolish small causes, and on other common law causes unless witnesses are brought from a distance the average expense is now not more, if honestly conducted, than 600 rupees, and the average amount of causes at present above 5,000, in each case. By a plan submitted to Government, the expense of the officers of the Supreme Court will be reduced more than 50 per cent. and they will be paid by salaries. If there were more business laid upon them, justice would be cheaper to the suitors.

THE BLACK ACT PETITION COMMITTEE.

FRIDAY, 24TH JUNE, 1836.

At a Meeting of the Committee, held this-day at 10 A. M., at the office of Mr. Dickens.

Present.

MR. R. S. THOMSON,	MR. CAVORKE,
" W. BYRNE,	" APCAR,
DWARKANATH TAGORE,	" J. KID,
MR. K. H. COCKERELL,	" K. R. MCKENZIE,
" J. STEWART,	" F. H. BURKINYOUNG,
" J. D. DOW,	RUSSOMOV DUTL,
" J. WATSON,	MR. SPIER.
" L. DESOUZA,

Moved and carried, that Mr. Cockerell take the Chair.

Moved and carried, that Messrs. Carr and W. C. Hurry be added to the Committee.

The Secretary intimated Mr. Colvin's resignation.

Moved and carried, that Messrs. Carr, W. C. Hurry and Cockerell, be constituted a Sub-Committee to revise the petition read at the meeting.

Mr. Wale Byrn wished that the petition now under revision should dwell more strongly on the political value of the Supreme Court and the protection it afforded to British subjects, the restraint it was on Government servants in case of misconduct.

Mr. R. S. Thomson suggested that in this petition no matters foreign to its object, and not mentioned at the meeting, be introduced.

The Secretary suggested that the matter which Mr. W. Byrn wished to be introduced, could be very well introduced into the general petition.

Mr. R. S. Thomson moved further, that the revised petition be circulated. Agreed to.

Moved and carried, that the Committee authorize its Secretary to open a correspondence with the other presidencies, in order to ascertain how far they will concur and act with the petitioners and Committee.

Also, that Mr. C. R. Prinsep be requested to prepare a general petition for all classes of Christians, &c. respecting the defects of the last Charter Act.

Also, that the results of the letters from the Mofussil be prepared for publication by the Secretary.

Also, the Circular be written to the Mofussil, requesting subscriptions and forwarded by each Member of the Committee, and such other Members, Agents and Gentlemen, who will undertake the task.

Also, that the subscription be commenced immediately in Calcutta, and that each Member and the Union Bank be authorized to receive subscriptions, and the results communicated every Saturday to the Secretary, who shall insert them in a general book.

Also, that the Secretary prepare Subscription Books, that the resolutions respecting the Committee, Agent and Subscription be posted in the Books and an appropriate heading put to each.

Also, that the Secretary be authorized to employ an assistant and peon for the business of the Committee.

T. DICKENS, Secretary.

THE REPEAL COMMITTEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BENGAL HURRAH AND CHRONICLE.

SIR.—The following extracts from letters from the Mofussil, with which I have been furnished, are published for general information. I beg to state further, that except the Agra letter none have been handed to me, nor do I know of any that have been received, on the other side of the question: as to the letter from Agra, those who signed it will see that the difference between their object and those advocated in the petition read to the meeting, is but small. Numerous letters I believe have been received, which owing to their containing references to private matters, have not been sent to me; many others have been received but not sent, though free from this objection, which I take this public mode of requesting the friends of the cause to forward.

Your obedient Servant,

T. DICKENS, Secretary.

To the Committee appointed at the public meeting of the 20th June 1836.

"Zilla Furrusedpore and Dacca.—As an individual insulated in the mofussil, I feel grateful to the inhabitants of Calcutta, for coming forward with so much zeal to protect my civil rights, and I shall join my solemn protest to theirs against being bound over to the Company's Court, without the privilege of appeal to the King's Court, more particularly on the following grounds:—

1st.—That the decisions of the Company's Courts are founded on no known or defined laws.

2d.—That the Judges are generally so ignorant of the languages, in which the proceedings are conducted, as to be incapable of coming to a decision on any case without the assistance of the native amils.

3d.—That from the loose and careless way, in which cases are decided, it is nearly impossible ever to get a suit brought to a conclusion; as an instance, I may mention that a complaint for the possession of some villages in which I am concerned, has been before the Courts since 1821, and after the decisions of 10 Judges have been obtained, the case is about as far forward, as it was when first commenced.

4th.—That the natives attached to the Company's Courts, and who I firmly believe influence the decision of all cases, are most notoriously corrupt, so much so, that in many Courts there are regular specified fees to be paid before a decree can be obtained, and it is not many months since some cases of mine carried on in a native's name before the Sudder Ameen of Jessore, were dismissed, because I refused to pay him 1d of the amount; at all events my mauktyar wrote me that the cases would be dismissed, if that sum was not paid; and they were subsequently dismissed, but afterwards gained on an appeal at an expense greater than the bribe required by the Sudder Ameen.

5th.—That I am obliged to complain or answer complaints in the Persian language of which I am totally ignorant, nor have I a servant in all my extensive concerns that can translate a Persian paper correctly into Bengally: in all cases, therefore, I am obliged to apply to some one about the Court, to obtain a knowledge of what may be written in all complaints brought against me, and I am also obliged to get my answers translated into Persian before the Judge will receive them; I have therefore no idea whether my story comes before the Judge as I have instructed, or not, and my interests are consequently left at the mercy of a hanger-on of the Court, as the few natives that understand Persian are all candidates for places at Court, and will not take employment in less lucrative situations.

6th.—The results of the Company's Law administered exclusively by Company's Courts, are very apparent in this district, inasmuch as every landlord formerly resident in it, has been compelled to remove his house to Calcutta, purposely and confessedly to avoid the justice and oppressions practised by the Company's Courts. I am firmly of opinion that a similar result will follow the passing of Act No. XI of 1836 in the case of Europeans who at present in some measure occupy the place of the non-resident landlords; and there can be no doubt that when all parties possessed of intelligence and wealth are removed from the districts, the Honorable Company's Servants will be relieved from much unpleasant responsibility, but how far that result will add to the comfort or happiness of the people, is a question which is not likely to be mooted by the Legislative Council as at present constituted."

"Zillah Jessore, Gunghal, May 31, 1836.—This act will not only subject Europeans to the caprices and passions of the Judges in the Mofussil Courts, but every rich native Talookdar or Zemindar will be able by means of his subaltern and inferior servants, who are almost invariably men of the lowest castes and utterly depraved, to cause Europeans to be called into Court upon the slightest pretence, and by paying high bribes to the amlahs, perhaps cause them, although innocent, to be punished. If the case be dismissed, I see no advantage to be gained by suing the complainant for perjury whilst the real author is the Talookdar, whose name even does not appear. He, the Talookdar, will escape with impunity. For instance, a Talookdar, proprietor of a factory adjoining that of an European with whom he is in dispute, may, during the manufacturing, cause his servants to lodge a false complaint of a serious nature in Court in order to have the European summoned to answer to the same; whilst the Talookdar, taking advantage of his absence, will order his myrmidons to cut the plant of the European and bring it to his own factory. The only remedy will be a suit in the civil court which may be carried on for a very considerable period and to the utter ruin of the planter.

Besides, although there are many capable magistrates in the Mofussil, still there are others who are not sufficiently well versed in the native languages to make a severe cross-examination. Others confide too much in their amlahs, and this must partly be the case when there is so much business to get through.

I am also of opinion that the respect now entertained for all Europeans will be greatly diminished, if not entirely done away with, by the passing of this act; but the chief and principal point is, we have no press in the Mofussil!"

"Zillah Buxar, June 5, 1836.—I have the pleasure of returning the paper which accompanied your letter of the 25th ultimo, to which I have obtained the signatures of most of the residents in this station and its neighbourhood. Some who have signed it do not object to trust to the "consciences" of the Mofussil Judges, but they are very averse to do so to those of their amlahs, who are notoriously corrupt, and who have the credit of influencing the decisions of the former more than is consistent with a due administration of justice, which they can do with the greater facility in consequence of the proceedings of the Courts being carried on in a language but little understood by any of the parties concerned except themselves. The greater part of the signatures, however, are those of persons who have the strongest objection to the Company's Courts, and are indignant at being deprived of the right of appeal from them to the King's."

"Zillah Kishnaghur, Gungadhurpore, May 29, 1836.—I have much pleasure in handing you filled, the circular to my address regarding the abominable Black Act. I have, as you will perceive, signed it myself, together with having obtained the signatures of three respectable native landholders of this part, which you will observe under mine in the native language, and which can be easily translated and added to the petition to Parliament. We in the Mofussil can not too much thank the leading community of Calcutta for what they have done and are still doing for us in this case, for it is us that will feel it most and not them. In short it is an outrage on our feelings as well as on our worldly affairs."

"Zillah Dacca, Hooshangunge, June 2, 1836.—The whole of the gentlemen are indigo planters, and have a pretty correct idea of Mofussil justice. What the "principles of equity and good conscience are" we will probably learn to our cost, should we be unfortunate enough to be at the tribunal where they are dispensed—and having a native for our opponent. We all hope better things however."

"Benares, Camariah, June 4, 1836.—It would have been an excellent plan if the Committee had sent also a Persian or Hindee translation (lithographed) of the circular for native signature, as, in my opinion, a great number of them would have put their names to it. I could obtain one or two hundred here, and every planter as many; for not a single Zemindar but would do so, although I am not aware how far that would affect them in regard to the Supreme Court. Dwarkanauth would be able to inform you upon that point."

"Benares, Camariah, June 8, 1836.—Not a single person that I have been conversing with but held the said Act in the most utter detestation, nor do I believe there is a single native in this part of the country, but is of the same opinion. Wishing every success to the Petition."

"Zillah Hooghley, Bansbarreea, June 17, 1836.—I would wish, however, to say that besides the powerful objections on other scores, there is, one which perhaps is worthy not to be lost sight of, which is, that though the instances of the appeal to the Supreme Court may not have been comparatively numerous, yet the destruction of the right to that appeal may have the effect, in instances, of rendering the Company's Courts more careless, and therefore more objectionable, and consequently the native functionaries and amlahs more corrupt (if that's possible), than even under the old system, by reason of the withdrawal of the check of His Majesty's Court."

ADDITIONAL SIGNATURES AGAINST THE BLACK ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BENGAL HURKARU AND CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I enclose another list of signatures of European and Native inhabitants of the Mofussil, who have notified their desire to sign a Petition of Parliament against Act No. XI of 1836, which I request you will do the Committee the favor to publish.

As misapprehension has existed respecting the objects of the petition to Government presented by many of the indigo planters of Bengal on the 26th November, 1835, I take this opportunity of stating that I have the authority of Mr. Watson, who waited on a member of Council on the subject, for stating that the only object of that petition was to have demands of trifling amount, and dispute between the planter and ryots or assamies, adjudged by the Moonsiff's Courts near the spot, and that the petition never contemplated the abolition of appeals as between British subjects or in any matters of importance.

I take this opportunity also of stating that if the correspondent of the former Committee, an extract from whose letter from Zillah Furreedpore, Dacca, was published on the 30th ultimo, is desirous of coming forward and pointing out cases of misconduct, or proving any specific act of corruption against the Sudder Aumeen, mentioned in his letter, the Civil and Session Judge of Jessore has addressed to me a letter as Secretary to the Committee, stating his anxiety to enquire into the truth of the accusation, or of any other corrupt practices connected with the Jessore Courts, that the correspondent may be aware of.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obdt. Servt.,

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general Meeting was held in the Town Hall yesterday, Wednesday, 8th June, 1836.

Present.

THE HON. SIR E. RYAN, President, in the Chair.
General Sir H. Fane, Dr. Marshman, Col. Dunlop, Jas. Pattle, Esq., Dr. Wallich, M. D., Thos. Leach, Esq., C. Trebeck, Esq., Chas. Prinsep, Esq., Wm. Storm, Esq., J. R. Bagshaw, Esq., Jas. Kyd, Esq., D. Hare, Esq., J. W. Masters, Esq., H. Piddington, Esq., His Highness Nawab Tehowar Jung.

Visitors.

G. A. Prinsep, and J. H. Stocqueler, Esqrs., and Nawab Hyhuth Jung.

The proceedings of the last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen were proposed Members of the Society.

M. S. Staunton, Esq., the Revd. H. Pratt, M. A., Capt. Stewart Corbett, 25th Regt. N. I.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Bell.
Col. Skinner, J. B. Jones, Esq.

Proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

The following communications were read and donations submitted, viz.

ON SUGAR.

No. 1.—From Capt. W. H. Sleeman, General Superintendent, to the Secretary, dated Camp Musoures, 5th May, intimating that he has already introduced the Otaheite cane, in the districts of the Saugor and Nurbudda territory, at Moradabad, Lucknow, Kotah, Nee-much, Indore, Bhopal, and Furruckabad.

Capt. Sleeman states that the "surplus funds available out of the Jubbulpore plantation of Otaheite cane, will this season be sufficient to defray the cost of transporting the cane as plants to any of those parts of India where it may not have been yet introduced."

It seems that by selling a portion of the cane every year in the bazar, Capt. Sleeman has not only been able to keep down the current expenses, but to give an extensive range of distribution—gratis, and to obtain the following results, which being of great importance are given at length, in his own words.

1st. "Proved by successful experiments, that sugar of excellent quality can be made in the valley of the Nurbudda, a thing never believed by the people before this plantation was established. The sugar made by the aid of men from the sugar districts in Oude, bore the same price in the bazars, as that brought from Mirzapore."

2nd. "That the sugar made from the Otaheite cane is rather better in quality than that made from the small straw coloured cane of the country, and very far superior to that made from the large purple cane."

3rd. "The cane, after eight years planting, was last season as fine in its beautiful straw colour, in its size, and the quality of its juice, as when gathered for me in the * * *, by the present Secretary to the Government of that Colony, Capt. Dick, in 1827. The plants I brought with me were deposited in the Botanical Garden in Calcutta in March 1827, and in the following cold season I was supplied at Jubbulpore with cuttings from these plants. These canes now sent into the bazar, as they are, cut and sold as a fruit, fetch about four times as much as the largest cane of the country, being much longer, and the juice much finer."

* Quere : Mauritius.

The Secretary had already answered Capt. Sleeman's letter, and proposed the names of several other districts to which the cane might be advantageously introduced.

No. 2.—From Dr. N. Wallich to the Secretary, dated 17th May, enclosing a letter to his address from Mr. E. R. Grange, of Assam, of the 27th April, and three pots of sugar, samples of Mr. Grange's experiments with the cane of Assam, which appears to be of a very inferior description. The contents of two pots are nothing more than over-boiled liquor which has undergone fermentation. The other is better, but no attention has been paid to tempering.

From these results, however, it is quite clear that sugar of the best quality might be made, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Grange will prosecute his labour in a field which Dr. Wallich represents as "deserving of the Society's best attention;" and as Capt. Sleeman has been solicited to transmit a portion of his surplus stock to this fair province, Mr. Grange will find it to his interest to give every attention to improving the cane, when he will be certain to reap a good return for his labour.

Memo.—Capt. Sleeman's letter, and that of Dr. Stevenson (from which an extract was given in last month's report,) will, it is hoped, tend to dissipate any impression the hasty conclusions of the Calcutta Currier might have made, in regard to no exertions having been made on this side of India to introduce a superior description of cane; but if enough has not been advanced to refute the Courier's assertion, a letter from Col. J. Colvin to Mr. Bell, dated the 1st May, will satisfy the public that the Society and its distant members have not been asleep.

"Of the sugar-cane, formerly sent up to me, and of which three plants vegetated, the produce has been sufficient to plant fully about 350 square yards of ground, besides supplying 20 canes to Saharanpore with each from 12 to 15 eyes. The ultimate supply of seed is therefore almost secured; the dispatch which you procured for me in February last, has not yet reached me, but as my boat passed Allahabad nearly one month since, I expect it in the course of a fortnight."

COTTON.

Colonel Colvin in the same letter observes, "this year for the first time, the experiment (of cultivating Upland and Georgia) has commenced on a large scale, the sowings altogether amounting to about 150 acres from seed raised from the supplies formerly sent to me by the Society, and put into the ground in what I consider the only month suited for this operation in this part of the country—April. There will, however, be some sowings in June, which under favorable circumstances, is also a good month, though almost too late to fully ripen its crops before the frosts destroy the plant in December, whilst the hot winds in May are almost too scorching to admit of the very young plant making a healthy progress."

No. 3.—From Col. Skinner, dated 18th May, (Hansi) acknowledging the receipt of the Secretary's letter of the 2d, and promising to give his best attention to the seeds dispatched by the steamer to his address. Col. Skinner adds "I am now endeavouring to introduce the American cotton," and have got a large plantation, upwards of 500 beegahs from seed which I received from Col. Colvin, and if it answers my expectations, I have not the slightest doubt, that the villagers will prefer it to the country cotton, if they can be sure of getting a good and regular supply of seed."

No. 4.—From John Richards, Esq., dated Liverpool, 3d Feb. 1836, acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Bell's letter of the 16th July last, containing an indent for American cotton seeds, agreeably to a resolution passed by the Society at their General Meeting on the 8th of July, 1835.

Mr. Richards had given his immediate attention to the order, and the judicious arrangements which he had planned in conjunction with his friends Messrs. Baring, Brothers and Co. cannot fail to be attended with success. These supplies will be followed by the annual indent, which was sent home in February last, through the kind assistance of His Excellency Sir H. Fane, so that Col. Skinner and all other public spirited individuals may look forward with confidence to abundant supplies of seed without reference to imports of Egyptian cotton seed, which, it is hoped, will engage a share of attention to our agriculturists.

No. 5.—From Jas. Crooke, Esq., to the Secretary, dated the 3d instant, presenting to the Society a box of Peruvian cotton seed, landed that day from the Hindoo.

Mr. Crooke gives the following extract from his correspondent's letter, viz:—

Liverpool, 4th Feb., 1836.—"We have put on board the Hindoo a case containing about two hundred weight of Peruvian cotton seed. This cotton is of fine quality and color, as long in staple as American, and worth, here 11½ to 12½ per lb. when clean (present market price). We think it would be very likely to succeed, and might be a great improvement in Indian Cottons. We wish you much to put it into hands of parties in the cotton growing districts where you could hear how it succeeded, and perhaps receive back some of the produce."

No. 6.—From Capt. C. M. Wade to the Secretary, dated Loodiana, 11th May, acknowledging receipt of Mr. Bell's letter of the 1st Feby. and the seeds therein referred to.

Capt. Wade draws particular attention to the desire expressed in the Punjab, to be supplied with foreign cotton seed, and adds, in reference to seed formerly sent to him:—"The cotton appears to me to thrive better here than that of India, which, indeed, is not very generally cultivated in these parts. I was rather surprised in my late journey to Ferozpoore to see several plants of the American cotton growing there luxuriantly in a garden. On enquiry I found that they had been introduced by a gardener from the banks of the Jumna, who procured them, I conclude, from the seed sent to Colonel Colvin."

* Capt. Wade presents the Society with another packet of Seeds, chiefly from Kashmeer. On the subject of former supplies from the same source—the following communication gives some particulars.

No. 7.—From Mr. J. W. Masters to the Secretary, dated 25th May, reporting on the seed which have been presented to the Society through the kindness of Capt. Wade and the Asiatic Society during the last two years—chiefly the produce of Calcool—and embracing about 100 species. Mr. Masters states that none of the peach, apricot or cherry seeds vegetated. He was more successful with the flowers, but excepting a species of hock or wall flower, which Dr. Wallich considers a new species between the "charanthus cherii" and "alpinus," the whole were of the most common description.

The same remarks are applicable to the kitchen garden seeds.

* The Upland Georgia, alluded to in Col. Colvin's letter.

Mr. Masters thinks it important, however, to remark that seeds which ripen in Cabool, have been ascertained to vegetate freely in Bengal.

TOBACCO.

No. 8.—From Ross D. Mangles, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, dated the 10th May, to the Secretary, annexing extract of a dispatch from the Honorable Court of Directors, dated 25th September, 1835, with a report upon the quality of some tobacco sent home on the ship Sir Thomas Munro produced from Virginia seed, sown in the garden of the Agricultural Society, after the mode of cultivation adopted in America, referred to in the letter of the Society's Secretary, dated 18th October, 1830.

This report is exceedingly encouraging to those who are devoting their attention to the improvement of tobacco in India, and will appear in the next number of the Society's transactions.

No. 9.—A printed copy of that part of illustrations, &c. which treats on Dr. Pringle's tobacco, received without advice from Messrs. Thacker and Co.

Dr. Pringle, after giving a brief historical sketch of the discovery and rapid extension of this weed, quotes the report referred to in Mr. Secretary Mangles' letter above, in order to rescue India from the stigma previously fixed on her, by reason of the comparative inferiority of her tobacco.

Colonel Colvin, in his letter of the 1st May (already alluded to)—says: "My tobacco here (Dadoopoor) has all got so mixed that I really do not know which is which, but at Kurnaul where the Virginia seed alone was sent, its cultivation is spreading amongst the natives, and from its superior strength, it brings in the market about 20 per cent. more than the tobacco of the country, whilst the quantity of produce is at least equal."

ON GENERAL SUBJECTS.

No. 10.—From Dr. Wallich to the Secretary, dated 30th May, presenting the following, viz.

(a).—"Twelve papers of a very interesting sort of rice from the lofty mountains of Joomla towards the Himalaya in Nepal, where it is reared under circumstances of frost and snow."

Dr. Wallich intends forwarding a portion to the Honorable Court of Directors, for experiment in England, and at the suggestion of Lord Auckland, another parcel to the Colonial Secretary, for transmission to Canada.

(b).—A bundle of ears of Victoria wheat produced in the Botanical Garden from a few grains received from Mr. Hamilton in December last, who had procured it from Sir Robert Ker Porter at Curaccas so far back as August 1834. Dr. Wallich adds a printed notice and memoranda regarding the American sumach, and two small papers containing specimens of an insect which infests the tree, and some of the seeds damaged by the insect. The Doctor informs the Society that he has secured a number of plants of the casalpinia ciliaria or American sumach, raised from the seed presented by Mr. Hamilton.

(c).—A bag made from the fibre of the pine apple on the Khasea Hills, purchased by Dr. Wallich at Cherpa Poongee.

(d).—Twenty-three quarto volumes of the French "Encyclopedie Methodique."

No. 11.—From Dr. Falconer to the Secretary, dated 24th May, acknowledging Mr. Bell's letter of 28th April, which alludes to a dispatch of Egyptian cotton seed, medicine and kitchen garden seed, brought out by Lord Auckland, and West India seeds—to all which he promises to give a fair trial in the Botanical garden at Saharunpore.

Dr. F. intimates the dispatch of a parcel for presentation to the Society, consisting of the following.

1st.—"A sample of a coarse fabric, manufactured in the Hill provinces north of Deyrah, and worn as a blanket wrapped about the upper part of the body by the hill people, it is called "Kurkee," and is produced from the woolly down which covers the under side of the leaf of the chuplalia gopyopna, a plant indigenous in the Himalayas.

2nd.—A packet containing the seeds of a spinous shrub, called in the hills "bhekul," and described in part III of Mr. Royle's illustrations under the name of Prinsepia retels. This seed produces a clear bland and tasteless oil "fit for salad and every purpose to which olive oil is applied."

3rd.—A sample (No. 1.) of shawl fleece, the produce of a young male shawl goat, brought from near "Chaprunge" on the Sutlej in Chinese Tartary about long. 79° 35' and lat. 31° 30'.

Sample (No. 2) of shawl fleece undressed, as exported from Chinese Tartary.

Sample (No. 3.) of the sort of fleece produced by the Teher, or wild goat of the Himalayas.

Sample (No. 4.) of the domestic sheep of Tartary.

No. 12.—From Dr. Strong, dated 28th May, enclosing a paper by Dr. Evans, exhibiting the comparative degrees of intensity of colour between the Mexican domesticated cochineal insects, and the wild species found on the Prickly Cactus in this country, accompanied by samples of woollen cloth dyed with both descriptions.

Memo.—The Secretary gave much attention to the amelioration of the wild insect some years ago, but from his want of success in finding any other description of Cactus, whereon the insect would subsist, he is led to infer that it is not the grana Sylvestra of Mexico, but an indigenous species, capable of improvement, by cultivating the plant.

No. 13.—From John Vaupell, Esq., dated 16th May, acknowledging several letters from the Calcutta Secretary, stating that several copies of the Society's transactions dispatched from Calcutta, by the ship John Adam, had been disposed of by anticipation, and returning thanks for the presentation copy sent by the same opportunity.

No. 14.—From Captain Williams, dated Kyook Phyor, 29th April, intimating the climate as favourable to the growth of the "Vunilla Aromatica" brought out by Lord Auckland, and offering to take care of a plant and give it a fair trial.

No. 15.—From F. J. Brown, Esq., of Tellicherry, dated 10th May, making a similar request, in addition to which he is desirous to have a plant of the Maranta, brought out also by the Governor-General.

Memo.—Only one plant of Maranta was brought which Mr. Masters made over to the Secretary in whose garden it is now recovering from the recent scorching weather. Mr. Bell's view is to distribute it as widely as possible after securing a small crop of seed from the bulbs of this plant.

No. 15.—From Captain C. G. Dixon, Superintendent in Mairwarra, to the Secretary, dated 16th May, intimating the loss of four parcels of seed dispatched to his address by the latter on the 26th April last, from the dak having been plundered. Captain D. regrets the loss exceedingly, as they otherwise would have arrived just in season, and had offered a reward for their recovery.

Mr. Bell had fortunately made a second despatch to Captain Dixon, on the 27th April, (the day after) of the Rio cotton seed presented to the Society by Lord Auckland (2 species) and a small parcel simply styled American cotton received from Mr. J. W. Masters, who had received it from Mr. ———, gardener to the Duke of Sussex. These with some Tobacco seeds of sorts, it is hoped would reach Captain Dixon and make up in some measure for the loss of the others.

No. 16.—From the Deputy Post Master to the Secretary, dated 2d June, affording official intimation of the robbery above alluded to, and stating that although every thing had been done by the magistrate of Cawnpore to trace the thieves, his endeavours had been unavailing, and they were supposed to have escaped into the territories of the King of Oude.

No. 16.—From Colonel Tapp, dated Simla, 17th May.

No. 17.—From Lieutenant Kirke, dated Deyrah, 17th May.

No. 18.—From George Leyburn, Esq., dated Shahabad, 13th May.

No. 19.—From J. B. Jones, Esq., dated Junpoor, 19th May, acknowledging severally the receipt of the Secretary's letters, advising dispatches of Egyptian cotton and other seeds, per steamer Lord William Bentinck via Allahabad.

Lieutenant Kirke, who is doing much for horticulture in the valley of Deyrah, offers to the Society a quantity of seeds acclimated there from English stock, among which appears the Mangel Wurzel, so celebrated now in America and England as food for cattle.

Acknowledges the dispatch of Eastern pine plants made by Mr. Bell, through Captain Harris of Barrackpore.

Mr. Jones illustrates the hopelessness of improving the cotton grown at Junpoor as long as the mass of thick set population continues to press so heavily on the actual means of subsistence, by a picture of the wretched shifts adopted to force the soil to give her utmost. Thus when cotton is sown, ruhr, ginger and kully accompany it, when each is allowed to displace that which arrives first at maturity, and the cotton, being the latest, is at length, (after being choked for five or six months) allowed undisturbed possession of an exhausted soil and produces in return pods about the size of a hazel nut.

No. 20.—From W. Munro, Esq., Secretary and Manager of Agricultural and Horticultural Society, just established at Bangalore, to Mr. Bell, dated 6th May.

The objects of this young Society are "to improve the method of cultivating indigenous plants, to introduce exotic ones to excite competition amongst the natives, and to lay open to the scientific world at large, the botany of Southern India, at present but partially and imperfectly known."

The Members of the Society at Bangalore desire to be permitted to style themselves a branch of that at Calcutta, and to reciprocate information, plants, seeds, transactions, &c. A large piece of ground, formerly a botanical garden, and made up of a variety of soils, had been already granted to the Society, and was in rapid preparation.

No. 21.—From Capt. Stuart Corbett, 25th Regiment Native Infantry, commanding Local Battalion at Kumayon, dated 14th May, and addressed to Dr. Wallich, intimating the existence of a garden of considerable dimension to which the efforts of the late Commissioner Mr. Traill, had been made to improve fruits, &c. and wishing to have supplies from Calcutta, for similar purposes.

No. 22.—From C. K. Robison, Esq., dated 21st May, enclosing a letter to his address from Mr. Cra-croft, dated Hobart Town, 8th March, advising the shipment of a box of garden seeds per Boadicea, with an invoice of cost &c.—Memo. The box had since been received, but the Secretary was sorry to say, in anything but sound condition, the seeds were packed in a most careless manner, some in dirty bags, and others in paper of different sorts, and thrown into the box without the least regard to packing. The lid of the box was in several pieces, and secured by a rope.

Mr. Bell had re-packed the seed into two tin boxes and forwarded it to Capt. Wade in Louisiana, who had just written for a supply.

No. 23.—From H. Wallers, Esq., dated 3rd June, presenting some living plants of the most choice grape vines and Spanish oak, brought with him from the Cape—also some new peach stones of a superior description, different species of firs, and cyprus, and some "Malta clover," of which Mr. W. speaks in terms of commendation.

Mr. W. also makes a tender of a box of kitchen garden seeds, for the sum he paid for them to Joseph Upjohn, seedsman at the Cape, who warrants them for 12 months, and whom Mr. W. recommends to the notice of the Society.

No. 24.—From Capt. Leach, dated 18th May, offering for acceptance, a box of English Vegetable seeds just received.

No. 25.—From D. W. Macleod, Esq., dated Leonee, 11th May, asking for cotton seeds.

No. 26.—From G. T. F. Speed, Esq., dated 11th May, presenting a bundle of red celery which he sent on the day of the Meeting, but not until the Members had dispersed; the celery was very fine considering the late season of growth, and Mr. Speed's remarks may be useful to those who wish to improve their celery beds.

No. 27.—From F. Macnaghten, Esq., dated 20th May, intimating the investment of 500 rupees of interest, from the Society's account in the Government Savings' Bank, in Government 4 per cent securities.

No. 28.—From W. Liddell, Esq., Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras, dated 25th May, enclosing a bill on Messrs. Boyd and Co. for the balance of account current due to the Society of India for seeds supplied.

The thanks of the Society were ordered to be presented for all the foregoing communications and donations.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

Calcutta, Town Hall, 8th June, 1836.—Hurkaru.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY

Proceedings of a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, on the 4th of June, 1836.

Wm. Mackenzie, Esq., A. M., of the Madras establishment, proposed at the last meeting, was elected a member of the Society.

Dr. A. Stewart, of the Bengal Presidency, was proposed as a member by Dr. Dempster, seconded by Dr. D. Stewart.

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read—from H. Daff, Esq., Surgeon 38th regiment, requesting his name might be withdrawn from the list of subscribers to the Society.

From Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. of Madras, enclosing a draft for the balance of the Society's account with them, viz. rs. 277-2-9.

From Messrs. Parbury and Allen, enclosing their account with the Society, shewing a balance due to them of £21-7-7. Their bill for periodicals furnished for June 1834 to Nov. 1835 being £28-11 less the product of sales on behalf of the Society £7-3-5.

From Dr. McClelland presenting to the Society a copy of his work on Kenraon.

From H. Stevenson, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon proposing that instead of the contemplated journal, five Circulating Libraries should be established in different parts of the presidency to supply the members with periodicals. Mr. Stevenson conceives that the expense of these would not exceed that of a Journal of selections, and that members would prefer reading the periodical for themselves to having matter extracted from them by others. The writer thinks that Dinapore, Cawnpore, Agra, Neemuch and Delhi should be chosen for the library stations, whence the books might be circulated to the neighbourhood, a committee of 3 or 4 members with a Secretary and Librarian having the Superintending Surgeon for the President, might be chosen to conduct the affairs of each library.

From Dr. Wallich, enclosing an extract from Royle's work on the Botany of the Himalaya Mountains, including some interesting remarks on the subject of Materia Medica, pointing out the importance of enquiries being made with the view of bringing to light the ample resources of this country in the production of medicinal articles, and strongly recommending the subject of the native materia medica to the notice of the Medical officers in India.

Dr. Wallich fully concurs in these remarks, and trusts that the Medical Society will use all its efforts to promote so desirable an object. He concludes by offering his services in forwarding the views of the Society in his matter. The extract will be found at page 275 and 276 of Dr. Royle's work. It contains also a short account of the genus Colotropis or Mudar, by which the above mentioned observations are preceded.

A copy of the proceedings of the Bombay Medical Society were laid on the table.

It was proposed by Dr. Goodeve, seconded by Dr. Ranken,—That an application be made to Government to grant the Society the indulgence formerly enjoyed by them of transmitting their communications free of postage.

This was agreed to, and the President, vice-President and Dr. Ranken were appointed to form a deputation to wait upon the Right Honorable the Governor-General for the purpose of submitting this request to his consideration.

The following papers were then read and discussed:

Sketches of two undescribed venomous serpents with fangs behind the maxillary teeth, by Dr. Cantor.

Account of a human monstrosity in the museum of the Medical College, drawn up by Dr. Goodeve.

The first snake described by Dr. Cantor he calls the Cerberus Grantii. Its head is triangular, broader than the neck, compressed, covered above with little hexagonal keeled scales between and before the eyes, 13 small irregular laminae. The muzzle obtuse, nostrils small. The largest laminae are those covering the temples and upper lips, nine on each side, the under lip covered with nine laminae smaller than those of the upper lip;—eyes small, prominent, lateral;—iris, greyish-brown;—pupil viperine;—mouth small;—upper jaw longer than lower, with 2 rows of little sharp reflex teeth, the first one much longer than the rest; lower jaw presents a similar arrangement. The trunk cylindrical and tapering towards the tail, covered with little rhomboidal intricate scales, anus simple, covered by a vertical shield. Color of the back, greyish brown, divided by a number of black irregular bands—the chin, abdomen and tail, white or grey with a zig-zag black band. These serpents are 3 or 4 feet long. Rivers and tanks form their abode, sometimes they are found in damp places near water. Some young ones kept by Dr. Cantor would not eat till they were put into water; their principal food is fish.

The other snake is of an entirely new genus called by Dr. C. Potamophis. The specimen described in his paper he denominates the Potamophis Lushingtoni. The head is ovate, a little broader than the neck;—muzzle rounded;—laminae nasales nearly semi-circular, perforated by the small nostrils in the middle; between the laminae nasales and frontales, there is a single rhomboidal laminae formed like an episcopal tiara. Temples covered with a number of laminae;—the upper lips covered with 8 laminae on each side; under lips by 7 smaller than those of the upper. The throat covered with a number of smaller scales comparatively more numerous than those of the cerberi and pythons;—color of the head dark olive, brown lips and throat whitish, eyes small, prominent, pupil black, round, iris golden; mouth moderate in the upper jaw, maxillary and palatal teeth. The former numerous, small, sharp, and reflex, increasing on size so that the two hinder are by far the largest covered in a folding of the palatal integuments, and their convex margin communicating with the opening of the excretorian duct of the venomous gland teeth of lower jaw nearly of the same size;—tongue greyish bifurcate;—trunk cylindrical, increasing towards the middle, tapering to the tail, covered with hexagonal smooth scales disposed in 21 longitudinal ranges so as to leave the interstitial black skin open, which forms as many zig-zag lines. The scales are olive brown, increasing in size as they approach the abdomen, scales of the tail smaller but of the same shape as those of back. The abdominal scales are arched, of a whitish color, marked in the middle with a black spot. Anus covered with a large sometimes bifurcate shield, surrounded with a number of small granular scales. The length of the snake is from 2 to 3 feet, circumference of body 2 to 3 inches. This snake like the other is a water snake living on fish, it will eat nothing on land; one in Dr. C.'s possession remained 7 months out of the water without touching food. When kept in an empty bottle it cast its skin once a month, but this operation occurred more seldom when in water. The muscular strength of this serpent is remarkable. There is a striking peculiarity in the anatomy of the cerberus and potamophis. The cystic and hepatic ducts enter the duodenum, united together behind the opening of the pancreatic duct. The poison of these snakes appears to be less violent than that of serpents armed with fangs in front of the maxillary teeth. The paper was illustrated by some very beautiful drawings by Dr. Cantor.

The monster described by Dr. Goodeve consists of two female children united together in the thorax and upper part of abdomen by a broad connection extending from the sternum and the umbilicus below and above these two points all is natural. There is only one perfect umbilical cord, but below that is seen another rudimentary one about an inch in length. The length of the whole monster is from 15 to 16 inches—circumference of the whole 11 to 12—circumference of connecting medium 9 to 10 inches—weight five pounds. On examining the internal structure, it was found that there is one thoracic and abdominal cavity common to both children, these cavities being divided from each other by a single diaphragm. The walls of the thorax are composed of a double set of ribs with two sternebrae, one on the anterior the other on the posterior part of the commisure. The abdominal muscles are likewise double. The abdominal and pelvic viscera of both children are perfect, with the exception of the liver; this organ appears to consist of two perfect livers united together by their convex surfaces. This arrangement of the liver, of course, reverses completely the position of the abdominal viscera of the right child. Indeed the abdominal contents and the diaphragm are so placed that they may be best understood by conceiving the viscera of one child reflected in a mirror to form the viscera of the other.

In the thorax a double set of lungs are seen with only one heart common to both children. This to a certain extent is double but very imperfectly so. There is one large auricular cavity on either side common to both right ventricles: the opening between these cavities is furnished with a valve, also common to both. From the right ventricle of the left side springs a pulmonary artery; but no similar vessel arises from the right side; the superior Vena Cavae of both children empty themselves into a common right auricle. The little cavity again communicates with a common left auricle by an enormous foremen ovale unprovided with any valve. With this common left auricle one pulmonary vein from each child opens. This left auricle communicates with two separate left ventricles, indeed there appears to be one common opening between all the cavities of the heart and the blood must have flowed through them in every direction. From each left ventricle arises a perfect aorta on the left side and communicates with the pulmonary artery by a ductus arteriosus. On the right side the ductus arteriosus forms the pulmonary artery and is continued to the lungs of the right child. There is a thymus gland common to both children. This monster is said to have lived for 3 or 4 hours after birth, but it is difficult to conceive this possible, the arrangement of the heart was such that the creature must have been instantaneously asphyxiated as soon as respiration became necessary.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

A meeting of the management was held on Saturday, the 11th June, Dr. Sawers, 3d Member of the Medical Board, in the Chair.

On the motion of Mr. Bramley, seconded by Mr. Pearson, it was resolved unanimously, that a circular letter be forthwith addressed to the members of the Bengal Medical Service, which shall embody the following points.

1st.—A general declaration that the Fund be now considered in actual operation.

2nd.—To state to present subscribers to the Fund the amount of their arrears, if any, of subscription, due from the 1st January, 1833, to 31st August, 1836, calculated with compound interest at 8 per cent. per annum, according to the regulation 2, section 3d, and requiring them to pay up those arrears with interest, as aforesaid, within a period of 12 months from the date of the circular letter.

3rd.—To call upon those members of the Bengal Medical Service, who have not yet joined the Fund, to signify their intention, should they determine upon doing so, within three months from the date of the circular letter; and to inform them, in that case, of the arrears of subscription due, time of payment, &c. in like manner as mentioned above.

4th.—To call attention to regulation 7, section 1st, stating that, for the present, the subscriptions are calculated on the minimum scale.

The following letter was submitted, and read to the Committee.

To the Committee of Managers of the Medical Retiring Fund.

GENTLEMEN,—In justice to you and to the service, I find that I am under the necessity of resigning the situation of Secretary to the Fund.

My time now is too much employed in professional avocations to permit me to continue to give that attention to its duties which they require, and I will therefore feel obliged by your nominating, in my room, a successor to the office.

Perhaps I may be allowed to mention that my colleague Mr. Pearson, is willing to undertake the office of Secretary, provided that some professional accountant is associated with him, with whom he will equally share the monthly allowance attached to the appointment.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient Servant,

(Signed) H. S. MERCER.

Calcutta, June 8, 1836.

On the above letter being read, the following resolutions were passed by the Committee.

Moved by Dr. A. R. Jackson, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, and carried unanimously, that the Committee regret the retirement of Mr. Mercer from the office of Secretary, and beg him to accept their best thanks for his great exertions, and zealous co-operation in their past labours.

Moved by Dr. A. R. Jackson, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, and carried unanimously, that a consolidated allowance of Company's rupees two hundred and fifty (Co's Rs. 250) per mensem, be fixed as the salary of the Secretary to the Fund, out of which he is to provide a competent native assistant, office establishment and stationery, and that the whole expenses of the Secretary and his office, shall not exceed the said sum of two hundred and fifty Company's rupees; and that Mr. Pearson be appointed Secretary in succession to Mr. Mercer, subject to the confirmation of the subscribers in obedience to regulation 9 of section 4th.

J. T. PEARSON, Sec. Ben. Med. Retiring Fund.

MR. LINTON'S CONCERT.

The Scenic Concert for the Benefit of Mr. Linton took place at the Town Hall, on Friday Evening the 10th June, the performance brought to our recollection the Re-unions, but in no respect equalled those charming entertainments. The stage was erected in the usual place, and was very tastefully constructed. It was near nine o'clock before the Overture began and the scene opened with Signor Pizzoni's "Largoul factotum" which he sang very well but not with his accustomed animation. The scena that follows this in the Barbieri was given with good effect by the Amateur Conte of the late Operatic series, who delighted us with the Duo "All'idea" in which he was ably seconded by Signor Pizzoni. A scene or two from Dibdin's Waterman followed, in which our old favorite Mr. Linton played and sang "the jolly young Waterman," a part that many years ago he made his own, and so much of it as he gave on this occasion was admirably performed. Mrs. Atkinson as Wilhelmina sang sweetly, but we were again persuaded that the adjuncts of character and scenic representation can never increase the effect of this lady's singing; she has always been and should remain a Concert singer; as such she has ever been particularly successful in sacred music. Our facetious friend Bob Acres personated Robin the Gardener; his dress and his acting were in the highest bloom, and his song "Cherries and Plumbs" excited much laughter, and was greeted with deserved applause: why does not "our Bob" indulge us more frequently by a comic song? Signora Schieroni and Signor Pizzoni next introduced the scene from the Barbieri, in which the Signora charmed us, as she always does, in—"Una voce," and in the Duo with Pizzoni—"Dunque io sono." How beautifully articulate are the volute of Schieroni!—we have heard a simile about pearls falling into fluid of which her singing such passages reminds us. The scena from "L'Italiana" and some other items of the Programme were very judiciously omitted; however to make amends to those who might regret such curtailments, we suppose, Mrs. Atkinson volunteered an Aria. In "No Song no Supper," which commenced the second part of the evening's entertainments, the Amateur Fabrizio of "La Gazza Ladra" took the part of Crop, and also in the Waterman played Bundle: this gentleman has lately proved himself a considerable acquisition in musical as well as other pieces. Fioravanti's excellent dutton buffo from "L'Amor Mariano" was admirably sung by our Italian Prima Donna and Il Conte; nothing of the kind could be more ludicrous. Our Irish friend Mr. O'Hanlon appeared in the character of a real Hibernian intirely; he introduced himself by a laughable account of his journey to Bugal, having taken "a whilelah in his fist for company on the road." He was in good voice and sang with much humour and sweetness, one of Lover's Superstitions of Ireland "Rory O'More." The performance concluded in reasonable time with the last scene of "No Song no Supper." Mr. Linton has great credit for adopting so novel and pleasing a style of entertainment as the Scenic Concert, and we are happy to hear that although the room was not full the subscription list was.—Bengal Herald.

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY, MAY 10.

RAJAH BERRODACAUNT ROY AND OTHERS, V. BISSNOO SOONDREE DABIE AND OTHERS.

JUDGMENT.

MR. JUSTICE MAIKIN.—This is a case of very considerable importance and great difficulty; the difficulty arises partly out of considerations of law and partly from a state of facts by no means satisfactorily ascertained. In the view, however, which I take of the case, most of the uncertainties of fact become of little importance; and I may proceed to state the view of them which I take, or rather, in some instances, assume, without much discussion of the evidence on which they rest.

It appears then, that in the year 1795, the Rajahs Sreecaunt Roy and Gopeenauth Roy, being in circumstances of considerable embarrassment, applied to Doorgachurn Mookerjee for a loan of 52,000 Rs. The loan was finally obtained, but the securities executed were given, not to Doorgachurn Mookerjee but to Nemychurn Mullic, who, in fact, advanced the money. There is conflicting evidence and assertion, as to the fact of the money being wholly Nemychurn's; but I think it is impossible to treat it otherwise, when we refer to the proceedings in the suit of 1803, and find that on the filing of Nemychurn's answer, in which he treated the loan as a bona fide transaction of his own, the complainant in that suit, Banneeraunt Roy,—the father of Berrodacaunt and Son of Sreecaunt,—and Gopeenauth Roy, consented to the dismissal of their bills against him. There is also a considerable contest, whether, assuming Nemychurn Mullic to be a bona fide party in the transaction, the introducing him was not a surprise upon the Rajahs, who are represented by the present complainant, to have looked at all events in the first instance to Doorgachurn Mookerjee as the principal in the transaction. I should rather collect from the evidence that this was so; but it does not seem to me material. The result was, however, that Nemychurn Mullic actually advanced the money and received as security for it from the Rajah, a mortgage of several purgunnahs, including Mullic, the purgunnah now in question, a bond for the repayment of the money on a certain day, and a warrant to confess judgment in this court in default of payment.

The mortgage was in the English form by lease and release with the same period as the bond appointed for payment. Upon this mortgage a question arose of considerable importance in this case, but in my mind of very little difficulty, which this will be the most convenient opportunity of adverting to. It was contended that the parties taking conveyances in the English form, must be understood to have intended that their rights arising under those conveyances, should be determined by English law, and that, in that case, the lapse of time would be an answer to the claims of the complainants; or else that if the Hindoo law were to be applied, the consequence was one purporting to be conditioned for payment at a specific time, that it came therefore under the description of a conditional sale, or a pledge for a limited period, and that by Hindoo law there could be no redemption now. In my judgment neither of these arguments can be supported. The conveyances being in a known English form, must be interpreted according to their known and usual construction; but when the relation of the parties is thus ascertained, the legal consequences of that relation will be those attaching to it according to Hindoo law. Now in the common construction of an English mortgage, it is redeemable at any time, although a day is fixed for the payment: the presumption made after a certain time in favour of the mortgage is a presumption of evidence only and has nothing to do with the construction of the instruments. The mortgage in question, therefore, must be treated, in my opinion, as a mortgage and pledge for an unlimited period, and must have that head of Hindoo law applied to it, if the decision of this case is finally to depend on the mortgage.

There are, however, other most material facts in the case. Nemychurn Mullie advanced 52,000 rupees, but only 44,600 of this sum came to the hands of the Rajahs Sreecaunt and Gopenaath, the remaining 7,400 being retained by Doorgachurn Mookerjee either as a compensation for loss upon different estimates of the price of red lead, tutenag, &c., which according to one account of the transaction, were to be taken in part of the advances, or else, according to his own account, as a reward for his becoming security to Nemychurn Mullie for the payment by the Rajahs. Whichever of these stories be true, it is said that the detention was a fraud and extortion on the part of Doorgachurn Mookerjee; and as such I treat it. But when it is sought to go further, and it is said that this is a fraud that vitiates the whole transaction according to any law which can be applied to the case, I cannot agree to the conclusion. I very much doubt whether upon any sound construction of the facts of this case, Doorgachurn Mookerjee can be treated as the agent of Nemychurn Mullie, so as to make any fraud on his part imputable in law to Nemychurn, and to render the mortgage void on that ground in his hands. It rather seems to me that the mortgage was perfectly good, and that the Rajahs could only seek their personal remedy against Doorgachurn Mullie, for the money which he had embezzled or fraudulently retained. And if so, I do not see the circumstance of the mortgaged property afterwards coming into his hands could make any difference, except, indeed, that if it remained redeemable, it might be redeemed by him for the payment of the sum actually received by the Rajahs, instead of that actually paid by Nemychurn; and that perhaps a question which it is unnecessary to discuss; the case would be, the amount of the redemption money in the hands even of persons taking by assignment from him.

But it is not on these transactions. I proceed in denying that these transactions are now void or voidable on the ground of fraud, in this retention of the 7,400 rupees. A party may set aside a transaction for fraud, or he may abide by the transaction and receive compensation for the fraud; but he cannot do both: here the Rajahs Sreecaunt and Gopenaath have made their election; by the suit of 1805 they have obtained from Doorgachurn the full amount with interest of the sum subtracted from them: they were, therefore, and the complainant, as claiming under them, in exactly the same condition as if the whole sum of 52,000 rupees had been originally paid, and the fraud relied upon has ceased to exist. The possession of the claimants therefore, in my opinion, cannot now be impeached on this ground, whatever might have been the case at an earlier period.

These observations of course only apply to the fraud alleged in respect to the 7,400 rupees. Some attempt was made also to treat the transaction as fraudulent, even considering it as a loan to the full amount of 52,000 rupees on the ground of undue advantage taken of the distressed situation of the borrower; but I do not think there is any evidence sufficient to establish that point. The bargain was probably not one which the Rajahs would have been willing to make in more prosperous circumstances; but the complainant must go a great deal further than this to set aside the transaction on such grounds, and this seems to me to be the full extent of the evidence.
